Unto the most victorious Prynce and our most gracious soueraigne Lorde, kynge Henry the eighth, kynge of Englonde and of Fraunce, lord of Irelande, &c.

Defendour of the fayth, and vnder God the chefe and supreme heade of the Church of Englonde.

The right & iust administracyon of the lawes that God gaue vnto Moses and vnto Josua: the testimonie of faythfulnes that God gaue of Dauid: the plenteous abundaunce of wysdome that God gaue vnto Salomon: the lucky and prosperous age with the multiplicacyon of seede whiche God gaue vnto Abraham and Sara his wyfe, he geue vnto you most gracious Prynce, with your dearest iust wyfe, and most vertuous Pryncesse, Queene Anne, Amen.

Caiphas beyng bysshope of that yere, lyke a blynde prophete (not vnderstandyng what he sayd) propheted, that it was better to put Christ vnto death, then that all the people shulde perishe: he mea-nyng, that Christ was an heretike, a deceauer of the people, & a destroyer of the lawe, and that it was better therfore to put Christ vnto death, than to suffer hym for to lyue, and to deceaue the people. &c.

Jo. 11. 6

where in very dede Christ was the true prophete, the true Messias, and the onely true Sauour of the worlde, sent of his heauenly father to suffer the moste cruell, most shamefull, and most necessary death for our redempcyon: accordyng to the mea-nyng of the prophete truly vnderstonde.

Euē after the same maner this blynde bysshoppe of Rome, (that blynde Baalam
I saye) not vnderstandyng what he sayd, gaue vnto your grace this tittle: Defendour of the fayth, onely because your hyghnes suffered your bysshoppes to burne Gods worde the rote of fayth, and to persecute the louers and mynisters of the same.
where in very dede the blynde bysshoppe (though he knewe not what he sayd) pro-pheted, that by the righteous administracyon and contynuall diligence of your grace, the fayth shulde so be defended, that Gods worde the mother of fayth with the frutes therof, shulde haue his fre course thorow out all Christendome, but specially in your realme.

If your hyghnesse now of your princely benygnyte wyl pardon me to compare these two bysshoppes (I meane bysshoppe Caiphas and the bysshoppe of Rome) & theyr propheties together, I doute not but we shal fynde them agree lyke brethren, though the one be a Jewe and the other a countersayre Christian. First, Caiphas propheted that it was better to put Christ vnto death, then that the people shulde perishe. The bysshoppe of Rome also, not knowyng what he propheted, gaue your grace this tittle: Defendour of the fayth. The truth of both these proph-eties is of the holy goost (as was Baalams prophete) though they that spake the, knewe not what they sayd. The truth of Caiphas prophete is, that it was necessary for mans saluacyon, that Christ by his death shulde ouercome death, and redeme vs. And the truth of our Baalams prophete is, that your grace in very dede shulde defende the fayth, see euē the true fayth of Christ, no dreames, no fables, no heresie, no papistlicall inuencions, but the vncorrupte fayth of Gods most holy worde, which to set forth (prayed be the goodnes of God, and increace your gracous purpose) your hyghnes with your most honorable counsell, applyeth all his iudye and endeuoure.

24. c.

These two blynde bysshoppes now agree in the vnderstandyng of theyr propheties:
for Caiphas taketh Christ for an heretike, our Baalam taketh the worde of Christ for heresie. Caiphas iudgeth it to be a good dede to put Christ vnto death, that he

Epistle

Shulde not decaue the people. Our Balaam calleth defendynge of the fayth, the surpysing, keepynge secrete, and burnynge of the worde of fayth: lest the lyght there of shulde bitter his darknes: lest his owne Decretales & Decrees, his owne lawes and constitutions, his owne statutes and inuencions shulde come to none effecte: lest his intollerable exactions and vsurpacions shulde lose theyr strength: lest it shulde be knowen what a thefe and muttherer he is in the cause of Christ, and how haynous a traytoure to God and man in defraudyng all Christen kynges & prynces of theyr due obedience: lest we your graces subiectes shulde haue eyes in the worde of God, at the last to spyre out his crafty conuepaunce and iuglynges: and lest men shulde se, how soe he and his false Apostles haue decaued all Christendome, specially your noble realme of Englonde.

Thus your grace seyth how brotherly the Jewysch byshoppe and our Balaam agree together, not onely in myter and outward appearaunce: but as the one persecuted the Lorde Iesus in his owne persone, so both the other persecute his worde and respyeth his holy ordynaunce in the auctorite of his anoynted kynges. For so moche now as the worde of God is the onely trueth that dyspueeth awaye all lyes, and discloseth all iuglyng and disceate, therfore is our Balaam of Rome so lothe that the scripture shulde be knowen in the mother tonge: lest yf kynges and prynces (specially aboue all other) were exerceysed therein, they shulde reclame and chalenge agayne theyr due auctorite, which he falsely hath vsurped so many yeres, and so to tye hym shorther: and lest the people beyng taught by the worde of God, shulde fall from yf false fayned obediēce of hym and his disguised Apostles, vnto the true obediēce commaunded by Gods owne mouth: as namely, to obey theyr prynces, to obey father and mother, &c. and not to steppe ouer father and mothers hely to enter in to his paynted religions, as his ypocrites teach: For he knoweth well ynough, that yf the cleare Sonne of Gods worde come ones to the heate of the dape, it shal dyspue awaye all the foule myst of his deuylsh doctrines. Therfore were it moxe to the mayntenaunce of Antichristes kyngdome, that the worlde were still in ignorance and blyndnes, and that the scripture shulde neuer come to lyghte. For the scripture (both in the olde testament and in the new) declareth most aboutdauntly that the office, auctorite and power geuen of God vnto kynges / is in earth aboue all other powers: let them call the selues Popes, Cardynalles, or what so euer they will, the worde of god declareth them (yee and commaundeth them vnder payne of dampnacion) to be obedient vnto the tempozall swerde: As in the olde Testament all the Prophetes, Priestes and Leuites were. And in the new Testament Christ & his Apostles both were obedient them selues, and taught obediēce of all men vnto theyr prynces ad tempozall rulers: which here vnto vs in the worlde present the persone of God, and are called Goddes in the scripture, bycause of the excellēcy of theyr office. And though there were no mo auctorities but the same, to proue the preminence of the tempozall swerde, yet by this the scripture declareth playnly, that as there is nothyng aboue God, so is there no man aboue the kynge in his realme: but that he onely vnder God is the chiefe heade of all the cōgregacyon and church of the same. And in token that this is true, there hath ben of olde antiquite (and is yet vnto this dape) a lounge ceremouye vled in your realme of Englonde, yf whā your graces subiectes reade your letters, or begynne to talke or come of your hyghnes, they moue theyr bonettes for a signe & token of reuerence vnto your grace, as to the most soueraigne lord & heade vnder God. which thyng no man dleth to do to any byshoppe. wherby (yf oure vnderstonnyng were nat blynded) we myght coudently perceauē, that euen very nature teacheth vs the same, that scripture commaūdeyth vs: and that lyke as it is agaynst Gods worde that a kynge shulde not be the chiefe heade of his people, euen so (I saye) is it agaynst kynde that we shulde knowe any other heade aboue hym vnder God.

And that no prest nor byshoppe is exempte (nor can be lawfully) from the obediēce of his prynces, the scripture is full both of strypte cōmaundementes, & practises of the

of the holpest men. & Aaron was obedient vnto Moses, and called hym his lord e, though he was his owne brother. Elcasar and Phineas were vnder the obedience of Josua. & Nathan the prophete fell downe to the grounde before kynge Dauid, he had his pynce in such reuerence (he made not the kynge for to kysse his fote as the byshoppe of Rome maketh Emperours to do) Nor withstandinge he spared not to rebuke hym, and that ryght shurply whan he fell from the worde of God to adultery and manslaughter. For he was not afrayed to reprove hym of his sinnes, nomore than Helias the prophete stode in feare to saye vnto kynge Achab: & It is thou and thy fathers house that trouble Israel, because ye haue forsaken the commaundementes of the Lorde, and walke after Baal. And as Johan Baptiste durst saye vnto kynge Herode: It is not lawfull for the to take thy brothers wyfe. But to my purpose I passe ouer innumerable mo ensamples both of the olde Testament and of the new, for feare lest I be to tedious vnto your grace. Summa, in all godly regimentes of olde tyme the kynge and tēporall iudge was obeyed of euery man, and was alwaye vnder God the chefe and supreme heade of the whole congregacion, and deposed euen prestes whan he sawe an vrgent cause, as Salomon dyd vnto Abiathar. who coulde than stonde agaynst the godly obedience of his pynce (excepte he wolde be at despaynce with God and all his holy ordinaunces) that were well acquainted with the holy scripture, which so earnestly comendeth vnto euery one of vs the auctorite and power geuen of God vnto kynge's and tēporall rulers. Therfore both Moses so strately forspoke the Israelites to speake word so moche as an euell worde agaynst the pynce of þ people, moche lesse than to disobey hym, or to withstande hym. Doth not Ieremy the prophete and Baruc also Ieremy exhorte the people in captiuite, to praye for the prosperous welfare of the kynge of Babylon, and to obey hym, though he was an infidelle. In the new Testament Bar. 26 whā oure sauoure Christ (being yet fre a Lorde of al kynge's & pynces) shewed his obedience in payenge the tribute to oure ensample, & dyd he not a miracle there in puttynge the pece of money in the fyshes mouth (that Peter myght paye the custome therewith) and all to stablyshe the obedience due vnto pynces. & dyd not Joseph and Mary the mother of our sauour Christ departe fro Nazareth vnto Beth leel, so farre from home, to shewe theyr obedience in payenge the tax to the pynce? And wolde not oure Sauoure be bozne in the same obedience. & Doth not Paul pronounce hym to resyste God hym selfe, that resysteth the auctorite of his pynce? And (to be shorte) the Apostle Peter dothe not onely stablyshe the obedience vnto pynces and tēporall rulers but affirmeth playnly the kynge (and no byshoppe) to be the chefe heade. Innumerable places mo are there in scripture, which bynde vs to the obedience of oure pynce, and declare vnto vs, that no man is nor can be lawfully excepte from the same: but that all the ministers of Goddes worde are vnder the tēporall swerde: & pynces onely to owe obedience vnto God & his worde.

And where as Anthichrist vnto poure graces tyme dyd thrust his heade into þ imperiall crowne of your hyghnes (as he doth yet with other noble pynces mo) that lerned he of Sathan the authour of pryde, and therein doth he both agaynst the doctryne & also agaynst þ ensample of Christ: whiche because his kyngdome was not of this worlde, medled with no tēporal matters, as it is euident both by his wordes and practyse: Luc. xii. Math. xxvi. Joh. vi. Joh. xvi. where he þ hath eyes to se, maye se: & he þ hath eares to heare, maye heare, þ Christes admystration was nothyng tēporall, but playne spiritual, as he hym selfe affirmeth & proueth in the fourth chapter of saynt Luke out of the prophete Esay: where all byshoppes and prestes maye se, how farre theyr byndynge and loosynge extendeth, and where in theyr office consisteth, namely in preachynge the Gospel. &c.

wherfore (most gracypus pynce) there is no tonge I thynke, that can fully expresse and declare the vntollicable iniuries, which haue bene done vnto God, to al pynces and to the compnaities of all chyren realmes, sence they which shulde be onely the ministers of Gods worde, became lordes of the worlde, and thrust þ true and iust pynces out of theyr towmes. whose herte wolde not picke it (yee eue with lamentacon) to remember but onely the vntollerable wronge done by that Antychrist of Rome vnto poure graces most noble predecesoure kynge Johſe. I passe ouer his pestilent pykynge of Peter pens out of poure realme: his stealyng awaye of poure money for pardons: benefices and bysshoppes: his dilceaung of poure subiectes soules with his deuelyshe doctrynes and sectes of his false religions: his bloudsheddyng of so many of your graces people, for booke of the scripture. whose herte wolde not be greued (yee and that out of measure) to call to remembraunce, how obstinate and disobedient, how presumptuous & stubburne that Antychrist made the bysshoppes of poure realme agaynst your graces noble predecesours in tymes past, as it is manifest in þe Croſtycles. I trust verely there be no suche now within poure realme: if there be, let them remembre these wordes of scripture: Presumptuousnes goeth befoze destruction, & after a proude stomacke there foloweth a fall.

What is now the cause of all these vntollerable and nomore to be suffred abhominacions? Truly euen the ignoraunce of the scripture of God. For how had it els ben possyble, that such blyndnes shulde haue come in to þe worlde, had not þe lyghte of Gods worde bene extyncte. How coulde men (I saye) haue bene so farre from the true serupce of God, and from the due obedience of theyr pynce, had not the lawe of God bene cleene shut vp, depelyshyd, cast asyde, and put out of remembraunce. As it was afore the tyme of that noble kynge Josias, and as it hath bene also amonge vs vnto poure graces tyme: by whose most ryghteous admystracion (thowhe the mercyfull goodnes of God) it is now founde agayne, & as it was in the dayes of that most vertuous kynge Josias. And praysed be the father, the sonne, and the holy goost worlde without ende, which so excellently hath endewed poure Pynce lyf, with such feruentnes to his honoure, and to the welth of poure louyng subiectes, that I maye ryghtuously (by iust occasyons in poure persone) compare poure hyghnes vnto that noble and gracyous kynge, þe lanterne of lyghte amonge pynces, that feruent protectour and defender of the lawes of God: which commaunded straitly (as poure grace doth) that the lawe of God shulde be redde and taught vnto all þe people: set the prestes to theyr office in the worde of god: destroyed Idolatry and false ydols: put downe all euell customes and abusyons: set by the true honoure of God: applyed all his studye and endeuoure to the ryghteous admystracion of the most vncorrupte lawe of God. &c. What felicitye was amonge þe people of Ierusalem in his dayes? And what prosperous health both of soule & body foloweth the lyke mynistracion in poure hyghnes, we begynne now (praysed be God) to haue experience. For as false doctryne is the ozigenall cause of all euell plagges and destruccyon, so is þe true executyng of the lawe of God and the preachyng of the same, the mother of all godly prosperite. The onely worde of god (I saye) is the cause of all felicitye, it byngeth all goodnes with it, it byngeth lernyng, it geueth vnderstandyng, it causeth good workes, it maketh chyldren of obedience, byeuely, it teacheth all estates theyr office and duty. Seynge then that the scripture of God teacheth vs euery thyng sufficiently, both what we oughte to do, and what we oughte to leaue vndone: whome we are bounde to obey, and whome we shulde not obey: therfore (I saye) it causeth all prosperite, and setteth euery thyng in frame: and whete it is taught and knowen, it lyghtheneth all darkenes, comforteth all sorow hertes, leaueth no pooze man vnhelped, suffreth nothyng amysse vnamended, letteth no pynce be disobeyed, permytteth no heresie to be preached: but reformeth all thynges, amedeth that is amysse, and setteth euery thyng in order. And why? because it is geuen by the inspyracyon of God, therfore is it euer byngyng profyte and frute, by teachyng, by impropyng, by amendinge and reformyng all the þe wyl receaue it, to make them perfecte & mete vnto all good workes.

Consideryng now (most gracyous pynce) the inestimable treasure, frute & prosperite euerylastyng, that God geueth with his worde, and trustyng in his infinite goodnes that he wolde byngyng my synple and rude labourer herin good effecte, therfore as the holy goost moued other me to do the cost herof, so was I bol-dened in God, to laboure in the same. Agayne, consyderynge your Imperiall ma-iesty not onely to be my naturall soueraigne liege Lord & chiefe heade of þ church of Englobe, but also the true defender and maynteyner of Gods lawes, I thought it my dutye and to belonge vnto my allegiaunce, when I had translated this Bible, not onely to dedicate this translatyon vnto your hyghnesse, but wholy to comytt it vnto the same: to the intent that yf any thyng therein be translated amysse (for in many thynges we sayle, euen when we thynke to be sure) it may stode in your graces handes, to correcte it, to amende it, to improve it, yee & cleane to recte it, yf your godly wysdome shall thynke it necessary. And as I do with all humblenes submitte myne vnderstonynge and my pooze translatyon vnto þ spi-rite of trueth in your grace, so make I this protestacyon (haupng God to recorde in my conscience) that I haue nether wrytten nor altered so moch as one worde for the mayntenaunce of any maner of secte: but haue with a cleare conscience purely & faythfully translated this out of fyue sundry interpreters, haupng onely the many fest trueth of the scripture before myne eyes: Trustynge in the goodnes of God, that it shalbe vnto his worshippe: quietnes and tranquile vnto your hyghnes: a perfecte stablyshment of all Gods ordynaunces within your graces domynion:

 a generall comfozte to all Chyssen hertes, and a continuall thankfulness both of olde and yonge vnto god, and to your grace, for beyng our Moses, and for bringyng vs out of this olde Egypte from the cruell handes of our spirituall Pharaon for where were the Jewes (by ten thousande partes) so moch bounde vnto kynge Dauid, for subduynge of greate Goliath and all theyr enemyes, as we are to your grace, for deliuerynge vs out of our olde Babylonyall captiuyte: for þ which 1. Reg. 17. g.

A prologe.

Myles Couerdale Unto the Christen reader.

Considerynge how excellent knowlege and lernynge an interpreter of scripture oughte to haue in the tongues, and ponderynge also myne owne insufficiency therin, & how weake I am to perfourme þe office of a translatoure, I was the more lothe to medle with this worke. Notwithstandynge whan I cōsidered how greute pytie it was that we shulde wante it so longe, & called to my remembraunce þe aduersite of them, which were not onely of type knowlege, but wolde also with all theyr hertes haue perfourmed þe theyr beganne, yf they had not had impediment: considerynge (I saye) that by reason of theyr aduersyte it coulde not so soone haue bene broughte to an ende, as oure most prosperous nacyon wolde sayne haue had it: the se and other reasonable causes considered, I was the more bolde to take it in hande. And to helpe me herin, I haue had sondre translations, not onely in latyn, but also of the Douche interpreters: whom (because of theyr spinguler gyftes & speciall diligence in the Bible) I haue ben the more glad to folowe for the most parte, accordynge as I was requyred. But to saye the trueth befoze God, it was nether my laboure nether desyre, to haue this worke put in my hande: neuertheles it greued me þe other nacjōs shulde be more plenteufully & pourded for with þe scripture in theyr mother tongue, then we: therfoze whan I was instantly requyred, though I coulde not do so well as I wolde, I thought it yet my dewtye to do my best, and that with a good wyll.

where as some men thynke now þe many translations make diuysyon in þe sayth and in the people of God, þe is not so: for it was neuer better with the congregacion of god, then whan euery church almost had þe Byble of a sondre translation. Amonge the Grekes had not Origen a specyall translation: Had not Iulgiarius one peculpat, & lyke wyse Chrysostom: Besyde the seuentye interpreters, is there not the translation of Aquila, of Theodotio, of Symachus, and of sondre other: Agayne amonge the Latyn men, thou findest þe euery one almost vfed a specyall & sondre translation: for in so moch as euery byshoppe had the knowlege of þe tongues, he gaue his diligence to haue the Byble of his awne translation. The doctours, as Hiereneus, Cyprianus, Tertullian, S. Iherome, S. Augustine, Iularius & S. Ambrose vpon dyuerse places of the scripture, reade not þe texte all alyke.

Therfoze oughte it not to be taken as euil, þe soch men as haue vnderstandynge now in oure tyme, exercise them selues in þe tongues, & geue thei diligence to translate out of one language in to another. See we ought rather to geue god hys thanks therfoze, which thow his spete sterceth vpon mys myndes, so to exercise them selues therin. wolde god it had neuer bene left of after þe tyme of S. Augustine, then shulde we neuer haue come in to soch blindness & ignoraunce, in to soch errours & delusjōs. For as soone as the Byble was cast asyde, & nomore put in exercise, then beganne euery one of his awne heade to wypte what so euer came in to his brayne and þe seemed to be good in his awne eyes: and so grewe þe darknes of mys tradiciōs. And this same is þe cause þe we haue had so many wypters, which seldome made mēcyon of þe scripture of the Byble: & though they some tyme aleged it, yet was it done so farre out of season & so wyde from þe purpose, that a mā maye well perceaue, how that they neuer sawe the orygynall.

Seynge then þe this diligent exercise of translatynge both so moch good & edifyeth in other languages, why shulde it do euill in oures: Doubtes lyke as all nacjōs in þe dyuersite of spraches maye knowe one God in the vnite of faith, and be one in loue: euen so maye dyuerse translations vnderstonde one another, & that in the head articles & grounde of oure most blessed faith, though they vse sondre wordes. wherfoze me thynke we haue greute occasjon to geue thanks vnto God, that he hath opened vnto his church the gyfte of interpretacion & of pryncypal, and that there are now at this tyme so many, which with soch diligence and faithfulness mēprynces & scripture to the honour of god and edifyinge of his people, where as (lyke as whan many are shutyng together) euery one doth his best to be nyest the marke. And though they can not all attayne therto, yet shute they one nyest then another, and hyteth it better then another, yee one can do it better then another. who is now then so vnreasonable, so despytefull, or enuyous, as to abhorre him y doth all his diligence to hytte y pycke, and to shute nyest it, though he myste & come not nyest the mark? Ought not soch one rather to be commended, and to be helped forward, that he maye exercise himselfe the more therein?

For the which cause (acordyng as I was despyed) I toke the more vpon me to set forth this speciall translatyon, not as a checker, not as a reprouer, or despyser of other mens translatyons (for amonge many as yet I haue founde none without occasion of greete thankesgeuyng vnto god) but lowly & faythfully haue I folowed myne interpreters, & that vnder correccion. And though I haue sayled eny where (as there is noman but he myseth in some thyng) loue shall constryte all to y best without eny peruerse iudgment. There is noman lpyng y can se all thynges, ne ther hath god geuen eny man to knowe euery thyng. One seyth more clearly then another, one hath more vnderstandyng then another, one can vtter a thyng better then another, but noman ought to enuye, or dyspyse another. He that can do better then another, shulde not set him at naught y vnderstandeth lesse: yee he that hath y more vnderstandyng, ought to remembre that the same gyfte is not his but Gods, and y God hath geue it him to teach & enfourme the ignorant. If thou hast knowlege therfore to iudge where eny faute is made, I doute not but thou wilt helpe to amende it, yf loue be ioyned with thy knowlege. Howbeit wherin so euer I can perceaue by my selfe, or by the informacyon of other, that I haue sayled (as it is no wonder) I shall now by the helpe of God ouerlooke it better & amende it.

Now wil I exhorte the (who so euer thou be y readeest scripture) yf thou fynde oughte therein y thou vnderstandest not, or that appeareth to be repugnaunt, geue no temerarious nor haystye iudgment therof: but ascripbe it to thyne awne ignorance, not to the scripture, thynke y thou vnderstandest it not, or y it hath some other meanyng, or y it is haplye ouersene of y interpreters, or wronge prynced. If gayne, it shall greatly helpe y to vnderstande scripture, yf thou marke not onely what is spoken or wyrtten, but of whom, & vnto whom, with what wordes, at what tyme where, to what intent, with what circumstance, consyderynge what goeth before, and what foloweth after. For there be some thynges which are done & wyrtte, to the intente y we shulde do lyke wyse: as whan Abraham beleueth God, is obedient vnto his worde, & defendeth Lot his kynsman from violent wronge. There be some thynges also which are wyrtte, to the intente y we shulde eschue soch lyke. As whan Dauid lyeth with Urias wyfe, & caugeth him to be slayne. Therfore (I saye) whan thou readeest scripture, be wyse & circumspect: & whan thou comest to soch straunge maners of speakynge & darke sentences, to soch parables & similitudes, to soch dreames or visions as are hyd from thy vnderstandyng, comytte them vnto God or to the gyfte of his holy spyrte in them y are better lerned then thou.

As for the commendacyon of Gods holy scripture, I wolde sayne magnifye it as it is worthy, but I am farre vn sufficient therto. & therfore I thoughte it better for me to holde my tonge, then with few wordes to prayse or commende it: exhertyng y (most deare reader) so to loue it, so to cleue vnto it, & so to folowe it in thy dayly conuersacyon, y other men seynge thy good workes & the frutes of y holy good in the, maye prayse the father of heauen, & geue his worde a good repoyte: for to lyue after the lawe of God, & to leade a vertuous conuersacyon, is the greatest prayse y thou canst geue vnto his doctryne.

But as touchynge the euell repoyte and dysprayse that the good worde of God hath by the corrupte and euell conuersacyon of some, y dayly heare it and professe it outwardly with theyr mouthes, I exhorte y (most deare reader) let not y offende thence with dysawe thy mynde fro the loue of y trouth, nether moue y to be partaker in lyke vnthankfulnes: but seynge þ lighte is come in to the worlde, loue nomore the woꝝ-kes of darknes, receaue not the grace of god in bayne. Call to thy remembraunce how louynge & mercifull God is vnto the, how kyndly and fatherly he helpeth the in all trouble, teacheth thyne ignoraunce, healeth the in all thy syknesse, forgeueth the all thy synnes, fedeþ þ, geueth the drynke, helpeth þ out of prison, norrysheth the in straunge countrees, careth for the, & seyth þ thou wante noþynge. Call this to mynde (I saie) a that earnestly, and consyde how thou hast receaued of god all the se benefites (see and many mo then thou canst desyre) how thou art bounde lyke wise to shewe thy selfe vnto thy neighbour as farre as thou canst, to teach him yf he be ignoraunt, to helpe him in all his trouble, to heale his syknes, to forgeue him his offences, and that hartely, to fede him, to cherish him, to care for him, and to se þ he wante noþynge. And on this behalfe I beseeke the (thou þ hast þ ryches of this worl-de, and louest God with thy harte) to lyfte vp thyne eyes, and se how greete a multitude of poore people renne thorow euery towne: haue pitie on thyne awne flesh, helpe them with a good harte, and do with thy counsell all that euet thou canst, that this vnshamefast beggynge maye be put downe, that these ydle folkes maye be set to labour, & that soch as are not able to get theyr lyuynge, maye be prouyded for.

At the leest thou þ art of counsell with soch as are in auctoryte, geue them some occasyn to cast theyr heades together, and to make prouysyn for the poore. But the in remembraunce of those noble cyties in othet countrees, that by the auctoryte of theyr prynces haue so rychely ad well prouyded for theyr poore people, to the greete shame & dishonour of vs, yf we lykewyse receauynge þ worde of God, shewe not soch lyke frutes therof. wolde God þ those men (whose office is to maynteyne þ comon welth) were as diligent in this cause as they are in othet. Let vs beware by tymes, for after vnthankfulnes there foloweth euet a plage: the merciful hande of God be with vs, & defende vs that we be not partakers therof.

Go to now (most deare reader) & syt the downe at the Lordes fete and reade his wordes, & (as Moyses teacheth the Jewes) take them in to theyr herte, & let thy tal-kyng & communicacion be of them whan thou syttest in thyne house, or goest by þ waye, whan thou lyest downe, & whan thou rysest vp. And aboue all thynges sathyon thy lyfe, & conuersacion accordyng to the doctryne of the holy goost therein, that thou mayest be partaker of þ good promyses of god in the Byble, & be heyre of his blessynge in Christ. In whom yf thou put thy trust, & be an vnspayed reader or hearer of hys worde with thy hert, thou shalt fynde swetenesse therein, & spee woderous thynges, to thy vnderstandynge, to the auoydynge of all sedycious sectes, to the abhorrynge of thy olde synfull lyfe, & to the stablyshynge of thy godly conuersacion.

In the first boke of Moyses (called Genesis) thou mayest lerne to knowe the al-myghty power of god in creatynge all of naught, his infinite wysdome in ordynyng the same, his ryghteousnes in punyshynge þ vngodly, his loue & fatherly mercy in comforynge the righteous with his promyses. &c.

In the seconde boke (called Exodus) we se the myghty arme of god, in deli-uerynge his people from so greete bondage out of Egypte, and what prouysyn he maketh for them in the wilderness, how he teacheth them with his wholsome worde and how the Tabernacle was made and set vp.

In the thyrde boke (called Leviticus) is declared what sacrifices the prestes & Leuites vsed, and what theyr office & ministracyon was.

In the fourth boke (called Numerus) is declared how the people are nombred and mustred, how the captaynes are chosen after þ tribes & kynteds, how they we-te forth to þ battayll, how they pitched theyr tentes, & how they brake vp.

The fyfth boke (called Deuteronomium) sheweth how that Moyses now beyng ye olde, rehearseth the lawe of god vnto þ people, putteth them in remembraunce agayne of all the wonders & benefices that god had shewed for them, and exhorteth them earnestly to loue þ Lord theyr god, to cleue vnto him, to put their trust in him and to hearken vnto his voyce.

To the reader.

After the death of Moses doth Josue bringe the people in to the lode of promes where God doth wonderous thynges for his people by Josue, which distributeth þe londe vnto them, vnto euery tribe theyr possession. But in theyr wealth they forgat the goodnes of God, so that oft tymes he gaue the ouer in to the hande of theyr enemies. Neuertheles whan soeuer they called faithfully vpon him, and conuerted, he deliuered them agayne, as the booke of Judges declarcth.

In the booke of the kynges, is describ'd the regiment of good and euell prynces, and how the decaye of all nations cometh by euell kynges. For in Jeroboam thou seyst what myschefe, what ydolatre & soch like abhominacion foloweth, whā the kyng is a mainteyner of false doctryne, & causeth the people to synne agaynst God, which fallinge awaye from gods worde, increased so sore amonge them, that it was the cause of all theyr sorowe and misery, & the very occasion why Israel first and then Juda, were carryd awaye in to captiuite. Agayne, in Josaphat, in Ezechias and in Josias thou seyst the nature of a vertuous kyng. He putteth downe the houses of ydolatre, seyth that his prestes teach nothyng but þe lawe of God, commaundeth his lordes to go with them, and to se that they teach the people. In these kynges (I saye) thou seyst the condycion of a true defender of þe fayth, for he spareth nether cost nor laboure, to mainteyne the lawes of God, to seke the welth & prosperite of his people, and to rote out the wicked. And where soch a prince is, thou seyst agayne, how God defendeth him and his people, though he haue neuer so many enemies. Thus wente it with the in the olde tyme, and euen after þe same maner goeth it now with vs: God be prayd therfore, & graunte vs of his fatherly mercy, that we be not vnthankfull: lest where he now geueth vs a Josaphat, an Ezechias, yee a very Josias, he sende vs a Pharaos, a Jeroboams, or an Achabs.

17. b.

In the two first booke of Ezechias & in Hester thou seyst the deliuerance of the people, which though they were but fewe, yet is it vnto vs all a speciall comforte, for so moch as God is not forgetfull of his promes, but bringeth them out of captiuite, accordyng as he had tolde them before.

In the booke of Job we lerne comfote and patience, in that God not onely punyssheth the wicked, but proueth & tryeth the iust and righteous (howbeit there is no man innocent in his sight) by dyuerse troubles in this lyfe, declarynge thereby, þe they are not his bastards, but his deare sonnes, and that he loueth them.

In the Psalmes we lerne how to resorte onely vnto God in all oure troubles, to seke helpe at him, to call onely vpon him, to satle oure myndes by patience, & how we ought in prosperite to be thankfull vnto him,

The Proverbs and the Preacher of Salomon teach vs wysdome, to knowe God, oure owne selues, and the worlde, and how vayne all thynges are, saue onely to cleue vnto God.

As for the doctryne of the Prophetes, what is it els, but an earnest exhortacion to eschue synne, & to turne vnto God: a faythfull promys of the mercy & pardon of God, vnto all them þe turne vnto him, and a threatenynge of his wyath to the vngodly: sauyng that here and there they prophete also manifestly of Christ, of þe expulsion of the Jewes, and callynge of the Hethen.

Thus moch thought I to speake of þe olde Testament, wherein almyghtie God openeth vnto vs his myghty power, his wysdome, his lounge mercy & righteousnesse: for the which cause it oughte of no man to be abhored, despyed, or lightly regarded, as though it were an olde scripture þe nothyng beloged vnto vs, or þe now were to be refused. For it is Gods true scripture & testimony, which the Lorde Jesus commaundeth the Jewes to searce, who so euer beleueth not the scripture, beleueth not Christ, and who so refuseth it, refuseth God also.

The New Testament or Gospell, is a manifest and cleare testimony of Christ how God perfourmeth his oath and promes made in the olde Testament, how the New is declared and included in the Olde, and the Olde fulfilled and verifed in the New.

Now where as the most famous interpreters of all geue sondre iudgmentes of the texte (sofarre as it is done by þe spere of knowlege in the holy goost) me thynke noman shulde be offended there at, for they referte theyr doynge in mekenes to the spere of truerh in the congregacion of god: a sure I am, that there cometh moze knowlege and vnderstoninge of the scripture by theyr sondre translatyons, then by all the gloses of oure sophisticall doctours. For that one interpreteth somthyng obscurely in one place, the same translateth another (or els he him selfe) moze manifestly by a moze playne vocable of the same meanynge in another place. Be not thou offended therfore good Reader) though one call a scrpbe, that another calleth a law pet: or elders, that another calleth father & mother: or repentaunce, that another calleth pennaunce or amendment. For if thou be not discaued by mens tradicions, thou shalt fynde nomoze dyctate betwene these termes then betwene foure pens and a grote. And this maner haue I vsed in my translatyon, calling it in some place pennaunce, that in another place I call repentaunce, and that not onely because the interpreters haue done so before me, but that the aduersaries of the truerh maye se, how that we abhorre not this worde pennaunce (as they vntulyp repute of vs) no moze then the interpreters of latyn abhorre penitence, whan they reade resipiscere. Onely oure hertes desyre vnto God, is, that his people be not blynded in theyr vnderstonynge, lest they beleue pennaunce to be ought saue a very repentaunce, amendment, or conuersyon vnto God, and to be an vnfayned new creature in Christ, and to lyue accordyng to his lawe. For if they shal fal in to the olde blasphemy of Christes bloude, and beleue, that they the selues are able to make satisfaccion vnto God for theyr awne synnes, from the which erroure god of his mercy and pléteous goodnes preserue all his.

Now to conclude: for so moch as all the scripture is wyrtten for thy doctryne & ensample, it shalbe necessary for the, to take holde vpon it, whyle it is offred the, yee and with ten handes thankfully to receaue it. And though it be not worthelp ministered vnto the in this translatyon (by reason of my rudnes) yet if thou be feruet in thy prayer, God shal not onely sende it the in a better shappe, by the ministry of other that beganne it afore, but shal also moue the hertes of them, which as yet medled not withall, to take it in hande, and to bestowe the gifte of theyr vnderstonynge thereon, as well in oure language as other famous interpreters do in other languages. And I praye God, that thow my pooze ministry here in, I maye geue them that can do better, some occasyon so to do: exhortyng the (most deare reader) in the meane whyle on Gods behalfe, if thou be a heade, a Judge, or ruler of þe people, that thou let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exercise thyselfe therein both daye and nyghte, and be euer readyng in it as longe as thou lyuest: that thou mayest lerne to feare the Lord thy God, & not to turne asyde from the commaundement, nether to the right hande net to the lefte: lest thou be a knowet of personnes in iudgmet, and wylst the righte of the straunger, of the fatherles or of the wedowe, and so þe curse to come vpon the. But what office so euer thou hast wayte vpon it, and execute it, to the mayntenaunce of peace, to the welth of thy people, defendynge the lawes of God, and the louers thereof, and to the destruction of the wicked.

If thou be a preacher, and hast the oversighte of the flocke of Christ, awake and fede Christes shepe with a good herte, & spare no laboure to do them good, seke not thy selfe, a bewarre of fylthy lute/ but be vnto þe flocke an ensample, in þe worde, in conuersacion, in loue, in frequencie of þe spere, and be euer readyng, exhortyng, & teachyng in Gods worde, that the people of God renne not vnto other doctrynes and lest thou thy selfe (whan thou shuldest teach other) be founde igno;ant therein. And rather then thou wouldest teach the people any other thyng then Gods worde take the boke in thyne hande, & reade the wordes eué as they stonde therein (so: it is no shame so to do, it is moze shame to make a lye) This I saye for soch. as are not yet experte in the scripture, for I rejoyce no preachyng with at the boke as longe as they saye the truerh.

To the reader.

yf thou be a man that hast wyfe and childre, first loue thy wyfe, acor:dyng to the Ephe.
 enlample of the loue, wherwith Christ loued the cōgregation, and remembre that 5.6.
 so doyng, thou louest euen thyselfe: yf thou hate her, thou hatest thine owne flesh:
 yf thou cherishe her and make moch of her, thou cherisest & makest moch of thyselfe for she is bone of thy bones, & flesh of thy flesh. And who so euer thou be that hast

 vp. which thyng (I meane byngynge vp well of children) yf it be diligently looked to, it is the vpholdinge of all comon welthes: and the negligence of the same, the very decaye of all realmes.

Finally, who so euer thou be, take these wordes of scripture in to thy herte, and be not onely an outwarde hearer, but a doer thereafter, and practyse thyselfe therein:

To the reader.

are able to make satisfaction vnto God for their awne synnes: for the which erreure God of his mercy preserue all his.

Now to conclude: for so much as all the scripture is wyrtten for thy doctryne and ensample, it shalbe necessary for the, to take holde vpon it, whyle it is offred the, yee and when handes thankfully to receaue it. And though it be not worthely mynistréd vnto the in this translation (by reason of my rudenes) yet yf thou be feruent in thy prayer, God shall not onely sende it the in a better shappe by the mynistracion of other that beganne it afore, but shall also moue the hertes of them, which as yet medled not withall, to take it in hande, and to bestowe the gifte of their vnderstanding: theron, as well in oure language, as other famous interpreters do in other languages. And I prae God, that thorow my poore mynistracion here in, I maye geue them that can do better, some occasion so to do: exhortynge the (most deare Reader) in the meane whyle on Gods behalfe, yf thou be a heade, a Judge, or ruler of the people, • that thou let not the booke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but exercyse thyselfe therin both daye and night, • and be euer readinge in it as so ge as thou lyst, that thou mayest lerne to feare the LORDE thy God, and not to turne asyde from the comāndement, nether to the right hande ner to the lefte: lest thou be a knower of personnes in iudgment, and wreste the righte of the stranger, of the fatherles, or of the widow, • and so the curse to come vpon the. • But what office so euer thou hast, wayte vpon it, and execute it, to the mayntenaunce of peace, to the welth of thy people, defendinge the lawes of God and the louers therof, and to the destruccion of the wicked.

Tit. 2. a

If thou be a preacher, and hast the oversighte of the flocke of Christ, awake, and fede Christes shepe with a good hert, and spare no labour to do the good, seke not thy selfe, and beware of fylthy lucre: • but be vnto the flocke an ensample, in the worde, in cōuersacion, in loue, in feruentnes of the spiete, and be euer readinge, exhortynge, and teachinge in Gods worde, that yf people of God remenot vnto other doctrynes, and lest thou thy selfe (whan thou shuldest teach other) be founde ignoraunt therin. And rather then thou woldest teach the people any other chynge then Gods worde, take the booke in thynne hande, and reade yf wordes euen as they stonde therin (for it is no shame so to do, it is more shame to make a lye) this I saye for soch as are not yet experce in the scripture, for I reprocue no preachinge without the booke, as longe as they saye the truerth.

If thou be a man that hast wyse and children, first loue thy wyse, acordinge to the ensample of the loue, wherwith Christ loued the congregacion, and remembre that so doynge, thou lovest euen thyselfe: yf thou hate her, thou hatest thine awne flesh: yf thou cherishe her and make moch of her, thou cherisest and makest moch of thyselfe. for she is bone of thy bones, and flesh of thy flesh. And who so euer thou be that hast children • brynge the vp in the nurcoure and informaciō of the LORDE: And yf thou be ignoraunt, or art ocher wyse occupied lausfully that thou canst not teach them thyselfe, then be euen as diligent to seke a good master for yf childre, as thou wast to seke a mother to beare them: for there lieth as greate weight in the one as in the ocher: Nee better it were for them to be vnborne, then not to feare God, or to be euell brought vp. Which thinge (I meane bryngynge vp well of children) yf it be diligently looked to, it is yf vpholdinge of all comon welthes: and the negligence of the same, the very decaye of all realmes.

Finally, who so euer thou be, take these wordes of scrypture to hert, and be not onely an outwarde hearer, but a doer therafter, and practyse thy selfe therin: that thou mayest fele in thine hert, the swete promyses therof for thy consolacion in all trouble, and for the sure stablyshinge of thy hope in Christ: And haue euer an eye to the wordes of scripture, that yf thou be a teacher of other, thou mayest be within the boundes of the truerth, or at the leest though thou be but an hearer or reader of another mans doynge, thou maiest yet haue knowlege to iudge all spietes, and be fre from every erreure, to the vtter destruccion of all se dicious sectes and straunge doctrynes, that the holy scrypture maye haue fre passage, and be had in reputacion, to the worshippe of the author therof, which is euen God himselfe: to

The V. Chapter.

In this is the boke of the generation of man, in the tyme whan God created man, and made him after the similitude of God. Male and female made he them, and blessed the, and called their names Man, in the tyme whan they were created. And Adam was an hundred and thirtie yeare olde, and begat a sonne, which was like his owne ymage, and called his name Seth: and lyued thereafter eight hundred yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundred and thirtie yeares, and so he dyed.

Seth was an hundred and fyue yeare olde, and begat Enos: and lyued thereafter eight hundred and seven yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundred and twelue yeares, and so he dyed.

Enos was nyentie yeare olde, and begat Kenan: and lyued thereafter eight hundred and fiftene yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundred and fyue yeares, and so he dyed.

Kenan was seuentie yeare olde, and begat Mahalaliel: and lyued thereafter eight hundred and fourtie yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundred and ten yeares, and so he dyed.

Mahalaliel was thre score yeare olde and fyue, and begat Jared: and lyued thereafter eight hundred and thirtie yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was eight hundred, nyentie and fyue yeares, and so he dyed.

Jared was an hundred and two and sixtie yeare olde, and begat Enoch: and lyued thereafter eight hundred yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundred and two and sixtie yeare, and so he dyed.

Enoch was fyue and thre score yeare olde, and begat Mathusalah: and led a godly conuersacion thre hundred yeares thereafter, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was thre hundred and fyue and thre score yeares. And for so moch as he lyued a godly life, God toke him awaye, and he was nomore sene.

Mathusalah was an hundred and seven and foure score yeare olde, and begat Lamech: and lyued thereafter seven hundred and two and foure score yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was nyne hundred and nyne and tre score yeares, and so he dyed.

Lamech was an hundred and two and foure score yeare olde, and begat a sonne, and called him Noe, and sayde: This same shall coſorte vs in oure workes, and in the sorowe of oure bondes vpon the earth, which the LORDE hath cursed. After this he lyued fyue hundred and fyue and nyentie yeare, and begat sonnes and daughters. And his whole age was seven hundred seven and seuentie yeares, and so he dyed.

Noe was fyue hundred yeare olde, and begat Sem, Ham and Japhet.

The VI. Chapter.

So whan men beganne to multiplie vpon the earth, and had begot them daughters, the children of God sawe the daughters of men, that they were fayre, and toke vnto the wyues soch as they liked. Then sayde the LORDE: My spere shal not allwaye stryue with man, for he is but flesh also. I wil yet geue him respyte an hundred and twety yeares. There were giauntes also in the worlde at that tyme. For whan the children of God had lyen with the daughters of men, and begotten them children, yf same (children) became mightie in the worlde, and men of renowne.

But whan the LORDE sawe the wickednes of man was increased vpon the earth, and that all thought and imaginacion of their hert was but onely euell continually, it repented him, that he had made man vpon the earth, and he sorowed in his hert, and sayde: I wyll destroye man kynde which I hane made, from the earth: both man, beest, worme, and foule vnder the heauen: for it repenteth me, that I hane made them. Neuer theles Noe founde grace in the sight of the LORDE.

This is the generacion of Noe. Noe was a righteous and perfecte man, and led a godly life in his tyme, and begat thre sonnes: Sem, Ham and Japhet. Notwithstandinge the earth was corrupte in the sight of God, and full of myschefe. Then God looked vpon the earth: and lo, it was corrupte (for all flesh had corrupte his waye vpon the earth.)

Then sayde God vnto Noe: The ende of all flesh is come before me, for the earth is full of myschefe before them. And lo, I wyll destroye them with the earth. Make the an Arcke of pyne tre, and make chambers in it,

Leuit. 11. a

And I^s LORD sayde vnto Noe: Go in to the Arke thou & thy whole house: for the haue I sene righteous before me at this tyme. Of all cleane bestes take vnto the seuen and seuen, the male and his female. And of vncleane bestes a payre, the male and his female. Like wyse of the foules vnder the heauen, seuen and seuen, the male and his female, that there maye beside left a lyue vpon the whole earth.

For yet after seuen dayes, I wil sende raie vpon the earth fourtie dayes and fourtie nightes, and wyll destroye all maner of thinges that I haue made, from of the face of the earth.

The vii. Chap.

And Noe dyd all that the LORD commaunded him. Sixe hundredth yere olde was he, whan the water floude came vpon earth. And he wente in to the Arke, with his sonnes, his wyfe, and his sonnes wyues, for the waters of the floude. Of cleane bestes and of vncleane, of all fethered foules, & of all that crepeth vpon earth, wente in vnto him to the Arke by pares, a male and a female, as I^s LORDE commaunded him. And whan the seuen dayes were past, the water floude came vpon the earth.

Luc. 17. c

In the sixe hundredth yere of Noes age, vpon the seuentene daye of the seconde moneth, that same daye were all I^s fountaynes of the greate depe broken vp, and the wyndowes of heauen were opened, and there came a rayne vpon I^s earth fourtie dayes and fourtie nightes.

Vpon the selfe same daye were Noe into the Arke, with Sem, Ham and Japhet his sonnes, and with his wyfe, and the thre wyues of his sonnes, and all maner of bestes after their kynde, all maner of catell after their kynde, all maner of crepyng thinges (that crepe vpoⁿ the earth) after their kynde, and all maner of foules (what so euer conde flye & what so euer had fethers) after their kynde: These wente all vnto Noe in to the Arke by coopes, of all flesh in whom was the breth of life. And these were the male & the female of all maner of flesh, and wente in, a cordinge as God commaunded him. And the LORD shut (the dore) vpon him.

Then came the water floude fourtie dayes vpon the earth, and the water increased, and bare vp the Arke, and lift it vp ouer I^s earth. Thus the water preuayled, and increased soire vpon the earth, so that the Arke wente vpon the waters. For the waters preuayled and increased so soire vpon earth, that all the hye mountaynes vnder the whole heauen were conered. Syfene cubytes hye preuayled I^s waters ouer the mountaynes, which were conered.

Then all flesh that crept vpon earth, perished, both foules, catell, bestes, and all I^s moved vpon earth, and all men. What so euer had the breth of life vpon the drye land, dyed.

Thus was destroyed all that was vpon the earth, both man and beast, both wormes and foules vnder y^e heauē: all these were destroyed from the earth, Sane Noe onely remayned, and they that were with him in the Arke. And the waters preuayled vpon the earth, an hundredth and fiftie dayes.

The VIII. Chapter.

A Then God remembered Noe and all the beastes, and all the catell that were with him in the Arke, and caused a wynde to come vpon the earth: and the waters ceased, and the fountaynes of the depe and the wyndowes of heauen were stoppte, and the raine of heauē was forbydden, and the waters ranne styll awaye from the earth, and decreased after an hundreth and fiftye dayes.

Vpon the seuentene daye of the seventh moneth rested the Arke vpon the mountaynes of Ararat. And the waters were awaye and decreased vntyll the tenth moneth: for the first daye of the tenth moneth, the toppes of the mountaynes appeared.

After fourtie dayes Noe opened the wyndow of the Arke which he had made, and sent forth a rauen, which flew out, and came agayne, vntyll the waters were dried vp vpon the earth.

Then sent he forth a dove from him, to see, whether the waters were fallen vpon the earth. But when the dove coude fynde no resting place for hir feete, she came agayne vnto him in to the Arke, for the waters were yet vpon the face of all the earth. And he put out his hande, and toke her to him in to the Arke.

Then he abode yet seven dayes mo, and sent out the dove agayne out of the Arke: and she returned vnto him aboue the euen tyde: and beholde, she had broken of a leaf of an olyue tre, and bare it in hir nebb. Then Noe perceived, that the waters were abated vpon the earth. Nevertheless he taried yet seven other dayes, and sent forth the dove, which came nomore to him agayne.

In the sixte hundreth and one yeare of Noes age, vpon the first daye of the first moneth, the waters were dried vp vpon the earth. Then Noe toke of the hatches of the Arke, and sawe the face of the earth was drye. So vpon the seven and twentye daye of the seconde moneth the whole earth was drye.

Then spake God vnto Noe, and sayde:

Go out of the Arke, thou and thy wyfe, and thy sonnes, and thy sonnes wyues with the. As for all the beastes that are with the, what so ever flesh it be (both foule and catell and all maner of wormes that crepe vpon the earth) let them go out with the, and be occupied vpon the earth, growe and multiplye vpon the earth.

with his wife, and with his sonnes wyues. All the beastes also and all the womes, and all the foules, and all that crepte vpon the earth, wente out of the Arke, every one vnto his life.

And Noe buylded an altare vnto the LORD, and toke of all maner of cleane beastes and of all maner of cleane foules, and offered brete sacrifices vpon the altare. And the LORD smelled the swete sauour, and sayde in his hert: I wyl hence forth curse the earth nomore for mans sake, for the ymaginacion of mans hert is euell, even from the very youth of him. Therefore from hence forth I wil nomore smyte all that lyueth, as I haue done. Neither shall sowynge tyme and haruest, colde and heate Sommer and wynter, daye and night cease so longe as the earth endureth.

The X. Chapter.

Ald God blessed Noe and his sonnes, and sayde vnto them: increace and multiplye, and fyll the earth. The feare also and drede of you be vpon all beastes of the earth, vpon all foules vnder the heauen, and vpon all that crepeth on the earth, and all fyshe of the see be geuen in to youre handes. All that moueth and hath life, be youre meate. Euen as the grene herbe, so haue I geue you all. Onely eate not the flesh with the bloude, wherein the soule is: for the bloude of you wherein youre soule is, wyl I requyre of the hande of all beastes: and the soule of man wyl I requyre of mans hande, yee every mans soule of anothers hande.

He that sheddeth mans bloude, his bloude shal be shed by man agayne, for God made man after his owne likenesse. As for you, be ye frutesfull, and increase, and be occupied vpon the earth, that ye maye multiplye therein.

Farthermore, God sayde vnto Noe and to his sonnes with him: Beholde, I make my couenaunt with you, and with youre sede

And then wyll I thynke vpon my couenaunt betwixte me and you and all lynyng creatures in all maner of flesh: so that from hence forth there shall nomore come eny floude of water to destroye all flesh. The sonnes of Noe which wente out of the Arke, are these: Sem, Ham and Japhet. As for Ham, he is the father of Canaan. These are Noes thre sonnes, of whom all londes were ouerspreid.

Noe beganne to take hede vnto y^e tyllinge of the grounde, and planted a vyniarde. And dranke of the wyne, and was drunken, and laye vncouered in his tente. Now when hā the father of Canaan sawe his fathers prauities, he tolde his two brethren with out. Thē toke Sem and Japhet a mantell and put it vpo both their shulders, and wente backward, and couered their fathers secretes: and their faces were turned asyde, y^e they shulde not se their fathers prauities.

The x. Chap.

So whan Noe awaked from his wyne, and perceaued what his yonger sonne had done vnto him, he sayde: Cursed be Canaan, and a seruaunt of seruautes be he vnto his brethren. He sayde morouer: Praises be the LORDE God of Sem, and Canaan be his seruaunt. God increase Japhet, and let him dwell in the tentes of Sem, and Canaan be his seruaunt.

And Noe lyued after the floude thre hundred and fiftie yeare, so y^e his whole age was ix hundred and fystie yeare, and so he dyed.

The children of Japhet are these: Gomer, Magog, Madai, Javan, Tubal, Mesek and Thyris. The childre of Gomer are these: Asenas, Riphat and Togarma. The children of Keyma are these: Sheba and Dedā. Chus also begat Nemrod, which beganne to be mightie in the earth, and was a mightie hunter in the sight of the LORDE. Therof cometh the proverbe: This is a mightie hunter before the LORDE like as Nemrod. And the ougenall of his kynngdome was Babel, Erech, Acad and Chalne in y^e londe of Syncar. Out of that lode came Assur, and buylde Ninive, and y^e strettes of y^e cite, and Calah, and Kessen betwene Ninive and Calah: This is a greete cite. Mizraim begat Ludim, Enamim, Leabim, Naphtum, Pathrusim and Casluhim, from whence came the Philistynes and Capthorims. Canaan also begat Sidon his eldest sonne, and Heth, Jebusi, Emori, Girgosi, Hivi, Arki, Sini, Arnadi, Zemarai and Hamati: fro whence y^e kynreds of y^e Cananites are dispersed abroad. And y^e Coastes of y^e Cananites were fro Sidon forth thorow Gerar vnto Gasa, tyll thou comest vnto Sodoma, Gomora, Adama, Zeboim, and vnto Lasa. And their dwellinge was from Mese, tyll thou come vnto Sephar a mountayne of y east. These are y children of Sem in their generacions, cun ges, londes and people.

This is now y generation of y children of Noe in their kynredes z people. Of these were y people vpon earth spied a brode after y floude. The XI. Chapter.

A Somer all the worlde had one tonge z language. Now as they wente + towarde the East, they founde a playne in y londe of Synear, z there they dwelt, z saide one to another: Come on, let vs make bryck z burne it. And they toke bryck for stone, z slyme for morter, And sayde: Come, let vs buylde a cite z a tower, whose top pe maye reach vnto heauē, y we maye make vs a name, a fore we be scattered abroad in all londes. Then came y LORDE downe, to se y eice z tower, y y childre of mē had buylded. And y LORDE saide: Beholde, the people is one, z haue one maner of language amōge thē all, z this haue they begonne to do, z wil not leaue of from all y they haue purposed to do. Come on, let vs go downe, z cōfounde their tonge euē there, y one vnderstonde not what another saith. Thus y LORDE scattered thē frō thēce in all lōdes, so y they lest of to buylde the cite. Therefore is it called Babel, because the LORDE cōfounded there the language of all the worlde, and from thēce scattered them abroad in to all londes.

These are y generacions of Sem. Sem was an hūdieth yeare olde, and begat Arphachsad two yeare after the floude, and lyued therafter syue hūdieth yeare, and begat sonnes and doughters.

Arphachsad was fine z thirtie yeare olde, and begat Salah, and lyued therafter foure hūdieth and thre yeare, and begat sonnes z doughters.

C Salah was thirtie yeare olde, and begat Eber, z lyued therafter foure hūdieth z thre yeare, z begat sonnes and doughters.

Eber was foure and thirtie yeare olde, z begat Peleg, and lyued therafter foure hūdieth and thirtie yeare, and begat sonnes z doughters.

The xij. Chap. Ho. v.

Peleg was thirtie yeare olde, and begat Regu, and lyued therafter two hūdieth and nyene yeare, and begat sonnes z doughters.

Regu was two and thirtie yeare olde, and begat Serug, and lyued therafter two hūdieth and seven yeare, and begat sonnes and doughters.

Serug was thirtie yeare olde, and begat Nahor, and lyued therafter two hūdieth yeare, and begat sonnes z doughters.

Nahor was nyene and twentye yeare olde, and begat Terah, and lyued herafter an hūdieth and nyentene yeare, and begat sonnes and doughters.

Terah was seventie yeare olde, and begat Abram, Nahor and Haran.

These are the generacions of Terah: Terah begat Abram, Nahor and Haran. And Haran begat Lot, but Harā dyed before Terah his father in y londe where he was borne, at U in Chaldea.

Then Abram and Nahor toke them wyues. Abriams wife was called Sarai, z Nahors wyfe Milca the doughter of Haran, which was father of Milca and Jisca. But Sarai was baren, and had no childe.

Then toke Terah Abriā his sonne, z Lot his sonne Harans sonne, z Sarai his doughter in lawe, his sonne Abriams wife, z caried them w him from U in Chaldea, to go in to the lande of Canaan. And they came to Haran, z dwelt there. And Terah was two hūdieth z syue yeare olde, and dyed in Haran.

The XII. Chapter.

A Said y LORDE sayde vnto Abriam: Get the out of thy countre, and from thy kynred, and out of thy fathers house, in to a londe which I wil shew the. And I wil make of the a mightie people, and wyll blesse the, and make the a greate name, yet thou shalt be a very blessinge. I wil blesse them that blesse the, and curse them that curse the: and in the shal all the generacions of the earth be blessed.

Then wente Abriam out, as the LORDE commaunded him, and Lot wente with him. Syue z seventie yeare olde was Abriā, whan he wente out of Haran. So Abriam toke Sarai his wife, and Lot his brothers sonne, w all their goodes which they had gotten, and soules which they begat in Harā, and departed to go in to y londe of Canaan. And whē they were come in to the same londe, he wente thorow, tyll he came vnto the place of Sichem, and vnto the Okegroue of More: for y Cananites dwelt in y lōde at y same time.

Then the LORDE appeared vnto Abriā,

Gen. 12.2 And there he buylded an auter vnto y^e LORDE, which appeared vnto him. The bialke he vp fro thece, vnto a mountayne y^e laye on y^e east syde of the cite of Bethel, z pitched his tent: so y^e he had Bethel on the west side, and Ay on y^e east syde: z there buylded he an altare also vnto the LORDE, z called vpon the name of the LORDE. Afterwarde departed Abram farther, z toke his iourneye southwarde. But there came a derth in the londe.

C Then wente Abram downe in to Egipte to kepe himself there as a straunger, for the derth was sore in the londe. And n^e han he was come nye for to entre in to Egipte, he sayde vnto Sarai his wife: Beholde, I knowe y^e thou art a fayre woman to loke vpon. Now whan the Egiptians se the, they wil saye: She is his wife, and so shal they slaye me, and saue the alyue. Therefore (I pray y^e) saye thou art my sister, that I maye fare the better by reason of the, and that my soule maye lyue for thy sake.

D Now whan he came in to Egipte, y^e Egiptians sawe y^e woman, y^e she was very faire: z Pharaos prynces sawe her also, z praysed her before him. Then was she brought in to Pharaos house, and Abram was well intreated for hir sake: and he had shepe, oxen, and he Asses, seruantes, maydes, she Asses and Camels.

Esa. 45.2 But y^e LORDE plagued Pharaos z his house wth greate plagues, because of Sarai Abraams wife. Then Pharaos called Abra vnto him, and sayde: Why hast thou dealt thus wth me? Wherfore toldest thou not me at the first, y^e she was thy wife? Why saydest thou then, that she was y^e sister? Wherfore I toke her to my wife. And now lo, there is y^e wife, take her, and go thy waye. He gaue his officers also a charge ouer him, to conueye him out, and his wife, and all that he had.

The XIII. Chapter.

Gen. 12.6 A S Abram departed out of Egipte, wth his wife, z with all y^e he had, z Lot wth him also, towarde y^e south. Abram was very rich in catell, silver z gelde. And he wente on forth from the south vnto Bethel, vnto the place where his tent was at y^e first, betwene Bethel and Ay: euen vnto y^e place where he had made the altare before, z there he called vpon the name of the LORDE. Lot also which wente with him, had shepe, greate catell z tentes: so y^e the londe was not able to receaue them, that they might dwell together: for the substance of their riches was so greate, that they conde not dwell together. And there fell a strife betwene the hirdmen of Abraams catell, and the hirdmen of Lots catell. The Cananites also and the pheresites dwelt at that tyme in the londe. Gene. 12.6

B Then sayde Abram vnto Lot: Let there be no strife betwene me and the, and betwene my hyrdmen and thine, for we are breth^{er}. Is not all the whole londe open before the? Departe from me, I praye the. If thou wilt go to the left hande, I wil take the right: If yf thou wilt go to the right hande, I wil take the left. Then Lot lift vp his eyes, and behelde all the countre rounde aboute Jorda, that it was a plenteous countre of water. For before the LORDE destroyed Sodoma and Gomoria, it was rounde aboute Joar, euen as the pleasaunt garden of the LORDE, and as the londe of Egipte. Eccl. 15.2

C Then Lot chose all the coastes of Jorda, and toke his iourney towarde y^e East. And so the one brother departed from the other. Abram dwelt in the lande of Canaan, and Lot in the cities of the same coastes, and pitched his tent towarde Sodome. But y^e men of Sodome were wicked, and synned exceedingly agaynst the LORDE. Deut. 2.6

D Now whan Lot was departed from Abram, the LORDE saide vnto Abram: Lift vp thine eyes, and loke from the place where thou dwellest, northwarde, southwarde, eastwarde, and westwarde: for all the londe that thou seest, wyll I geue vnto the and to thy side for ever, and wyll make chy seide as the dust of the earth: so that yf a man can nombre the dust of the earth, he shall nombre chy seide also. Arise, and go thorow the londe, in the length and bredth, for I wyll geue it vnto the. Act. 7.2

E So Abram remoued his tent, and wente and dwelt in y^e Okegrone of Mamre, which is in Ebron, and buylded there an altare vnto the LORDE. Gen. 14.6

The XIII. Chapter.

A And it chaunced in the tyme of Amraphel the kynge of Synear, Arioch

the kynge of Elasar, Redorlaomer the kynge of Elam, and Thideal the kynge of the heithen, that they made warre wth Bera the kynge of Sodome, and wth Birsa the kynge of Gomorra, and wth Sineab the kynge of Adama, and wth Semeaber the kynge of Zeboim, and wth the kynge of Bela, which is called Zoar. These came all together in to the brode valley, where now the salt see is: for twelue yeares were they subiectes vnto kynge Redorlaomer, and in the thirtenth yeare they fell from him. Therefore in the fourtenth yeare came Redorlaomer, and the kynges that were with him, and smote the Gaiantes in Astaroth Barnaim, and Susim at Ham, and Emim in the felde of Kiriaathaim, and the Hovites in their owne mount Seir vnto the playne of Pharan, which bordieth vpo the wildernes. And then they turned, and came to the well of Iudgment (which is Cades) and smote all the countre of the Amalechites, and also the Amorites, that dwelt in Hazazon Thamar.

B Then wente out the kynge of Sodome, and the kynge of Gomorra, and the kynge of Adama, and the kynge of Zeboim, and the kynge of Bela (called Zoar) and prepared them selues to fight in the brode valley wth Redorlaomer the kynge of Elam, and wth Thideal the kynge of the heithen, and wth Amraphel the kynge of Synear, and wth Arioch the kynge of Elasar: foure kynges wth fyne. And the brode valley had many flyme pyttes. But the kynge of Sodoma and Gomorra were put to flight, and fell there, and the residue fled vnto the mountaynes. Then toke they all the goodes at Sodoma and Gomorra, and all their veyalles, and wente their waye. They toke Lot also Abriams brothers sonne, and his good (for he dwelt at Sodome) and departed.

C Then came one that had escaped, and tolde Abram the Aleuene, which dwelt in the Okegroue of Manire the Amoryte, which was the brother of Escol and Aner: for these were confederate with Abram.

I Now whan Abram herde that his brother was taken, he harnessed his bonde seruantes borne in his owne house, thre hundred and eightene, and folowed after them vntill Dan, and deuyded the, and fell vpo them by night wth his seruantes, and smote the, and chased them awaye vnto Hobab, which lieth on the left hande of the cite of Damascos, and brought agayne all the goodes, and also his brother Lot, and his goodes, and women also and the people. And as he came agayne from the slaughter of Redorlaomer and of the kynges that were with him, the kynge of Sodome

But Melchisedech the kynge of Salem brought forth bred and wyne. And he beyng the priest of the most hye God, blessed hym and sayde: Blessed be thou Abram vnto the most hye God possessor of heauen and earth. And praysed be God the hiest, which hath delyuered thine enemies in to thy handes. And Abram gave him tythes of all. D

Then sayde the kynge of Sodome vnto Abram: Geue me the seules, and take the goodes vnto thy self. But Abram sayde vnto the kynge of Sodome: I lift vp my honte vnto the LORDE the most hye God, possessor of heauen and earth, that I wyll not take of all that is thine, so moch as a threde or a shuelacher, lest thou shuldest saye: I haue made Abram ryche: Saue onely that which the yonge men haue spent, and the men Aner Escol and Mamre, that wente with me, let them take their parte.

The XV. Chapter.

It happened after these actes, that the worde of the LORDE came vnto Abram in a vysion, and sayde: Feare not Abram, I am thy shylde and thy excedinge greater reward. But Abram sayde: LORDE LORDE, what wilt thou geue me? I go childles, and the seruante of my house (this Elasar of Damascos) hath a sonne. And Abram sayde morouer: Beholde, vnto me hast thou genen no sede: and lo, the sonne of my house shal be myne heyre. And beholde, the worde of the LORDE spake vnto him, and sayde: He shal not be thine heyre, but one that shal come out of thine owne body, he shal be thine heyre. And he bad him go forth, and sayde: Loke vp vnto heauen, and tell the staries: Canst thou nombre them? And he sayde vnto him: Euen so shal thy sede be. A Abram belened the LORDE, and he was counted vnto him for righteousnes. And he sayde vnto him: I am the LORDE, and I brought the from the out of Chaldea, to geue the this londe to possesse it. But Abram sayde: LORDE LORDE, wherby shall I knowe, that I shall possesse it? And he sayde vnto him: Take a cow of thre yeare olde, and a she goate of thre yeare olde, and a ramme of thre yeare olde, and a turtill doue, and a yonge pigeon. And he toke all these, and deuyded them in the myddes, and layde the one parte ouer agaynst the other, but the foules deuyded he not. And the foules fell vpo the flesh, but Abram droue them awaye.

downe, there fell an heuy slepe vpon Abram. And lo, feare and greate darcknes fell vpon him. And he sayde vnto Abram: knowe this of a suertye, that thy sede shalbe a strainger, in a londe that is not theirs. And they shall make bondemen of them, and intreate them euell foure hundreth yeares. But the people whō they shal serue, wyl I iudge. Afterwarde shall they go forth with greate substance: and thou shalt departe vnto thy fathers in peace, and shalt be buried in a good age. And after the fourth generacion they shall come hither agayne, for the wickednes of y Amouites is not yet full.

So whan the Sonne was downe, and it was waxed darcke: Beholde, there smoked a foinace, and a fyre brande wente betwene y partes. The same daye made the LORDE a couenaunt with Abram, and sayde: Vnto thy sede wil I geue this lōde, from the water of Egipte, vnto the greate water Euphrates: the Kenytes, the Kenizites, the Aymonites, the Hethtites, the Pherezites, the Giamrites, the Amouites, the Cananites, the Gergefites, and the Jebusites.

The XVI. Chapter.

Sarai Abriams wife bare him no children: but she had an handmayde an Egipcian, whose name was Agar, and sayde vnto Abram: Beholde, the LORDE hath closed me, that I can not beare. So in (I praye the) vnto my mayde: peradventure I shalbe multiplied by her, more then by myself. And Abram hearkened vnto the voyce of Sarai. Than Sarai Abriams wife toke Agar hir mayde y Egipcian (after they had dwelt ten yeare in the londe of Canaan) and gaue her vnto hir husbande Abriā, to be his wife. And he wente in vnto Agar, and she conceived. Now whan she sawe y she had conceived, she despyed hir mastresse.

Then sayde Sarai vnto Abram: I must suffre wronge for thy sake. I laydemy mayde by the: but now because she seyth, that she hath conceived, I must be despyed in hir sight: the LORDE be iudge betwene me and the. And Abram sayde vnto Sarai: Beholde, thy mayde is vnder thine auctorite, do with her, as it pleaseth the.

Now whan Sarai dealt hardly w her, she fled from her. But the angell of the LORDE founde her besyde a well of water in the wilderness (euen by the well in the waye to Sur) and sayde vnto her: Agar Sarais mai de, whence comest thou? z whyther wylt thou go? She sayde: I fle fro my mastresse Sarai. And the angel of the LORDE sayde vnto her: Returne to thy mastresse agayne, and submitte thyself vnder hir hande.

And the angel of the LORDE sayde vnto her: Beholde, I wil so encrease y sede, that it shall not be nombred for multitude. And the angel of the LORDE sayde further vnto her: Beholde, thou art with childe, z shalt bringe forth a sennē, and shalt call his name Ismael, because the LORDE hath herde y trouble. He shal be a wylde man. His hande agaynst euery man, and euery mans hande agaynst him: and he shal dwell ouer agaynst all his brethien.

And she called the name of the LORDE y spake vnto her: Thou art the God that seist me. For she sayde: Of a suertye I haue sene the back partes of him that sawe me. Therefore called she the well: The well of the liuinge that sawe me. Which (well) is betwene Cadē and Bared.

And Agar bare Abram a sonne, and Abram called his sonnes name which Agar bare him, Ismael. And Abram was foure score yeare olde and sixe, whan Agar bare him Ismael.

The XVII. Chapter.

Now whan Abram was nyentye yea re olde and nyene, the LORDE appeared vnto him, z sayde vnto him: I am the allmightie God, walke before me, z be vncoupte. And I wyll make my couenaunt betwene me z the, and wyl multiplye the excedyngly. Then fell Abram vpon his face.

And God talked furthor, with him, and sayde: Beholde, It is I, and haue my couenaunt with the, and thou shalt be a father of many people. Therefore shalt thou nomore be called Abram, but thy name shal be Abraham: For I haue made the a father of many nacions, z I wil multiplye the excedyngly, and wil make people of y, yee and kyn ges also shal come out of the. And vnto the and to thy seide after the, will I geue the lande, wherin thou art a straunger: euen all the lande of Canaan for an everlastinge possession, and will be their God.

B And God sayde morouer vnto Abraham: Act 7. 2 Kepe my covenant then, thou and they seide after the. This is my covenant which ye shal kepe betwene me and you, and thy seide after I thow out their posterities. Euer y manchild that is amonge you, shalbe circumcyded: and ye shall circumcyde the foreskynne of yo^r flesh. This same shalbe a token of the covenant betwene me and you. Euer y manchild whan it is eight dayes olde, shalbe circumcyded thow out youre posterities: In like maner all household folkes borne at home, or bought, or eny other also that is a strainger and not of thy seide. Thus shall my covenant be in youre flesh for an everlastinge covenant. And yf there shalbe any manchild vncircumcided in the foreskynne of his flesh, his soule shalbe rated out from his people, because he hath broken my covenant.

C And God sayde vnto Abraham: Sarai thy wyfe shal nomore be called Sarai, but Sara shal be hir name: for I will blesse her, and geue the a sonne of her. I wil blesse her, and people shal come of her, yee and kynge of many people. Then fell Abraham vpon his face, and laughed, and sayde in his hert: Shal a childe be borne vnto me that am an hundred yeare olde? And shall Sara y is nyentie yeare olde, beare? And Abraham sayde vnto God: O that Israel might lyue in thy sight. Then sayde God: Yee euen Sara thy wyfe shal beare the a sonne, and thou shalt call his name Isaac: for with him wil I make my everlastinge covenant, and with his seide after him. And as concernynge Isaac also, I haue herde thy request: Beholde, I haue blessed him, and will increase him, and multiplye him exceedingly. Twelue prynces shal he beget, and I wyll make a grete nacion of him.

D But my covenant wyll I make wth Isaac, whom Sara shal beare vnto the, enē this tyme twelue moneth. And he left of talkynge with him, and God wente vp from Abraham. Then toke Abraham his sonne Isaac, and all the seruantes borne in his house, and all that were bought, (as many as were men children in his house,) and circumcy-ded the foreskynne of their flesh, euen the same daye, as God had sayde vnto him. And Abraham was nyentie yeare olde and nyne, whan he cut of the foreskynne of his flesh. As for Isaac, he was thirtene yeare olde, whan the foreskynne of his flesh was circumcyded. Euen vpon one daye were they all circumcyded: Abraham, and Isaac his sonne, and all the men in his house, (whether they were borne at home, bought, or eny other strainger:) they were all circumcyded with him.

The XVIII. Chapter.

A And the LORDE appeared vnto him in the Okegrove of Mamre, as he sat in his tent dore in the heate of y^e daie. And as he lift vp his eyes, and looked, beholde, there stode thre men ouer agaynst him. And whan he sawe them, he ranne to meete them from his tent dore, and bowed himself downe vpon the ground, and sayde: LORDE, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, go not by y^e seruaunt. There shalbe broughte you a litle water, & ye shall wash yo^r fete, & rest youre selues vnder the tre. And I wyll set you a morsell of bred, to comforte youre hertes withall, and then shall ye go youre wayes, for therfore are ye come to youre seruaunt. They sayde: Do euen so as thou hast spoken.

Abraham wente a pace in to the tent to Sara, and sayde: Make haist, & mengle thre peckes of fyne meele, kneade it, and bake cakes. And he came to the beastes, & fet a calf that was tender and geod, and gaue it vnto a yonge man, which made it ready at once. And he toke butter and mylke and of the calf that he had prepared, and set it before the, & he himself by them vnder the tre, & they ate. Then saide they vnto him: where is Sara thy wyfe? He answered: within in y^e tent. Then sayde he: aboute this tyme twelue moneth, (yf I lyue) I will come to the agayne, and Sara thy wyfe shal haue a sonne. And Sara herde that out of the tent dore, which was behynde his backe. And Abraham and Sara were both olde, & well stryken in age: so that it wente nomore with Sara after y^e maner of women: therfore laughed she with in hir self, and sayde: Now that I am olde, & my lord olde also, shal I yett gene my self to lust?

Then sayde y^e LORDE vnto Abraham: Wherfore doth Sara laugh, and saye: Is this true in dede, that I shal beare, and yett am olde? Shulde eny soch thinge be to hard for the LORDE? Aboute this tyme (yf I lyne) I wil come to the agayne, & Sara shal haue a sonne. Then Sara denyed it, and sayde: I laughed not, for she was afrayed. But he sayde: It is not so, thou dydest laugh. Then the men stode vp from thence, and turned them towarde Sodome: and Abraham wente with them, to brynge them on their waye.

C Then sayde the LORDE: How can I hyde f. om Abraham, y^e thinge that I wil do? scynge he shal be a greate and mightie people, and all y^e people vps earth shalbe blessed in him? For I knewe him that he wil commaunde his children and his housholde after him, to kepe the waye of y^e LORDE, and to do after right and conscience, that the LORDE maye bringe vps Abraham what he hath promised him. And the LORDE sayde: There is a crye at Sodome and Gomer-ra, which is greate, & their synnes are exceedinge greuous: therfore wil I go downe & se, whether they haue done all together, a cordinge to that crye, which is come before me, or not, that I maye knowe. And the men turned their face, and wente towarde Sodome. But Abraham stode still before y^e LORDE, and stepte vnto him, and sayde:

And he proceeded further to speake vnto him, and sayde: Peradventure there might be fourtie founde therein. And he sayde: I wil do nothinge vnto them for those fourtyes sake. Abraham sayde: Oh let not my LORDE be angrie, that I speake yett more. Peradventure there might be thirtie founde therein. And he sayde: Yf I fynde thirtie therein, I wil do nothinge vnto them. And he sayde: O se, I haue taken vpon me to speake vnto my LORDE.

Peradventure there might be twentie founde therein. He answered: I wyll not destroye them for those twentyes sake. And sayde: O let not my LORDE be angrie, that I speake yett ence more. Peradventure there might be ten founde therein. He saide: I wil not destroye them for those ten sake.

And the LORDE wente his waye, whan he had lest talkyng with Abraham. And Abraham returned vnto his place.

A T the encynge came the two angels vnto Sodome. And Lot sat vnder the gate of the cite. And whē he sawe them, he rose vp for to mete them, and bowed him self downe to the ground vpon his face, & sayde: Se lordes, come in (I praye you) in to youre seruantes house, and tarye all night: let youre fete be washsen, so maye ye rylse tomorrow by tymes, and go youre waye. Thertheles they sayde: Nay, but we wyll byde in the stretes all night. Then compelled he them sore: and they turned in vnto him, and came in to his house. And he made them a feast, and baked swete cakes, and they ate.

But before they wente to rest, the men of the cite of Sodome came and compassed the house rounde aboute, yonge and olde, all the people from all quarters, and called Lot, and sayde vnto him: Where are the men that came vnto the to night? Bringe them out here vnto vs, that we maye knowe them.

And Lot wente out at the dore vnto the, and shut the dore after him, and sayde: O brethren, do not so wickedly. And ʒ men saide vnto Lot: Hast thou yet here eny sonne in lawe, or sonnes or daughters? Who so euer belongeth vnto the in the cite, brynge him out of this place: for we must destroye this place, because the crye of them is greate before the L O R D E, which hath sent vs to destroye them. Then wente Lot forth, and spake to his sonnes in lawe, which shulde haue married his daughters, and sayde: O stonde vp, and get you out of this place, for the L O R D E wyll destroye this cite. Tlenertheles they toke it but for a sporte.

Sap. 10. b Now whan the momynge arose, the angels caused Lot to speke him, and sayde: Stonde vp, take thy wife ʒ thy two daughters which are at hande, that thou also perishe not in the synne of this cite. But why-

And whē they had brought him out, they sayde: Saue thy soule, and loke not behynde the, nether stonde thou in all this countre: Saue thy self vpon the mountayne, that thou perish not. Then sayde Lot vnto the: Oh no my L O R D E, beholde, in as moch as thy seruānt hath founde grace in thy sight, now make ʒ mercy greate, which thou hast shewed vnto me, in that thou sauest my soule alyue. I can not saue my self vpon the mountayne. There might some myssfortune fall vpon me, that I shulde dye. Then the L O R D E caused brymstone and fyre to rayne downe from the L O R D E out of heauen vpon Sodoma and Gomorra, and overthrew those cities, the whole region, and all that dwelt in the cities, and that that grew vpon the earth. Abraham rose vp early in the momynge, and gat him vnto the place, where he had stonde before the L O R D E, and turned his face towarde Sodoma and Gomorra, and all ʒ londe of that countre, and looked. And beholde, thererose vp a smoke from ʒ countre, as it had bene ʒ smoke of a founace. The XX. Chapter.

AS for Abraham, he departed thence, into the south countre, and dwelt betwixte Cades and Sur, and was a straunger at Gerar, and sayde of Sara his wife: She is my sister. Then Abimelech the kinge of Gerar sent for her, and caused her be fect awaye.

But God came to Abimelech by night in a dreame, & sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou art but a deed man, for the womans sake which thou hast taken, for she is a mans wife. Neuertheles Abimelech had not yet touched her, and sayde: LORDE, wilt thou sleie a righteous people? Sayde not he vnto me: she is my sister? Yee and sayde not she her self also: he is my brother? With a pure hert & with innocent handes haue I done this.

And God sayde vnto him in a dreame: I knowe that thou dydest it wth a pure hert, and therfore I kepte the, that thou shuldest not synne agaynst me, nether haue I suffred the to touch her. Now therfore delyuer the man his wi^{fe} ageyne, for he is a prophet: and let him pray for ⁊, and thou shalt lyue. But and yf thou delyuer her not ageyne, be sure, that thou shalt dye the death, and all that is thine.

Then Abimelech rose vp by tymes in the mornyng, and called all his seruantes, and tolde all these thinges in their eares, and the men were sore afraied, and Abimelech called Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Wherefore hast thou done this vnto vs? And what haue I offended ⁊, that thou shuldest brynge on me and on my kyngdome so greate a synne? Thou hast not deale with vs, as a man shulde deale. And Abimelech saide morouer vnto Abraham: What sawest thou, ⁊ thou hast done this thinge?

Gen. 12. c

Then toke Abimelech shepe and oxen, seruantes and maydens, and gaue them vnto Abraham, and delyuered him Sara his wife ageyne, and sayde: Beholde, my londe stondech open befor the, dwell where it liketh the. And vnto Sara he sayde: Beholde, I haue geuen thy brother a thousands syluer pens: lo, he shalbe vnto the a couerynge of the eyes, for all that are with the, and euery where, and a iure excuse.

As for Abraham, he prayed vnto God: Then God healed Abimelech, and his wyse, and his maydens, so that they bare childre. For afore the LORDE had closed all the matrices of Abimelechs house, because of Sara Abrahams wife.

The XXI. Chapter.

The LORDE also vyfited Sara, according as he had promysed: & deale with her, even as he had sayde. And Sara was with childe, and bare Abraham a sonne in his olde age, even in the tyme appointed, like as God had spoken vnto him afore. And Abraham called his sonne which was borne vnto him (whō Sara bare him) Isaac, and circumcised him the eight daye, like as God commaunded him. An hundredth yere olde was Abraham, whan his sonne Isaac was borne vnto him.

Then Abraham rose vp early in the mornynge, and toke bred and a botell with water, and put it vpon Agars shuldere, and gaue her the childe, and sent her awaye. Then departed she, and wandried out of the waye in y wildernes beside Berseba. Now whan the water in the botell was out, she layed the childe vnder a bush, and wente, and sat hir downe ouer on y other syde, a bowe shote of. For she sayde: I can not se the childe dye. And she sat hir downe ouer on y other syde, and lifte vp hir voyce, and wepte.

E Then God herde the voyce of the childe, and the angell of God called vnto Agar out of heauen, and sayde vnto her: What ayleth the, Agar? And God opened hir eyes, that she sawe a well of water.

Then wente she and fylled y botell with water, and gaue y childe drynke. And God was with the childe, which grew vp, and dwelt in y wildernes, and became a conynge archer, and dwelt in y wildernes of Pharan, and his mother toke him a wyfe out of the londe of Egypte.

At the same tyme talked Abimelech and Phicol his chiefe capayne with Abraham, and sayde: God is with the in all that thou doest. Therefore sweare now vnto me by God, that thou wilt not hurt me, ner my children, ner my childers children: but that thou shalt shewe vnto me (and to the londe wher in thou art a straunger) the same kyndnesse that I haue done vnto the.

Then sayde Abraham: I wyll sweare. And Abraham rebuked Abimelech for the well of water, which Abimelechs seruantes had taken awaye by violence. Then answered Abimelech: I knewe not who dyd it, nether dyddest thou tell me, and I haue not herde of it but this daye.

D Then toke Abraham shepe and oxen, and gaue them vnto Abimelech, and they both made a bonde together. And Abraham set seven lambes by them selues. Then sayde Abimelech vnto Abraham: What meane those seven lambes, which thou hast set by them selues? He answered: scue lambes shalt thou take of my hande, that they maye be wytnes vnto me, that I haue dygged this well. Therfore is the place called Berseba, becau.

se they sweare there both together. And so they made the bonde at Berseba.

Then rose Abimelech and Phicol his chiefe capayne, and departed agayne in to the londe of y Philistynes. And Abraham planted trees at Berseba, and called vpon the name of the LORDE y everlastinge God, and was a straunger in y londe of the Philistynes a longe season.

The XXII. Chapter.

After these actes God tempted Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Abraham. And he answered: I am here. And he sayde: Take y sonne, this onely sonne of thine, eny Isaac whom thou louest, and go thy waye in to the londe of Moria, & offre him there for a burnt offeringe, vpon a mountayne that I shal shew the. Then Abraham stode vp by tymes in the mornynge, and saddled his Ass, and toke with him two yonge men, and his sonne Isaac, and cloue wodd for the burnt offeringe, gat him vp, and wente on vnto the place, wherof the LORDE had sayde vnto him.

Vpon the thirde daye Abraham lifte vp his eyes, and sawe the place a farre of, and sayde vnto his yonge me: Tary ye here with the Ass: as for me and the childe, we wyl go yonder: and whan we haue worshipped, we wyl come to you againe. And Abraham toke the wodd to the burnt offeringe, and layed it vpon Isaac his sonne. As for him self, he toke the fyre and a knyfe in his hande, and wente on both together.

Then sayde Isaac vnto his father Abraham: My father. Abraham answered: here I am, my sonne. And he sayde: lo, here is fyre and wodd, but where is the shepe for the burnt offeringe? Abraham answered: My sonne, God shall prouyde him a shepe for the burnt offeringe. And they wente both together.

And whan they came to the place which

God shewed him, Abraham buylded there an altare, and layed the wodd vpon it, and bande his sonne Isaac, layed him on the altare, aboue vpo the wodd, and stretched out his hande, and toke the knyfe, to haue slayne his sonne.

E Then the angell of the LORDE called from heauen vnto him, and sayde: Abraham Abraham. He answered: here am I. He sayde: Laye not thy handes vpon the childe, & do nothinge vnto him: for now I knowe that thou fearest God, and hast not spared thine onely sonne for my sake. Then Abraham lift vp his eyes, and sawe behynde him a ramme, holdē fast by the hornes in the brees, and wente, and toke the ramme, and offered him for a brient sacrifice, in steade of his sonne. And Abraham called the place. The LORDE shall prouyde. Therfore it is a common sayenge yet this daye: Open the mountayne shal the LORDE prouyde.

And the angell of the LORDE cryed vnto Abraham from heauen the seconde tym, and sayde: I haue sworn by myne owne self (sayeth the LORDE) that for so moch as thou hast done this, and hast not spared thine onely sonne, I wyll prospere and multiplye thy seede as the starres of heauen, and as the sonde vpon the see shore. And thy seede shall possesse the gates of his enemies: and in thy seede shal all the nacions of the earth be blessed, because thou hast hearkened vnto my voyce.

D So Abraham turned ageyne to the yongemen, and they gat vp, and wente together vnto Bersheba, and dwelt there.

After these actes it fortuned, that it was tolde Abraham: Beholde, Milca hath borne children also vnto thy brother Nahor: namely, Hus & eldest, and Bas his brother, and Kemmel, of whom came the Syrians: and Cesed, and Haso, and Pildas, and Jedlaph and Bethuel. And Bethuel begat Rebecca. These eight dyd Milca beare vnto Nahor Abrahams brother. And his concubine called Rehuma, bare also: namely, Theba, Sahan, Thahas, and Maacha.

The XXIII. Chapter.

S Ara was an hundred and seue and twentye yeare olde: so longe lyued she, and dyed in the head cite which is called Hebron, in the lande of Canaan. Then wente Abraham, to mourne and wepe for her. you, that I maye bury my coarfe by me.

Then the Hethites answered Abraham, and sayde vnto him: O heare lord, thou art a prynce of God amonge vs: bury thy dead in the best of oure sepulchres, there shall none of vs forbyd &, that thou shuldest not bury thy deed in his sepulchre. Then Abraham stode vp, and thanked the people of & londe: namely the Hethites.

And he talked with them, and sayde: If it be youre wyll that I burye my coarfe by me, heare me the, & speake for me to Ephron the sonne of Zoar, that he maye geue me the dubble cane, which he hath in & ende of his felde. For a reasonable money let him geue it me, for a possession to burye in amonge you. For Ephron dwelt amonge the Hethites.

Then answered Ephron the Hethite vnto Abraham, that the Hethites might heare, before all that wente out and in at the gates of his cite, and sayde: To my lord, but heare me: As for the felde, and the cane also that is therein, I geue it the: and in the sight of my people I geue it the, to burye thy deed in.

Then Abraham thanked the people of the londe, and talked with Ephron, that the people of the londe might heare, and sayde: Heare me then, Receaue of me the money that I geue the for the felde, and so wyll I burye my deed there.

Ephron answered Abraham, and sayde vnto him: Heare me my lord: The felde is worth foure hundred Sycles of syluer: but what is that betwixte me and the? Burye thy deed. Abraham hearkened vnto Ephron, and weyed him the money which he had sayde, that the Hethites might heare: namely foure hundred syluer cycles of currant money amonge marchauntes.

Thus Ephrons felde (where in the dubble cane is) which lyeth ouer before Mamre, even the felde and the cane, was made sure for Abrahams owne good, with all the trees of the felde also rounde aboute, in the sight of the Hethites, and of all that go out and in at the gates of his cite. Then Abraham buried Sara his wife in the dubble cane of the felde, that lyeth ouer before Mamre (that is, Hebron) in the londe of Canaan. So the felde and the cane therein was made sure of the Hethites vnto Abraham, for a possession to bury in.

And he sayde vnto his eldest seruaunt of his house, which had the rule of all his goodes: Laye thine hāde vnder my chyke, that I maye make the sweare by y^e LORDE the God of heauen and earth, that thou take no wife vnto my sonne amonge y^e daughters of y^e Canaanites, (amonge whom I dwell) but that thou go in to my countrey: and to myne owne kynred, and brynge my sonne Isaac a wife.

The seruaunt sayde: What and the woman wyl not folowe me in to this countrey: shal I then cary thy sonne agayne in to yonder londe, where thou camest out of? Abraham sayde vnto him: Beware of that, that thou brynge not my sonne thither agayne. The LORDE, the God of heauen, which tokē me fro my fathers house and from the londe of my kynred, and that talked with me, and sware also vnto me, and sayde: Vnto y^e sede wyl I gene this londe: Even he shall sende his angell before the, that thou maiest brynge my sonne a wife from thence. But yf the woman wyl not folowe the, thou art discharged of this oorb: onely brynge not my sonne thither agayne. Then y^e seruaunt layed his hāde vnder his master Abrahams chyke, and sware the same vnto him.

B So the seruaunt toke ten Camels of the Camels of his master and departed, and had wth him of all maner of goodes of his master, and gat him vp, and departed vnto Mesopotamia, to the cite of Nabor. Then let he the Camels lye downe without before the cite besyde a well of water in the euenynge, aboute the tyme that the women vsed to go forth, and to drawe water. And he sayde:

O LORDE, thou God of my master Abraham, mete me to daye, and shew mercy vnto my master Abraham. Lo, I stonde here besyde the well of water, & the mens daughters of this cite wyl come forth to drawe water: Now yf there come a damsell, to whom I saye: bowe downe thy pytcher, & let me drynke, and yf she saye: drynke, and I wyl geue y^e Camels drynke also: That yf same be she, whom thou hast prouyded for thy seruaunt Isaac: & that I maye knowe by yf same that thou hast shewed mercy vpon my master.

And or ever he had lest of speakynge, beholde, Rebecca the daughter of Bethuel (which was the sonne of Milca, that was the wyfe of Nabor Abrahams brother) came forth, and bare a pytcher vpon hir shulder, and she was a very fayre damsell of face, and yet a virgin, and unknowne of any

And haistely let she downe the pitcher in hir hande, and gaue him drynke. And whan she had geuen him drynke, she sayde: I wyl drawe for thy Camels also, tyll they haue drynke ynough. And she made haist, and poured out hir pitcher in to the trough, and ranne agayne to the well to drawe, and drew for all his Camels. The mā marueyled at her, and helde his tonge, tyll he knewe whether the LORDE had prospered his iourney or not.

Now whan the Camels had all drynken, he toke a golde earynge of half a Syckle weight, and two braceletes for hir handes, weynge ten Syckles of golde, and sayde: Doughter, whose art thou? tell me. Is there rowme for vs in thy fathers house to lodge in? She sayde vnto him: I am the daughter of Bethuel, the sonne of Milca, whom she bare vnto Nabor. And sayde merouer vnto him: We haue plentye of litter and prouender, and rowme ynough to lodge in.

Then the man bowed himself, and thanked the LORDE, and sayde: Praise be the LORDE the God of my master Abraham, which hath not withdrawen his mercy and his truth fro my master, for the LORDE hath brought me the waye to my masters brothers house. And the damsell ranne and tolde all this in hir mothers house. And Rebecca had a brother called Laban.

And Laban ranne to the man without by the well syde: and that came by the reason that he sawe the earynges, and the braceletes vpon his sisters handes, and herde the wordes of Rebecca his systre, that she sayde: thus spake the man vnto me.

And whan he came to the man, beholde, he stode by the Camels at the well syde. And he sayde: Come in: thou blessed of the LORDE, wherfore stondest thou without? I haue dressed the house, and made rowme for y^e Camels. So he brought the man in to y^e house, and vnbubled the Camels, and gaue them litter and prouender, and water to wash his fete, and the mens that were with him, and set meate before him.

naunt, and the LORDE hath prospered my master richely, so \bar{y} he is become greate: and he hath geuen him shepe and oxē, syluer and golde, seruauntes and maidens, Camels and Asse: yee and Sara my masters wife hath borne my master a sonne in hir olde age: vnto him hath he geuen all that he hath.

And my master hath taken an oath of me and saide: Thou shalt not take a wife for my sonne amonge the daughters of the Canaanites, in whose lande I dwell, but go \bar{y} waye to my fathers house and to myne owne kynred, and there take a wyse for my sonne. But I sayde vnto my master: What and the woman wyl not folowe me? Then sayde he vnto me: The LORDE (before whom I walke) shall sende his angell with the, and prosper thy journey, that thou mayest take a wife for my sonne of myne owne kynred, and of my fathers house. And so whan thou comest to my kynred, yf they geue her not vnto \bar{y} , thou shalt be discharged of myne othe.

I So I came this daye vnto the well of water, and sayde: O LORDE thou God of my master Abraham, If thou hast prospered my journey that I go: Beholde, I stonde here by the well of water: Now yf there come forth a virgin to draw water, and I saye vnto her: geue me a litle water to drinke out of thy pitcher, and she saye vnto me: Drynke thou, and I wyl drawe water for thy Camels also: that the same be the womā, which the LORDE hath prouyded for my masters sonne. Now or euer I had spoken out these wordes in my hert, beholde, Rebecca commeth forth with a pitcher vpon hir shulder, and goeth downe to the well, and draweth.

Then sayde I: geue me a drynke. And immediately she toke downe the pitcher fro hir shulder, and sayde: drynke, and I wyl geue thy Camels drynke also. So I dranke, and she gaue the Camels also to drynke. And I axed her, and sayde: Doughter, whose art thou? She answered: I am \bar{y} doughter of Bethuel the sonne of Nahor, whom Milca bare vnto him. Then layed I the earringes vpon hir face, and the braceletes vpon hir handes, and bowed myself, and thanked the LORDE, and praysed the God of my master Abraham, which had brenghit me \bar{y} right waye, to take my masters brothers daughters vnto his sonne.

If ye be they then that shew mercy and faithfulness vnto my master, tell me: If not, yet tell me, that I maye turne me to \bar{y} right hande or to the left.

The xliij. Chap.

Then answered Laban and Bethuel, and sayde: This is come of the LORDE, therefore can we saye nothinge agaynst the, ne ther euell ner good. There is Rebecca before the, take her, and go thy waye, that she maye be thy masters sonnes wife, as the LORDE hath sayde. When Abrahams seruaunt herde these wordes, he bowed himself vnto the LORDE flat vpon the earth, and toke forth Jewels of syluer and golde, and rayment, and gaue them vnto Rebecca. But vnto hir brethren and the mother, he gaue spycies. Then he ate and dronke, and the men also that were with him, and carried there all night.

But in the mornynge he arose, and sayde: Let me departe vnto my master. Nevertheless hir brother and hir mother sayde: Let the damsell tary with vs at the leest ten dayes, and then shall she go. Then sayde he vnto them: holde me not, for the LORDE hath prospered my iourney: let me go, that I maye departe vnto my master. Then sayde they: let vs call the damsell, and are her, what she sayeth therto. And they called Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Wilt thou go with this man?

And she answered: Yee I wyl go with him. So they let Rebecca their syster go with hir noyse and Abrahams seruaunt, and his men. And they blessed Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Thou art oure syster, growe in to many thousande tymes thousandes, and thy seide possesse the gates of his enemies.

So Rebecca gat hir vp wth hir damself, and satt them vpon the Camels, and wente their waye after the man. And the seruaunt toke Rebecca, and departed.

As for Isaac, he was commynge from the well of \bar{y} luynger & seynge, for he dwelt in the south countre, and was gone forth to his meditations in the felde aboute the enentyde. And he lift vp his eyes, and sawe, that there were Camels commynge. And Rebecca lift vp hir eyes, and sawe Isaac. Then lighted she of the Camell, and sayde vnto \bar{y} seruaunt: What man is this, that commeth agaynst vs in the felde? The seruaunt sayde: The same is my master.

Then toke she hir cloke, and put it aboute her. And the seruaunt tolde Isaac all the earande that he had done. Then Isaac brought her in to his mother Saras tent, and toke Rebecca, and she became his wife, and he loued her. So Isaac was comforted ouer his mother.

So Isaac dwelt at Gerar. And when the men of the same place asked him of his wife, he sayde: she is my sister. For he was afrayed to saye: she is my wife, (thynkinge thus:) they might slaye me for Rebekkas sake, for she was beautifull to lcke vnto. Now when he had bene there a longe season, Abimelech the kynge of the phylistynes looked out at a wyndow, and sawe Isaac sportinge with Rebecca his wife.

B Then Abimelech called Isaac, and sayde: Beholde, she is thy wyfe, why saydest thou then: She is my sister? Isaac answered him: I thought, I might peradventure have died because of her. Abimelech saide: Why hast thou then done this vnto vs? It conde lightly haue come to passe, that some of the people might haue lyen with thy wyfe, and so haddest thou brought synne vpo vs. The Abimelech commaunded all the people, and sayde: Who so toucheth this man or his wyfe, shal dye the death.

And Isaac sowed in that londe, and foude the same yere an hundredth busshels, for the LORDE blessed him. And he became a greate man, wente forth, and grew, tyll he was excedinge greate, so that he had much good in shepe and greate catell, and a greate housholde. Therfore had the philistynes envye at him, and stopped all the welles, that his fathers seruantes had dygged in the tyme of Abraham his father, and fylled them with earth. In so much that Abimelech also himself sayde vnto him: Departe from vs, for thou art farre mightier then we.

C Then departed Isaac from thence, and pitched his tent in the valley of Gerar, and dwelt there. And when he was satled, he caused to dygge vp the welles agayne, that they had dygged vp in his father Abrahams tyme, which the philistynes had stoppe after the death of Abraham, and he called the after y same names that his father had named them withall.

Gen. 29. a

Isaacs seruantes also dygged in the valley, and there they founde a well of lyuinge water. But the hyrdmen of Gerar strone with Isaacs hyrdmen, and saide: The water is oures. Then called he the well Essek, because they had done him wronge.

Then dygged they another well, and strone for that also: therfore called he it Sytena. So he gatt him from thence, and dygged another well, for the which they strone not: th rfore he called it Rehoboth, and sayde: Now hath the LORDE made vs rowme, and letten vs growe in the londe. Afterwarde he departed thence vnto Bersaba.

D

And the LORDE appeared vnto him the same night, and sayde: I am the God of thy father Abraham, feare thou not, for I am with the, and wyll blesse the, and multiplye thy sede for my seruant Abrahams sake. Then buylded he an altare there, and called vpon the name of the LORDE, and pitched his tent there, and there his seruantes dygged a well.

Gen. 27. c

And Abimelech wente vnto him from Gerar, and Ahusath his frende, and Phicol his chefe captayne. But Isaac sayde vnto them: Wherefore come ye to me? seynge ye hate me, and haue put me awaye from you? They sayde: We se with open eyes, that the LORDE is with the, therfore we denyed that there shulde be an ooth betwixte vs and the, and that we wolde make a bonde with the, that thou do vs no harme, like as we haue not hurte the, and as we haue done nothinge vnto the, but all good, and let the departe in peace.

As for the, thou art y blessed of the LORDE. Then Isaac made them a feast, and they ate and dronke. And on the morow they arose, and sware one to the other. And Isaac let them go, and they departed from him in peace.

The same daye came Isaacs seruantes, and tolde him of the well that they had digged, and sayde vnto him: We haue founde water. And he called it Saba. Therfore is y cite called Bersaba vnto this daye.

The XXVII. Chapter.

When Esau was fourtye yere olde, he toke wyues: Judith the daughter of Beri the Hethite, and Basmath the daughter of Elon the Hethite: both these were disobedient vnto the spites of Isaac and Rebecca.

And it came to passe when Isaac was olde, his eyes waxed dymme of sight, and he called Esau his greater sonne, and sayde vnto him: My sonne. He answered him: Here am I. And he sayde: Beholde, I am olde, and knowe not when I shal dye. Now therfore take thy geer, thy quyer and thy bowe, and get the forth to the felde, and take me some venyson, and make me meate (soch as I lone) and brynge it me herein, that I maye eat, y my soule maye blesse the, before I dye.

But Rebecca herde these wordes, that Isaac sayde vnto his sonne. And Esau wente his waye in to the felde, to hunte venyson, and to brynge it home. Then sayde Rebecca vnto Jacob hir sonne: beholde, I haue herde thy father talkinge with Esau thy brother, and sayenge: Brynge me venyson, and make me meate, that I maye eate, and blesse the before y LORD, yer I dye. Now therefore my sonne, heare my voyce, what I commaunde the: Go thy waye to the flocke, and fetch me two good kyddes, that I maye make meate of them for thy father, soch as he loneth: this shalt thou brynge in vnto thy father, that he maye eate, that he maye blesse the before his death.

Nevertheless Jacob sayde vnto Rebecca his mother: Beholde, my brother Esau is tough, and I am synooth: then might my father peradventure fele me, and I shulde seme vnto him as though I begyled him, and so brynge a curse vpon me and not a blessinge. Then sayde his mother vnto him: That curse be vpon me my sonne, folowethou my voyce: go thy waye and fetch it me. So he wente his waye, and fetched it, and brought it vnto his mother.

E Then his mother made meate, acordinge as his father loued, and toke Esaus hir elder sonnes cosily rayment (which she had with her in y house) and put them vpon Jacob hir yonger sonne. But the kyddes slaynnes put she aboute his handes, and where he was synooth aboute the neck: and so she put the meate with bried (as she had made it) in hir sonne Jacobs hande.

And he brought it in vnto his father, and sayde: My father. He answered: here am I, who art thou my sonne? Jacob sayde: I am Esau thy firstborne sonne, I haue done as thou saydest vnto me: aryse, sit vp, and eate of my venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. But Isaac sayde vnto his sonne: My sonne, how hast thou founde it so soone? He answered: The LORD y God brought it to my hande.

Then sayde Isaac vnto Jacob: Come neare my sonne, that I maye fele the, whether thou be my sonne Esau or not. So Jacob wente vnto Isaac his father. And whan he had felt him, he sayde: The voyce is Jacobs voyce, but the handes are the handes of Esau. And he knew him not, for his handes were rough like as y handes of his brother Esau. And he blessed him.

And he sayde vnto him: art thou my son-sonne Esau: He answered: Yee I am. Then sayde he: Brynge me here then to eate of thy venyson my sonne, that my soule maye blesse the. Then he brought it him, and he ate: and he brought him wyne also, and he drank. And Isaac his father sayde vnto him: Come nye, and kysse me my sonne. So he came nye, and he kysed him.

Then smelled he the sauoure of his clothes, and blessed him, and sayde: Beholde, the smell of my sonne is as y smell of the felde, which y LORD hath blessed. God geue the of the dew of heauen, and of the fatnesse of the earth, and plenteousnes of come and wyne. Lacions be thy seruantes, and people fall downe at y fote. Be thou lord euer thy brethren, and thy mothers children fall downe at thy fote. Cursed be he, that curseth the: and blessed be he, that blesseth the.

Now whan Isaac had made an ende of blessinge, and Jacob was scarce gone out from his father Isaac, his brother Esau came from his huntinge, and made meate also, and brought it vnto his father, and sayde vnto him: Aryse my father, and eate of y sonnes venyson, that thy soule maye blesse me. Then answered him Isaac his father: Who art thou? He sayde: I am Esau thy firstborne sonne. Then was Isaac exceeding ly amased about measure, and saide: Who? Where is then the hunter that brought me, and I haue eaten of all afore thou camest, and haue blessed him? And he shall be blessed still.

Whan Esau herde these wordes of his father, he cried loude, and was exceedinge sory, and sayde vnto his father: O blesse me also my father. But he sayde: Thy brother came with sorylie, and hath taken thy blessinge awaye. Then sayde he: He maye well be called Jacob, for he hath vndermined me now two tymes. My byrth right hath he awaye, and beholde, now taketh he awaye my blessinge also.

And he sayde: Hast thou not kept one blessinge for me? Isaac answered, and sayde vnto him: I haue made him lord euer y, and all his brethren haue I made his seruantes. With come z wine haue I prouyded him. What shal I do vnto the now my sonne? Esau sayde vnto his father: Hast thou not one blessinge more my father? O blesse me also my father.

And he lift vp his voyce, z wepte. Then Isaac his father answered and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thou shalt haue a fat dwellinge vpon earth, z of y dew of heauen from so they put the stone agayne vpon the welles mouth in to his place.

And Jacob sayde vnto them: Biethien, whēce be ye? They answered: we are of Haran. He sayde vnto them: Knowe ye Laban the sonne of Nahor? They answered: We knowe him well. He sayde: Is he in good health? They answered: he is in good health. And so, there cometh his daughter Rachel with the shepe. He sayde: It is yet hye daye, & is not yet tyme to dryue in the carell: gene the shepe to drynke, & go youre waye, & fede them. They answered: We can not, tyll all the flockes be brought together, and tyll we roule the stone from the welles mouth, & so gene the shepe drynke.

B Whyle he yet talked with them, Rachel came with hir fathers shepe, for she kepte & shepe. Whan Jacob sawe Rachel & daughter of Laban his mothers brother, and the shepe of Laban his mothers brother, he wote, & rouled the stone from the welles mouth, and gaue his mothers brother shepe to drynke, and kysed Rachel, lift vp his voyce, and wepte, and tolde her, & he was hir fathers brother, and & sonne of Rebecca. Then ranne she, and tolde her father.

Whā Laban herde of Jacob his sisters sonne, he ranne to mete him, and embraced him, and kysed him, and brought him in to his house. And so he tolde him all this matter. Thē sayde Laban vnto him: Wel, thou art my bone and my flesh. Abide with me a moneth longe. But after that saide he vnto Jacob: Becausē thou art my brother, shalst thou therfore serue me for nought? Tell me, what shall thy wages be. Laban had two daughters, the eldest was called Lea, & the yongest Rachel. And Lea was tender eyed, but Rachel was beutyfull & well fauoured of face, and Jacob loued her well, and sayde: I will serue the seven yeaere, for Rachel thy yongest daughter. Laban answered: It is better that I geue her the, then vnto another: tary thou with me.

C So Jacob serued seven yeaere for Rachel, and they semed vnto him but few dayes, he loued her so well. And Jacob saide vnto Laban: geue me my wyfe, for the tyme is come that I shulde lye with her. Thē Laban bad all the people of that place, and made a marriage. But at enē he toke his daughter Lea, and brought her in vnto him, and he laye wth her. And Laban gaue Zilpa his mayde vnto his daughter Lea to be hir mayde.

But on the morow, beholde, it was Lea. And he sayde vnto Laban: Why hast thou done this vnto me? Hane not I serued y for Rachel? Why hast thou then begyled me? Laban answered: It is not the maner in our countre, to mary the yongest before the eldest. Holde out this weke, & I will geue the this also, for the seruyce & thou shalt do me yet seven yeaeres more. Jacob dyd so, & helde out & weke. Then gaue he him Rachel his daughter to wyfe. And Laban gaue Bilha his mayden vnto Rachel his daughter to be hir mayden. So he laye with Rachel also, & loued Rachel more thē Lea, and serued him yet seven yeaeres more.

But when the L O R D E sawe, that Lea was nothinge regarded, he made her frutefull, and Rachel baren. And Lea cōceaued, and bare a sonne, whom she called Rūben, and sayde: The L O R D E hath looked vpon my aduersite. Now wyll my husbandle lue me. And she conceaued agayne, and bare a sonne, and sayde: The L O R D E hath heard that I am despysed, and hath geue me this also, and she called him Symeon. She cōceaued yet agayne, and bare a sonne, and sayde: Now wyll my husbandle kepe me company agayne, for I haue borne him thre sonnes, therfore called she his name Levi. She conceaued y fourth tyme, and bare a sonne, and sayde: Now wyll I geue thanks vnto the L O R D E, therfore called she him Iuda, and left bearynge.

Neuertheles she sayde: Beholde, there is Bilha my mayden, lye wth her, & she maye beare vpon my lappe, & that I maye be increased by her. And so she gaue him Bilha hir mayden to wyfe.

Now whan Lea sawe that she had lese bearynge, she toke Silpa hir mayde, and gaue her vnto Jacob to wyfe. So Silpa Leas mayde bare Jacob a sonne. Then sayde Lea: This is good lucke, & she called him Gad. After this Silpa Leas mayde bare Jacob another sonne. Now whan Jacob came heme at euen from the felde, Lea wente forth to meete him, and sayde: Thou shalt lye w me, for I haue bought the for my sonnes Mandragoras.

And he slepte with her that night. And God herde Lea, and she conceaued, and bare Jacob the fift sonne, & sayde: God hath rewarded me, because I gaue my mayden vnto my husbände, and she called him Issachar. Lea conceaued yet agayne, and bare Jacob the sixte sonne, and sayde: God hath endowd me with a good dowry. Now wyll my husbände dwell with me agayne, for I haue borne him sixe sonnes, & she called him Zabulon. After that she bare a daughter, whom she called Dina.

Jacob sayde: Thou shalt geue me nothinge at all, but yf thou wilt do this for me & I saye, then wyll I fede and kepe thy shepe agayne. I wyll go thorow all thy flockes to daye, and separatheou from amonge them all the shepe that be spotted and partye coloured, and all blacke shepe amonge the lambes. Now loke what shalbe partie coloured and spotted amonge the kyddes, the same shalbe my rewarde: so shal my righteounes testifie with me to daye or tomorrow, whan it cometh vnto my rewarde before the, so that, what so ever is not spotted and partye coloured amonge the kyddes, and blacke amonge the lambes, let that be theste with me.

Then sayde Laban: Beholde, let it be so as thou hast sayde. And that same daye he sundred out the speckled and partye coloured goates, and all the spotted and partye coloured kyddes (where there was eny whyte vpon them) and all that was blacke amonge the lambes, and put them vnder the hande of his children, and made rowme of thre dayes iourney wyde betwixte him and Jacob. So Jacob kepte the residue of Labans flocke.

But Jacob toke stanes of grene wyllies, hasell and of chesnoctrees, and pyllled whyte streakes in them, and layed the stanes that he had pyllled, in the drynkinge trouges before the flocke, which came there to drynke, that they shulde conceaue, whan they came to drynke. So the flockes conceaued ouer y stanes, and brought forth speckled, spotted and partye coloured.

Then Jacob parted y lambes, and put them to the flocke vnto the spotted: and all that was blacke in Labans flocke, that put he vnto the spotted. And he made him a flocke of his owne, which he put not vnto Labans flocke. Neuertheles in the first buckynge tyme of the flockes, he layed the stanes in the drynkinge trouges before the eyes of the flockes, that they shulde conceaue ouer the stanes. But in the latter buckynge tyme he layed them not in. So the later were Labans, but the firstlings were Jacobs.

The XXXI. Chapter.

And herde also of y wordes of Labans children, that they sayde: Jacob hath brought all of fathers good vnto himself, & of oure fathers good hath he gotten these riches. And Jacob behelde Labans countenance, & beholde, it was not toward him as yesterdaye and yeryesterdaye.

And the Gen. 31. b LORDE sayde vnto him: Depart agayne to thy fatherlande, and to thy kynred, I wyll be with the. Then sent Jacob and bad call Rachel and Lea in to the felde to his flockes, and sayde vnto them: I see youre fathers countenance, that it is not toward me like as yesterdaye and yeryesterdaye: but the God of my father hath bene with me. And ye knowe, that I haue serued youre father with all my power.

And he hath disceined me, and channge my wages now ten tymes. But God hath not suffred him, to do me harme. As he sayde: The partye coloured shalbe thy rewarde, then the whole flocke bare partye coloured. As he sayde: The speckelde shalbe thy rewarde, then the whole flocke bare speckelde. Thus hath God with drawen youre fathers goodes from him, and genen them vnto me. For whan the buckynge tyme came, I lift vp myne eyes and sawe in a dreame, and beholde, the rammes leapt vpon the flocke that was speckelde, spotted, & partye coloured.

And the angel of God sayde vnto me in a dreame: Jacob. And I answered: here am I. He sayde: lift vp thine eyes, and beholde, the rammes leape vpon the speckelde, spotted, and partie coloured flocke: for I haue seene all y Laban doth vnto the. I am y God at Bethel, where thou dydest anoynte the stone, & maydest a vow there vnto me. Get the vp now, & departe out of this londe, & go agayne in to the londe of thy kynred.

Then answered Rachel and Lea, and sayde vnto him: As for vs, we haue no porcion ner inheritaunce more in oure fathers house, & he hath counted vs as straungers, for he hath solde vs, & spent vp of wages. Therefore hath God with drawe of fathers riches from him vnto vs & oure children. What so ever now God hath sayde vnto the, that do.

Vpon the thirde daye it was tolde Laban, that Jacob fled. And he toke his brethren vnto him, and folowed after him seven dayes iourney, and ouertoke him vpon the mount Gilead. But God came vnto Laban the Syuan in a dreame by night, & sayde vnto him: Bewarre, that thou speake no thinge to Jacob but good. And Laban drewe nye vnto Jacob. As for Jacob, he had pyched his tente vpon the mount. And Laban with his brethren pyched his tent also vpon the same mount Gilead.

Then sayde Laban vnto Jacob: What hast thou done, that thou hast stolen awaye my hert, and caried awaye my daughters, as though they had bene taken captiue w y swerde? Wherefore kepest thou that secreete, that thou woldest flye, and hast stolen awaye from me, and toldest me not, that I might haue brought the on the waye with myrth, with synginge, with tabrettes and harpes: and hast not suffred me to kysse my children and daughters? Thou hast done foolishly, and so moch might I haue made, that I coude haue done yon euell: but youre fathers God saide yesterdaye vnto me: Bewarre, that thou speake no thinge vnto Jacob but good. And for so moch then as thou woldest nedes departe, and longedest sore after y fathers house, why hast thou stolen away my goddes?

Jacob answered and sayde vnto Laban: I was a frayd, that thou shuldest haue taken away thy daughters from me: but loke by whom thou syndest thy goddes, let the same dye here before oure brethren. Seke that thine is by me, and take it awaye. (But he knew not, that Rachel had stolen them.) Then wente Laban in to Jacobs tent and in to Leas tent, and in to both the maydens tetes, and founde nothinge: and out of Leas tente he wente in to Rachels tent. Then toke Rachel the ymages, and layed them vnder the Camels strawe, and sat downe vpon them. But Laban searched the whole tent, and founde nothinge. Then sayde she vnto hir father: Be not angrie my lord, that I can not ryse vp vnto the: for it goeth w me after the maner of women. So he sought,

And Jacob was wroth, and chode with Laban, answered & sayde vnto him: What haue I trespassed or offended, & thou art so whote vpon me? Thou hast searched all my housholde stuff, & what hast thou founde of thy housholde stuff? Laye it here before my brethien & thyne, & they maye indge betwene vs both. Twentye yere haue I bene wth the: thy shepe & goates haue not bene vnfructefull, the rammes of thy flocke haue I not eaten: Loke what was * corne of beastes, I brought it not vnto y^e, I was fayne to paie it my self: thou requyredst it of my hande, whether it were stollen from me by daye or by night. On the daye tyme the heate consumed me, and the frost on the night, and my slepe departed fro myne eyes.

S Thus haue I serued twentye yere in thy house, fourtene yeres for thy daughters, & sixe for thy flocke, and ten tymes hast thou chaunged my rewarde: & yf the God of my father the God of Abraham, and the feare of Isaac had not bene on my syde, thou haddest latten me go awaye emptye. But God hath loked vpon myne aduersite and labour, and rebuked the yester daye.

Laban answered and sayde: The daughters are my daughters, & the children are my childre, and the flockes are my flockes, & all that thou seist is myne. What can I do this daye vnto these my daughters, or to their children whom they haue borne? Nowther fore come on, let vs make a couaunt (I & thou) which maye be a wytnesse betwene me and the. Then toke Jacob a stone, & set it vp (for a pile or markstone) and sayde vnto his brethien: Gather stones. And they toke the stones, and made an heape, & ate vpon the same heape. And Laban called it Jegar Sahu dutha, but Jacob called it Gilead: (eith^r of them after the properte of his language.)

And Jacob sware vnto him by the feare of his father Isaac. And Jacob offred an offerynge vpon the mount, and called his brethie to eate bread. And whan they had eaten, they taried vpon the mount all nyght. But vpon the morow Laban rose vp early, kysed his childre & daughters, & blessed the, & departed, and came agayne vnto his place. As for Jacob, he wente on his iourney, & the angels of God met him. And whan he sawe them, he sayde: It is Gods hoost, & called the same place Mahanaim.

The XXXII. Chapter.

Jacob sent messaungers before him to his brother Esau in to the lande of Seir, of the felde of Edom, & commaunded the, & sayde: Saye thus vnto my lord Esau: Thy seruant Jacob sendeth y^e this worde: I haue bene out wth Laban, & haue bene hither to amonge straungers, & haue oren & Asses, shepe, seruantes & maydes, & haue sent forth to shewe it the my lord, & I might fynde fauoure in thy sight.

Gen. 24. 1

The messaungers came agayne vnto Jacob, and sayde: We came vnto thy brother Esau, & he cometh forth also agaynst the with foure hundred men. Then was Jacob sore afrayed, and wylt not what waye to turne himself, & deuyled the people that was with him, and the shepe, and the oren, & the Camels in to two dioues, & sayde: If Esau come vpon the one dioue, and smyte it, the other shal escape.

Jacob sayde morouer: O God of my father Abraham, God of my father Isaac, LORDE thou that saydest vnto me: Departe agayne to thine owne londe and to thy kynred, and I wyl do the good: I am to litle for all the mercies and all the truely that thou hast shewed vnto thy seruant (for I had no more but this staff whan I wente ouer this Iordan, and now am I becommen two dioues) belyuer me from y^e hande of my brother, fro the hāde of Esau, for I am afrayed of him, lest he come and smyte me the mother with the children. When my brother Esau meeteth the, and asketh the: Whose art thou? & whyther goest thou? and whose are these that thou dryuest before the? Thou shalt saye: They be thy seruant Jacobs, which sendeth a present vnto his lord Esau, and commaeth behynde vs him self.

D Thus commaunded he the seconde also, and the thirde, and all them that folowed the flockes, and sayde: Like as I haue tolde you, so speake ye vnto Esau, whan ye mete him, and saye vnto him also: Beholde, y seruant Jacob is behynde vs. For he thought: I wyll reconcyle him with the present that goeth before me, afterwarde wyll I se him my self, peradventure he shall receaue me to grace.

So the present wente before him, but he taried in the tente the same night, and rose vp in y night, and toke his two wyues and the two maydens and his eleuen sonnes, and wente vnto the soorde of Jacob, toke them and caried them ouer the water, so that all that he had came ouer, and taried him self alone on this syde.

Ole. 18. a Then wrestled there a man with him vntill the breake of y daye. And whan he sawe y he might not overcome him, he touched the senowe of his thye, and y senowe of his thye shrank in wrestlingge with him. And he sayde: Let me go, for y daye breaketh on. But he answered: I will not let y go, excepte thou blesse me. He sayde: What is thy name? He answered: Jacob. He sayde: Thou shalt nomore be called Jacob, but Israel, for thou hast stryuen with God and with men, and hast preyayled. And Jacob asked him, & sayde: Tell me, what is y name? But he sayde: Why askest thou what my name is? And he blessed him there. And Jacob called the place Peniel, for I haue sene God face to face, & my soule is recovered. And as he came ouer fro Peniel, y Sonne rose vpo him, & he halted vpon his thye. Therefore eate the children of Israel no vane vpon the senow of y thye vnto this daye, because y vane vpon the senow of Jacobs thye was touched.

Lea came forth also with hir childre, and kneeled vnto him. Afterwarde came Joseph and Rachel forth, and kneeled vnto him like wyse. And he sayde: What meanest thou w all the dioue that I met? Jacob answered: Oh nay, but ys I haue founde grace in y sight, receaue my present of my hande (for I sawe thy face, as though I had sene the face of God) and be at one with me. Take this present in good worth, that I haue brought y, for God hath geuen it me, & I haue ynough of all thinges. So he compelled him to take it.

Let my lord go on before his seruant. I wyll dryue after sayre and softly, (there after as the catell & the children can go,) tyll I come to my lord in Seir. The XXXIII. Chapter.

In a y daughter of Lea, which she bare vnto Jacob, wente out to ke- holde the daughters of the londe. Whan Sichem the sonne of Hemor the He- nite (which was lord of the lode) sawe her, he toke her, and laye with her, and forced her, and his hert hanged vpon her, and he loued y damsell, and talked louyngly with her, and spake to his father Hemor: Get me this mayden to wife.

And Jacob vnderstode, that Dina his daughter was defyled, and his sonnes were with the catell in the felde, and Jacob helde his tonge tyll they came. Then Hemor the father of Sichem wente forth vnto Jacob to comen with him. In the meane season came Jacobs sonnes from y felde. And whan they herde it, it greued the men, and they were very wroth, that he had wroughte folly in Israel, and lyen with Jacobs daughter: for so was not the vse to do.

Then comened Hemor with the, and sayde: My sonne Sichems hert longeth for yere daughter, O geue hir him to wife: make frendshipe with vs, geue vs youre daughters, and take ye oure daughters, and dwell with vs, the londe shall be open vnto you, dwell and occupie, and haue youre possi- ons therein. And Sichem sayde vnto hir fa- ther and brethien: Let me fynde grace with you: loke what ye appoynte me, I will ge- ue it: requyre the dowrye and gift of me har- dely, I wyll geue it acordinge as ye wyll axe, onely geue me the damsell to wife.

Then Jacobs sonnes answered Sichem and Hemor his father (and spake disceatful- ly, because their sister Dina was defyled) & sayde vnto them: That can we not do, to ge- ue oure sister to an vncircumcised man: for that were a shame vnto vs.

Neuertheles we wyll consente vnto you, yf ye wyll like vnto vs, and be circumci- ded as many as are males amonge you: then will we geue you oure daughters, and take youre daughters vnto vs, and dwell with you, and be one people. But yf ye wyll not herken vnto vs, to be circumcised, then wyl we take oure daughter, and go oure waye.

These wordes pleased Hemor and his son- ne wel, and the yonge man deside not to do the same, for he had lust to Jacobs daugh-

Then came Hemor and Sichem his sonne vnder y gate of cite, and comened with the citisens of the cite, and saide: These men are peaceable with vs, and will dwell in the lande and occupye: now is the londe brode of both the sydes, we wyl ta- ke their daughters vnto vs, and geue them oure daughters.

But then wyll they consent vnto vs, to dwell by vs, and to be one people with vs, yf we circumcise all the men children amonge vs, like as they are circumcised: their ca- tell and goodes, and all that they haue, shal be ours, yf we consent vnto them, that they maye dwell with vs.

And they herkened vnto Hemor and Si- chem his sonne, as many as wente out and in at y gate of his cite, and circumcised all the males, that wente out and in at his cite. And vpon the thirde daye (whan it was pa- nefull to them) the two sonnes of Jacob Si- meon and Levi Dinas brechien, toke every man his swerde, and wente boldly in to the cite, and slew all the males, and slew He- mor also and Sichem his sonne with the e- ge of the swerde, and toke their sister Di- na out of Sichems house, and wente their waye.

Then came Jacobs sonnes ouer the slay- ne, and spoyled the cite (because they had defyled their sister) and toke their shepe, oxen, Asses, and what so ever was in the ci- te and in the londe, and all maner of goodes: All their children and wyues toke they cap- tyne, and spoyled all y was in the houses.

And Jacob sayde vnto Symeon and Le- ui: Ye haue brought it so to passe, y I styne before the inhabiteurs of this lande, y Ca- nanites and Pherecites, & I am but a small nombre: If they gather them selues new to- gether against me, they shal slaye me, so shal I be destroyed with my house. But they an- swered: Shulde they the deale with oure sis- ter as with an whoore?

The XXXV. Chapter.

Then sayde Jacob vnto his housholde and to all y we- re with him: Put awaye from you y straun- ge geddes, that are amonge you, and clen- se youre selues, and chaunge youre clothes, and let vs get up, and go vnto Bethel, that I maye there make an altare vnto the God,

The children of Ana were: Disan & Abalibama, & is & daughter of Ana. The childre of Disan were: Hemdan, Esban, Jethiā & Charan. The children of Ezer were: Bilhan, Seanā, & Acan. The children of Disan were: Uz & Aran.

These are & prynces of & Horites: The prynce Lothan, & prynce Sobal, & prynce Zibeon, & prynce Ana, & prynce Disan, & prynce Ezer, & prynce Disan. These are the prynces of the Horites, which ruled in & londe of Seir.

E The kynge that reigned in the londe of Idumea (before the childre of Israel had any kynge) are these: Bela & sonne of Beor was kynge in Idumea, & & name of his cite was Dinhaba. And whā Bela died, Jobab & sonne of Serah of Bosra was kynge in his steade. When Jobab dyed, Husam out of & lode of the Themanites was kynge in his steade. Whan Husam dyed, Hadad & sonne of Bedad (which slewe & Madianites in & Moabites felde) was kynge in his steade, & the name of his cite was Auith. Whan Hadad dyed, Samla of Masrec was kynge in his steade. Whā Samla died, Saul of Ke' oboth by & water syde, was kynge in his steade. Thus are the prynces of Esau called in their kynreds, places & names: The prynce Thymna, & prynce Alua, & prynce Jereth, the prynce Abalibama, the prynce Ela, the prynce Pynon, the prynce Kenas, & prynce Theman, & prynce Mibzar, the prynce Magdiel, & prynce Jra. These are the prynces in Idumea, like as they dwelt in & lade of their possessions. And Esau is & father of & Edomites. The XXXVII. Chapter.

S Jacob dwelt in & lande, wherin his father was a stranger, namely in the lade of Canaan. And these are & generacions of Jacob. Joseph was seuenene yeare olde, & hā he became a keeper of the catell wth his brethren, & the lad was wth the chyloun of Bilha & Silpa his fathers wyues, and tolde their father of & euell reporte & was of. hē. Israel loued Joseph more thē all his childre because he had begottē h^m in his olde age, and he made him a cote of many coloures.

Now whā his brethren sawe, & his father loued him more thē all his brethren, they had euell wyll at him, & coude not speake a frendly worde vnto h^m. Joseph also had once a dreame, and tolde his brethren therof. Thē hated they him & more, for he sayde: Heare I praye you what I dreamed. We thought we were byndunge sheeces vpo & felde, & my shefe arose, and stode vp, and youre sheeces rounde aboute made obeysaunce vnto my shefe.

Then sayde his brethren vnto him: Shalt thou be & kynge, and haue domyniō ouer vo^r? And they hated him yet & more, because of his dreame, & his wordes. And he had yet another dreame, which he tolde his brethren, & saide: Beholde, I had yet another dreame: We thought & Sonne & & Moone & eleven starrs made obeysaunce to me. And whā this was tolde his father and his brethren, his father reprovēd him, & sayde vnto him: What maner of dreame is this, & thou hast dreamed? Shall I & thy mocher, & thy brethren come & fall before & vpon the grounde? And his brethren had enuie at him. But his father marked this sayenge.

Now whā his brethren were gone forth to kepe their fathers catell in Sichē, Israel sayde vnto Joseph: Do not & brethren kepe the catell in Sichem? Come, I wil sende the vnto thē. He answered: Here am I. And he sayde: Go thy waye, and loke whether it be well wth thy brethren and wth & catell, and byng me worde agayne how it is. And he sent him out of the valley of Hebron, to go vnto Sichan.

Then a certayne man founde him, wandring out of his waye in the felde, which axed him, and sayde: Whom seekest thou? he answered: I seeke my brethren: tell me I pray the where they kepe. The man sayde: They are gone from hence, for I herde them saye: let vs go vnto Dothan. Then folowed Joseph after his brethren, and founde them at Dothan.

D Now whan they sawe him a farre of, afore he came at the, they denyed to sleve him, and sayde one to another: Lo, there cometh the dreamer, * come on, and let vs sleve him, & cast him in a pytt, and saye: a wicked beast hath deuoured him: the shal it be sene, what his dreames are.

When Ruben herde that, he wolde haue deliuered him out of their handes, & sayde: * O let vs not sleve a soule. Ruben sayde moreover vnto him: Shed no bloude, but cast him into this pytt & is in the wyldernes, & laye ye no handes vpon him. (he wolde haue deliuered him out of their handes, & he might haue brought him agayne vnto his father.)

E Whan Joseph now came to his brethren, they stryped him out of his cote, that partye coloured cote which he had vpon him, & toke him and cast him in to a pytt. But the same pytt was emptye, and no water in it, & they sat them downe to eate. In the meane season they lift vp their eyes, and sawe a company of Ismaelites comynge from Gilead, with their camels, which bare spices, balm, and myrr, and were goinge downe into Egypte.

Then saide Juda vnto his brethren: what helpeth it vs, that we sleve oure brother, and hyde his bloude? Come, let vs sell him vnto the Ismaelites, that oure handes be not defyled vpon him, for he is oure brother, oure flesh and bloude. And they hertened vnto him.

The xxxiii. Chap. Ho. xviij.

And as the Madianites marchaunt men wente by, they diere Joseph out of the pytt, and solde him vnto the Ismaelites (for twentye syluer pens) which brought him in to Egypte.

Act. 7. b

S Now whan Ruben came agayne vnto the pytt, & founde not Joseph therein, he rent his clothes, and came agayne to his brethren and sayde: The lad is not yonder, whyther shal I go? Then toke they Josephs cote & slewe a goate, and dypped the cote in & bloude, and sent awaye that partie coloured cote, and caused it be brought vnto their father and sayde: This haue we founde, loke, whether it be thy sonnes coate, or no.

But he knewe it, and sayde: It is my sonnes coate, a wicked beast hath deuoured him, a rauysinge beast hath rauysed Joseph. And Jacob receiued his clothes, and put a sackcloth aboute his loynes, & mourned for his sonne a longe season. And all his sonnes & daughters came vnto him to comforte him. But he wolde not be comforted, & saide: With sorowe wil I go downe in to the grave vnto my sonne. And his father wepte for him. But the Madianites solde him in Egypte vnto Potiphar Pharaos chiefe Marshall.

The XXXVIII. Chapter.

I T fortuneth at the same time, & Juda wente downe fro his brethren, & gat him to a man called Hyra at Odolam. And there Juda sawe a ma of Canaans daughter called Sua, and toke her. And when he had lyen with her, she conceived and bare a sonne, whom she called Er.

And she conceived agayne, & bare a sonne, whom she called Onan. She proceeded yet further, & bare a sonne, whom she called Sela. And when she had borne him, she left off bearinge.

And Juda gaue his first sonne Er a wife, whose name was Thamar. But he was wicked before the LORD, therefore the LORD slew him. Then sayde Juda vnto his sonne Onan: So lie with thy brothers wife, and marye thyself with her, that thou mayest raise vp seede vnto thy brother. But when Onan knewe that the seede shulde not be his owne, when he laye with his brothers wife, he let it fall vpon the earth and destroyed it, & he shulde not geue seede vnto his brother. This thinge that he dyd displeased the LORD sore, and he slewe him also.

Then sayde Judas vnto Thamar his sonnes wyfe. Remayne a wyddow in thy fathers house, tyll my sonne Sela be growne: for he thought: peradventure he might dye also like as his brethren. So Thamar wente

shepherde Hyia of Odollam.

E Then was it tolde Thamar: beholde, thy father in lawe goeth vp vnto Thimnath, to clyppe his shepe. Then put she of & wyd-dowes garmentes that she had vpon her, couered and dysgyssed hir self, & sat hir dow-ne without the porte by the waye syde to-warde Thimnath. For she sawe that Sela was growne, and she was not geuen vnto him to wife.

Now whan Juda sawe her, he thought it had bene an whoore, for she had couered hir face: and he gat him to her in the waye, and saide: I praye the let me lye with the, for he knewe not that it was his daughter in lawe. She answered: What wilt thou geue me, that thou mayest lye with me? He sayde:
I wil sende the a kydd from the flocke. She answered: Geue me a pledge then, tyll thou sende it me. He sayde: What pledge wilt thou that I geue the?

D She answered: Thy signet, and thy bracelet, and thy staff that thou hast in thy hade. Then he gaue it her, and laye with her, and she was with childe of him. And she gat hir vp, and wente hir waye, and layed of hir cloke, and put on hir wyddowes garmentes agayne.

Juda sent the kydd by his shepherde of Odolla, to fetch the pledge agayne from the woman, and he founde her not. Then axed he the men of the same place, & sayde: Where is the whoore & sat without in the waye?
They answered: There hath no whoore bene here. And he came agayne vnto Juda, and saide: I haue not founde her, morouer & men of the same place saide: that there hath no whoore bene there. Juda sayde: Let her take it vnto her, lest we haply be shamed, for I haue sent the kydd, and thou hast not founde her.

E After thre monethes it was tolde Juda:
Thamar thy daughter in lawe hath plaied the whoore: and beholde, by whordome is she gotten with childe. Juda sayde: brynge her forth, that she maye be brennt. And whan she was brought forth, she sent vnto hir father in lawe, and sayde: By the man & orret these, am I wth childe. And she sayde: Knowlynge, the one put out his hande. Then the mydwife toke and boude a reed threde aboute it, and saide: This shal come out first. But whan he plucked in his hande agayne, his brother came forth. And she sayde: Wherefo-

The XXXIX. Chapter.

Joseph was brought downe in to Egipre, & Potiphar an Egipcian Pha-raos chiefe marshall bought him of & Ismaelites, & brought him downe. And & LORDE was wth Joseph, in so moch & he became a luckye mā, & was in his master & Egipcians house. And his master sawe & the LOR-DE was wth him: for what so euer he dyd, the LORDE made it to prospere in his hāde: so & he founde fauor in his masters sight, & was his seruaunt. He made him ruler of his house, and put all that he had, vnder his hande.
And from the tyme forth that he had made him ruler of his house and all his goodes, & LORDE blessed the Egipcians house for Josephs sake: and there was nothyng but the very blessing of the LORDE in all & he had in & house & in the felde, therefore left he all & he had, in Josephs hande. And medled with nothyng himself, save onely the bried that he ate. And Joseph was fayre of bewtye, and well fauoured of face.

And it fortunēd after these actes, that his masters wife cast hir eyes vpon Joseph, and sayde: Slepe with me. But he denyed, and saide vnto her: Beholde, my master knoweth not what is in & house, and all that he hath, that hath he put vnder my hande. And there is no man so greate in the house as I, and he hath kepte nothyng from me, excepte the:
for thou art his wife. How shulde I then do so greate euell, and synne agaynst God? But she spake soch wordes vnto Joseph daylie.
Nevertheless he hertened not vnto her, to sle-pe by her, or to be in her company.

It fortunēd vpon a tyme, that Joseph wente in to the house to do his busynesse, and there was none of & felkes of the house thereby. And she caught him by his garment, & sayde: Slepe with me. But he left the garment in hir hande, and fled, and gat him out of the house.

The i. booke of Moses.

Now whā she sawe that he had left his garmēt in hir hande, and fled out, she called the folkes in the house, and sayde vnto the: Lo, he hath brought vs in the Hebrue, to do vs shame. He came in here vnto me, to slepe by me: but I cried with loude voyce. And whan he herde that I made a noyse & cried, he left his garmēt here by me, and fled, and ranne out.

D And she layed vp his garmēt by her, tyll his master came home, and tolde him euen the same wordes, and sayde: The Hebrue seruaunt whom thou broughdest here vnto vs, came in here to me, for to do me shame. But whan I made a noyse and cried, he left his garment here by me, and fled out. Whan his master herde the wordes of his wyfe which she tolde him, and sayde: Thus hath the Hebrue seruaunt done vnto me, he was very wroth.

E Then his master toke him, and put him in the prison, wherin the Kinges prisoners laie. And there he laye in prison. But the LORDE was with him, and had mercy vpon him, & caused him to fynde fauor in the sight of the officer of the prison, so that he committed all the prisoners of the prison vnto his handes: that what so ever were done, might be done by him. For the officer of the prison sawe, that the L O R D E was with him in all that he was vnder his handes, and that what so ever he dyd, the L O R D E made it to come prosperously to passe.

The XL. Chapter.

And it fortunēd after this, that the kynge of Egyp̄tes chiefe butlar and the chiefe baker offended their lord the kynge of Egyp̄te. And Pharaos was angrie wth them, & caused them be put in prison in the chiefe marshalls house, where Joseph laye prisoner. And the chiefe marshall put Joseph vnto them, that he might serue them. And so they were in prison for a season.

And they dreamed, both the butlar & the baker in one night, every mā his owne dreame, and euery dreame had his interpretaciō. Now in the mornynge whan Joseph came in vnto them, and sawe that they looked sadly, he ased them and sayde: Why loke ye so sadly to daye? They answered: We haue dreamed, and haue no man to declare it vnto vs. Joseph sayde: Interpretinge belongeth vnto God, but tell it me yet.

B Then the chiefe butlar tolde Joseph his dreame, and saide vnto him: I dreamed that there was a vyne before me, which had thre braunches, and it ludded, grewe and bare blossoms, and the grapes thereof were ripe. And I had Pharaos cuppe in my hande, & toke the grapes and wronge the in to the cuppe, and gaue Pharaos the cuppe in his hande.

Joseph sayde: This is the interpretaciō: The thre braunches are thre dayes, and ouer thre dayes shall Pharaos take the, and putt the in thine office agayne, that thou mayest geue him the cuppe in his hande after the olde maner, whā thou wast his butlar. But whan thou art in thy prosperite, thynke vpon me, and shewe me kyndnesse, that thou mayest certifie Pharaos of me, that he maie bring me out of this house: for I was pryncely carried out of the lands of the Hebrues, and here also haue I done nothinge, that they shulde haue put me in this dongeon.

Whan the chiefe baker sawe, that the interpretaciō was good, he sayde vnto Joseph: I dreamed, that I bare thre wyter baskets vpon my heade, and in the vppermost basket all maner of bakē meates vnto Pharaos, and the foules ate out of the basket vpon my heade.

Joseph answered, and sayde: This is the interpretaciō: The thre baskets are thre dayes, and after thre dayes shall Pharaos take the, and hange the vpon the galowe, and the foules shal eate thy flesh from of the.

And vpon the thirde daye it came to passe, that Pharaos helde his byrth daye, and made a feast vnto all his seruantes, and toke the chiefe butlar and the chiefe baker before all his seruantes, and restored the chiefe butlar to his butlarshipe agayne, so that he reached the cuppe in to Pharaos hande. As for the chiefe baker, he caused him be hanged like as Joseph had interpreted vnto him. Nevertheless the chiefe butlar thought not on Joseph, but forgot him.

The xli. Chapter.

And after two yeaeres Pharaos had a dreame, how that he stode by a water syde: and beholde, out of the water there came seven goodly kene, and fatfleshed, and wente feedinge in the medowe. After these he sawe other seven kene come out of the water, which were euell fauoured and leane fleshed, and wente by the kene vpon the water syde: and the euell fauoured leane kene ate vp the seven goodly and fatt kene. Then Pharaos awaked.

And he slepte agayne, and dreamed the seconde tyme. And he sawe that seven eares of corne grewe vpon one stalk, full and good. Afterwarde he sawe seven thynne and blasted eares come vp, and the seven thynne eares deuoured the seven greate and full eares. Then Pharao awaked, and sawe that it was a dreame. And whan it was daye, his spiere was troubled, and he sente out, & caused to call all the soothsayers in Egipte & all the wyse men, and tolde them his dreame. But there was none, that coude tell Pharao the interpretacion of it.

B Then spake the chiefe butlar vnto Pharao, and saide: This daye do I remembre my sawe. Whan Pharao was angrie with his seruantes, and put me in prison with y^e cheefe baker in y^e chiefe marshals house, we dreamed both in one night every mā his dreame, hauinge his owne interpretacion. Then was there with vs a yonge man an Hebrue, the chiefe marshals seruant, vnto whom we tolde it, and he declared oure dreames vnto vs, vnto every mā accordinge to his dreame. And as he declared it vnto vs, so came it to passe. For I was restored vnto myne office, and he was hanged.

Then Pharao sent and called for Joseph and they let him out of the dongeon. And he let himself be shauen, and chaunged his clothes, and came in vnto Pharao. Then saide Pharao vnto him: I haue dreamed a dreame, and there is no man that can interpret it: but I haue herde tell of the, that whā thou hearest a dreame, thou declarest it. Joseph answered Pharao, and sayde: God shall geue Pharao a prosperous answer, yee well without me.

C Pharao sayde vnto Joseph: I dreamed that I stode by a water syde, and beholde, out of the water there came seven Eyne, fat-fleshed and goodly, and wente feedinge in y^e meadowe. And after them I sawe other seven Eyne come out, thynne, euell fauoured, and leenfleshed. So euell fauoured sawe I neuer in all the lande of Egipte. And the seven leene and euell fauoured Eyne, ate vp the seven first fat Eyne. And whan they had eatē them vp, a man coude not perceaue that they had eaten them, & were as euell fauoured as they were afore. Then I awaked.

And I sawe agayne in my dreame seven eares of corne, growinge vpon one stalke, full and good. Afterwarde there spronge vp seven withered eares, thynne and blasted, and the seven thynne eares deuoured the seven good eares. And I haue shewed it vnto my soothsayers, but they can tell me nothinge therof.

D Joseph answered Pharao: Both Pharaos dreames are one. God sheweth Pha-

rao what he wil do. The seven good Eyne are seven yeares, and the seven good eares are seven yeares also. It is one dreame. The seven leene and euell fauoured Eyne, that came vp after them, are seven yeares. And the seven thynne and blasted eares, shalbe seven yeares of deth. This is now the thinge which I tolde Pharao, that God sheweth Pharao, what he wyll do.

Beholde, there shal come seven yeares of greate plenteousnes in y^e whole lande of Egipte, and after the same there shal come seven yeares of deth, so that all this plenteousnes shalbe forgotten in y^e lande of Egipte: and the deth shal consume the lande, so that the plenteousnes shal not be perceaued in the lande, because of the deth that cometh thereafter, for it shal be very greave. Where as Pharao dreamed the seconderyme, it signifieth that this thinge is surely prepared of God, and that God wil shortly brynge the same to passe.

Let Pharao now prouyde for a man of vnderstandinge & wysdome, whom he maye set ouer the lande of Egipte, and se that he ordene officers in the lande, and take y^e fift (parte) of the lande of Egipte in the seven plenteous yeares, and gather all y^e foode y^e shal come of the plenteous yeares, that they maye laye vp come vnder Pharaos power for sustenaunce in the cities, and kepe it, & there maye be foode founde prepared for the lande in the seven deare yeares, which shal come vpon the lande of Egipte, that the lande be not destroyed of hunger. The sayenge pleased Pharao well and all his seruantes. And Pharao sayde vnto his seruantes: How might we fynde soch a man, in whom is the spiere of God? And sayde vnto Joseph: For so moch as God hath shewed y^e all this, there is none of soch vnderstandinge & wysdome as thou.

Thou shalt be ouer my house, and accordinge vnto thy worde shall all my people obeye: onely in the kynges seate wyll I be more then thou. And he sayde: Beholde, I haue set the ouer the whole lande of Egipte. And he toke of his ringe from his hāde, and gaue it Joseph in his hāde, and clothed him with whyte sylke, and honged a cheyne of golde aboute his neck, and made him ryde vpon the seconde charet: and caused it be proclaimed before him, that men shulde bowe their knees vnto him, as to him whō Pharao had set ouer the whole lande of Egipte.

of the seven yeares that were in the lande of Egip-

foode grewe in the felde rounde aboute eve-vp the corne in store, and that moch above

he left of nombryng of it, for it coude not

Gen. 45. c And vnto Joseph there were borne two sonnes (before y derth came) whom Asnath the doughter of Potiphar prest of On bare vnto him. And the first called he Manasses:
for God (sayde he) hath caused me to forget all my laboure, and all my fathers house.
The seconde called he Ephraim: for God (sayde he) hath caused me to growe in y lan-

Act 7. Now when y seven plenteous yeares wedeare yeares to come, wherof Joseph had sayde. And there was derth in all landes, but in all the lāde of Egipde. Now when the lande of Egip-te began-ne to suffre hunger also, the people cryed vnto Pharaο for bried. But Pharaο sayde vnto all y Egipcians: Go vnto Joseph, what he sayeth vnto you, y doo. So when there was derth in all y lāde, Joseph opened all y was by him, & solde vnto the Egipcians. Thus y derth preuayled in the lande, & all countrees came to Egip-te to bye at Joseph: for the derth was mightie in all landes.

ether y came w them: for there was derth to all the people in the lande.

Now whā his brethre came to him, they fell downe to the grounde before him vpon their faces. And he sawe them, & knewe thē, and helde himself straunge towarde them, and talked roughly with them, and saide vnto them: Whence come ye? They sayde: Out of the lande of Canaan to bye vytayle. Ne-uertheles though he knewe them, yet knewe they not him. And Joseph thought vpon y dreames that he had dreamed of them, and sayde vnto them: Ye are spyes, and are come to se where the lande is open.

Gen. 37. 1

They answered him: To my lorde, thy ser-uantes are come to bye vytayle: we are all one mans sonnes, we are vsfayned, and thy seruantes were neuer spyes. He sayde vnto thē: No, but ye are come to se where the lan-de is open. They answered him: We thy ser-one man in the lāde of Canaan, and the yon-

Joseph sayde vnto them: This is it that I sayde vnto you: spyes are ye. Here by wyll
I proue you: By the life of Pharaο ye shall

Vpon the thirde daye he sayde vnto thē:
If ye wyl lyue, thē do thus, for I feare God:
If ye be vsfayned, let one of youre brethren lye bounde in youre prison: but go ye youre waye, and cary home the necessary foode, & bryng me youre yongest brother, so wyll I beleue youre wordes, that ye shall not dye.
And so they dyd.

And they sayde one to another: This haue we deserued agaynst oure brother, in that we sawe the anguysh of his soule, when he besought vs, and we wolde not heare him:
therfore cometh now this trouble vpon vs.
Ruben answered them, and saide: Tolde not I you y same, when I sayde: O synne not agaynst y lad, but ye wolde not heare. Now is his bloude requyred. But they knewe not that Joseph vnderstode it, for he spake vnto thē by an interpreter. And he turned him from them, and wepte. Now when he had turned him to them agayne, and talked w them, he toke Symon from amonge them, &

ded to fyll their sackes wth corne, and to put euery mans money in his sack, and to geue euery one his expenses by the waye. And so was it done vnto them.

D And they laded their corne vpon their Asses, and departed thence. But whan one opened his sack to geue his Asses prouender in the Inne, he spied his money in his sack mouth, and sayde vnto his biethren: My money is restored me agayne: lo, it is in my sack.
Then their hertes fayled them, and they were a frayd amonge them selues, and sayde:
Wherfore hath God done this vnto vs?

Now whan they came heme to Jacob their father in the lāde of Canaan, they tolde him all that had happened vnto them, & sayde: The man that is lord of the lande, spake roughly to vs, and toke vs for spyces of the countre. And whan we answered: we are vnfayned, & were neuer spyces, but are twolue biethren the sonnes of oure father: one is awaye, and the yongest is yet this daye wth oure father in the lande of Canaan, he sayde: Hereby wyl I marke, that ye are vnfay-ned: Leane one of youre biethren with me, & take foode necessary for youre houses, & go your waye, and brynge youre yongest brether vnto me: so shal I knowe that ye are no spyces, but vnfayned: the shal I deliuer you your brother also, and ye maye occupie in the lande.

E And whan they opened their sackes, eu-ry man founde his boundell of money in his sack. And whā they and their father sawe, that it was the bundels of their money, they were a frayd.

Then sayde Jacob their father: Ye haue robbed me of my children. Joseph is awaye, Simeon is awaye, and ye will take Ben Jamin awaye: He goeth all ouer me. Ruben answered his father & sayde: If I brynge him not to the agayne, then slaye my two sonnes:
deliuer him but in to my hande, I wyl bryn-ge him agayne vnto the. He sayde: my sonne shal not go downe with you: for his brother is deed, and he is lefe alone. If eny myssfortune shulde happen vnto him by the waye & ye go, ye shulde bringe my graye hayre with sorowe downe vnto the graue.

If so be now that thou wilt sende oure bro-foode. But yf thou wilt not sende him, we wyl not go downe. For the man sayde vnto vs: Ye shal not se my face, excepte youre bro-

Israel sayde: Wherfore haue ye done this euell vnto me, to tell y^e man, that ye had yet a brother? They answered: The man enquered so stratelly of vs and of oure kynde, & sayde: Is youre father yet a lyue? Haue ye yet a brother? Then tolde we him, as he axed vs. How coulde we knowe, that he wol-de saye: brynge youre brother downe wth you?
Then sayde Juda vnto Israel his father:
Let the lad go with me, that we maye get vs up and take oure iourney, and lyue, and not dye, both we and thou, and oure childre.
I wyl be suretye for him, of my handes shalte thou requyre him. If I brynge him not vnto the agayne, & set him before thine yf we had not made this carienge, we had

*Gen. 44.

Then sayde Israel their father vnto the:
If it must nedes be so, then do this: take of the best frutes of the lande in youre sackes, and brynge the man a present: a curte y^e balme, and hony, and spyces, and myrre, and bates, and almondes. Take other money with you also, and the money that was brought agayne in youre sacke mouthes, cary it agayne with you: peradventure it was an ouersight. And take youre brother, get you up, & go agayne vnto the man. The Allmightie God geue you mercy in the sight of y^e man, that he maye let you haue youre other brother, and Ben Jamin. As for me, I must be as one, that is robbed of his children.

Then they toke the present, and other money with them, and Ben Jamin, gat the v^p, and wente in to Egypte, and stode before Joseph. Then Joseph behelde them with Ben Jamin, and sayde vnto the ruler of his house: Bringe these men in, and sleigh, & make ready, for they shal dyne with me at noone. And the man dyd as Joseph had him, & brought the men in to Josephs house.

Whan they were brought in to Josephs house, they were a frayd, and sayde: We are brought hither because of the money, that came agayne in oure sackes at the first, to py-te a quarell with vs, and to laye semet hinge

Therfore came they to y^e man, that was D

He sayde: Be content, feare you not, youre God euen γ God of youre fathers hath geue you γ treasure in youre sackes, I had your money. And he brought forth Simeon vnto them, and led them in to Josephs house, and gaue them water to wash their fete, & gaue their Asses prouender.

E And they made readye γ present, ageynst Joseph came at noone: for they herde, γ they shulde dyne there. Now whan Joseph wente in to the house, they brought him home γ present that they had, and fell downe to the grounde before him. But he welcomed them curteously, and sayde: Is youre father, (that olde man which ye tolde me of) in good healeth? Is he yet aljue? They answered: Thy seruant oure father is in good healeth, and is yet aljue. And they bowed them selues, and fell downe before him.

Gen. 43. b And he lift vp his eyes, and sawe his brother Ben Jamin his mothers sonne, and said: Is this youre yongest brother, that ye tolde me of? And he sayde morouer: God be mercifull vnto the my sonne. And Joseph made haist (for the grounde of his hert was kyndled toward his brother) and sought how he might wepe, & wente in to his chamber, and wept there.

1. Re. 1. d S And whan he had washed his face, he wente out, and refrayned him self, and sayde: set bried (on the table.) (For the Egipcians darre not eate bried wth the Ebriues, that is an abhominacion vnto them.) And they were set ouer agaynst him, the first boine accordinge to his first byrth, and the yongest after his youth. They marueled at it amonge them selues, and there were brought them sundrye meates from his table. But Ben Jamins parte was fyue tymes more then the other. And they dronke, and were mery with him.

But whan they were out of the cite, and not come farre, Joseph sayde to the ruler of his house: Up, and folowe after the me, and whan thou ouertakest them, saie vnto them: Wherfore haue ye rewarded euell for good? Is not that it, that my lorde drynketh out of: and that he prophscieth withall? It is euell done of you, that ye haue done.

B And whan he had ouertaken them, he sayde the same wordes vnto them. They answered him: Wherfore saith my lorde soch wordes? God forbyd, that thy seruauntes shulde do eny soch thinge: Beholde, the money that we founde in oure sackes mouthes, that brought we vnto the agayne, out of the lande of Canaan: how shulde we then haue stollen either syluer or golde out of thy lordes house? Loke by whom it shall be founde amonge thy seruauntes, let him dye: yee and we also, wyll be my lordes bondmen. He sayde: let it so be, as ye haue spoken. Loke by whom it shall be founde, let him be my seruant, but ye shalbe harmlesse.

And they made haist, and toke downe euery man his sack to the grounde, and euery man opened his sack: And he searched & beganne at the greatest vnto the yongest, and the cuppe was founde in Ben Jamins sacke. Then rente they their clothes, and euery man lade the burthen vpon his Ass, & wente agayne vnto the cite. And Juda wente wth his brethien vnto Josephs house (for he was there yet) and they fell before him on the grounde. Joseph sayde vnto them: What manner of dede is this, that ye haue done? Anewe ye not, that soch a man as I am, can prophecy?

E Juda sayde: What shall we saye vnto my lorde: or how shal we speake: and what excuse shal we make? God hath founde out γ wickednesse of thy seruauntes. Beholde, we and he, by whom the cuppe is founde, are my lordes seruauntes. But he sayde: God forbyd that I shulde do so. The man by whom the cuppe is founde, shall by my seruant, but go ye vp in peace vnto youre father.

The slepte Juda vnto him, and sayde: My lorde, let thy seruant speake one worde in thine eares my lorde, & not displeased at ¶ Seruaunt also, for thou art euē as Pharaō. My lordē axed his seruauntes, and sayde: Have ye yet a father or brother? Then answered we: We have a father, which is olde, and a yonge lad begotten in his age, and his brother is deed, & he is left alone of his mother, and his father leueth him.

D Then saydest thou: Brynge him downe vnto me, and I wil se him. But we answered my lordē: The lad can not come from his father, yf he shulde come from him, he were but a deed man. Then saydest thou vnto thy seruauntes: If youre yongest brother come not hither with you, ye shall se my face nomore. Then wente we vp vnto thy seruaunt my father, and tolde him my lordes wordes. Then sayde oure father: Go youre waye agayne, and bye vs a litle foode. But we sayde: We can not go downe, excepte our yongest brother be with vs, then wyll we go downe: for we darre not loke the man in the face, yf oure yongest brother be not with vs. Then sayde thy seruaunt my father vnto vs: Ye knowe that my wife bare me two sonnes, one wente out fro me, and I sayde: he is tome in pices. If ye take this fro me also, and any myffortune happē him, then shal ye brynge my gray heer with sorowe downe vnto the graue.

E If I now come home vnto my father, & the lad be not with me (seyng his soule hangeth by the soule of this) then shall it come to passe, that yf he se not the lad there, he shal dye. So shal we thy seruauntes brynge the gray heer of thy seruaunt oure father with sorowe downe to the graue. For I thy seruaunt became swertye for the lad vnto my father, and sayde: yf I brynge him not agayne, I will beare the blame all my lyfe longe. Therfore let thy seruaunt hyde here in steade of þe lad, to be my lordes bondeman, and let the lad go vp with his brethrien. For how can I go vp vnto my father, yf the lad be not with me? Then shulde I se the mysery that shulde happen vnto my father.

The XLV. Chapter.

A Then coude not Joseph refrayne himself before all them that stode aboute him: and he commaunded every man to go out from him, and there stode no man by him, whan Joseph vttered him self vnto his brethrien. For God sent me hither before you, for yor lyues sake. For these are now two yeaeres, that þe verch hath bene in the lande, and there are yet fyue yeaeres behynde, wherin there shalbe no plowinge ner harvest.

But God sent me hither before you, þe he might let you remayne vpon earth, and to save youre lyues by a greate deliuerance. And now, it was not ye then that sent me hither, but God which hath made me a father vnto Pharaō, & lordē ouer all his house, and a prynce in the whole lande of Egypte. Haist you therfore, and go vp vnto my father, and saye vnto him: Thy sonne Joseph sendeth the this worde: God hath made me lordē in all Egypte, come downe vnto me, tarye not, thou shalt dwel in the lande of Gosen, and be with me: thou and thy children, and thy childrens childre, thy small and greate catell, and all that thou hast. There wyll I make prouysion for the (for there are yet fyue yeaeres of verch) that thou perishe not wth thine hense, and all that is thine. Beholde, youre eyes and the eyes of my brother Ben Jamin se, that I myne owne self speake vnto you by mouth. Shewe my father all my wo: shipe in Egypte, and all that ye haue sene: haist you, and come downe hither with my father.

And he fell aboute his brother Ben Jamins neck, and wepte, and Ben Jamin wepte vpon his neck also. And he kyssed all his brethrien, and wepte vpon them. And afterwards talked his brethrien wth him. And this cydinges came in to Pharaos house: Josephs brethrien are come, which pleased Pharaō well, and all his seruauntes.

And Pharaō spake vnto Joseph: Saye vnto thy brethrien: Do thus, lade youre bestes, go youre waye, and whan ye come in to the lande of Canaan, take youre father and youre housholdes, and come vnto me, I wyll geue you of the goodes in the lande of Egypte, so that ye shall eat the farr in the lande. And he commaunded them, Do thus, Take you charettes out of y lande of Egypte for youre children and wyues, and brynge youre father, and come, and regarde not youre housholde stuff: for the goodes of all the lande of Egypte shalbe yours.

The children of Israel dyd so, and Joseph gaue the charettes accordynge to Pha-

raas commaundement, and expenses by the waye, and gaue them all, vnto every one a chaunge of rayment: but vnto Ben Jamin he gaue thre hundred syluer pens, and fyue chaunge of rayment. As for his father, he sent him ten Asses laden with goodes out of Egipte, and ten Asses with come and bred, and vytayles for his father by 3 waye. So he sent awaye his brethien, and sayde vnto them: Scryue not by the waye.

E Thus they departed out of Egipte, and came to the lande of Canaan vnto Jacob their father, and tolde him, and sayde: Thy sonne Joseph is yet alyue, and is a lorde in all the lande of Egipte. But his hert waned, for he beleued them not. The tolde they him all the wordes of Joseph, which he had sayde vnto them. And whan he sawe y charrettes that Joseph had sent to fetch him, his sprece renyned, 7 he sayde: I haue ynough, that my sonne Joseph is yet a liue I wil go, and se him, before I dye.

The XLVI. Chapter.

I Israel toke his iourney with all that he had. And whan he came to Berseba, he offred offerynges vnto y God of his father Isaac. And God spake vnto him in a vision by night: Jacob Jacob. He sayde: here am I. And he saide: I am y mighty God of thy father, be not afrayed to go into Egipte, for there wyl I make a greate people of the. I wyl go downe with the, 7 wil brynge the vp alld. And Joseph shal laye his hande vpon thine eyes.

E Then Jacob gat him vp from Berseba, and y children of Israel caried Jacob their father with their children and wyues vpon the charrettes that Pharaos had sent to cary him. And they toke their catell 7 substance which they had gotten in the lande of Canaan, and so came in to Egipte: Jacob 7 all his sede with him, his children 7 his childrens children with him, his daughters, and the daughters of his children, 7 all his sede.

B These are y names of the children of Israel, which came in to Egipte, Jacob 7 his sonnes. The first borne sonne of Jacob: Ruben. The children of Ruben: Henoeh, Pallu, Hezon and Charmi. The children of Simeon: Jemuel, Jamin, Ohad, Jachim, Johar and Saul the sonne of the Cananitish woman. The childre of Levi: Gerson, Cahath 7 Merari. The childre of Juda: Er, Onan, Sela, Phares 7 Serah. But Er and Onan dyed in the lande of Canaan. The childre of Phares: Heson and Hamul. The children of Issachar: Thola, Phua, Job 7 Semron. The children of Zabulon: Sered, Elon and Jaheel. These are the childre of Lea, which she bare vnto Jacob in Mesopotamia with his daughter Dina. These all together with sonnes 7 daughters make thre 7 thurtie soules.

The childre of Gad: Zupheon, Haggi, Suni, Ezbon, Eri, Arodi and Areli. The children of Asser: Jemna, Jesua, Jesui, Bria 7 Sera their sister. The children of Bria: Heber and Malchiel. These are the children of Silpa, whom Laban gaue vnto Lea his daughter, and she bare vnto Jacob these sixtene soules.

The childre of Rachel Jacobs wife: Joseph and Ben Jamin. And vnto Joseph in y lande of Egipte were borne Manasses and Ephraim, whom Asnath the daughter of Potiphar prest of On bare vnto him. The children of Ben Jamin: Bela, Becher, Asber, Gera, Naama, Ehi, Ros, Mupim, Hupim and Ard. These are the children of Rachel, which were borne vnto Jacob, fourene soules alltogether.

The children of Dan: Husim. The childre of Nephtali: Jahzeel, Guni, Jezer, Sillem. These are the children of Bilha, whom Laban gaue vnto his daughter Rachel, 7 she bare Jacob these seven soules. All the soules y came w Jacob in to Egipte, which proceeded out of his loynes (besyde the wyues of his childre) are alltogether sixe 7 sixtie soules. And Josephs childre which were borne vnto him in Egipte, were two soules: so that all the soules of the house of Jacob which came into Egipte, were seuentye.

And he sent Juda before him vnto Joseph, to shew him the waye to Gosen, 7 they came in to the lande of Gosen. Then Joseph bended his charrett fast, and wente vp to meete Israel his father vnto Gosen. And whan he sawe him, he fell aboute his neck, 7 wepte sore vpon his neck. Then sayde Israel vnto Joseph: Now am I content to dye, for so moch as I haue sene thy face, that thou art yet alyue.

Joseph sayde vnto his brethien, 7 to his fathers house: I will go vp, 7 tell Pharaos, 7 saye vnto him: My brethie and my fathers house are come vnto me out of the lande of Canaan, and are keepers of catell (for they are men that deale with catell) their small 7 greate catell, and all that they haue, haue they brought with them. Now yf Pharaos call you, and saye: what is youre occupaciō? then ye shal saye: Thy seruantes are men y haue dealt w catell from oure youth vp hitherto, both we 7 oure fathers, that ye maye dwell in the lande of Gosen: for the Egipcians abhorre all keepers of catell.

The XLVII. Chapter.

When came Joseph, and tolde Pharaoh and sayde: My father and my brethren, their small and greete catell, and all that they have, are come out of the lande of Canaan: and beholde, they are in the lande of Gosen. And he toke syue of his brethren, and presented them vnto Pharaoh. Then sayde Pharaoh vnto his brethren: What is youre occupation? They answered: Thy seruantes are keepers of catell, we and oure fathers also. And they sayde morouer vnto Pharaoh: We are come to dwell with you in the lande, for the seruantes haue no pasture for their catell, so sore doth the derth oppresse the lande of Canaan. Nowe therefore let the seruantes dwell in the lande of Gosen.

Pharaoh sayde vnto Joseph: Thy father and thy brethren are come vnto the: the lande of Egypte is open before the, let them dwell in the best place of the lande, and se that they dwell even in the lande of Gosen. And yf thou knowest that there be men of actiuite amonge the, make the rulers of my catell.

Joseph brought in Jacob his father also, and set him before Pharaoh. And Jacob thanked Pharaoh. But Pharaoh ased Jacob: How olde art thou? Jacob sayde: The tyme of my pilgrimage is an hundred and thirtie yeares: lile and euell is the tyme of my pilgrimage, and attayneth not vnto the tyme of my fathers in their pilgrimages. And Jacob thanked Pharaoh, and were cut from him.

So Joseph prepared dwellinges for his father and his brethren, and gaue them a possession in the lande of Egypte, euen in the best place of the lande, namely, in the lande of Raemes, as Pharaoh commaunded. And he made prouysion for his father and his brethren, and all his fathers house with bried, euen as yonge children.

The xlvij. Chap.

There was no bried in all the lande, for the derth was very sore: so the lande of Egypte and the lande of Canaan were famished by reason of the derth. And Joseph brought together all the money that was founde in Egypte and Canaan, for the corn that they bought. And he layed vp all the money in Pharaohs house.

Now when money fayled in the lande of Egypte and Canaan, all the Egipcians came vnto Joseph, and saide: Geue vs bried. Why suffrest thou vs to dye before the, because we are without money? Joseph saide: Brynge hithe your catell, so wil I geue you for your catell, seynge ye are without money. Then brought they their catell vnto Joseph. And he gaue the bried for their horses, shepe, oxen, and Asses. So he fed them with bried the yere, for all their catell.

When the yere was ended, they came vnto him the next yere, and sayde vnto him: We wil not hyde it from the lord, the money, but all the catell also is spent vnto the lord: and there is no thinge left more for the lord, but onely the body and our lande. Wherefore suffrest thou both vs to dye, and our lande? Take vs and our lande for bried, that we and our lande maye be bonde vnto Pharaoh: geue vs seede, that we maye lyue and not dye, and the lande become not a wilderness.

So Joseph toke all the lande of Egypte in for Pharaoh: for the Egipcians solde euery man his lande, because the derth was so mighty vpon them: and so the lande became Pharaohs, with the people that wente out and in at his cities, from one syde of Egypte vnto the other, excepte the prestes lande, that toke he not in: for it was ordered of Pharaoh for the prestes, that they shulde eate that which was appoynted them, which he gaue them, therefore they neded not to sell their landes.

Then sayde Joseph vnto the people: Beholde, I have taken possession of you and your lande this daye for Pharaoh. Beholde, there haue ye seede, sowe the lande, and of the come ye shall geue the fift part vnto Pharaoh: foure partes shalbe yours, to sowe the lande for your sustenance, and for your houses and children.

They sayde: Let vs but lyue, and fynde grace before the our lord, we wil gladly be Pharaohs seruantes: So Joseph made the a lawe vnto this daye ouer the Egipcians lande, to geue Pharaoh the fift part, excepte the prestes lande, which was not bonde vnto Pharaoh.

The i. booke of Moses.

G So Israel dwelt in Egypte in the lande of Gosen, and had it in possession, and grew and multiplied exceedingly. And Jacob lived seventene years in the lande of Egypte, so that his whole age was an hundred and seven and fourty yeares.

Now when the tyme came that Israel shulde dye, he called Joseph his sonne, and sayde vnto him: • Ge. 45. 2 If I haue founde grace in thy sight, then laye thine honde vnder my chye, & thou shalt shewe mercy and faithfulness vpon me, and not burye me in Egypte, but I will lye by my fathers, and thou shalt carye me out of Egypte, & burye me in their buryall. • Ge. 45. 2 He sayde: I wil do as thou hast sayd. But he sayde: Then sweare vnto me. And he swore vnto him. Then Israel bowed himself toward the bed heade.

The XLVIII. Chapter.

¶ After this it was tolde Joseph: Beholde, & father is sicke. And he toke with him his two sonnes Manasses and Ephraim. Then was it tolde Jacob: beholde, & sonne Joseph cometh vnto y. And Israel toke a courage vnto him, & sat vp vpon his bed, & sayde vnto Joseph: • Ge. 48. 2 The Almightye God appeared vnto me at Las in y lande of Canaan, & blessed me, & saide vnto me: Beholde, I wil cause y to growe & increase & wil make a multitude of people of y, & wil geue this lande vnto y sede after y for an everlasting possession. Therefore shal now thy two sonnes Manasses & Ephraim (which were borne vnto the in Egypte, before I came hither vnto the) be myne, like as Ruben & Simeon. As for those that thou begettest after the, they shal be thine owne. But these shal be named with the names of their brethren in their inheritance. Gen. 48. 2

¶ And when I came out of Mesopotamia, Rachel dyed by me in the lande of Canaan, by the waye, when there was yet but a felde buide vnto Ephrath: and I buried her in the waye toward Ephrath, which now is called Bethleem. Gen. 48. 2

And Israel looked vpon Josephs sonnes, & sayde: What are these? Joseph answered: They are my sonnes, which God hath geuen me here. He sayde: Brynge the hither to me, & I maye blesse the. (For Israels eyes were heavy for age, & he coude not well se.) And he brought the vnto him. So he kysed them, & embraced the, & saide vnto Joseph: Beholde, I haue sene y face, which I thought not: & lo, God hath caused me to se y sede also. And Joseph toke them from his lappe, and they fell downe to the grounde vpon their face.

All these are the twelue trybes of Israel: and this is it that their father spake vnto them, whan he blessed them, every one with a sundrye blessinge.

And he commaunded them, and sayde vnto them: I shall be gathered vnto my people, and burye me with my fathers in y caue which is in the felde of Ephron the Hethite, in the dubble caue that lyeth ouer against Mamre in y lande of Canaan, which Abrahā bought with the felde, of Ephron the Hethite for a possession to burye in. There buried they Abrahā and Sara his wife, there buried they Isaac also and Rebecca his wife: and there buried I Lea, in the good of the felde and of the caue therin, which was bought of the Hethites.

And whan Jacob had ended this commaundement vnto his children, he plucked his fet together vpon the bed, and died, and was gathered vnto his people. The fell Joseph vpon his fathers face, and wepte, and kysed him.

A And Joseph comaunded his seruantes y phisicians, to embawme his father. And the phisicians embawmed Israel, tyll fourtye dayes were ended (for so longe endured the dayes of embawminge) and the Egipcians bewayled him seuentye dayes.

Now whan the mournyng dayes were ended, Joseph spake vnto Pharaos household, and sayde: If I haue founde fauor in youre sight, the speake vnto Pharaos and saie: My father hath taken an ooth of me, and sayde: Beholde, I dye, burye me in myne owne graue, which I dygged for myself in the lāde of Canaan. Therefore wyl I now go vp, and burye my father, and come agayne. Pharaos saide: Go thy waye vp, and burye thy father, accordinge as thou hast sworne vnto him.

So Joseph wete vp, to burye his father. And there wete w him all Pharaos seruantes y were the elders of his courte, and all y elders of the lande of Egippte, and all Josephs household, and his brethren, and his fathers household. Onely their children, shepe and oxen left they in y lāde of Gosen, and toke their iourney vp with him, vpo charettes and horses, and the company was exceedinge greates.

Now whan these came to the playne of Atad y lyeth beyonde Jordane, they made there a very greates and bytter lamentacion, and he mourned for his father seuen dayes. And whā the people in the lande (the Cananites) sawe the mournyng in the playne of Atad,

Gen. 45 b

These are the names of the children of Israel, that came with Jacob into Egypt: every one came in to his house, Ruben, Simeon, Levi, Juda, Issachar, Zabulon, Ben Jamin, Dan, Nephthali, Gad and Aser. And of all the souls that came out of the loynes of Jacob, there were seuentie.

Act. 7. c

As for Joseph, he was in Egypt all ready. Now when Joseph was dead, and all his brethren, and all they that lived at that time, the children of Israel grew, and increased, and multiplied, and became exceeding mighty, so that the land was full of them.

B Then came there a new kynge out of Egypt, which knewe nothinge of Joseph, and sayde vnto his people: Beholde, the people of the children of Israel are many, and mightier then we: Up, let vs deale wylly with them, lest there be not so many of them. For yf there shulde rise vp eny warre agaynst vs, they might ioine them selues also vnto oure enemies, and overcome vs, and so get them out of the lande.

And he set worke masters ouer them, to kepe them vnder with burthens. (For they buylded the cities Pithon and Raemeses, for treasures vnto Pharaos.) But the more they vexed them, the more they multiplied and grew.

C Therefore had they indignacion at the children of Israel, and the Egyptians compelled the children of Israel without mercy to do seruyce, and made their lyues bitter vnto them with greuous labour in claye and brycke, and with all manner of bondage in the felde, and with all manner of labour, which they layed vpon them without mercy.

And the kynge of Egypt sayde vnto the midwyues of the Hebrewewomen. (Of the which one was called Siphra, and the other Pua:) When ye helpe the women of the Hebrewes, and se vpon the stole, that it is a sonne, then slaye him: but yf it be a daughter, let her lyue. Nevertheless the midwyues feared God, and dyd not as the kynge of Egypt commaunded them, but let the children lyue.

D Then the kynge of Egypt called the midwyues, and sayde vnto them: Wherefore do ye this, that ye let the children lyue? The midwyues answered Pharaos: The women of the Hebrewes are not as the women of Egypt, for they are sturdy women: or euer the midwyues come at them, they are deliuered.

Therefore God dealt well with the midwyues. And the people multiplied, and became exceeding mighty. And for so much as the midwyues feared God, he made them houses. Then Pharaos commaunded all his people and sayde: All the sonnes that are borne, cast in to the water, but let all the daughters lyue.

The II. Chapter.

A And there wente forth a man of the house of Levi, and toke a daughter of Levi. And the wife conceived and bare a sonne. And when she sawe that it was a proper childe, she hyd him thre monethes. And when she coude hyde him no longer, she toke an Arke of reedes, and darbed it ouer with slyme and pitch, and layed the childe therein, and set it amonge the reedes by the waters brynke. And when she opened it, she sawe a childe: and beholde the babe wepte. Then had she pytie vpon it, and sayde: It is one of the Hebrewes children.

Then sayde his syster vnto Pharaos daughter: Shal I go, and call the a nurse of the Hebrewes women, to nurse the childe? Pharaos daughter sayde vnto her: Go thy waye. The mayde wente, and called the chilles mother. Then sayde Pharaos daughter vnto her: Take this childe, and nurse it for me, I wyll geue thee thy rewarde. The woman toke the childe, and nursed it.

And when the childe was growne, she brought it vnto Pharaos daughter, and it became hir sonne, and she called him Moses. For she sayde: I toke him out of the water.

Vpon a tyme when Moses was greate, he wente forth vnto his brethren, and looked vpon their burthens, and sawe, that an Egyptian smote one of his brethren a Hebrew. And he looked rounde aboute him: and when he sawe that there was no man, he slew the Egyptian, and buried him in the sonde.

The was Moses afrayed, and sayde: How is this knowne? And pharao herde of it, and sought for Moses, to slaye him. But Moses fled from pharao, and kepte him in the lande of Madian, and sat him downe by a wells syde.

The prest Madian had seven daughters, which came to drawe water, and fylld the troughes, to geue their fathers shepe to drinke. Then came the shepherdes, and dioueth awaye. But Moses gat him vp, and helpeed them, and gaue their shepe to drynke. And whan they came to Reguel their father, he saide: How came ye so soone to daie? They sayde: A man of Egypce delyuered vs from y shepherdes, and diu vnto vs, and gaue the shepe to drynke. He sayde vnto his daughters. Where is he? Moses wote, and came agayne vnto Jethro his father in lawe, and sayde vnto him: Let me go (I praye the) that I maye turne agayne vnto my brether, which are in Egypte, and se whether they be yet alyue. Jethro sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace. The LORDE sayde also vnto him in Madian: Go y^e waye, turne agayne in to Egypte, for y^e me are deed, that sought after thy life. So Moses toke his wife, and his sonnes, and caried them vpon an asse, & wente agayne in to the lande of Egypte, & toke the staff of God in his hande. And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: When thou comest agayne in to Egypte, se y^e thou do all the wonders (before Pharaon) which I haue put in y^e ha^{de}. But I wil hardē his hert, y^e he shall not let the people go. And thou shalt saie vnto Pharaon: Thus sayeth y^e LORDE: Israel is my first borne sonne, & I saye vnto the: Let my sonne go, y^e he maye serue me: If thou wilt not let him go, then wil I slayethy first borne sonne.

But she sayde: A bloudy brydegrome, because of the circumcision.

The V. Chapter.

21 Afterward wente Moses & Aaron, & spake vnto Pharaos: Thus saith the LORDE the God of Israel: let my people go, & they may kepe holy daye vnto me in the wilderness. Pharaos answered: What fellowe is the LORDE, that I must heare his voyce, and let Israel go? I knowe not the LORDE, nether wil I let Israel go.

They sayde: The God of the Hebrewes hath called vs. Let vs go nowtherfore this dayes iourney in the wilderness, & do sacrifice vnto the LORDE our God, & there happen not vnto vs pestilence or swerde. The sayde & kynge of Egypte vnto the: Why make ye & people (thou Moses & Aaron) to leave their worke? Get you hence to your labour. Pharaos said moreover: Beholde, & people are to many in & lande, and yet wil ye byd them cease from their labour.

22 The same daye therfore byd Pharaos commaunde the workmasters of the people, and their officers, and sayde: Ye shal not gather and geue the people any more strawe, to burne bryck, as yesterdayer and yeresyesterdayer. Let them go, and gather them strawe themselves. And the nombre of the brycke which they made yesterdayer & yeresyesterdayer, shall ye laye vpon them neuertheles, and mynish nothinge therof: for they are ydle. Therfore crye they and saye: We wil go, and do sacrifice vnto our God. Let the men be kepte downe to labour, & they maye haue to do, & not to turne them selues to false wordes.

Then wente the workmasters of the people & their officers out, & spake vnto the people: Thus saith Pharaos: There shall no strawe be geuen you, go your waye yourselves, and get you strawe, where ye can fynde it. But of your labour there shall nothinge be mynished. Then were the people scattered in all & lande of Egypte, to gather stubble, that they might haue strawe.

23 And the workmasters haistied them forward, & sayde: Fulfill your daye worke, like as when ye had strawe. And the officers of & children of Israel, whom Pharaos workmasters had set ouer them, were beaten, & it was saide vnto them: Wherfore haue ye not fulfilled your appoynted daye worke to daye and yesterdayer, like as in tymes past?

Then wente the officers of the children of Israel, & cōplayned vnto Pharaos: Wherfore wilt thou deale thus with thy seruantes?

The vi. Chap.

Thy seruantes haue no strawe geuen the, & yet must we make the brycke that are appoynted vs. And beholde, thy seruantes are beaten, & thy people are enell intreated. Pharaos sayde: Ye are ydle, ydle are ye, therfore saye ye: we wil go, and do sacrifice vnto the LORDE. Go now your waye therfore, & worke: there shall no strawe be geuen you, but the nombre of brycke shal ye deliuer.

Then sawe the officers of the children of Israel, & it was not amended, for it was sayde: ye shal mynish nothinge of the daye worke of the brycke. And when Moses & Aaron wente from Pharaos, they came forth to meete them, & sayde vnto them: The LORDE loke vpon you, & iudge it, for ye haue made the sauoure of vs to stynte before Pharaos and his seruantes, and haue geuen them a swerde in their handes, to slaye vs.

But Moses came agayne vnto the LORDE, and sayde: LORDE, wherfore dealest thou so euill to this people? Wherfore hast thou sent me? For sence the tyme that I wente in vnto Pharaos, to speake vnto him in thy name, he hath dealt euill with this people, and thou hast not deliuered & people. Then wēt Moses & Aaron in vnto Pharaos, & dyd as the LORDE cōmaūded them. And Aaron cast his staff before Pharaos & before his seruantes, & it turned to a serpēt. Then Pharaos called for y wyse men & Sorcerers. And the Sorcerers of Egypte also dyd like wyse wiche their Sorceries, and eue-ry one cast his staff before him, & they turned vnto serpentes. But Aarons staff deuoured their staues. So Pharaos hert was hardened, and he herkened not vnto them, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

Get y vnto Pharaos in the mornynge, beholde, he shal come vnto y water, mete thou him vpo the waters brynke, & take y staff which turned to a serpēt, in thine hande, & saye vnto him: The LORDE God of the Hebrewes hath sent me vnto the, & sendeth y worde: Let my people go, that they maye serue me in the wyldernes: but hyer to thou woldest not heare.

Therefore thus sayeth the LORDE: Hereby shalt thou knowe, I am I LORDE. Beholde, wth the staff I haue in my hande, wil I smyte the water which is in y^e ryuer, & it shal be turned in to bloude: so that the fishes in the ryuer shall dye, & the ryuer shall stynte: & it shall greue the Egipcians to drynke of y^e water of the ryuer.

D And I LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saye vnto Aaron: Take y^e staff, & stretch out thine hande ouer y^e waters of Egip^t, ouer their ryuers & brokes & ponde^s, & ouer all water poles, I they maye be turned to bloude, & that theremaye be bloude in all y^e lande of Egip^t, both in vessels of wodd and stone.

Moses & Aaron dyd as y^e LORDE commanded them, & lift vp the staff, & smote the water y^e was in the ryuer, before Pharao & his seruantes, & all the water in the ryuer was turned into bloude, & the fysh in the ryuer dyed, & the ryuer stante, so y^e the Egipcians coude not drynke of the water of y^e ryuer, & there was bloude in all the lande of Egip^t. And the Sorcerers also of Egip^t, dyd likewyse wth their Sorceries. But Pharao hert was hardened, & he herkened not vnto the^m, like as the LORDE had sayde. And Pharao turned himself, & wente home, & set not his hert there on. All the Egipcians dygged roude aboute y^e ryuer, for water to drynke: for they coude not drynke of y^e water cut of the ryuer. And this endured seven dayes longe, that the LORDE smote the ryuer.

And Aaron stretcht his hande ouer the waters in Egip^t, & there came vp frogges, so y^e the londe of Egip^t was couered.

But whā Pharao sawe y^e he had gotten breth, his hert was hardened, and he herkened not vnto the^m, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses: Saie vnto Aaron: Stretch out thy staff, & smyte the dust vpon the earth, I there maye be lyse in the whole lode of Egip^t. They dyd so. And Aaron stretcht out his hande wth his staff, & smote the dust vpon the earth, & there were lyse vpon men and vpon catell: All the dust of the lande was turnid vnto lyse in all the lande of Egip^t.

The Sorcerers also assayed likewyse wth their Sorceries I they might brynge forth lyse, but they coude not. And y^e lyse were vpon men & catell. Then sayde y^e Sorcerers vnto Pharao: It is the fynger of God. But Pharao hert was hardened, & he herkened not vnto the^m, euen as the LORDE had sayde.

And I LORDE saide vnto Moses: Get y^e vp tomorrow by tymes, & stonde before Pharao: beholde, he wil go vnto the water, & speake thou vnto him: Thus saierh I LORDE: Let my people go, I they maye serue me: yf not, beholde, I wil cause cruell wormes (or flies) to come vpon the, thy seruantes, y^e people, & thy house, so y^e all the Egipcians houses, & the felde, and what theron is shal be full of cruell wormes: & the same daye wil I separate the londe of Gesen, wherein my people are, so y^e no cruell wor^me shalbe there, that thou mayest knowe, that I am I LORDE in the myddest of the earth. And I wil set a deluyre vnto betwene my people and thyne.

The .ii. booke of Moses.

Tomorrow shal this token come to passe.

And the LORD dyd so. And there came perious cruell wormes in to Pharaos house, in to his seruantes houses, & vpon all the lande of Egypte: and the lande was marred with noysome wormes.

S The called Pharaos for Moses & Aaron, & sayde: Go yo^r waye, & do sacrifice vnto yo^r God in y^e lande. Moses sayde: It is not meete, y^e we shulde so do, so shulde we offer y^e abhominacion of y^e Egipcians vnto the LORD God. Beholde, yf we shulde offer the abhominacion of y^e Egipcians before their eyes, shulde they not stone vs? Thie dayes iourney will we go in the wyldernes, and do sacrifice vnto the LORD oure God: like as he hath sayde vnto vs.

Exod. 1. c

Pharaos sayde: I wil let you go, y^e ye maie do sacrifice vnto the LORD yo^r God in the wyldernes (onely y^e ye go no farther) & praye for me. Moses sayde: Beholde, whan I am come forth from y^e, I wil praye vnto y^e LORD, y^e the cruell wormes maye be taken from Pharaos, & from his seruantes, & fro his people, euen tomorrow: onely disceau me no more, that thou woldest not let the people go to do sacrifice vnto the LORD.

And Moses wote out from Pharaos, and prayed vnto the LORD. And the LORD dyd as Moses sayde, & toke awaye the cruell wormes from Pharaos, from his seruantes, and from his people, so y^e there remayned not one. But Pharaos hardened his hert eue then also, and let not y^e people go.

The X. Chapter.

A The LORD sayde vnto Moses: Go into Pharaos, and speake vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORD God of y^e Hebrewes: let my people go, y^e they maye serue me. If thou wilt not, but holdethem longer, beholde, the hande of the LORD shal be vpon thy catell in the felde, vpon hoises, vpon Asses, vpon Camels, vpon oxen, vpon shepe with a very sore pestilence. And y^e LORD shal make a diuysion betwene the catell of the Israelites & the Egipcians, so y^e there shal nothings dye of all that the children of Israel haue. And y^e LORD appoynted a tyme, and sayde: Tomorrow shal the LORD do this vpon earth.

A And the LORD dyd the same on the morrow. And there dyed of all maner of catell of the Egipcians: but of y^e catell of y^e childre of Israel there dyed not one. And Pharaos sent thither, & beholde, there was not one of the catell of Israel deed. But Pharaos hert was hardened, so y^e he let not y^e people go. Then sayde y^e LORD vnto Moses & Aaron: Take youre handes full of asshes out of the fornace, & let Moses sprentle it toward heauen before Pharaos, that it maye be dust in all the lande of Egypte, & that there maye be sores & blaynes vpon men & vpon catell in all the lande of Egypte.

And they toke asshes out of y^e fornace, & stode before Pharaos, & Moses sprentled it toward heauen. Then were there sores and blaynes vpon men & vpon catell, so that the Sorcerers might not stode before Moses by reason of the sores. For there were sores vpon the Sorcerers as well as vpon all the Egipcians. But the LORD hardened Pharaos hert, so that he herkened not vnto them, eue as the LORD had sayde vnto Moses.

Then sayde the LORD vnto Moses: Get the vp tomorrow by tymes, & stonde before Pharaos, & speake vnto him: Thus sayeth y^e LORD God of the Hebrewes: let my people go, y^e they maye serue me, els wyll I at this tyme sende all my plagues in to thine hert, & vpon thy seruantes & vpon thy people: that thou mayest knowe, y^e there is none like me in all landes. For I will now stretch out my hande, & smyte the & thy people wth pestilence, so y^e thou shalt be roted out from the earth. Yet haue I stered y^e vp for this cause, euen to shew my power vpon y^e, and that my name might be declared in all landes.

Thou holdest my people yet, & wilt not let them go, beholde, tomorrow aboute this tyme wyll I cause a mightie greate hayle to rayne, soch as hath not bene in the lande of Egypte, since the tyme that it was grouded, hicher to. And now sende thou, & saue thy catell, & all y^e thou hast in the felde: for all men & catell that shalbe founde in the felde, & not brought in to the houses, yf the hayle fall vpon them, they shall dye. Now who so feared the worde of the LORD amonge Pharaos seruantes, caused his seruantes & catell to flye in to the houses: but loke whose hertes regarded not the worde of y^e LORD, lest their seruantes and catell in the felde.

Then sayde the LORD vnto Moses: Stretch out thy hande toward heauen, that it maye hayle vpon all the lande of Egypte, vpon men, vpon catell, & vpon all herbes of the felde in the lande of Egypte. So Moses stretched out his staff toward heauen, and the LORD caused it to thonder & hayle, so y^e the fyre ranne alonge vpon the earth. So of Egypte, sens the tyme that there were people therein. And the hayle smote the whole lande of Egypte, all that was vpon y^e felde, both men & catell, & smote all the herbes vpon the felde, & brake all the trees vpon y^e felde, save onely in the lande of Gosen, where the childre of Israel were, there it hayled not. Then sent Pharaos & called for Moses & Aaron, & sayde vnto them: Now haue I synned, & LORD is righteous, but I & my people are vngodly. Yet praye ye vnto the LORD, that the thonder & hayle of God maye cease, then wyl I let you go, that ye shal tary here no longer. Moses sayde vnto him: Whan I am come out of the cite, I wyl stretch out myne handes vnto the LORD, so shal the thonder cease, & there shal be no more hayle: that thou mayest knowe, that the earth is the LORDES. But I knowe, y^e both thou & thy seruantes feare not yet the LORD God. Thus the flax and the barlye were smytten: for the barlye was shot vp, & y^e flax was boulded: but the wheate and y^e rye were not smytten, for they were late sowne.

So Moses wente from Pharaos out of y^e cite, & stretched out his handes vnto y^e LORD. And y^e thonder & the hayle ceased, & the rayne dropped not vpoⁿ the earth. But whā Pharaos sawe y^e the rayne & thonder & hayle ceased, he synned agayne, and hardened his hert, he & his seruantes. So Pharaos hert was hardened, y^e he let not the childre of Israel go, eue as the LORD had sayde by Moses.

The X. Chapter.

And the LORD said vnto Moses: Go in vnto Pharaos, for I haue hardened his hert & the hertes of his seruantes, y^e I might do these my tokens amonge the, & that thou mightest shewe it in the eares of thy children & of thy childrens children, what I haue done in Egypte, and how I haue shewed my tokens amonge the, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORD.

So Moses & Aaron wente in vnto Pharaos, & spake vnto him: Thus sayeth y^e LORD God of the Hebrewes: How longe refusest thou to submyt thy self vnto me, to let my people go, y^e they maye serue me? If thou wilt not let my people go, beholde, tomorrow wyl I cause gresheppers to come vpon all places, y^e they maye couer the lande, so y^e the lande can not be sene, & they shal eat vp y^e is left yon & was deliuered fro^m the hayle: & shal rate vp all y^e grene trees vpon the felde, & shal fyll thy house, all y^e seruantes houses, & all the Egyptians houses: soch as y^e fathers & y^e fathers fathers haue not sene, sens the tyme y^e they were vpon earth vnto this daye. And he turned him, & wente out from Pharaos. Then saide Pharaos seruantes vnto him: How longe shall we be snared after this maner? Let the men go, that they maye serue y^e LORD their God. Knowest thou not yet, y^e Egypte is destroyed? Moses & Aaron were brought agayne to Pharaos, which saide vnto them: So y^e waye, & serue y^e LORD y^e God. But who are they y^e shall go? Moses sayde: We wil go wth yonge & olde, wth sonnes and daughters, with shepe and oxen: for we haue a feast of the LORD. He sayde vnto the: Let it be so, the LORD be with you: Shulde I let you go & y^e childre also? loke that ye haue not some myschefe in hande. Not so, but go ye that are men, and serue the LORD, for that was youre desyre. And they thrust them out from Pharaos.

The saide y^e LORD vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hande ouer y^e lande of Egypte, for the gresheppers, y^e they maye come vpoⁿ y^e lande of Egypte, & eat vp all the herbes in the lande, w^{ch} all y^e escaped the hayle. Moses stretched out his staffe ouer y^e lande of Egypte, & the LORD brought an east wynde in to the lande all y^e daye & all y^e night, & in the mornynge, the east wynde brought the gresheppers. And they came ouer the whole lande of Egypte, and lighted in all places of Egypte, so exceeding many, that before tyme there were neuer soch, neither shalbe here after: for they couered the lande, and made it darcke. And they ate vp all the herbes in y^e lande, & all the frutes vpon the trees which remayned from y^e hayle, & left no grene thinge behinde in the trees & herbes vpon the felde in all the lande of Egypte.

Then Pharaos called for Moses & Aaron in all y^e haist, & saide: I haue synned against the LORD y^e God, & agaynst you: forgene me my synne this once also, & pray the LORD y^e God, y^e he maye take awaye fro me this death onely. And he wete out from Pharaos, & prayed vnto the LORD. The LORD turned a marvelous stroke west wynde, and toke vp the gresheppers, & cast them in to the red see, so that there was not one left in all the quarters of Egypte. But the LORD hardened Pharaos hert, that he let not the childre of Israel go. The LORD sayde vnto Moses: Stretch out thine hande toward heauen, that it be so darcke in the lande of Egypte, y^e it maye be felt. And Moses stretched out his hande toward heauen, the was there a thicke darcknesse in all the lande of Egypte thre dayes, so y^e in thre dayes no man Sawe another, nor rose vp from þe place where he was. But to the childre of Israel there was light in their dwellinges. Then pharao called for Moses, and sayde: Go yo^r waye and serue the LORDE: onely leave yo^r shepe and yo^r oxen here: let yo^r childre go with you also. Moses sayde: Thou must geue vs offringes and brientofferynges, that we maye do sacrifice vnto the LORDE & God.oure catell shal go with vs, and there shal not one hooft be left behynde: for we must take therof for the seruyce of the LORDE & God. Moreover we knowe not wherewithall we shal serue þe LORDE, tyll we come thither. But the LORDE hardened pharaos hert, & he wolde not let them go. And pharao sayde vnto him: Get the hence from me, and bewarre, that thou come nomore in my sight: for loke what daie so ever thou comest in my sight, thou shalt dye. Moses answered: Euen as thou hast sayde, I wil come nomore in thy sight. The XI. Chapter.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: I wil yet brynge a plage vpon pharao and Egipre: after þe shal he let you go from hence, and shal not onely let all go, but also dryue you hance. Therefore saye now vnto the people, & everyman borrowe of his neighbour, and every woman of his neighbouresse, Jewels of syluer and golde: for the LORDE shal geue the people faub in the sight of þe Egipcians. And Moses was a very greete man in the lande of Egipre, in y^e sight of pharaos seruantes, and in the sight of the people.

And Moses sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: At mydnight wil I go out in the lande of Egipre, and all þe first borne in the lande of Egipre shal dye: from pharaos first sonne (þe sitteth vpon his seate) vnto the first sonne of the mayde seruaunte which is behynde y^e myll: and all the first borne amonge the catell: and there shal be a greete crie in all the lande of Egipre, such as neuer was, ner shal be. But amonge all the childre of Israel there shall not a dogge quatche his tonge, from men vnto catell, & ye maye knowe, how y^e the LORDE hath put a differēce betwixte Egipre and Israel. The shal all these thy seruantes come downe vnto me, and sal at my fote, and saye: Get the out, thou and all the people that are vnder the. After that wil I departe. And he wote fið pharao to a wroth full displeasure. The LORDE saide vnto Moses: pharao herkeneth not vnto you, y^e many wōders maye be done in y^e lāde of Egipre. And Moses and Aaron dyd all these wōders before pharao: but y^e LORDE hardened his hert, y^e he wolde not let þe childre of Israel go out of his lande.

The XII. Chapter.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses and Aaron in the lande of Egipre: This moneth shal be with you þe first moneth, and at it ye shall begynne the monethes of the yeare. Speake ye vnto all the congregacion of Israel, and saye: Open þe tenth daye of this moneth let every one take a lābe (or a kydd) where a household is, to every house a lābe. But yf the household be to few for a lambe, the let him and his neyghbo^r & is next vnto his house, take it accordinge to the nombre of y^e soules, and counte to the lambe, what every man maye eat. But it shal be a lambe without blemish, a male, and of a yeare olde. From amonge the lambes and goates shal ye take it.

And ye shall kepe it vnto þe fourtene daye of the moneth. And every man of the congregacion of Israel shal slaye it aboute the eueninge. And they shal take of his blode, and stryke it on both the syde postes of the dore, and on the vpperdore post of the house, that they eat it in. And so shal they eat flesch þe same night, roasted at the fyre, and unleuened bred, and shal eat it with sorwe sawse. Ye shal not eat it rawe, ner sobben with water, but onely roasted at the fyre, his heade with his fete and percrenaunce. And ye shal leave nothinge of it ouer vntyll the mornynge: but yf eny thinge be left ouer vntyll the mornynge, ye shal burne it with fyre.

Of this maner shal ye eat it: Ye shal be tydyed aboute youre loynes, and haue youre shues vpon youre fete, and staves in y^e handes, and ye shal eat it with haist: for it is þe LORDES passeouer. For in the same nyght wil I go thorow the lande of Egipre, and smyte all the first borne in the lande of Egipre, from men vnto catell, and vpon all the goddes of Egipre wyll I do execucion. Euen I the LORDE. And the blode shal be youre token, vpon the houses wherein ye are: & when I se the blode, I maye passe over, and that the plage happen not vnto you, to destroye you, when I smyte the lande of Egipre.

The ij. booke of Moses.

C And this daye shall ye haue for a remembrance, and ye shall kepe it holy for a feast vnto the LORD, ye & all youre posterities, for a perpetuall custome. Seven dayes shall ye eate vneleuended bred: namely, vpon the first daie shal ye leaue of with leuended bred in youre houses. Who so euer eateth leuended bred from the first daye vnto 3 seuenth that soule shall be roted out from Israel. The first daye shall be called holy amonge you, and the seuenth also. No maner of worke shall ye do therein, save what belongeth to the meate for all maner of soules, that onely maye ye do for you. And kepe you to leuended bred.

For enen vpon that same daye wil I brynge youre armies out of the lande of Egypte, therfore shall ye and all youre posterities kepe this daye for a perpetuall custome. Vpon the fourtene daye of the first moneth, at euen, shall ye eate vneleuended bred, vnto the one and twentye daye of the moneth, at enen: so that there be no leuended bred founde in youre houses seven dayes. For who so euer eateth leuended bred, that soule shall be roted out from the congregacion of Israel, whether it be a straunger or borne in the lande. Therfore eate no leuended bred, but onely vneleuended bred in all youre dwellynge.

D And Moses called all the Elders of Israel, and sayde vnto them: Chose out, and take to euery household a shepe, and kylle passeouer vnto the LORD: and take a bunch of yfope, and dyppe it in the bloude in the basen, and stryke it vpon the vpperposte and vpon the two syde postes, and none of you go out at the dore of his house vntyll 3 mornynge, for the LORD wyll go aboute and plage the Egyptians. And whan he seyth the bloude vpon the vpperposte, and vpon the two syde postes, he wyl passe over by the dore, and not suffice the destroyer to come in to youre houses to plage. Therfore kepe this custome for the and thy children for euer.

And whan ye be come into 3 lande that the LORD shal geue you, (as he hath sayde) then kepe this seruyce.* And whan youre children saye vnto you: What seruyce is this, that ye haue? Ye shal saye: It is the sacrifice of the LORDES passeouer, which passed over by the children of Israel in Egypte, whan he plagued the Egyptians, and saved oure houses. Then the people bowed themselves, and worshipped. And the children of Israel wente and dyd, as the LORD had

And at mydnight the LORD smote all the firstborne in the lande of Egypte: from Pharaos first sonne (which sat vpon his seate) vntyll the first sonne of the prisoner that was in the prison, and all the firstborne of the cattell. Then Pharaos arose 3 same night, and all his seruantes, and all the Egyptians, & there was a greete crye in Egypte: for there was no house wherin there was not one deed.

And he called for Moses and Aaron in 3 night, and sayde: Get you vp, and departe out fro my people, ye and the children of Israel: go youre waye, and serue the LORD, as ye haue sayde: and take youre shepe and youre oren with you, * as ye haue sayde, and departe, and blesse me also. And the Egyptians were scarce vpon the people, to dryue them haistely out of the lande, for they said: we are all but deed.

And the people toke the rawe dowe, before it was leuended (for their foode) bounde in their clothes vpon their shulders. And the children of Israel had done * as Moses sayde, and borrowed Jewels of syluer and golde, and clothes of the Egyptians: the LORD also had geuen the people fauoure in the sight of the Egyptians, that they lent them, and so they spoyled the Egyptians.

Thus 3 children of Israel * & te their journey from Ramses to Suchoth, * sixe hundred thousande men of soie, besyde childre. There wente with them also moch comen people, and shepe, and oxen, and exceedinge many cattell.

And of the rawe dowe that they brought out of Egypte, they baked vneleuended cakes: for it was not leuended, in so moch as they were thrust out of Egypte, and coude not tarry: neither had they prepared them any other meate.

The tyme 3 the children of Israel dwelt in Egypte, is foure hundred and thirtie yeres. Whan the same were ended, the whole hoost of the LORD wente out of the lande of Egypte in one daye. Therfore shall this night be kepte vnto the LORD, because he brought them out of the lande of Egypte: And the children of Israel shall kepe it vnto the LORD, they and their posterities.

And the LORD sayde vnto Moses and Aaron: This is the maner of the keepynge of passeouer. There shal no straunger eate of it. But who so is a bought seruaunt let him be circumcysed, & he shal eate therof. A straun-

And this shal be a signe vnto the in thine hande, and a token to thinke vpon before thine eyes, how that the LORDE brought vs out of Egypte with a mightie hande.

Therefore led he the people aboute, even the waye thorow the wyldernes by & reed see. And the childre of Israel wente harnessed out of the londe of Egypte. And Moses toke Josephs bones with him, for he toke an oath of the childre of Israel, and sayde: God wyll surely vset you, therefore cary awaye my bones with you from hence.

So they toke their iourney fro Suchoth, & pitched their tentes in Ethā in & edge of the wildernes. His chosen captaynes are drowned in the reed see, γ depe hath covered them: they fell to the grounde as a stone.

Thy right hande (O LORDE) is glorious in power: thy right hãde (O LORDE) hath smytten the enemies.

And with thy greace glory thou hast destroyed thine aduersaries: thou sentest out γ wrath, & it consumed them, euen as stubble.

In the breth of thy wrath the waters fell together, the floudes wente vpon a heape: The depes plomped together in γ myddest of the see.

The enemy thought: I will folowe vpon them, and ouertake them, and denyde γ spoyle, and coole my mynde vpon them.

I wil drawe out my swerde, and my hande shal destroye them.

Thou blewest with thy wynde, the see cornered them, and they sancke downe as leed in the mightie waters.

And the children of Israel dyd so, and gathered some more, some lesse. But whan it was measured out with the Gomer, he that gathered moch, had not the more: and he that gathered litle, wanted nothinge, but every one gathered for himself, as moch as he ate. And Moses sayde vnto them: Let no man leaue ought therof vntyll the mornynge. But they harkened not vnto Moses. And some left of it vntill the mornynge. Then waxed it full of wormes and stanke. And Moses was angrie at them.

And every mornynge they gathered for them selues, as moch as every one ate: but as soone as it was whote of the Sonne, it melted awaye. And vpon the sixte daye they gathered twyse as moch of bried, two Gomers for one. And all the rulers of the congregacion came in, and tolde Moses. And he sayde vnto them: This is it, that the LORD hath sayde: Tomorrow is the Sabbath of the holy rest of the LORD: loke what ye wil bake, that bake: and what ye wyl seeth, that seeth, and that remayneth ouer, let it remayne, & it maye be kepte vntyll the mornynge. And they let it remayne tyll the morow, as Moses commaunded. Then stanke it net, nether was there eny worme therein. The sayde Moses: Eate that to daye, for to daye is the Sabbath of the LORD, to daye shall ye fynde none in the felde. Sixe dayes shall ye gather it, but the seventh daye is the Sabbath, wher in there shall be none.

But vpon the seventh daye there wente out some of the people to gather, and founde nothinge. Then sayde the LORD vnto Moses: How longe refuse ye to kepe my commaundementes and lawes? Beholde, the LORD hath geuen you the Sabbath, therefore vpon the sixte daye he geueth you bried for two dayes: therefore let every man now byde at home, and no man go forth of his place vpon the seventh daye.

And whā Jethro y priest in Madian Moses father in lawe harde of all y yce had done wth Moses and his people of Israel, how y the LORDE had broughed Israel out of Egipte, he toke Zippora Moses wife, whom he had sent backe, with her two sonnes. The one was called Gerson, for he saide: I am become a straunger in a straunge londe. And the other was called Eliafer, for he sayde: The God of my fathers hath bene my helpe, and hath delyuered me from pharaos swerde.

Then came Aaron and all the elders of Israel to eate bread with Moses father in lawe before God.

E On the next morrow sat Moses to iudge the people, and the people stode rounde aboute Moses from the morninge vntyll y^e even. But when his father in lawe sawe all that he dyd with the people, he sayde: What is this, that thou doest with the people? Wherefore syttest thou alone, and all the people stonde rounde aboute from the morninge vntyll the even? Moses answered him: The people come to me, & are councell at God: for when they haue any thinge to do, they come vnto me, that I maye iudge betwixte every one & his neighbour, and shewe them the statutes of God, and his lawes.

His father in lawe sayde vnto him: It is not well that thou doest. Thou weeriest thy self, and the people that is with the. This busynesse is to sore for the, thou canst not perfourme it alone. But hearken vnto my voyce, I will geue thee counsell, and God shall be with the. Be thou vnto the people to Godwarde, and brynge the causes before God, and prouide them with statutes and lawes, that thou mayest sheweth the waie wherein they shulde walke, and the workes that they shulde do.

D But loke out amonge all the people, for honest men, that feare God, such as are true, & hate couetousnes: make these rulers over them, some over thousandes, over hundredes, over fiftie, and over ten, that they maye allwaye iudge the people. But where there is any greate matter, that they brynge the same vnto the, and iudge the small causes them selues: so shall it be lighter for the, yf they beare the burthen with the. If thou shalt do this, then mayest thou endure the thinge that God chargeth the withall, and all this people maye go peaceably vnto their place.

Num. 11. d Moses hearkened vnto the voyce of his father in lawe, and dyd all that he sayde. The XIX. Chapter.

In the thirde moneth after that the children of Israel were gone out of the londe of Egypte, they came the same daye into the wyldernes of Sinai (for they were departed from Raphidim, and wolde into the wyldernes of Sinai) and there they pitched in the wyldernes ouer against the mounte. And Moses wente vp vnto God.

And the LORDE called vnto him out of the mount, and sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the house of Jacob, and tell the children of Israel: Ye haue sene what I haue done vnto the Egipcians, and how I haue broue you vpon Eagles wynges, & brought you vnto my self. If ye wyll hearken now vnto my voyce, and kepe my couenaunt, ye shall be myne owne before all people: for the whole earth is myne: and ye shall be vnto me a priestly kingdome, and an holy people. These are the wordes that thou shalt saye vnto the children of Israel.

Moses came and called for the elders of the people, and layed before them all these wordes, that the LORDE had commaunded. And all the people answered together, and sayde: All that the LORDE hath sayde, wyll we do.

And Moses tolde the wordes of the people vnto the LORDE agayne. And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, I wyll come vnto the in a thicke cloude, that the people maye heare my wordes, which I speake vnto the, and beleue the for euer. And Moses shewed the wordes of the people vnto the LORDE.

The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Go vnto the people, and sanctifie the to daye and tomorrow, for they maye wash their clothes, and be ready agaynst the thirde daye: for vpon the thirde daye shall the LORDE come downe vpon mount Sinai before all the people. And set markes rounde aboute the people, and saye vnto them: Bewaire, that ye go not vp in to y^e mount, ner touch y^e border of it. For who so ever toucheth y^e mount, shall dye y^e death. There shall no hande touch it, but he shall either be stoned, or shot therewith: whether it be beest or man, it shall not lyue. When the horne tleneth, then shall they come vp vnto the mounte.

The XXIII. Chapter.

When he sayde vnto Moses: Come vp vnto the LORD thou and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and the seuentie elders of Israel, and worshipec a farre off. But let Moses onely come nye vnto the LORD, and let not them come nye, and let not the people also come vp with him.

Moses came and tolde the people all the wordes of the LORD, and all the lawes. Then

The ij. boke of Moses.

Exo. 19. b answered all the people with one voyce, and sayde: All þe wordes that the LORDE hath sayde, wyl we do.

B Then wrote Moses all the wordes of þe LORDE, & gat him vp by tymes in the mornynge, & buylde an altare vnder þe mount with twelue pilers, acordinge to the twelue trybes of Israel: & sent twelue yonge men of the children of Israel, to offre burnt offerynges, and peace offerynges thereon of bullockes vnto the LORDE.

Exo. 19. c And Moses toke the half parte of the bloude, and put it in a basen, the other half sprentled he vpon the altare: & toke the boke of þe couenaunt, & cried in the eares of the people. And whan they had sayde: All þe LORDE hath sayde, wil we do, & herken vnto him: Moses toke the bloude, & sprentled it vpon the people, & sayde: Beholde, this is þe bloude of the couenaunt that the LORDE maketh wþ you vpon all these wordes.

Exo. 19. d Then wente Moses & Aaron, Nadab & Abihu, & the seuentye elders of Israel vp, & sawe þe God of Israel. Vnder his feet it was like a stone worke of Saphyre, & as the fashion of heaue, whā it is cleare, & he put not his hāde vpo the pryncipall of Israel. And whan they had sene God, they ate & dronke.

Exo. 31. d And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Come vp vnto me vpon the mount, & remayne there, þe I maye geue the tables of stone, & þe lawe & commaundementes þe I haue wrytten, which thou shalt teach the. Then Moses gat him vp & his mynister Josua, & wente vp into the mount of God, & sayde vnto the elders: Tary ye here, tyll we come to you agayne: beholde, Aaron and Hur are with you, yf eny mā haue a matter to do, let him brynge it vnto them.

Exo. 34. d Now whā Moses came vp into y^e mount, a cloude covered y^e mount: & the glory of þe LORDE abode vpon mount Sinai, & covered it wþ the cloude sixe dayes, & vpon the seuenth daye he called Moses out of y^e cloude. And y^e fashion of y^e glory of þe LORDE was like a cōsumynge fyre vpon the toppe of y^e mount in the sight of the children of Israel. And Moses wente in to the myddest of the cloude, and ascēded vp in to the mount, and abode vpon the mount fortye dayes & fourtye nightes.

The XXV. Chapter.

Exo. 35. a And þe LORDE talked wþ Moses & sayde: Speake vnto y^e childre of Israel, þe they geue me an heue offerynge, & take the some of every man, that hath a fre wyllynge hert herto. And this is the heue-

Onix stones and set stones for the ouerbody cote and for the brest-lappe.

And they shall make me a Sanctuary, that I maie dwell amonge them. Like as I shal shewe y^e a patrone of the Habitacon, and of all the ornaments therof, so shall ye make it.

Exo. 37. a Make an Arke of Syre tre two cubytes & a half longe, a cubyte & a half brode, and a cubyte & an half hye: this shalt thou ouerleye with pure golde within and without, & make an hye vpo it a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and cast foure rynges of golde, & put them in the foure corners of it, so that two rynges be vpon the one syde, and two vpon the other syde. And make stauess of Syre tre, and ouerlaye them with golde, and put them in the rynges alonge by the sydes of the Arke, to beare it withall: and they shal abyde styll in the rynges, & not be takē out. And in y^e Arke thou shalt laye the wytnesse, that I wyl gene the. Thou shalt make a Mercysate also of pure golde, two cubytes and a half longe, and a cubyte & a half brode.

And thou shalt make two Cherubyns of beaten golde vpo both y^e endes of the Mercysate, þe the one Cherub maye be vpon the one ende, & the other vpon the other ende, & so to be two Cherubyns vpon the endes of the Mercysate. And the Cherubyns shall sprede out their wynges ouer an hye, þe they maye couer y^e Mercysate wþ their wynges: & þe eicher of their faces maye be right ouer one agaynst another, and their faces shal looke vnto the Mercysate.

Num. 7. j And thou shalt set y^e Mercysate aboue vpon the Arke. And in the Arke thou shalt laye the wytnesse, þe I shal gene the. From y^e place wyll I testifie vnto y^e, and talke with the, namely, from y^e Mercysate (betwixte the two Cherubyns) which is vpon the Arke of wytnesse, of all that I wyl comaunde y^e vnto the childre of Israel.

Exo. 37. b Thou shalt make a table also of Syre tre, two cubites longe, and one cubyte brode, and a cubyte and a half hye, and ouerlaye it with pure golde, and make a crowne of golde rounde aboute it, and an whope of an hāde brede hye, and a crowne of golde vnto y^e whope rounde aboute.

The ij. booke of Moses.

And vnto it thou shalt make foure rynges of golde, on the foure corners in the foure fete of it: harde vnder the whope shall þe rynges be, to put in staues and to beare the table wth all: and thou shalt make the staues of fyre tre, & ouerlaye them with golde, & the table maye be borne therewith.

Morouer thou shalt make a candilsticke of fyne beaten golde, where vpon shall be the shaft with braunches, cuppes, knoppes, and floures. Sixe braunches shall proceade out of the sydes of the candilsticke, out of euery syde thre braunches. Euery braunch shal haue thre cuppes, (like allmondes) thre knoppes, and thre floures. These shalbe the sixe braunches of the candilsticke. But the shaft of the candilsticke it self shal haue foure cuppes, knoppes and floures, and allwaie a knoppe vnder two braunches, of the sixe that proceade out of the candilsticke. For both the knoppes and braunches shall proceade out of the shaft, all one pece of fyne beaten golde.

Heb. 9. 2 And thou shalt make seuen lampes abo-Acto 7. f nethere on, that they maye geue light one ouer agaynst another, and snuffers and out quenchers of pure golde. Out of an hundrieth pounce weight of pure golde shalt thou make it, with all this apparell. And se that thou make it after the patrone that thou hast sene in the mount.

The XXVI. Chapter.

In the habitacion shalt thou make of ten curteynes, of whyte twyned syl-ke, of yalowe sylke, of scarlet and purple. Cherubymes shalt thou make thereon of broderd worke. The length of one curteyne shalbe eight and twentye cubytes y^e bredth foure cubytes: and all the ten shalbe like, and shalbe coupled fyue and fyue together, one vnto the other. And thou shalt make loupes of yalowe sylke by the edge of euery curteyne, where they shalbe coupled together, that there maye be euer two and two fastened together vpon their edges: fiftie loupes vpon euery curteyne, that one maye fasten the other together. And thou shalt make fiftie buttons of golde, wherewith the curteynes maye be coupled together, one to the other, that it maye be one couerynge.

Exo. 26. c Then shalt thou make a couerynge also of goat tes heyer for a tente ouer the habitacion, of eleuen curteynes. The length of one curteyne shalbe thirtie cubytes, the bredth foure cubytes. And all the eleuen shalbe alike greate: fyue shalt thou couple together by the sel-ues, & sixe also by them selues, & thou mayest dubbe the sixte curteyne in the fore front of the Tabernacle. And vpon euery curteyne thou shalt make fiftie loupes vpon the edges of them, that they maye be coupled together by the edges. And fiftie buttons of brasse shalt thou make, and put the buttons into the loupes, that the tent maye be coupled together, and be one couerynge.

As for the remnaunt of the curteynes of the tente, thou shalt let the halfe parte hange ouer behynde y^e tete, vpon both the sydes a cubyte longe, & the resydue maye be vpon the sydes of the Tabernacle, & couer it vpon both the sydes.

Besydes this couerynge thou shalt make a couerynge of reed strynges of rammes.
And aboue this a couerynge of doo strynges.

Thou shalt make bordes also for the habi-tacion, of fyre tre, which shall stonde: one borde shalbe ten cubytes longe, & a cubyte & a half brode. Two fere shal one borde haue, that one maye be set by the other.

Thus shalt thou make all the bordes for þe Tabernacle: Twentye of them shal stonde towards the south, which shal haue fourtye sockets of syluer vnder them, two sockets vnder euery borde for his two fere.

Likewyse vpon the other syde towards the north there shall stonde twentye bordes also, and fourtye sockets of syluer, two sockets vnder euery borde.

But behynde the habitacion towards þe west thou shalt make sixe bordes, and two bordes mo for the two corners of the habi-tacion, that every one of them both maye be coupled from vnder vp with his corner borde, and aboue vpon the heade to come eauen together with a clape: so that there be eight bordes with their syluer sockets, wher of there shalbe sixtene, two vnder euery borde.

And thou shalt make barres of fyre tre, 12
fyue for the bordes vpon the one syde of the Tabernacle, and fyue for the bordes vpon the other syde of the Tabernacle, and fyue for the bordes behynde y^e Tabernacle towarde the west. And the barres shalt thou shute thorow y^e myddest of the bordes, and fastenē all together from y^e one corner to y^e other.
And thou shalt ouerlaye the bordes wth golde, and make their rynges of golde, that the barres maye be put therein. And the barres shalt thou ouerlaye with golde, and so shalt thou set vp the Tabernacle, accordinge to þe fashion as thou hast sene vpon þe mount.

S And thou shalt make a vayle of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke. And Cherubyns shalt thou make thereon of broderd worke, and shalt hange it vpon foure pilers of fyre tre which are overlayed with golde, hauynge knoppes of golde, and foure sockettes of syluer. And the vayle shalt thou fester with buttons, and set the Arke of wytnesse within the vayle, that it maye be vnto you a difference betwixte the holy and the Most holy.

G And thou shalt set the Mercyseate vpon the Arke of wytnesse in the Most holy. But set the table without the vayle, and the candlestick euer agaynst þe table vpon þe south syde of the Tabernacle, that the table maie stonde on the north syde.

And in the dore of the Tabernacle thou shalt make an hanginge, of yalow sylke, purple, scarlet and whyte twyned sylke. And for the same hanginge thou shalt make fyue pilers of fyre tre, overlayed with golde, with knoppes of golde. And shalt cast fyue sockettes of brasse for them.

The XXVII. Chapter.

Eze. 42. d

And thou shalt make an altare of fyre tre, fyue cubytes longe & brode, & it maye be foure square, & thre cubytes hye: thou shalt make hornes vpon the foure corners of it, & shalt ouerlaye it with brasse. Make ashpanes, shouels, basens, fleshokes, colepanes. All þe apparell therof shalt thou make of brasse. Thou shalt make a gredyon also like a nette, of brasse, & foure brasen rynges vpon the foure corners of it: so ouer vnder vp aboute the altare shalt thou make it, so that the gredyon reach vnto þe myddest of the altare. Thou shalt make staves also for the altare, of fyre tre, overlayed with golde, and shalt put the staves in the rynges, that the staves maye be on both the sydes of þe altare, to beare it withall. And holowe with bordes shalt thou make it, like as it is shewed the in the mount.

B And to þe habitacion thou shalt make a courte, an hanginge of whyte twyned sylke: vpon þe one syde an C. cubytes longe toward the south, & xx. pilers vpon xx. brasen sockettes, & the knoppes & their whopes of syluer. Likewyse vpon þe north syde there shal be an hanginge of an C. cubytes longe, twenty pilers vpon twenty brasen sockettes, and their knoppes & their whopes of syluer.

But vpon the west syde the bredth of þe courte shal haue an hanginge of fyfte cubi-tes longe, & ten pilers vpon ten sockettes. Vpon the east syde also shal the bredth of the courte haue fyfte cubytes, so that the hanginge haue vpon one syde fyftene cubites, and thre pilers vpon thre sockettes: And vpon þe other syde fyftene cubytes also, and thre pilers vpon thre sockettes.

And in the courte gate there shalbe an hanginge twenty cubytes brede, of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke, wrought with needle worke, and foure pilers vpon their foure sockettes. All the pilers rounde aboute the courte shal haue syluer whopes, & syluer knoppes, & sockettes of brasse. And the length of þe courte shal be an hundred cubytes, the bredth fyfte cubytes, the heygth fyue cubytes, of whyte twyned sylke and þe sockettes therof shalbe of brasse. All þe vessels also of the habitacion to all maner seruyce, and all the nales of it, and all the nales of the courte shalbe of brasse.

Commaunde þe children of Israel, þe they bringe vnto þe most cleare & pure oyle olue beaten, to geue lighte, & it maye allwaye be put in the lāpes in the Tabernacle of wytnesse without the vayle, that hangeth before the wytnesse. And Aaron and his sonnes shal dresse it from the euenynge vntyll þe morninge before the LORDE. This shalbe vnto you a perpetuall custome for youre posterities amonge the children of Israel. Leu. 24.

The XXVIII. Chapter.

And thou shalt take vnto the Aaron thy brother and his sonnes fro amonge the childre of Israel, that he maye be my priest: namely Aaron & his sonnes Nadab, Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar: & thou shalt make holy clothes for Aaron & his brother, honorable and glorious, & shalt speake vnto all them that are wise of hert, whom I haue fylled with the sperte of wysdome, that they make garmentes to Aaron for his consecration, that he maye be my priest.

These are þe garmentes which they shal make: a brestlappe, an ouerbody cote, a tunicle, an albe, a myter and a girdell. Thus shal they make holy garmentes for þe brother Aaron and his sonnes, that he maye be my priest. They shal take thereto golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte sylke.

The ouerbody cote shal they make of golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke of broderd worke, that it maye be festered together vpon both the sydes by þe edges therof. And his gyrdell vpon it shal be of þe same workmanship & stuffe, even of golde yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke. And thou shalt make two Onix stones, and graue in them the names of the children of Israel. Syxe names vpon the one stone, and the sixe other names vpon the other stone accordinge to the order of their age. This shalt thou do by the stonegrauers that graue signettes, so that 3 stones with the names of the children of Israel to be set rounde aboute with golde: and thou shalt put them vpon the two shulders of the ouerbody cote, that they maye be stones of remembraunce for the children of Israel, that Aaron maye beare their names vpon both his shulders before the LORDE for a remembraunce.

C Thou shalt make hokes of golde also, and two wretched cheynes of pure golde, and shalt fasten them vnto the hokes.

The brestlappe of iudgment shalt thou make of broderd worke, euen after the worke of the ouerbody cote: of golde, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke. Soure square shall it be and dubble, an hande bredth longe, and an hande bredth brode. And thou shalt fill it with soure rowes full of stones. Let the first rowe be a Sardis, a Topas, and a Smaragde. The seconde: a Ruby, a Saphyre, and a Dyamonde. The thirde: a Ligurias, an Achatt, and an Amethyst. The fourth: a Turcas, an Onix, and a Jaspis. In golde shall they be sett in all the rowes, and shal stonde accordinge to 3 twolue names of the children of Israel, grauen of the stonegrauers, every one with his name accordinge to the twolue trybes.

D And vpon the brestlappe thou shalt make wretched cheynes by 3 corners of pure golde, and two golde rynges, so, that thou faste the same two rynges vnto two edges of the brestlappe, and put the two wretched cheynes of golde in the same two rynges, that are in two edges of the brestlappe. But the two endes of 3 two wretched cheynes shalt thou fasten in the two hokes vpon the ouerbody cote one ouer agaynst another.

E And thou shalt make two other rynges of golde, and fasten them vnto 3 other two edges of 3 brestlappe, namely to 3 borders therof, wherwith it maye hange on the insyde vpon the ouerbody cote. And yet shalt thou make two rynges of golde, and fasten them vpon the two edges beneath to the ouerbody cote, vpon the outsyde one ouer agaynst another, where the ouerbody cote ioyneth together. And the brestlappe shall be fastened by his rynges vnto the rynges of the ouerbody cote with a yalow lace, that it maye lye close vpon the ouerbody cote, and that the brestlappe be not losed from the ouerbody cote.

Thus shall Aaron beare the names of the children of Israel in 3 brestlappe of iudgment vpon his hert, whan he goeth into the Sanctuary, for a remembraunce before the LORDE allwaye. And in the brestlappe of iudgment thou shalt put light and perfectnesse, that they be vpon Aarons hert, whan he goeth in before the LORDE, and that he maye beare the iudgment of the children of Israel vpon his hert before the LORDE allwaye.

Thou shalt make the tuncle also to the ouerbody cote all of yalow sylke, and aboue in the myddest there shal be an hole, and a bonde folden together rounde aboute the hole, that it rente not. And beneth vpon the hemme thou shalt make pomgranates of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple rounde aboute, and belles of golde betwixte the same rounde aboute: that there be euer a golden bell and a pomgranate, a golden bell and a pomgranate rounde aboute the hemme of the same tuncle. And Aaron shall haue it vpon him whan he mynistrereth, that the soude therof maye be herde, whan he goeth out and in at the Sanctuary before the LORDE, that he dye not.

Thou shalt make a foreheade plate also of pure golde, and graue therein (after the workmanship of the stone grauer): the holyness of the LORDE, with a yalow lace shalt thou fasten it vnto the fore front of the mytter vpon Aarons foreheade, 3 Aaron maye so beare 3 synne of the holy thinges, which the childre of Israel halowe in all their gittes and Sanctuary. And it shall be allwaye vpon his foreheade, that he maye reconcylo them before the LORDE.

Thou shalt make an albe also of whyte sylke, and a myter of whyte sylke, and a gyrdle of needle worke.

And for Aarons sonnes thou shalt make cotes, gyrdles and bonetes, honorable and glorious, and shalt put them vpon thy brother Aaron and his sonnes, and shalt anoynte them, and fyll their handes, and consecrate them, that they maye be my prestes. And thou shalt make them linnen breeches, to couer the flesh of their premities, from the loynes vnto the thyes. And Aaron and his sonnes shall haue them on, whan they go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or go vnto the altare to mynister in the holy, that they beare not their synne, and dye. This

The XXIX. Chapter.

L This is it also, that thou shalt do unto them, that they may be consecrated priests unto me. Take a yonge bullocke, and two rammes without blemish, unleuended bried, & unleuended cakes myrte w oyle, and wafers of swete bried tempered w oyle: Of wheate flour shalt thou make them all, and put them in a maunde, & brynge them in the maunde, with the bullocke & two rammes.

And thou shalt brynge Aaron & his sonnes vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of witnessse, & wash them w water, & take the garments, and put vpon Aaron the albe and the tuncyle, & the ouer body cote, & the brest-lappeto y ouer body cote, & shalt gyde him on the out syde vpon the ouer body cote, and set the myter vpon his heade, and the holy crowne vpon the myter: and shalt take the anoyntinge oyle, and poure it vpon his heade, and anoynte him.

Thou shalt brynge forth his sonnes also, & put the albes vpon them, and gyde both Aaron & them with gyddles, & set the bonnettes vpon their heades, that they maye haue the priesthode for a perpetuall custome.

And thou shalt fyll the handes of Aaron and his sonnes, and brynge forth the bullocke before the Tabernacle of witnessse. And Aaron and his sonnes shall laye their handes vpon the heade of the bullocke, and thou shalt slei the bullocke before the LORDE, at the dore of the Tabernacle of witnessse, and shalt take of his bloude, and put it vpon the hornes of the altare with thy synger, and poure all the other bloude vpon the botome of the altare.

And thou shalt take all the fat that couereth the bowels and the nett vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fat that is aboute them, and burne them vpon the altare. But the bullockes flesch, synne and dongge, shalt thou burne with fyre without the hoost: for it is a synneofferynge.

The one ramme shalt thou take also, and Aaron with his sonnes shall laye their handes vpon his heade. Then shalt thou slei him, and take of his bloude, and sprentle it vpon the altare rounde aboute. But the ramme shalt thou deuyde in peces, and wash his bowels and his legges, and laye them vpon the peces and the heade, and burne the whole ramme vpon the altare: for it is a burnt offerynge, and a swete sauoure of the sacrifice vnto the LORDE.

As for the other ramme, thou shalt take him, and Aaron with his sonnes shall laye their handes vpon his heade, and thou shalt slei him, and take of his bloude, and put it vpon the cyppe of the right eare of Aaron and his sonnes, and vpon y thembe of their right handes, and vpon the greete too of their right fete, and thou shalt sprentle the bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute, and shalt take of the bloude vpon the altare and the anoyntinge oyle, and sprentle it vpon Aaron and his vestymentes, vpon his iournes and their vestymentes. So shall he and his clothes, his sonnes and their clothes be consecrated.

Then shalt thou take the fat of the ramme, the rompe, and the fatt that couereth y bowels, the net vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fatt that is aboute them, and the right shulder (for it is a ramme of consecracion) and a synnell of bried, and an oyled cake, and a wafer out of the maunde of the unleuended bried: that stondeth before y LORDE, and put all in to the handes of Aaron and of his sonnes, and waue it vnto the LORDE. The take it out of their handes, and burne it vpon the altare for a burnt offeringe, to be a swete sauoure vnto y LORDE. For it is the LORDES sacrifice.

And thou shalt take the brest of the ramme of Aarons consecracio, & shalt waue it before y LORDE, y shal be his parte. And thus shalt thou halowe y Wauebrest & y Sheshulder (y are waued & heaued) of y rammes of the consecracion of Aaron & his sonnes: And it shalbe a perpetuall custome for Aaron and his sonnes of y children of Israel: for it is an heue offrynge, and the heue offrynge shalbe the LORDES dewtye of the children of Israel, in their deade offrynges and heue offrynges which they do vnto the LORDE.

And the holy garments of Aaron shall his sonnes haue after him, that they maye be anoynted therin, & y their handes maye be fylled. Like which of his sonnes shalbe put in his steade, the same shal put them on seue dayes, that he maye go in to the Tabernacle of witnessse, to mynister in the Sanctuary.

But the ramme of consecracion shalt thou take, and seeth his flesch in an holy place. And Aaron with his sonnes shal eate the flesch of the same ramme with the bried in the maunde, at the dore of the Tabernacle of witnessse: for there is an attonement made therewith, to fyll their handes, that they maye be consecrated. And this shalt thou do with the altare:
Two lambes of one yeare olde shalt thou of-

LORDE. This is the daylie burnt offeringe amonge youre posterities, at the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE, where I will proteste vnto you, and talke with the. There wil I proteste vnto the children of Israel, and be sanctified in my glory, and wil halowe the Tabernacle of wytnesyeare, with þ bloude of the synne offeringe, which they shal offer that are reconcyled.

This shal be done amonge youre posterities for this is the most holy vnto the LORDE.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Whan thou nombrest the heades of the children of Israel, then shal euery one ge-ue vnto the LORDE the reconcylinge of his soule, þ there happē not a plague vnto them, whan they are nombred. Euery one that is tolde in the nombre, shal geue half a Sy-cle is worth twentye Geras. This half Sy-cle shal be þ LORDES heue offeringe. Who so is in the nombre from twenty yeare and athe poore shal not geue lesse in the half Sy-

Gods seruyce of the Tabernacle of wytnes-

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and

and of Balme two hundred and fiftie, and of Cassia fyue hundred (after the Sytle of the Sanctuary) ⁊ an hin of oyle olyue, and make an holy anoyntinge oyle, after the craft of the Apotecary.

D And there wth shalt thou anoynte the Tabernacle of wytnesse, ⁊ the Arke of wytnesse, the table with all his apparell, ⁊ candilstick with his apparell, the altare of incense, the altare of burnt offeringes with all his apparell, ⁊ the lauer with his fote: and thus shalt thou consecrate them, that they maye be most holy: for who so wil touch the, must be consecrated. Thou shalt anoynte Aaron also, and his sonnes, and consecrate them to be my prestes.

And thou shalt speake vnto the childre of Israel, and saye: This oyle shalbe an holy oymment vnto me amonge yo^r posterities: It shal not be poured vpon mans body, neither shalt thou make any soch like it, for it is holy: therefore shal it be holy vnto you. Who so maketh any soch like, or geueth a straüger therof, the same shalbe rote out from amonge his people.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Take vnto the spyces: Balme, Stacte, Galban, and pure frāncēcense, of one as moch as of another, and make incense therof (after the craft of the Apotecary) myngled together, that it maye be pure ⁊ holy. And thou shalt beate it to poulder, and shalt put of the same before the wytnesse in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, from whence I wyll preste vnto the, but it shalbe holy vnto the for the LORDE. Who so maketh soch to cense therwith, shalbe rote out from amonge his people.

The XXXI. Chapter.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, ⁊ saide: I haue called by name Bezaleel the sonne of Uri ⁊ sonne of Hur, of y^e trybe of Iuda, ⁊ haue fylled him with y^e spiere of God, with wysdome and vnderstōdyng and knowlege, and to worke with all maner of comynge worke, in golde, syluer, brasse, to grave stones comyngly, and to set them, to carue well in tymbre, and to make all maner worke. And beholde, I haue geuen him Ahaliab the sonne of Ahisamach of the trybe of Dan, to be his companyon, and haue geuen wysdome in to the hertes of all that are wyse, that they shall make all that I haue commaunded the: the Tabernacle of wytnesse, the Arke of wytnesse, the Mercyseate thereon, and all the ornamentes of y^e Tabernacle: the table and his apparell, the candilstick and all his apparell, the altare of incense, the altare of burnt offeringes wth all his apparell, the lauer with his fote, the mynsirynge vestimentes of Aaron ⁊ prest, and the garmentes of his sonnes to serue like prestes, the anoyntinge oyle, and the incēse of spyces for y^e Sanctuary. All that I haue commaunded the, shal they make.

And the LORDE talked vnto Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the childre of Israel, and saye: Kepe my Sabbath, for it is a token betwene me and you, and youre posterities, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the LORDE which haloweth you: therefore kepe my Sabbath, for it shalbe holy vnto you. Who so vnhaloweth it, shall dye the death: for who so doth any worke therin, shalbe rote out from amonge his people.

Syre dayes shall men worke, but vpon the seventh daye is the Sabbath ⁊ the holy rest of the LORDE. Who so doth any worke vpon the Sabbath daye, shall dye the death.

Therefore shal the childre of Israel kepe the Sabbath, that they maye kepe it also amonge their posterities for an everlastynge couenant. An everlastynge token is it betwixt me and the childre of Israel. For in fyre dayes made the LORDE heauē ⁊ earth, but vpon y^e seventh daye he rested, and was refreshed.

And whan the LORDE had made an ende of talkinge with Moses vpon the mount Sinai, he gaue him two tables of wytnesse, which were of stone, and wyrtten with the synger of God.

The XXXII. Chapter.

When the people sawe that Moses made lōge taryenge to come downe fro the mount, they gathered the together agaynst Aaron, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Up, and make vs goddes, to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this man Moses, that brought vs out of Egipte. wyues, of yo^r sonnes, & of yo^r daughters, & brynge them vnto me. Then all the people plucke of their golden earynges from their eares, & brought them vnto Aaron. And he toke them of their handes, & fashioned it wth a grauer. And they made a molten calfe, and sayde: These are thy goddes (O Israel) that brought the out of the lande of Egypte.

B When Aaron sawe that, he buyded an altare before him, and caused it be proclaimed, and sayde: Tomorrow is the LORDES feast. And they arose vp early in the mornynge, and offred burnt offerynges, and brought dead offerynges also: Then the people sat them downe to cate and drynke, & rose vp to playe.

Deut. 9. c But the LORD E sayde vnto Moses: Go get the downe, for thy people whom thou broughtest out of the lande of Egypte, haue marred all: they are soone gone out of the waie, which I commaunded them. They haue made them a molten calfe, and haue worshipped it, & offred vnto it, & sayde: These are thy goddes (O Israel) that brought the out of the lande of Egypte.

E And the LORD E sayde vnto Moses: I se, that it is a styffnecked people, and now suffre me, that my wrath maye waxe whote ouer them, & that I maye consume them, so wil I make a greates people of the.

D But Moses besought the LORD E his God, & sayde: Oh LORD E, wherfore wil thy wrath waxe whote ouer thy people, whom thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypte wth greates power & a mightie hande? Wherfore shulde the Egyptians speake, & saye: He hath brought the for their myschefe, to slaye them in the mountaynes, and to destroye the vtterly from the earth? Turne the from the fearcenesse of y^r wrath, & be gracious ouer the wickednesse of thy people. Remembre thy seruantes Abraham, Isaac, and Israel, vnto whō thou swarest by thyne owne self, and saydest: I wil multiplie youre sede as the starres of heauen, and all the lande that I haue promysed you, wil I geue vnto youre sede, & they shall inheret it for euer. Thus the LORD E repented of the euell, which he sayde he wolde do vnto his people.

Moses turned him, & wente downe from the mount, and in his hande he had the two tables of wytnesse, which were wyttē vpon both the sydes, and were Gods worke, & the wytyng was the wytyng of God therein. Now when Josua herde the noyse of y^r people, as they shouted, he sayde vnto Moses: This is a noyse of warre in the hoost. He answered: It is not a noyse of them that haue the victory, and of them that haue the worse, but I heare a noyse of synginge at a daunse.

When he came nye vnto the hoost, and sawe the calfe, and the daunsynge, he was moued with wrath, and cast the tables out of his hande, and brake them beneth the mount. And he toke the calfe that they had made, and brent it with fyre, and stamped it vnto poulder, and strowed it in the water, & gaue it vnto the childien of Israel to drynke, & sayde vnto Aaron: What dyd this people vnto the, that thou hast brought so greates a synne vpon them?

Aaron sayde: Let not the wrath of my lord waxe scarce: thou knowest, that this is a wicked people. They sayde vnto me: Make vs goddes to go before vs, for we can not tell what is become of this man Moses, y^e brought vs out of the lande of Egypte. I sayde vnto them: Who so hath golde, let him plucke it of, and geue it me: and I cast it in the fyre, therof came this calfe.

S Now when Moses sawe, that the people were naked (for Aaron, when he set them vp, made them naked to their shame) he wote into the gate of the hoost, and sayde: who so belongeth vnto the LORD E, let him come hither vnto me. Then all the childien of Levi gathered them selues vnto him, and he sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORD E the God of Israel: Every man put his swerde by his syde, and go thorow in and out from one gate to another in the hoost, and slaye every man his brother, fiende, & neighbour.

The children of Levi dyd, as Moses sayde vnto them. And there fell of the people the same daye thre thousande men. The sayde Moses: Consecrate youre handes this daie vnto the LORD E, every man vpon his sonne and brother, that the prayse maye be geuen ouer you this daie.

G On the morow Moses sayde vnto the people: Ye haue done a greates synne. Now I wil go vp vnto the LORD E, yf peradventure I maye make an attonement for youre synnes.

Now when Moses came agayne vnto y^e LORD E, he saide: Oh this people haue done a greates synne, & haue made them goddes of golde. Now for geue them their synne: yf not, the wylpe me out of y^r booke, that thou hast wyttē. The LORD E sayde vnto Moses: What? Him that synneth against me, wil I wype out of my booke. Go thou y^e

Moses gathered all the cōgregation of y childre of Israel together, and sayde vnto them: This is it, y the LORDE hath commaunded you to do: Sixe dayes shall ye worke, but the seuenth daye shall ye kepe holy: a Sabbath of the LORDES rest. Whe so ever deeth eny worke therein, shall dye. Ye shal kyndle no fyre vpon the Sabbath daye in all yonre dwellinges.

Exo. 34. b

And Moses sayde vnto y whole congregation of the children of Israel: This is it, that the LORDE hath commaunded: Geue from amonge you heue offerynges vnto y^e LORDE, so that euery one brynge the LORDES heue offeryng with a fre hert: golde, syluer, brasse, yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte sylke, and goates hayre, reed slynnes of rammes, doo slynnes, and fyrette, oyle for the lampes, and spyces for the anoyntinge oyle and for swete incense. Onix stones, and stones to be set in y^e ouerboddy cote, and for the brestlappe.

B And who so is wyse of hert amonge you, let him come, & make what the LORDE hath commaunded: namely, the habitacion with the tent & couerynge therof, the rynges, bordes, barres, pilers & solettes: The Arke wth the stauess therof, the Mercyseate & the wayle: the table with his stauess & all his apparell: & the shewbried: The candelstick of light and his apparell, and his lampes, & the oyle for the lightes: The altare of incense with his stauess: The anoyntinge oyle and spyces for incense: The hangyng before y^e Tabernacle dore: The alter of burnt offerynges with his brasse gredyon, stauess and all his apparell: The lauer with his fote: The hangynges of the courte, with the pilers and solettes therof, & the hangyng of the courte dore: The nailes of the habitacion and of y^e courte with their coardes: The mynistringe garmentes for the seruyce in the holy, & holy vestimentes of Aaron the prest wth the vestimentes of his sonnes for y^e prestes office.

E Then wente all the congregacion of the childre of Israel out fro Moses, & euery one brought the gift of his hert: & all that they wolde of fre will, the same brought they for an heue offeryng vnto the LORDE for y^e worke of the Tabernacle of witnessse, & for all the seruyce therof, & for the holy vestimentes. Both men & women that were of a wyllynge hert, brought braceletes, earynges, rynges & gyrdels, and all maner Jewels of golde: Euery man also brought golde for Waue offerynges vnto the LORDE.

And who so euer fonde by him yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, whyte sylke, goates hayre, reed slynnes of rammes, and doo slynnes, brought it. And who so euer houe vp syluer & brasse, brought it for y^e heue offeryng vnto the LORDE. And who so euer founde fyrette by him, brought it for all maner of worke of the Gods seruyce. And soch women as were wyse herted, spanne with their handes, and brought their sponne worke of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte sylke. And soch women as had hye vnderstandinge in

As for y^e prynces, they brought Onix stones, and set stones, for y^e ouerboddy cote, and for the brestlappe, and spyces, and oyle for y^e lightes, and for the anoyntinge oyle, and for swete incense. Thus the children of Israel brought fre wyllynge offerynges, both man and wemē, for all maner of worke, that the LORDE had commaunded by Moses, to be made.

And Moses saide vnto the childre of Israel: Beholde, y^e LORDE hath called by name Bezaleel y^e sonne of Ou, y^e sonne of Hur of the trybe of Juda, & hath fylled him wth the sperte of God, that he maye haue wysdome, vnderstandinge, & knowlege for all maner of worke, to worke connyngly in golde, syluer & brasse, to graue precious stones & to set them, to carue in wodd, to make all maner of connyng worke, and hath geue instruction in his hert, both him and Ahaliab the sonne of Ahisamach of y^e trybe of Dan. These hath he fylled wth wysdome of hert, to make all maner of worke, to carue, to border, to worke with nedle worke, with yalow sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte sylke, and with weuynge to make all maner of worke, and to denyse connyng worke.

The XXXVI. Chapter.

Then wrought Bezaleel & Ahaliab & all the wyse herted men, vnto whom the LORDE had geuen wysdome & vnderstandinge to knowe, how they shulde make all maner worke for the seruyce of the Sanctuary, acordinge vnto all y^e the LORDE commaunded. And Moses called for Bezaleel & Ahaliab, & all the wyse herted men, vnto whom the LORDE had geuen wysdome in their hertes, namely, all soch as wyllynge offred them selues there, & came to labour in the worke. And they receaued of Moses all the heue offerynges, that the children of Israel had brought for the worke of the seruyce of the Sanctuary, that it might be made: & euery morninge brought they their wyllynge offerynges vnto him.

Then came all the wyse men y^e wrought in the worke of the Sanctuary, euery one fro his worke that he made, & sayde vnto Moses: The people bryngeth to moch, more thē nede is for the worke of this seruice, which the LORDE hath comaunded to make. Thus commaunded Moses, that it shulde be proclaimed thorow out the hoost: No man brynge more to the heue offeryng of the Sanctuary. Then were the people forbydden to brynge: for there was stuff ynough for all maner of worke, that was to be made, and to moche.

Exo. 26. a So all þe wyse herted men amonge the þe wrought in y^e worke of the Habitation, made ten curtaynes of whyte twyned sylke, yallow sylke, scarlet, purple, with Cherubyns of broderd worke. The length of one curtayne was eight and twenty cubites, and the bredth foure cubites, and were all of one measure: and he coupled the curtaynes fyue and fyue together one to the other.

C And made yallow loupes a longe by þe edge of euery curtayne, where they shulde be coupled together: fiftie loupes vpon euery curtayne, wherby one might be coupled to another. And made fiftie buttens of golde, and with the buttens he coupled the curtaynes together one to the other, that it might be one couerynge.

Exo. 26. b And he made xi. curtaynes of goates haire (for the tent ouer the habitation) of thirtie cubytes longe, and foure cubytes brode, all of one measure, and coupled fyue together by them selues, and sixe by them selues, and made fiftie loupes a longe by þe edge of euery curtayne, wherby they might be coupled together, and made fiftie buttens of brasse, to couple y^e tent together withall. And made ouer y^e tent a couerynge of reed sirynnes of rammes, and ouer that a couerynge of Dooslaynnes.

Exo. 26. c D And made stondinge bordes for the Habitation, of Syre tre, euery one ten cubytes longe, and a cubyte and a half brode, and two fete vnto euery one, wherby one might be ioyned to another: that on the south syde there stode twentye of the same bordes: and made fortye syluer sockettes there vnder, vnder euery borde two sockettes for his two fete. In like maner for the other syde of the Habitation towarde the north, he made twentye bordes also with fortye syluer sockettes, vnder euery borde two sockettes: But behynde the Habitation vpon the west syde, he made sixe bordes, and two other for the corners of the Habitation behynde, that either of them both might be ioyned with his corner borde from vnder vp, and aboue vpon the heade to come together with a clampe: so that there were eight bordes, and sixtene sockettes of syluer, vnder euery one two sockettes.

E And he made barres of Syre tre, fyue for the bordes vpon the one syde of the Habitation, and fyue vpon the other syde, and fyue behynde towarde the west: and made the barres to shute thorow the bordes, from the one ende to the other, and euerylayde the bordes with golde. But their rynges made he of golde for the barres, and ouerlayde þe barres with golde.

And made Cherubyns vpon the hangynge with broderd worke, of yallow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke. And made for the same, foure pilers of Syre tre, and ouerlayed them with golde, and their knoppes of golde, and cast foure sockettes of syluer for them.

And made an hanginge in the Tabernacle doore, of yallow sylke, scarlet, purple, and whyte twyned sylke, of needle worke, and fyue pilers therto with their knoppes (and ouerlayed their knoppes and whopes with golde) and fyue sockettes of brasse therto.

The XXXVII. Chapter.

Exo. 27. a Ald Bezaleel made the Arke of Syre tre, two cubytes and a half longe, a cubyte and a half brode, and a cubyte and a half hye, and ouerlayed it with fyne golde within and without, and made a crowne of golde vnto it rounde aboute, and cast for it foure rynges of golde to the foure corners of it, vpon euery syde two. And made staves of Syre tre, and ouerlayed the with golde, and put them in the rynges a longe by þe sydes of the Arke, to beare it withall.

And he made þe Mercyseate of pure golde two cubytes and a half longe, and a cubyte and a half brode, and made two Cherubyns of fyne beaten golde vpon the two endes of the Mercyseate: One Cherub vpon the one ende, and the other Cherub vpon the other ende: and the Cherubyns spredde out their wynges aboue an hye, and couered þe Mercyseate therewith: and their faces stode one ouer agaynst the other, and looked vnto the Mercyseate.

Exo. 27. b B And he made y^e table, of Syre tre, two cubytes longe, a cubyte brode, and a cubyte and a half hye, and ouerlayed it with fyne golde, and made therto a crowne of golde rounde aboute, and made vnto it an whoope of an hande bredth hye, and made a crowne of golde rounde aboute the whoope. And for it he cast foure golde rynges, and put them in the foure comers by the fete harde by the whoope, that the staves might be therein, to beare the table withall: and made the staves of Syre tre, and ouerlayed the with golde, to beare the staves withall. And the vessels vpon the table made he also of fyne golde: the dishes, spones, flat peces and pottes, to poure in and out withall.

And he made the candilstick of fyne bea C

Exo. 27. a ten golde, where vpon was the shaft wth brañches, cuppes, knoppes, & floures. Sixe brañches preceaded out of y^e sydes therof, vpon either syde thre brañches: vpon enery brañch were thre cuppes like allmōdes, wth knoppes and floures. Vpon the candilstick self were foure cuppes with knoppes and floures, vnder enery two brañches a knoppe. The knoppes & brañches therof preceaded out of it, and were all one peece of fyne beaten golde. And he made the seven lampes with their snoffers & ouerquenchers of pure golde. Of an hūdrēth weight of golde made he it, and all the apparell therof.

D He made also the altare of incense, of Syre tre, a cubyte longe and brede, eauen foure squared, and croo cubytes hye with the hornes of it, and overlaid it with fyne golde, the toppe and the sydes of it rounde aboute, and the hornes therof, and made a crowne vnto it rounde aboute of pure golde, & two golde rynges vnder the crowne on both the sydes, to put the stanes therein, and to beare it withall: but the stanes made he of Syre tre, and overlaid them with golde.

And he made the holy anoyntinge oyle, & the incense of pure spyes, after y^e craft of the Apotecary.

The XXXVIII. Chapter.

Exo. 27. b
Exo. 28. a ¶ And the altare of burnt offrynges made he of Syre tre, fyne cubytes lōge & brede, eauen foure squared, & thre cubites hye. And made foure hornes, which preceaded out of the foure corners therof, and overlaid it with brasse. And he made all maner of vessels for the altare, cauldrons, shewels, basins, fleshokes, and colepans all of brasse. And vnto the altare he made a brasen gredyon of net worke rounde aboute, from vnder vpon to the myddest of the altare, & east foure rynges in the foure corners of the brasen gredyon, for the stanes: which he made of Syre tre, and overlaid them wth brasse, and put them in the rynges by the sydes of the altare, to beare it withall, and made it holowe with bordes.

And he made the Lauer of brasse, & his fote also of brasse vpon the place of y^e hooff, that laye before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

B And he made the courte on y^e south syde: hangynges an hūdrēth cubytes longe, of whyte twyned sylke, with the twētye pilers therof, and twētye sokettes of brasse: but the knoppes and whoopes of syluer. In like maner vpon the north syde an hūdrēth cubytes with twētye pilers, and twētye sokettes of brasse, but their knoppes & whoopes of syluer. Vpon the west syde fiftie cubytes with ten pilers and tē sokettes, but their knoppes and whoopes of syluer. Vpon the East syde fiftie cubytes. Sixtene cubytes vpon either syde of the courte dore, wth thre pilers and thre sokettes: So that all the hangynges of the courte were of whyte twyned sylke, and the sokettes of the pilers were of brasse, & their knoppes and whoopes of syluer: their heades were overlaid wth syluer, & all the pilers of the courte were whooped aboute with syluer.

C And the hangyng in y^e courte gate made he wth needle worke, of yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte twyned sylke, twētye cubytes longe, & fyue cubytes hye, after the measure of the hangynges of the courte: foure pilers also thereto, & foure sokettes of brasse, and their knoppes of syluer, and their heades overlaid, and their whoopes of syluer. And all the nales of the habitation and of the courte rounde aboute, were of brasse.

This is now the summe of the habitation of wytnesse (which was counted at the comaundement of Moses to y^e Gods service of the Levites vnder the hāde of Ithamar the sonne of Aaron the priest) which Bezaleel the sonne of Uri, the sonne of Hur of the trybe of Juda made, all as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And wth him Ahaliab y^e sonne of Ahisamach of the trybe of Dan, a connyng grauer, to worke needle worke, wth yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, & whyte sylke.

All the golde y^e was wrought in all this worke of the Sanctuary (which was geuen to the Wane offerynge) is nyne & twenty hūdrēth weight, seven hūdrēth & thirtie Sycles, after y^e Sytle of y^e Sanctuary. The syluer y^e came of the congregacion, was fyue score hūdrēth weight, a thousande. seven hūdrēth, fyue and seuentye Sycles, after y^e Sytle of the Sanctuary: so many heades so many half Sycles, after the Sytle of the Sanctuary, of all that were nombred from twentye yere olde and abone, euen sixe hūdrēth thousande, thre thousande, fyue hūdrēth and fiftye.

Of the fyue score hūdrēth weight of syluer, were cast the sokettes of the Sanctuary, and the sokettes of the vayne, an hūdrēth sokettes of the fyue score hūdrēth weight, an hūdrēth weight to every sokett. Of the thousande, seven hūdrēth and fyue and seuentye Sycles were made the knoppes of the pilers (and their heades overlaid) and their whoopes.

The ii. boke of Moses.

As for the Wave offeringe of brasse, it was seuentye hundreth weight, two thousande and foure hundreth Syckles: Wherof were made the sockettes in the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the brasen altare, and the brasen greddyron therto, and all the vessels of the altare, and the sockettes of þe courte rounde aboute, and the sockettes of þe courte gate, all y nales of the habitation, ⁊ all y nales of y courte rounde aboute.

The XXXIX. Chapter.

Us the yalowe sylke, scarlet, ⁊ purple, they made Aarons mynistringe vestimentes, to do seruyce in the Sanctuary, as þe LORDE comaunded Moses.

And he made the ouerbody cote, of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, ⁊ whyte twyned sylke, and bette the golde in to thynne plates, and cut it in to wyres, that it might be wrought amonge the yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte sylke, ⁊ made it so, that þe ouerbody cote came together by the edges on both the sydes. And his gyrdel was after the same crafte ⁊ worke: euē of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple and whyte twyned sylke, as the LORDE comaunded Moses.

And they wrought two Onix stones, set rounde aboute with golde, grauen by the stone grauer with the names of the childre of Israel: and fastened them vpo the shulders of the ouerbody cote, that they might be stones of remembraunce vnto the children of Israel, as the LORDE comaunded Moses.

B And they made the brestlappe after the crafte ⁊ worke of the ouerbody cote: of golde, yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, ⁊ whyte twyned sylke, so that it was foure square ⁊ dubble, an hande bredth longe and brode, and fylled it with foure rowes of stones. The first rowe was: a Sardis, a Topas, and a Sma ragde. The secōde: a Ruby, a Saphyre, and a Dyanionde. The thirde: a Ligurios, an Adhat, and an Amatist. The fourth: a Turcas, an Onix ⁊ a Jaspis: closed rounde aboute with golde in all the rowes. And the stones stode after the twolue names of the childre of Israel, grauen by the stone grauer, euery one with his name, accordinge to the twolue trybes.

And vpon the brestlappe they made wythen cheynes of pure golde, and two hokes of golde, ⁊ two golderynges, and fastened the two rynges vpon the two edges of the brestlappe: and þe two wythen cheynes put they in the two rynges vpon the corners of the brestlappe. But the two endes of y wrethen cheynes put they to the two hokes, ⁊ fastened them vpon the corners of the ouerbody cote, one euē agaynst another.

And they made two other rynges of golde, ⁊ fastened them to the other two corners of the brestlappe by the edge of it, that it might hange vpon the out syde of the ouerbody cote. And they made yet two other golde rynges, which they put beneth vpon the two corners of the ouerbody cote, one ouer agaynst another, where the ouerbody cote ioyneth together, that the brestlappe might be festened by his rynges vnto þe rynges of the ouerbody cote with a yalowe lace, that it might lye close vpon þe ouerbody cote, and not be loosened from þe ouerbody cote, as the LORDE comaunded Moses.

And he made the tuncycle vnto the ouerbody cote, wrought all of yalowe sylke, ⁊ the hole therof aboue in the myddest, ⁊ a bonde foldē together rounde aboute the hole, that it shulde not rente. And bench vpon þe hemme of it, they made pomgranates of yalowe sylke, scarlet, purple, ⁊ whyte twyned sylke: ⁊ they made belles of pure golde, which they put betwixte þe pomgranates rounde aboute vpon the hemme of the tuncycle, a bell ⁊ a pomgranate, a bell ⁊ a pomgranate rounde aboute, to do seruyce in, as the LORDE comaunded Moses.

And they made albes also wrought of whyte sylke for Aaron ⁊ his sonnes, ⁊ þe mytter of whyte sylke, and the goodly bonettes of whyte sylke, and breeches of twyned whyte linnen, and the girdle of nedle worke euē of whyte twyned sylke, yalowe sylke, scarlet, and purple, as the LORDE comaunded Moses.

They made the foreheade plate also to þe holy crowne, of pure golde, and wrote therein with grauen worke: the holynes of the LOR

DE, and fested a yalowe lacetheron, to tye it vnto the myter aboue, as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses.

Thus the whole worke of y^e Habitation of y^e Tabernacle of wytnesse, was fynished. And the childre of Israel dyd all that the LORDE cōmaunded Moses, & brought the Habitation vnto Moses: the Tabernacle & all the apparell therof, the buttons, bordes, barres, pilers, sockettes, y^e couerynge of reed stymmes of rammes, the couerynge of doo stymmes, & the vayle, y^e Arke of wytnesse wth the stanes therof, the Mercyseate, the table & all his apparell, & the shewbied, the candil stick, wth the lampes prepared, and all his apparell, & oyle for the lightes, the golden altare, the anoyntinge oyle & incense, the hangin ge in the Tabernacle dore, the brasen altare, & his brasen gredyren wth his stanes, & all his apparell, y^e lauer wth his soete, the hangynge of y^e court wth the pilers & sockettes therof, y^e hanginge in the court gate wth his pilers & nales, & a^l the ordynaunce for the seruyce of the Habitation of y^e Tabernacle of wytnesse, y^e mynistringe vestimētes of Aarō y^e prest, to do seruyce in y^e Sanctuary, & the garnētes of his sonnes, y^e they might execute y^e prestes effice. Acordinge to all that y^e LORDE cōmaunded Moses, eue so dyd the childre of Israel in all this seruyce. And Moses sawe all y^e worke, y^e they dyd it eue as y^e LORDE had commaunded, and he blessed them.

The XL. Chapter.

AND y^e LORDE spa ke vnto Mo ses, & sayde: In the first daye of the first moneth shalt thou set up y^e Habitation of y^e Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shalt put the Arke of wytnesse ther in, and hang the vayle before y^e Arke. And thou shalt bringe in the table, and garnish it, and bringe in the candil stick, and put the lampes theron. And y^e golde altare of incense shalt thou set before y^e Arke of wytnesse, & hange up the hanginge in the dore of the Habitation. But the altare of burnt offering ges shalt thou set before the dore of the Habitation of the Tabernacle of wytnesse: ⁊ the lauer betwixte the Tabernacle of wytnesse and the altare, and put water therin, ⁊ set the courte rounde aboute, and hange vp the hanginge in the courte gate.

B And thou shalt take the anoyntyng oyle, and anoynte the Habitation and all that is therein, ⁊ shalt consecrate it, and all y apparell therof, that it maye be holy. And thou shalt anoynte the altare of burnt offerynges and all his vessels, and consecrate it, that it maye be most holy. The lauer also ⁊ his fote shalt thou anoynte ⁊ consecrate.

Exo. 30. c. Exo. 30. a And thou shalt brynge Aaron ⁊ his sonnes vnto the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and wash them with water, ⁊ put the holy vestimentes vpon Aaron, and anoynte him, and consecrate him, that he maye be my prest. And thou shalt brynge his sonnes also, and put the albes vpon them, and anoynte them, as thou hast anoynted their father, ⁊ they maye be my prestes. And this anoyntinge shall they haue for an euerlastinge presthode amonge their posterities. And Moses dyd all as the LORDE commaunded him.

Nu. 7. a Nu. 9. c C Thus was the Tabernacle set vp in the seconde ycare vpon the first daye of the first moneth. And whan Moses reared it vp, he fastened y sockettes and the bordes, and barres, and set vp the pilers, and spred out the tent ouer the Habitation, and put the couerynge of the tent aboue an hye, as the LORDE commaunded him. And he toke the wytnesse, and layed it in the Arke, and put y staves in the Arke, and set the Mercysate aboue vpon the Arke, and broughte the Arke into the Habitation, and hanged the vayle before the Arke of wytnesse, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And he set the table in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, in the corner of the Habitation vpon the north syde without the vayle, and prepared bled theron before y LORDE: as the LORDE commaunded him.

Exo. 35. c D And he set in the candilstick also, euen ouer agaynst the table, in the corner of the Habitation vpon the south syde, and put the lampes theron before y LORDE, as the LORDE commaunded him. And the golden altare set he in also before the vayle, and brent swete incense theron, as the LORDE commaunded him. And hanged vp the hanginge in the Tabernacle dore. As for the altare of burnt offerynges, he set it before the dore of the Habitation of y Tabernacle of wytnesse, and offred burnt offerynges and meate offerynges theron, as the LORDE commaunded him.

And the Lauer set he betwixte the Tabernacle of wytnesse and y altare, and put water therinto wash withall. And Moses, Aaron and his sonnes washed their hades and feet therat: for they ought to wash the, whan they wente in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, or whan they wente vnto the altare, as the LORDE commaunded him. Exo. 30. c

And he set vp the courte rounde aboute the Habitation and the altare, and hanged vp y hanginge in y courte gate. Thus Moses fynished the whole worke.

Then a cloude couered y Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the glory of the LORDE fylled the Habitation. And Moses coulde not go in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, whyle the cloude abode theron, and the glory of y LORDE fylled the Habitation.

And whan the cloude remoued from the Habitation, then wente the children of Israel forth, as oft as they toke their iourney. But yf the cloude remoued not, then toke not they their iourney, tyll the daie that it remoued: for in the daye tyme was the cloude of the LORDE vpon the Habitation, ⁊ in the night season was fyre therin, in y sight of all y house of Israel, in all their iourneis.

 redemyng or losynge out agayne of catell or londe, that a man promyseth, voweth or de-dicateth vnto the L O R D E.

The first Chapter.

Unto the L O R D E cal- A

 vnto him out of y^e Tabernacle of wytnesse, and sayde: Speake vnto y^e childre of Israel, & saie vnto them: Who so ever amonge you wyl brynge an offeringe vnto the L O R D E, let him brynge it of y^e catell, euen of the oxen, & of the shepe.

If he wyl brynge a burntofferynge of y^e oxen (or greate catell) he let him offre a male without blemyshe, before y^e dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, to reconcytle him self before the L O R D E, let him laye his hande v- Exo 29. 6 pon the heade of the burntofferynge, then Leui. 1. 4
 shal he be reconcyled, so y^e God shalbe mercifull vnto him.

And he shall kyll the yonge ore before y^e B
 L O R D E: and y^e prestes Aarons sonnes shal brynge the bloude, and sprenkle it rounde about vpon the altare, that is before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the steyne shalbe flayne from of the burntoffe-ryng, and it shalbe hewen in peces. And the sonnes of Aaron the prest shal make a fy-re vpon the altare, and laye wod about theron: and y^e peces, the heade, and the farr shal they laye vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon y^e fyre on the altare. But y^e bowels & legges shal be wasshen with water, and the prest shal burne altogether vpon the altare for a burnt sacrifice: this is an offeringe of a swete savoure vnto the L O R D E.

If he wyl offre a burnt sacrifice of the C small catell, that is, of the lambes or goates, then let him offre a male without a ble-mysh. And he shall kyll it before the L O R D E, euen at the corner of the altare on the north syde before y^e L O R D E. And (the prestes) Aarons sonnes shal sprenkle his bloude rounde about vpon y^e altare, and it shal be hewen in peces. And the prest shal laye them with the heade and the farr, vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre on the altare. But the bowels and y legges shal be washten with water. And y prest shal offre it altogether, and burne it vpon y altare for a burnt sacrifice. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

D But yf he wil offre a burnt sacrifice of y foules vnto the LORDE, then let him offre it of the turtill doves or of y yonge pigeons. And the prest shal brynge it vnto the altare, and wyngge the neck of it a sinder, that it maye be burnt vpon the altare, and let the bloude of it runne out vpon the sydes of the altare, and the croppé of it with the fethers shalbe cast vpon the heape of asshes besyde the altare towarde the east, and he shall denyde the wynges of it, but not breake the cleane of. And thus shall the prest burne it vpon the altare, euen vpon the wodd that lyeth vpon the fyre, for a burnt sacrifice. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

The II. Chapter.

A Whan a soule wyll offre a meat offeringe vnto the LORDE, then shal it be of fyne floure, and he shal poure oyle vpon it, and put frankincense thereon, and so brynge it vnto Aarons sonnes the prestes. Then shal one of them take his handfull of the same floure, and oyle with all the frankincense, and burne it for a remembraunce vpon the altare. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. As for y remmaunt of the meat offeringe, it shalbe Aarons and his sonnes. This shalbe y most holy of the offeringes of the LORDE.

B But yf he wyll brynge a meat offeringe of that which is baken in the oven, then let him take swete cakes of wheate, mytte with oyle, and unleuended wafers anoynted with oyle. Neuertheles yf thy meat offeringe be eny thinge of that which is fryed in the panne, then shal it be of fyne swete floure mytte with oyle: And thou shalt cut it in peces, and poure oyle thereon: so is it a meat offeringe. But yf thy meat offeringe be ought broyled on the gredyon, then shalt thou make it of fyne floure with oyle. And the meat offeringe that thou wilt make of soch thinges for the LORDE, shalt thou brynge vnto y prest, which shal brynge it vnto the altare, and shal heue vp the same meat offeringe for a remembrance, and burne it vpon the altare. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE. As for the remmaunt, it shal be Aarons and his sonnes. This shall be the most holy of the offeringes of the LORDE.

But yf thou wilt offre a meat offeringe of the first frutes vnto y LORDE, then shalt thou drye that which is grene, by the fyre, and beate it small, and so offre the meat offeringe of thy first frutes. And thou shalt put oyle vpon it, and laye frankincense thereon, so is it a meat offeringe. And then shall the prest beate it, and burne of the oyle with all the frankincense for a remembrance. This is an offeringe vnto the LORDE.

The III. Chapter.

Whe yf his offeringe be a deede offeringe of greate catell (whether it be oxe or cowe) then shal he offre soch as is without blemish before the LORDE, and shal laie his hande vpon the heade of it, and kyll it before the doore of the Tabernacle of witnessse. And the prestes Aarons sonnes, shall sprentle the bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, and shal offre of y deede offeringe vnto the LORDE: namely, all the fat that is within, and the two kydneys with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, and the nett on the leuer vpon the kydneys also. And Aarons sonnes shal burne it vpon the altare for a burnt offeringe, euen vpon the wodd that lyeth on the fyre. This is an offeringe of a swete sauoure vnto the LORDE.

If his deede offeringe be of small catell, whether it be male or female, it shal be without blemish: If it be a lambe, then shal he brynge it before the LORDE, and shal laie his hande vpon the heade of it, and sleie it before the Tabernacle of witnessse. And Aarons sonnes shal sprentle his bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, and so offre of the deede offeringe vnto the LORDE: namely, the fat of it, all the rompe with the backe, and the fat that couereth the bowels, with all y fat that is within, and the two kydneys with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, and the nett on the leuer vpon the kydneys also. And the prest shal burne it vpon the altare, for y meate of the offeringe vnto y LORDE.

But yf his offeringe be a goate, and bringeth it before the LORDE, he shal laie his hande vpon the heade of it, and kyll it before the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And Arons sonnes shal sprikke the bloude rounde aboute vpon the altare, and shal offer therof a sacrifice vnto the LORD: namely, the fat & couereth the bowels, and all the fat & is within, the two kydneyes with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kydneyes. And the priest shal burne it vpon the altare, for the meate of the sacrifice to a sweete sauoure.

And he shal put of the same bloude vpon the hornes of the altare of incense, & stondeth before & LORD in the Tabernacle of wytnesse: and all the bloude of the bullocke shal he poure vpon the botome of the altare of burntofferings, & stondeth at the entrin ge in of & Tabernacle of wytnesse. And all the fat of the synofferynge shal he cheue vp: namely, the fat & couereth the bowels, and all the fat & is within, & two kydneyes with the fat that is thereon vpon the loynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also (like as he cheueth it from the eye in the dead offerynge) and shal burne it vpon the altare of burntofferings. But the stymme of the bullocke, and all the flesh, with the heade & legges, and the bowels and the donge, shal he carry alltogether out of the hoost, in to a cleane place, where & asshes are poured out, and shal burie it vpon woodd with fyre.

Exo. 29. b
Nu. 19. a

When the whole congregacion of Israel synneth thorow ignorance, and the dede be hyd from their eyes, so & they do ought agaynst

eny of the commaundementes of the LORD, which they shoulde not do, and come afterwarde to the knowlege of the synne that they haue done, they shal brynge a yonge bullocke for a synofferynge, and set him before & dore of & Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the Elders of the congregacion shall laye their handes vpon his heade before the LORD, and kyll & bullocke before the LORD. And & priest & is anoynted shal brynge of & bullockes bloude in to the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and dyppe ther in with his synger, and sprikke therewith seuen tymes before the LORD, eu^e before the wayle of the Holy. And shal put of the bloude vpon the hornes of the altare, & stondeth before the LORD in the Tabernacle of wytnesse: and all & other bloude shal he poure vpon the botome of & altare of burntofferings, & stondeth before the dore of & Tabernacle of wytnesse. But all his face shal he cheue vp, and burne it vpon the altare: and shal do with this bullocke, as he dyd with & bullocke of the synofferynge: Thus the priest shal make an attonement for them, and it shall be forgiven them. And the bullocke shal he brynge without the hoost, and burne him, as he brenet & first bullocke. This shal be & synofferynge of the congregacion.

When a prynce synneth, and doeth agaynst the commaundement of the LORD his God, & he ought not to do, and offendeth ignorantly, and cometh to the knowlege of his synne & he hath done, he shal brynge for his offeringe an he goate without blemyshe, and laye his hande vpon the goates heade, and slaye him in & place where & burntofferings are slayne before & LORD. The shal & priest take of & bloude of & synofferynge with his synger, and put it vpon the altare of burntofferings, and poure the other bloude vpon the botome of the altare of burntofferings. But all the fat of it shal he burne vpon the altare, like as the fat of the heathofferynge. And so the priest shal make an attonement for his synne, and it shall be forgiven him.

When a soule of & comon people synneth ignorantly, doinge eny thinge agaynst the commaundement of the LORD, & he ought not to do, and so offendeth, and cometh to & knowlege of the synne & he hath done, he shal brynge for his offeringe a she goate without blemyshe, for the synne & he hath done, and shal laye his hande vpon the heade of the synofferynge, and slaye it in the place of the burntofferings. all the bloude vpon the botome of the altare. But all the fat of it shal he take awaye, like as he taketh awaye the fat of the dead-offerynge, and shal burne it vpon the altare for a sweete sauoure vnto the LORDE. And so shal the prest make an attonement for him, and it shal be forgiven him.

G But yf he brynge a lambe for a synofferynge, then let him brynge a female without blemyshe, and laye his hande vpon the head of the synofferynge, & kyll it for a synofferynge, in the place where the burnt-offerynges are slayne. And the prest shal take of þe bloude wth his synger, & put it vpon the hornes of the altare of burnt-offerynges, & poure all the bloude vpon the botome of the altare. But all þe fette therof shal he take fro it, like as he dyd the fat of the lambe of the healt-offerynge, & shal burne it vpon þe altare for the LORDES sacrifice. And so yf prest shal make an attonement for the synne that he hath done, and it shal be forgiven him.

Whan a soule synneth, & he heare a cursyng, and is wytnesse therof, or hath sene it, or knowen it, & telleth it not, he is giltye of a trespass. Or whan a soule toucheth eny vncleane thynge, whether it be yf carion of an vncleane beast, or catell, or wombe, & was not aware of it, he is vncleane, and hath offended. Or whan he toucheth an vncleane man (what vncleanness so euer a man is defyled withall) & was not aware of it, & afterwarde cometh to þe knowlege therof, yf same hath offended. Or whan a soule sweareth, so þe pronounceth wth his mouth to do euell or good (what so euer it be that a man pronounceth wth an ooth) & was not aware of it, & afterwarde cometh to the knowlege therof, he hath offended in one of these.

Now whan it so is, þe hath offended in one of these, & is enfourmed therof, what he hath synned, he shal bringe vnto þe LORDE for his trespass of this his synne þe hath done, a female from the flocke, either a yewe or a she goate for a synofferynge: so shal the prest make an attonement for him concerninge his synne. But yf he be not able to brynge a shepe, then let him brynge vnto þe LORDE for his offence that he hath done, two turtill doves or two yonge pigeons: one for a synofferynge, the other for a burnt-offerynge, and brynge them to the prest: Which shal make the first a synofferynge, and first wrynge the neck of it, so that he plucke it not cleane of, and sprentle with the bloude vpon the sydes of the altare, and let the resydue

And thus shal the prest make an attonement for him concerninge the synne that he hath done, & it shal be forgiven him. But yf he be not able to brynge two turtill doves or two yonge pigeons, then let him brynge his offeringe for his synne, a tenth deale of an Ephra of syne fleure for a synofferynge. But he shal put no oyle theron, ner laye frankincense vpon it, for it is a synofferynge. And he shal brynge it vnto the prest, & yf prest shal take his hand full of it for a remembraunce, and burne it vpon the altare for an offeringe vnto the LORDE. This is a synofferynge. And so shal the prest make an attonement for him, concerninge his synne that he hath done, & it shal be forgiven him. And the remmaunt shal be the prestes, like a meat-offerynge.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, & sayde: If a soule trespass, so þe thorow ignorance he offendeth in any thynge þe is halowed vnto the LORDE, he shal brynge his trespass-offerynge vnto the LORDE, euen a ramme from þe flocke without blemyshe, worth two Syckles of syluer, after the Syckle of the Sanctuary, for a trespass-offerynge: and so let what he hath offended in the halowed thynge, he shal make restitution, & geue the fift part more thereto. And he shal deliuer it vnto þe prest, which shal make an attonement for him wth the ramme of the trespass-offerynge, & it shal be forgiven him.

Whan a soule synneth, and doth oughte agaynst eny comaundment of the LORDE, þe shulde not do, & is in fourmed therof, he hath trespassed, & is giltye of the synne. And he shal brynge from the flocke a ramme without blemyshe (that is worth a trespass-offerynge) vnto the prest, which shal make an attonement for him concerninge his ignorance which he dyd, and was not aware, and it shal be forgiven him. This is the trespass-offerynge, because he trespassed agaynst the LORDE.

And þe LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Whan a soule synneth, & trespasseth agaynst the LORDE, so that he denyeth vnto his neighbour that which he gaue him to kepe, or that was put vnder his hande, or that he hath violently taken awaye, or gotten vnrightheously, or founde that was lost, and denyeth it wth a false ooth, what so euer it be, wherein a man synneth agaynst his neighbour. But for his trespass he shall brynge for the LORDE (euen vnto the prest) a ramme from the flocke without blemyshe, that is worth a trespass offerynge. The VI. Chapter.

Exo. 28.2 ¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commaunde Aaron and his sonnes, and saye: This is the lawe of the burnt offerynge. The burnt offerynge shall burne vpon the altare all night vntyll the mornynge. But the fyre of the altare onely shal burne thereon. And & prest shal put on his linnen albe, and his linnen breeches vpon his flesh, and shal take vp the asshes, that the fyre of the burnt offerynge vpon the altare hath made, and shall poure them besyde the altare. Then shall he put of his rayment, and put on other rayment, and carry out the asshes without the hoost, into a cleane place.

The fyre vpon the altare shal burne, and neuer go out. The prest shal kindle wode thereon euery mornynge, and dress the burnt offerynge vpon it, and burne the fat of the deed offerynge thereon. The fyre shall euer burne vpon the altare, and neuer go out.

Num. 15.2 ¶ And this is the lawe of the meat offerynge, which Aarons sonnes shall offre before the LORDE vpon the altare. One of them shall haue his handfull of fyne flour of & meat offerynge, and of the oyle, and all the frankincense that lyeth vpon the meat offerynge, and shall burne it vpon the altare for a swete sauoure a remembraunce vnto the LORDE. As for the remnaunt, Aaron and his sonnes shal eat it, and vntended shal they eat it in the holy place, namely, in the courte of the Tabernacle of witnessse. With leue shal they not bake their porcion, which I haue geuen them of my offerynge. It shalbe vnto them most holy, as the syn offerynge and trespass offerynge. All the males amonge the children of Aaron shal eat of it. Let this be a perpetuall lawe for youre posterities in the sacrifices of the LORDE.

The viij. Chap. Exo. xliij.

No man shall touch it, excepte he be consecrated.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: This shalbe the offerynge of Aaron and of his sonnes, which they shall offre vnto the LORDE in the daie of their anoyntinge. The tenth parte of an Ephra of fyne flour for a meat offerynge daylie, the one half parte in the mornynge, the other half parte at euen. In the panne with oyle shall thou make it, and brynge it fryed, and in peeces shalt thou offer it for the swete sauoure of the LORDE. And the prest which amonge his sonnes shalbe anoynted in his steade, shall do this. This is a perpetuall dewtye vnto the LORDE. It shal be burnt altogether: for all the meat offerynge of the prest shalbe consumed with the fyre, and not be eaten.

¶ And & LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes, and saye: This is the lawe of the syn offerynge: In the place where thou slayest & burnt offerynge, shalt thou slaye the syn offerynge also before the LORDE. This is most holy. The prest that offereth the syn offerynge, shal eat it in the holy place, in the courte of & Tabernacle of witnessse. No man shall touch y flesh therof, excepte he be halowed. And yf eny garment be sprentled with the bloude of it, it shalbe washē in the holy place. And the earthe pot that it is sodden in, shalbe broken. But yf it be a brasen pot, it shalbe scoured, and resed with water. All & males amonge the prestes shal eat therof, for it is most holy. Notwithstandinge all & syn offerynge whose bloude is brought in to the Tabernacle of witnessse to make an attonement, shall not be eaten, but burnt with fyre.

The VII. Chapter.

¶ And this is the lawe of the trespass offerynge, and it shal be most holy. In the place where the burnt offerynge is slayne, shall the trespass offerynge be slayne also, & there shall of his bloude be sprentled rounde aboute vpon the altare. And all his fat shalbe offered: the rompe and the fat & couereth the bowels, the two kydneyes with the fat & is thereon vpon the loynes, and the net on the leuer vpon the kydneyes also. And the prest shal burne it vpon the altare for an offerynge vnto the LORDE. This is a trespass offerynge.

Loke which prest offereth eny mans burnt offerynge, the slynnne of the same burnt offerynge that he hath offered, shal be his. And every meat offerynge that is bak en in the oven, roasted vpon the gred yron, or fryed in the panne, shal be the prestes y^e offer eth it. And enery meat offerynge y^e is myn gled with oyle, or drye, shal belonge vnto all Aaron sonnes, vnto one as well as another.

B And this is y^e lawe of the health offerin ge, that is offered vnto the L O R D E. * If they wyll offre a sacrifice of thankes geuyn ge, then shal they offre unleueded cakes me gled with oyle, and sweete wafers strated ouer with oyle, and fryed cakes of fyne flour mengled with oyle. This offerynge also shal they brynge vpon a cake of leueded bred, to the thank offerynge of his health offerynge: and of them all he shal offre one for an heue offerynge vnto the L O R D E. And it shal be the prestes, that sprentleth the bloude of the health offerynge. And the flesh of the thank offerynge in his health of ferynges, shal be eaten the same daye that it is offred, and there shall nothinge be left ouer vntyll the mornynge.

L And whether it be a vowe or a fre wyl offerynge, * it shal be eaten the same daye that it is offred: yf ought be left ouer vntyll the mornynge, yet maye it be eaten. But loke what remayneth vnto y^e thirde daye of the flesh that is offred, it shal be bient with the fyre. And yf eny man vpon the thirde daie eat of y^e offred flesh of his health offe rynges, he shall not be accepted that offred it. * Neither shall it be rekened vnto him, but it shal be refused. And loke which sou le eateth therof, the same is giltye of a mys dede.

E And the flesh that toucheth eny vncleane thinge, shal not be eaten, but burnt with the fyre. But who so euer is cleane of body, shal eat of the flesh: and the soule that eateth of y^e flesh of y^e health offerynge which belongeth vnto the L O R D E, his vncleannes be vpon him, and he shal be roted out from amonge his people.

And whan a soule toucheth eny vncleane thinge, whether it be an vncleane man, catell, or eny other abhominacion that is, and eateth of the flesh of the burnt offerynge, that belongeth vnto the L O R D E, the same shal be roted out from amonge his people.

And the L O R D E talketh with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Is rael, & saye: Ye shall eat no fat of oxen, lam bes, and goates: neuerthelesse the fat of it that dyeth alone, and of soch as is come of wyld beasts, that maye ye occupye to all maner of vses, but ye shall not eat it.

For who so euer eateth the fat of y^e beest that is geuen vnto the L O R D E for an offe rynges, the same soule shal be roted out from his people. Moreover, * ye shall eat no blou de, nether of catell, ner of foules, where so euer ye dwell. What soule eateth eny blou de, the same shal be roted out from his people.

And the L O R D E talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Is rael, and saye: Who so wyll offre his health offerynge vnto the L O R D E, the same shal also brynge with all, that belongeth vnto y^e health offerynges for the L O R D E. But he shall brynge it with his hande for the offe rynges of the L O R D E: namely the fat vpon the brest shal he brynge, with the brest, to be a Waue offerynge before the L O R D E. And the prest shall burne the fat vpon the altare, and the brest shal be Aarons and his sonnes.

And the right shulder shal they geue vnto the prest for a gyt of their health offe rynges. And loke which of Aarons sonnes of freth the bloude of the health offerynges, and the fat, the same shal haue the right shulder for his parte. * For the Waue brest and the heueshulder haue I taken of the children of Israel, and of their health offe rynges, and haue geuen them vnto Aaron the prest and vnto his sonnes for a perpetuall dewtye.

This is the anoyntinge of Aaron and of his sonnes, of the offerynges of the L O R D E, in the daye whā Moses presented them to be prestes vnto the L O R D E, what tyme as the L O R D E commaunded (in the daye whan he anoynted them) to be geuen them of the children of Israel for a perpetuall dewtye, and vnto all their posterities. And this is the lawe of the burnt offerynge, of the meat offerynge, of the syn offerynge, of the trespase offerynge, of the offerynge of consecracion, and of the health offerynges, which the L O R D E commaunded Moses vpon mount Sinai, in the daye whan he gaue him in commandement vnto the children of Israel, to offre their offerynges vnto y^e L O R D E in the wyldernes of Sinai.

21 ¶ And the LORD spake vnto Moses, & sayde: Take Aaron and his sonnes wth him, & their vestimentes, & the anoyntinge oyle, & a bullocke for a synofferynge, two rammes, and a maunde with vnlendened bred, and call the whole congregacion together, before the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. Moses dyd as the LORD commaunded him, and gathered the congregacion together vnto the doore of γ Tabernacle of wytnesse, and sayde vnto them: This is it, that the LORD hath commaunded to do.

22 And he toke Aaron and his sonnes, and washed them with water, and put the albe vpon him, and girde him with the girdell, and put vpon him the yalowe tuncycle, and put the ouerboddy cote vpon him, and girde him vpon the ouerboddy cote, & put the brest lappetheron, and in γ brestlappe light and perfectnesse: And set the mycter vpon his heade. And vpon the mycter even aboute his fore heade, put he a place of golde on the holy crowne: as γ LORD commaunded Moses.

23 And Moses toke the anoyntinge oyle, & anoynted the habitacion, and all that was therein, and consecrated it, and sprentled therewith seuen tymes vpon the altare, and anoynted the altare with all his vessels, the lauer with his fote, that it might be consecrated: and poured the anoyntinge oyle vpon Arons heade, and anoynted him, γ he might be consecrated.

24 And he brought Arons sonnes, and put albes vpon them, and girde them with the girdle, and put bonettes vpon their heades, as the LORD commaunded him.

And he caused bringe a bullocke for a synofferynge. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, and then was he slayne. And Moses toke of the bloude, & put it vpon the homes of the altare rounde aboute with his synger, and purified the altare, and poured the bloude vpon the botome of the altare, and consecrated it, that he might reconcyle it. And toke all the fat vpon the bowels, the nett vpon the leuer, and the two kydneyes with the fat thereon, and burned it vpon the altare. But the bullocke wth his slymme, flesh, & donge, burned he with fyre without the hoost, as the LORD commaunded him. Exo. 29. b

And he brought a ramme for a burnt offeringe. And Aaron wth his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, & then was he slayne. And Moses sprentled of γ bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute, hewed the ramme in peces, and burnt the heade, the peces, and the fatt. And washed the bowels and the legges with water, and so burnt γ whole ramme vpon the altare. This was a brunt offeringe for a swete sauoure, even a sacrifice vnto the LORD, as the LORD commaunded him. Exo. 29. c

He brought also the other ramme of the offeringe of the consecracion. And Aaron with his sonnes layed their handes vpon his heade, and then was it slayne. And Moses toke of his bloude, and put it vpon the tynpe of Arons right eare, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greete too of his right fote.

And he brought Arons sonnes, and put of the bloude vpon the tynpe of the right eare of them, and vpon γ thombes of their righte handes, and vpon the greete toes of their righte fete, and poured the resydue of the bloude vpon the altare rounde aboute. And he toke the fat and the rompe, and all the fat vpon the bowels, and the nett vpon the leuer, the two kydneyes with the fat thereon, and the righte shulder. And out of the maunde of vnlendened bred before the LORD, he toke an vnlendened cake, and a cake of oyled bred, and a waser, and layed them vpon the fat, and vpon the right shulder, and put altogether vpon the handes of Aaron and of his sonnes, and waied it for a Waveofferynge before the LORD. Exo. 29. d

And afterwarde toke he all agayne from their hondes, and burned them on the altare, even vpon the burnt offeringe: for it is an offeringe of consecracion for a swete sauoure, even a sacrifice vnto γ LORD. And Moses toke the brest, and waied it a Waveofferynge before the LORD, of the ramme of the offeringe of consecracion: the same was Moses parte, as the LORD commaunded

The XL. Chapter.

A And vpon the eight daye Moses called Aaron and his sonnes, and the Elders in Israel, and sayde vnto Aaron: Take vnto the a yonge calfe for a synofferinge, and a ramme for a burntofferinge, both without blemyshe, and bryng them before the LORDE, and speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Take an he goate for a synofferinge: and a calf, and a shepe, both of a yeare olde, and without blemyshe for a burnt offeringe: and an ore and a ramme for an healthofferinge, that we maye offre before the LORDE: and a meatofferinge myngled with oyle. For to daye shal the LORDE appeare vnto you.

B And they toke what Moses cōmaunded before y dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the whole cōgregacion came nye, and stode before the LORDE. Then sayde Moses: This is it, which the LORDE cōmaunded that ye shulde do, and then shall the glory of y LORDE appeare vnto you. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: Go vnto y altare, and * offre thy synofferinge and thy burntofferinge, and make an attonemēt for the and for the people. Then offre the peoples offeringe, and reconcyle them also, as the LORDE hath cōmaunded.

As for the fat and the kydneyes z the net vpon the leuer of the synofferinge, he burnt the vpon the altare, as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses. The flesh also and the hyde burnt he to fyre without the hoost.

Afterwarde he slewe the burntofferinge, and Arons sonnes brought the bloude vnto him, z he sprentled it rounde aboute vpon the altare. And they brought him the burnt offeringe in peces, z the heade: z he burnt it vpon the altare. And he washed the bowels and the legges, and burnt them aboue vpon the burntofferinge on the altare.

Then brought he the offeringe of the people, and toke the goate, that synescryngge of the people, and slewe it, and made a synofferinge therof, as of the fyrst. And brought the burntofferinge, and dyd as the lawe is: and brought the meatofferinge, and toke his handfull, and burnt it vpon the altare, besyde the burntofferinge of the morninge.

Afterwarde slewe he the ore and the ramme for the healthofferinge of the people. And his sonnes brought him the bloude, which he sprentled vpon the altare rounde aboute. And Aaron lift up his hāde over the people, and blessed them, and came downe from the worke of the synofferinge, burntofferinge, and healthofferinge. B Moses called Misael and Elzaphan the sonnes of Vsiel Aarons vncle, and sayde vnto them: Go ye, and cary youre brethren out of the Sanctuary, without the hoost. And they wente, and caried them forth in their albes without the hoost, as Moses sayde.

Let this be a perpetuall lawe vnto all ye posterities: J^{h} ye maye haue knowlege to discerne, what is holy and unholy, what is cleane & vncleane: & that ye maye teach the children of Israel all the lawes, which the LORDE hath spoken vnto you by Moses.

And Moses sayde vnto Aaron, and vnto Eleazar and Ithamar his sonnes that were left: Take the remnant of the meatofferynge in the sacrifices of J^{h} LORDE, and eate it without leuen besyde the altare, for it is most holy, euen in the holy place shal ye eate it. For it is thy dutye and thy sonnes dutye in the sacrifices of the LORDE: for thus am I commaunded. But the Wanebrest and the Zeneishulder shalt thou eate, and thy sonnes and thy daughters with the in a cleane place. For this dutye is geuen vnto the and thy children in the deedofferynges of the children of Israel. For the Zeneishulder and the Wanebrest to the offerynges of the fat, shalbe brought in, that they maye be waied for a Waneofferynge before the LORDE. Therfore is it thine and thy childrens for a perpetuall dutye, as the LORDE commaunded.

And Moses sought for the goate of the synofferynge, and founde it burnt. And he was angrie at Eleazar and Ithamar & sonnes of Aaron, which were left alyue, and sayde: Wherfore haue ye not eaten the synofferynge in the holy place? for it is most holy, & he hath geuen it you, that ye might beare J^{h} synne of the cōgregacion, to make a gremet for them before the LORDE. Beholde, the bloude of it came not in to the Sanctuary: Ye shulde haue eaten it in the Sanctuary, as I was commaunded.

Aaron sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, this daye haue they offred their synofferynge & their burnt offerynge before J^{h} LORDE. And it is chaunced me after this maner. And shulde I eate of the synofferynge to daye, & be merry before the LORDE? Whan Moses herde that, he was content.

The XI. Chapter.

AND J^{h} LORDE talked wth Moses & Aaron & sayde: Speake vnto J^{h} childre of Israel, and saye: These are the beestes which ye shal eate amonge all J^{h} beestes vpon earth: What so euer hath hofte, & denybeth it in to two clawes, & cheweth cud amonge the beestes, that shal ye eate. But loke what cheweth cud & hath hofte, & denybeth it not, as the Camell, the same is vncleane vnto you, & ye shal not eate it. The Conyes chewe cud, but they denyde not the hofte in to two clawes, therfore are they vncleane vnto you. The hare cheweth cud also, but denybeth not J^{h} hofte in to two clawes, therfore is he vncleane vnto you. And the Swyne denybeth J^{h} hofte in to two clawes, but cheweth not the cud, therfore is it vncleane vnto you. that ye abhorre their carcases. For all that haue not fynnes, z scales in the waters, shall ye abhorre.

C And these shall ye abhorre amonge y fowles, so that ye eate them not: The Aegle, the Goshauke, the Cormorante, the Vultur, y A yce, and all his kynde, and all Ravens w their kynde: the Estrich, y Nightcrow, the Cocow, the Sparow haute with his kynde, the litle Oule, the Storke, the greate Oule, y Backe, the Pellycane, the Swanne, the pye, the Heron, y Jaye with his kynde, the Lap wyngge, and y Swalowe. And what so euer crepeth amonge the fowles, and goeth vpon foure fete, shall be an abhominacio vnto you. Yet these shall ye eate of the fowles that crepe and go vpon foure fete: euen those that haue no knyres aboue vpon y legges, to hoppe withall vpon earch. Of these maye ye eate, as there is the Arbe with his kynde, and the Selaam with his kynde, z the Hargol with his kynde, z the Hagab w his kynde. But what so euer els hath foure fete amonge the fowles, it shall be an abhominacion vnto you, and ye shall take it for vncleane. Who so euer toucheth the carcase of soch, shall be vncleane vntill y euen: and who so euer beareth the carcase of eny of these, shall wash his clothes, and shall be vncleane vntill the euen.

Therefore every beest that hath hoffs, and deuyneth it not in to two clawes, z cheweth not cud, shall be vncleane vnto you. Who so euer toucheth soch, shall be vncleane. And what so euer goeth vpon handes amonge y beestes that go vpon foure fete, shall be vncleane vnto you. Who so euer toucheth the carcases of the, shall be vncleane vntill euen. And he y beareth their carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be vncleane vntill the eue: For soch are vncleane vnto you.

E These shall be vncleane vnto you also, amonge the beestes that crepe vpon earth: y Wesell, the Mouse, the Tode, every one with his kynde, the Hedgehogge, the Stellio, the Lacerte, the Snale, and the Moule, these are vncleane vnto you amonge all that crepe. Who so euer toucheth the deed carcase of the, shall be vncleane vntill the euen. And what so euer eny soch deed carcase falleth vpon, it shall be vncleane, what so euer vessell of wodd it be, or rayment, or slynnne, or bagge. And eny vessell that eny thinge is occupied withall, shall be put in the water, and is vncleane vntill the euen, and then shall it be cleane. All maner of earthen vessell that eny soch carcase falleth in to, shall all be vncleane ne that therin is, z ye shall breake it. All meate which is eatē, that eny soch water cometh in to, is vncleane: z all maner of drynke that is dronke in all maner of soch vessell, is vncleane. And what so euer eny soch carcase falleth vpo, it shall be vncleane, whether it be ouen or kettell, so shall it be broke, for it is vncleane, and shall be vncleane vnto you: Neuertheles the fountaynes, welles, z poudes of water are cleane. But who so euer toucheth their carcases, is vncleane.

And though the deed carcase of eny soch fell vpon the sode that is sowne, yet is it cleane. But whan there is water poured vpon the sode, and afterwarde eny soch deed carcase falleth thereon, then shall it be vncleane vnto you.

Whan a beest dyeth that ye maye eate, he that toucheth the deed carcase thereof, is vncleane vntill euen. Who so eateth of eny soch carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be vncleane vntill the euen. Likewyse he that beareth eny soch carcase, shall wash his clothes, and be vncleane vntill the euen.

What so euer crepeth vpon earth, shall be an abhominacion vnto you, and shall not be eaten. And what so euer crepeth vpon y bely, or all that goeth vpon foure or mo fete, amonge all that crepeth vpon earth, shall ye not eate, for it shall be an abhominacion vnto you. Make not youre soules abhominable, and defyle you not in them, to stayne youre selues: for I am the LORD your God. Therefore shall ye sanctifie youre selues, that ye maye be holy, for I am holy. And ye shall not defyle youre selues on eny maner of crepyng beest, that crepeth vpon earth: for I am the LORD, which brought you out of the londe of Egypte, that I might be your God: therefore shall ye be holy, for I am holy.

This is the lawe ouer y beestes and fowles, z all maner of soules of crepyng beestes in the waters, and all maner of soules y crepe vpon earth: that ye maie knowe to discern what is vncleane z cleane, and what maner of beestes are to be eaten, and which are not to be eaten.

The XII. Chapter.

When the LORD talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye: Whan a woman hath conceived, and beareth a manchild, she shall be vncleane seven dayes, so longe as she suffreth hir disease, and in y eight daye shall y flesh of his foreslynnne be cut awaye. And she shall byde at home thre and thirtie dayes in y bloude of hir purifieng: she shall touch no holy thinge, ner come in to y^e Sanctuary, tyll the daies of hir purifieng be out. But yf she beare a maydechilde, the shal she be uncleane two weekes, so longe as she suffereth hir disease, and sixe and thre score daies shal she hyde at home in the bloude of hir purifieng.

B And whan the dayes of hir purifieng are out, for the sonne or for the daughter, she shal bryng a lambe of one yeare olde for a burnt offerynge, and a yonge pigeon or a turtill dove for a synofferynge to the dore of y^e Tabernacle of wytnesse vnto y^e prest, which shal offre it before the LORDE, and make an attonement for her, and so shal she be clensed from hir bloudysse. This is the lawe for her that beareth a manchilde or maydechilde.

Leuit. 12 But yf she be not able to bryng a shepe, then let hir take two turtill doves, or two yonge pigeons, the one for a burnt offerynge, the other for a synofferynge, then shall the prest make an attonement for her, so that she shal be cleane.

The XIII. Chapter.

AND y^e LORDE spake vnto Moses & Aaron, & sayde: Whan there ryseth vp eny thinge in the skynne of a mans flesh, whether it be a scabbe or a glisterynge whyte (as though there wolde be a leprosy in y^e skynne of his flesh) he shal be brought vnto Aaron the prest, or to one of his sonnes amonge y^e prestes. And whan the prest seyth the plage vpon the skynne of the flesh, that the hayres are turned to whyte, and it seme deper in that place then the other skynne of his flesh, then is it surely a leprosy, therefore shal the prest loke vpon him, and iudge him uncleane.

But whan there is eny whyte plecter in the skynne of his flesh, and yet seme no deper then the other skynne of the flesh, and the hayres be not turned to whyte, the shal the prest shut him vp seven dayes, and on y^e seventh daye loke vpon him: yf the plage seme vnto him as afore, & hath fretted no deper in the skynne, then shall the prest shut him vp yet seven dayes mo. And whan he lokech on him agayne vpon the seventh daye, and fyndeth, that the plage be darkish, and hath fretted no deper in the skynne, the shal he iudge him cleane, for it is but a fityse, and he shal wash his clothes, & then is he cleane.

B But whan the scabbe fretteth farther in the skynne (after that he is sene of the prest, and iudged cleane) and he be now sene of the prest agayne: whan the prest seyth the, & the scabbe hath fretted farther in the skynne, he shal iudge him uncleane, for it is surely a leprosy.

Whan a plage of leprosy is vpon a man, he shal be brought vnto the prest. Whan he seyth and fyndeth, that there is whyte risen vp in the skynne, and the hayre turned vnto whyte, and there be rawe flesh in the fore, the is it surely an olde leprosy in y^e skynne of his flesh, therefore shal the prest iudge him uncleane, and not shut him vp, for he is uncleane already.

But whan the leprosy breaketh out in the skynne, and couereth the whole skynne, from the heade vnto the fore, all that the prest can se, So whan the prest lokech vpon it, and fyndeth, that y^e leprosy hath covered all the flesh, he shal iudge him cleane, for so moch as it is turned all in to whyte vpon him, for he is cleane.

Notwithstondinge yf there be rawe flesh there, in the daye whan he is looked vpon, the is he uncleane. And whan the prest seyth y^e rawe flesh, he shal iudge him uncleane, for he is uncleane, & it is surely a leprosy. But yf the rawe flesh chaunge agayne, and be turned in to whyte, then shall he come vnto the prest. And whan the prest lokech vpon him, and fyndeth, that the plage is turned to whyte, he shal iudge him cleane, for he is cleane.

Whan there is a byle in the skynne of eny mans flesh, and healeth agayne, and afterwarde in the same place there arysen vpon eny whyte thinge, or a glisterynge whyte som what reedish, he shal be sene of the prest. So whan the prest seyth, that it appeareth to be lower then the other skynne, and the hayre turned to whyte, then shall he iudge him uncleane, for it is surely a plage of leprosy broken out of the byle. But yf the prest se and fynde, that the hayres are not whyte, and it not lower then the other skynne, and is darkish, he shal shut him vp seven dayes. If it hath fretted farther in the skynne, then shal he iudge him uncleane, for it is surely a plage of leprosy. But yf the glisterynge whyte abyde styll, and freate no farther, the is it but a prynce of the byle, and the prest shal iudge him cleane.

Whan the skynne of eny mans flesh is hurt with fyre, and the prynce of the burnynge be reedish or whyte, and the prest lokech vpon him, and fyndeth the hayre turned to whyte vpon the mark of the burnynge, & it apeare deper then the other skynne, the

is there surely a leprosy brokē out of þ̄ prynte of y burnynge: therefore shal y prest iudge hī vncleane, for it is a plague of leprosy. But yf the prest se and fynde, that þ̄ hayre vpon the prynte of the burnynge is not turned vnto whyte, ⁊ is no lower then the other slynnne, and is darkish also, he shall shut him vp seven dayes.

And vpon the seventh daye he shall loke vpon him: yf it hath frett farther in y slynnne, then shal he iudge him vncleane, for it is a leprosy. But yf it stōde styll vpo the mark of the burnynge, and frett no farther in the slynnne, and is darkish, then is it a soire in þ̄ mark of the burnynge, ⁊ the prest shal iudge him cleane, for it is but the prynte of the burnynge.

E Whan a man or woman is slynnne vpon the heade or beerd, and the prest seyth the mark, and fyndeth that it appeareth deper then the other slynnne, and the hayre be there goldē and thyme, then shal he iudge him vncleane: for it is a slyrse of leprosy of the heade or of the beerde. But yf the prest se that þ̄ slyrse apere no deper thē the slynnne, and that the hayre is not of a pale colour, he shall shut him vp seuen dayes. And vpo the seventh daye whan he lokeþ, and fyndeth, that the slyrse hath frett no farther, and there be no golden hayre there, and that the slyrse apere no deper then the other slynnne, then let him be shauē: but so that he shauē not of the scabbe, and the prest shall shut him vp yet seuen dayes moe. And vpon the seventh daye whā he lokeþ, and fyndeth that the slyrse hath frett no farther in the slynnne, and that it appeareth no deper then the other slynnne, then shall the prest iudge him cleane. And he shall wash his clothes, for he is cleane. But yf the scabbe freare farther in the slynnne (after þ̄ he is iudged cleane) and the prest lokeþ, and fyndeth, that þ̄ scabbe hath frett farther in the slynnne, then shal he seke nemoir for golden hayres, for he is vncleane. Euerthelesse yf he se that the scabbe stōdeth styll, ⁊ that pale hayres are there rysen vp, then is þ̄ scabbe hole, and he is cleane, therefore shall þ̄ prest iudge him to be cleane.

Whā there is eny glisteringe whyte vpo þ̄ slynnne of the flesh of a man or woman, and the prest seyth there that the glisteringe whyte vanysheth: then is it but a whyte scabbe rysen vp in þ̄ slynnne, ⁊ he is cleane.

Whan the hayres fall out of the heade of a man or a woman, so that he is balde, the same is cleane. If they fall out of his fore hea-de, then is he fore heade balde ⁊ cleane. But yf there be a whyte reedish soire in the balde heade, or balde fore heade, then is there a leprosy rysen vp in the balde heade or balde forehead: therefore shal y prest loke vpon him. And whan he fyndeth the whyte reedish soire rysen vp in his balde heade or balde forehead, then shal þ̄ slynnne of the flesh be as leporous, therefore is he a leporous man and vncleane. And the prest shal iudge him vncleane, because of y same soire vpo his heade.

Who so now is leporous, his clothes shal be rent, and the heade bare, ⁊ the lippes mofled, and shall in eny wyse be called vncleane. And as longe as the soire is vpon him, he shall be vncleane, dwell alone, and haue his dwellinge without the hoost.

Whan the plague of leprosy is in a cloth, whether it be wollen or linnen, in the warpe or west, whether it be linnen or wollen, or in a slynnne, or in eny maner thyng that is made of slynnne. And whan þ̄ plague is pale or reedish in the cloth or slynnne, either in the warpe or west, or in eny maner thyng that is made of slynnne, the same is surely the plague of leprosy, therefore shall the prest loke vpon it. And whan he seyth the plague, he shall shut it vp seven dayes. And vpon the seventh daye whan he seyth that y plague hath frett farther in the cloth, in the warpe or west, in a slynnne or in eny maner thyng that is made of slynnne, then is it a frettinge plague of leprosy, and is vncleane. And the cloth shal be burnt, either warpe or west, whether it be wollen or linnē, or eny thyng made of slynnne, wherein is eny soch plague. For it is a plague of leprosy, and shal be burnt w̄ fyre.

But yf the prest se that the plague hath fretted no farther in þ̄ cloth, either in the warpe or west, or eny thyng made of slynnne, then shal he commaunde to wash the thyng that the plague is in, and shall shut it vp other seven dayes. And whan the prest seyth (after that the plague is washsen) y the plague is not chaūged before his eyes, and hath fretted no farther also, yet is it vncleane, ⁊ shal be burnt w̄ fyre: for it is depe fretted inwarde, and hath made slyrises. Euertheles whan the prest seyth that the prynte is vanyshed after the washyng of it, then shall he rente it out of the clothe, and of the slynnne, out of the warpe or west. But yf it apere eny more in the clothe (either in the warpe, or in the west) or eny maner thyng made of slynnne, then is it a waxinge plague: and with fyre shal it be burnt that eny soch plague is in. ner thyng made of synne that is washt, and the plague be departed from it, it shalbe washten once agayne, & then is it cleane.

This is the lawe ouer the plague of leprosy in clothes, whether they be wollen or linnen (ether in the warpe or in the weft) and in any maner of thyng made of synne, to iudge them cleane or vncleane.

The XIII. Chapter.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: This is the lawe ouer y leper, when he shalbe clensed. He shall come vnto y prest, and the prest shal go out of the hoost, and loke how the plague of leprosy is healed vpon the leper. And he shal commaunde him that is to be clensed, to take two lyuinge byrdes, which are cleane, and Cedar wodd, and purple wolle, and ysop: and shal commaunde the one byrde to be kylled in an earthen vessel ouer springinge water. And he shal take the lyuinge byrde with the Cedar wodd, the purple wolle, and ysop, and dyppe them in the bloude of the slaine byrde vpon the springinge water, and sprenkle it seven tymes vpon him that must be clensed from y leprosy. And so clensi him, and let the lyuinge byrde flye at libertye in to the selde.

¶ But he that is clensed, shal wash his clothes, and shawe of all his hayre, and bathe him self with water, so is he cleane. Afterwarde let him go in to the hoost, yet shal he tarye without his tent seven dayes. And vpon the seventh daye shal he shawe of all y hayre vpon his heade, vpon his beerde, vpon his browes, so that all the hayre be shawen of, and he shal wash his clothes and bathe his flesh in water, then is he cleane.

And vpon the eighth daye shal he take two lambes without blemyshe, and a shepe of a yeare olde without blemyshe, and thre tenth deales of fyne floure for a meateofferynge, myngled with oyle, & a Logg of oyle. The prest shal presente him that is clensed and these thynges before the LORDE, before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shal take y one lambe, and effie it for trespassce offerynge, with the Logg of oyle, & shal waue them, before y LORDE, and afterwarde slaye the lambe, where the synofferynge and burnt offerynge are slayne, namely, in the holy place. For as the synofferynge, so is the trespassce offerynge the prestes also, for it is most holy.

and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fore. Afterwarde shal he take of the oyle out of the Logg, and poure it in to his awne left hande, and dyppe his right synger in the oyle that is in his left hande, and sprenkle the oyle with his synger seven tymes before the LORDE. As for the remnaunt of the oyle in his hande, he shal put it vpon the tyype of the right eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, & vpon the greate too of his right fore, even aboue vpon the bloude of the trespassce offerynge. But the remnaunt of the oyle in his hande, shal he poure vpon the heade of him that is clensed, and make an attonement for him before the LORDE. And he shal make the synofferynge, and reconcyle him that is clensed, because of his vncleynesse. And afterwarde shal he sleve the burnt offerynge, and shal offre it vpon the altare with the meate offerynge, and make an attonement for him, & than is he cleane.

But yf he be poore, and getteth not so much with his hande, then let him take one lambe for a trespassce offerynge to waue it, to make an attonement for him, and a tenth deale of fyne floure myngled with oyle for a meateofferynge, and a Logg of oyle, & two turtyll dones, or two yonge pigeons which he is able to get with his hande, let the one be a synofferynge, the other a burnt offerynge: and let him brynge them vpon the eighth daye of his clensyng vnto the prest before the dore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse before the LORDE.

Then shal the prest take the lambe for the synofferynge, and the Logg of oyle, and shal waue them all before the LORDE, and sleve the lambe of the trespassce offerynge: and take of y bloude of the same trespassce offerynge, and put it vpon the tyype of the right eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, and vpon the greate too of his right fore, and poure of the oyle in to his awne left hande, and with his right synger sprenkle the oyle that is in his left hande, seven tymes before the LORDE.

As for the remnaunt of the oyle in his hande, he shal put it vpon the tyype of the right eare of him that is clensed, and vpon the thombe of his right hande, & vpon the greate too of his right fore, even aboue vpon y bloude of y trespassce offerynge. The other oyle in his hande shal he poure vpon y heade of him y is clensed, to make an attonement for him before the LORD. And afterwarde of the one of the turtill doves or yonge pigeons (acordinge as his handes are able to get) he shal make a synofferynge, of 3 other a burnt offerynge, with the meat offerynge: and so shal the prest make an attonement for him that is clenfed before the LORD.

Let this be the lawe for the leper, which is not able with his hande to get, that belongeth vnto his clensynge.

S And the LORD spake vnto Moses and Aaron, and sayde: Whan ye are come in to the lande of Canaan, which I geue you to possesse: and yf there happen a plage of leprosy in any house of youre possession, then shal he that oweth the house, come and tell the prest, and saye: Methynke there is as it were a plage of leprosy in my house. Then shal the prest commaunde to rydde all thyng out of the house: or euer the prest go in to se 3 plage, lest all that is in the house be made vncleane. Afterwarde shall 3 prest go in, to se the plage.

Now whan he loketh, and fyndeth, 3 the re be holowe strakes yalowe or reedish in the walles of the house, 3 they seme to be lower then the wall besyde, then shall he go out at the dore of the house, and shut vp the house for seven dayes. And vpon the seventh daye whan he cometh, and seyth that the plage hath fretten farther in the walles of the house, the shall he commaunde to breake out the stones wherin the plage is, 3 to cast the in a foule place without the cite, 3 the house to be scraped within rounde aboute, and the dust 3 is scraped of, to be poured without 3 cite in an vncleane place, 3 to take other stones, and put them in the place of the other, and to take other playster, and playster the house.

W Whan the plage then cometh agayne, and breaketh forth in the house, after 3 the stones are broke out, the playster scraped of, and the house playsterd of the new, the shall the prest go in: and whan he seyth that the plage hath fretten farther in the house, then is there surely a frettinge leprosy in the house, and it is vncleane: therefore shal the house be broken downe, both the stones, and 3 tymber and all the dust of the house, and shal be caried out of the cite in to an vncleane place. And who so goeth into the house, whyle it is shut vp, is vncleane vntyll 3 euen. And he 3 lyeth therein, or eateth therein, shal wash his clothes.

But yf the prest se (whā he goeth in) that this plage hath fretted farther in the house, after that the house is new playsterd, the shal he iudge it to be cleane, for the plage is healed. And to a synofferynge for the house, he shal take two byrdes, Cedar wodd, 3 purple wolle, and ysop, and slaye the one byrde in an erthen vessell vpon springinge water, and shall take the Cedar wodd, the purple wolle, the ysop, and the lyuinge byrde, 3 dyppe them in the bloude of the slayne byrde vpon the springinge water, and sprentle the house with all seuē tymes: and so shal he purifie the house with the bloude of the byrde, with the springinge water, with the lyuinge byrde, with the Cedar wodd, with the ysop, and with the purple wolle. And the lyuinge byrde shall he let flye at libertye out of the towne in to the felde, 3 make an attonement for the house, and then is it cleane.

This is the lawe ouer all maner plage of leprosy 3 styse, ouer 3 leprosy of clothes and of houses, ouer sores, scabbes, and glisteringe whyte, that it maye be knowne, whan eny thinge is vncleane or cleane. This is 3 lawe of leprosy.

The XV. Chapter.

AND the LORD talked with Moses and Aaron, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saie vnto him: Whan a man hath a runnyng yssue from out of his flesh, 3 same is vncleane: but the is he vncleane by the reason of this yssue, whan his flesh is fretten of 3 yssue or wounde. Every bed where on he lyeth, 3 what so euer he sitteth vpon, shalbe vncleane.

And he that toucheth his bed shall wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vncleane vntyll the euen.

And he 3 sitteth where he sat, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vncleane vntyll the euen. Who so toucheth his flesh, shal wash his clothes, 3 bathe him self with water, and be vncleane vntyll the euen. Whan he spytteth vpon him that is cleane, 3 same shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, 3 be vncleane vntyll the euen.

And the saddell and what so euer he rydeth vpon, shalbe vncleane. And who so euer toucheth eny thinge that hath bene vnder him, shalbe vncleane vntyll the euen. And who so beareth eny soch, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vncleane vntyll the euen. And whom so euer he toucheth, and washeth not his handes first, the same shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vncleane vntyll the euen. Whan he toucheth an erthen vessell, it shal be broken: but the treen vessell shal be rensed w water. And whā he is cleane of his yssue, he shal nombre viij. dayes, after y he is made cleane, & wash his clothes, & bathe him self w sprynginge water, thē is he cleane. And vpon the eight daye shal he take two turtill doves or two yonge pigeons, and brynge them before the LORDE before the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and gene them vnto the prest. And the prest shal make of the one a synofferynge, of the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for him before the LORDE, as concernyng his yssue.

C Whan a mans sede departeth from him in slepe, the same shal bathe all his flesh w water, and be vncleane vntyll the even. And all clothes, and euery styne that is stained with soch sede, shal he wash with water, & be vncleane vntyll the even. A woman, by whom soch one lyeth, shal bathe hir self w water, and be vncleane vntyll the even.

Whan a woman hath the bloude yssue of hir flesh, she shalbe put aparte viij. daies in to a sundrie place. Who so euer toucheth her shal be vncleane vntyll the eue. And all that she lyeth vpon (as longe as she is put aparte) shalbe vncleane. And that she syttech vpo, shalbe vncleane. And who so euer toucheth hir bed, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vncleane vntyll the even. And who so euer toucheth eny maner thinge that she hath sytten vpo, shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and be vncleane vntyll the eue.

D And yf a man lye with her (whyle she is put aparte) he shalbe vncleane seven dayes, and the bed that he laye vpon, shalbe vncleane.

Matt. 9. c But whan a woman hath hir bloude yssue a longe season, not onely at the tyme of hir naturall course, but also out of the tyme of hir naturall course, then shal she be vncleane so longe as she hath the yssue: eue as she is at the tyme whan she is put aparte, so shal she be vncleane here also. What so euer she lyeth vpon all the tyme of hir yssue, shalbe as hir bed, whan she is put aparte. And all that she syttech vpon, shalbe vncleane, as is hir vncleennesse, whan she is put aparte. Who so euer toucheth eny of them, shal be vncleane, and shal wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, & be vncleane vntyll the even.

12 But yf she be cleane of hir yssue, thē shal she nombre seven dayes, afterwarde shal she be cleane: and vpon the eight daye shal

she take two turtill doves, or two yonge pigeons, and brynge them vnto the prest before the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prest shal make of the one a synofferynge, of the other a burntofferynge, and make an attonement for her before the LORDE, as concernyng the yssue of hir vncleennesse.

Thus shal ye se that the childre of Israel kepe them selues from their vncleennesse, that they dye not in their vncleennesse, whan they defyle my habitation, which is amōge you.

This is the lawe ouer him that hath a runnyng sore, & him whose sede departeth from him in slepe, so that he is vncleane ther of. And ouer her that hath hir bloude yssue, and who so euer hath a runnyng sore, whether it be man or woman, and whan a man lyeth with her that is vncleane.

The XVI. Chapter.

¶ And the LORDE spake vnto Moses (after that Aarons two sonnes were deed, & whan they offered before the LORDE) & sayde: Speake vnto Aaron thy brother, y he go not at all tymes in to y inner Sanctuary, within the vail before the Mercyseate, which is vpon the Arke, y he dye not: for I wyll appeare in a cloude vpon y Mercyseate. But herewithall shal he go in, euen with a yonge bullocke for a synofferynge, and with a ramme for a burntofferynge, and shal put on the holy linnen albe, and haue linnen breeches vpon his flesh, and gyde him with a lynnē girdell, and haue the linnen myter vpon his heade.

For these are y holy garmentes: & he shal bathe his flesh with water, & put them on: & of the cōgregation of the childre of Israel he shal take two he goates for a synofferynge, and a ramme for a burntofferynge.

And Aaron shal brynge the bullocke his owne synofferynge, & make an attonement for himself and his house: and afterwarde shal he take the two goates, and present them before the LORDE, euen before the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shal cast lottes ouer the two goates: the lot of the one goate for the LORDE, and the other for the fre goate. And the goate that y LORDES lot fell vpon, shal he offre for a synofferynge. But the goate, that the fre goates lot fell vpon, shal he present alyue before y LORDE, to make an attonement for him, and to let the fre goate go in to y wyldernes. And so shal he brynge the bullocke of his synofferynge, and make an attonement for him and his housholde, and shal kyl him.

And he shall take of the bloude of the bullocke, and sprenkle it with his synger towards the Mercysate on the foresyde. Thus shall he do vnto the Tabernacle of wytnesse, which is the habitacion with them amonge their uncleynesses.

No man shall be in the Tabernacle of witnesse, whan he goeth in to make an attonement in the Sanctuary, vntyll he go out: and so shall he make an attonement for himself and his house, and for the whole congregacion of Israel. The xvij. Chap.

And he shall go forth, and make his burnt offeringe, and the burnt offeringe of the people, and make an attonement both for himself and for the people, and burne the fat of the synofferynge vpon the altare. The bullocke of the synofferynge, and ʒ goate of the synofferynge (whose bloude was brought in to the Sanctuary to make an attonement) shall be caried out of ʒ hoost, ʒ brent with fyre, both their synnes, flesh, and donge. And he that burneth them, shall wash his clothes, and bathe him self with water, and then come in to the hoost.

And this shall be a perpetuall lawe vnto you: Vpon the tenth daye of the seventh moneth shall ye humble youre soules, and do no worke, whether it be one of youre selues, or a straunger amonge you. For in this daye is youre attonement made, that ye maye be clesed from all youre synnes before the LORDE: therefore shall it be a fre Sabbath vnto you, and ye shall humble youre soules. Let this be a perpetuall lawe.

But the prest that is anoynted, and whose hande was fylled to be prest in his fathers steade, shall make this attonement, and shall put on the linnen clothes, namely the holy vestimētes, so shall he reconcyle the holy Sanctuary, and the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the altare, and ʒ prestes, and all the people of the congregacion. This shall be a perpetuall lawe vnto you, that ye reconcyle ʒ childre of Israel from all their synnes once a yere. And Moses dyd, as the LORDE commaunded him.

D And what man so euer it be amonge you (whether he be of the house of Israel, or a straunger amonge you) that at the huntynge taketh a beast or foule which maye be eaten, he shal poure out the bloude of the same, & couer it with earth: for all flesh lyueth in the bloude.

D Ye shall defyle youre selues in none of the se chinges. For y^e heithen (whom I wil cast out before you) haue stayned them selues in all these, and the lande is defyled therethorow. And their wickednesse wyl I vyset vpon them, so that the lande shall spue out the inhabitants therof. Therfore kepe ye my statutes and lawes, and do not one of these abhominacions, nether one of youre awne selues nether the straunger amonge you (for all such abhominacions haue y^e people of this lode done which were before you, and haue defyled the lande) that the lande spue not you out also, whan ye haue defyled it, as it spewed out the heythē, that were there before you. For who so euer commytte these abhominacions, the same soules shall be roted out from amonge their people. Loke what dyeth alone, or is rent of wylde beestes, shall he not eate, yf he be not vncleane theron: for I am yf LORDE. Therefore shall they kepe my lawes, yf they lade not synne vpon them, & dye therein, whan they vnhalowe them selues in it. For I am yf LORDE, yf halowe them.

B A straunger shall not eate of the holy thinges, ner an housholde gyst of the prestes, ner an hyred seruaūt. But yf yf prest bye a soule for his money, yf same maye eate therof. handes vpon his heade, and let the whole congregacion stone him. And saye vnto the childe of Israel. Who so euer blasphemeth his God, shall beare his synne: and he that blasphemeth the name of the LORDE, shal dye the death. The whole congregacio shal stone him. As the straunger, so shal he of the housholde be also. If he blaspheme the name, he shal dye.

He that slayeth a man, shall dye 3 death. but he that slayeth a beest, shall paye for it. Soule for soule. And he that maymeth his neyghoure, it shal be done vnto him, euen as he hath done: broke for broke, eye for eye, tothe for tothe: euen as he hath maymed a man, so shal it be done vnto him agayne, so that, who so slayeth a beest, shal paye for it: But he that slayeth a man, shal dye. There shal be one maner of lawe amonge you, to 3 straunger as to one of youre selues: for I am the LORDE youre God.

Moses tolde the children of Israel. And they brought him that had cursed, out of 3 hoost, and stoned him. Thus dyd the childe of Israel as the LORDE comaunded Moses.

The XXV. Chapter.

¶ And the LORDE talked with Moses vpon mount Sinai, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the londe, 3 I shal geue you, the londe shal rest vnto the LORDE, so that thou sowest thy felde sixe yeares, and sixe yeares cut y vyues, and gather in the frutes. But in the seuenth yeare the lode shal haue his Sabbath of rest for a Sabbath vnto the LORDE, wherein thou shalt not sowe thy felde ner cut thy vyues.

Loke what groweth of it self after thy haruest, thou shalt not reape it. And the grapes that growe without thy labour, shalt thou not gather, for so moch as it is the yeare of the londes rest: But the rest of the londe shalt thou kepe for this intent, that thou mayest eat therof, thy seruaunte, thy mayde, thy hyrlinge, thy rest, thy strainger with the, thy catell, and the beestes in thy londe. All the increase shal be meate.

And thou shalt nombre seven of these yeare Sabbathes, that seven yeares maye be tolde seven tymes, and so the tyme of the seven yeare Sabbathes make nyne and fourtye yeares. Then shalt thou let the blast of the horne go thorow all youre londe, vpon the tenth daye of the seuenth moneth, euen in 3 daye of attonement. And ye shal haue the fiftieth yeare, and shall call it a fre yeare in 3

Eze. 45. c Londe, for all them that dwell therein: for it is the yeare of Jubilee. Then shall every one amonge you come agayne to his possession and to his kynred: for the fiftieth yeare is y^e yeare of Jubilee. Ye shal not sowe ner reape it that groweth of it self, ner gather the grapes, that growe without labour. For the yeare of Jubilee shall be holy amonge you. But loke what the felde beareth, that shall ye eate. This is the yeare of Jubilee, wherein ye shal come againe every man to his owne.

C Now whan thou sellest ought vnto thy neighbour, or byest any thinge of him, there shal none of you oppresse his brother: but accordinge to the nombre of the yeare of Jubilee shalt thou bye it of him: and accordinge to the nombre of the yeares of increase shall he sell it vnto the. Accordinge to the multitude of the yeares shalt thou raise the pryce, and accordinge to the fewnesse of the yeares shalt thou mynish the pryce: for he shall sell it vnto the accordinge to the nombre of the increase. Therfore let no man defraude his neighbour, but feare y^e God. For I am the LORDE youre God. Wherfore do after my statutes, and kepe my lawes, so y^e ye do them that ye maye dwell safe in the londe. For the londe shal geue you hir frute, so that ye shal haue ynough to eate, and dwell safe therein.

And yf ye wolde saye: What shall we eate in the seventh yeare, in as moch as we shal not sowe, ner gather in oure increase? I wyll sende my blessinge vpon you in the sixte yeare, that it shal bringe forth frute for thre yeare: so that ye shal sowe in y^e eight yeare, and eate of the olde frute vntyll the nyenth yeare, that ye maye eate of the olde tyll new frutes come agayne. Therfore shall ye not sell the londe for ever, for the lode is myne. And ye are straungers and indwellers before me. And in all youre lande shall ye geue the londe to lowse.

But yf his hande can not get so moch, as to haue one parte agayne, then shal it y^e he solde be styll in the hande of the byer vntyll y^e yeare of Jubilee: In y^e same shal it go out, and returne to his owner agayne.

But yf he redeme it not a fore the whole yeare be out then shal he that bought it, and his successors kepe it for ever, and it shall not go out lowse in the yeare of Jubilee. Nevertheless yf it be an house in a vyllage that hath no wall aboute it, it shall be counted like vnto the felde of the couñtre, and maye be redeemed and shal go out fre in the yeare of Jubilee.

The cities of the Leuites, and the houses in the cities that their possession is in, maye allwaye be redeemed. Who so purchaceth ought of the Leuites, shal leaue it in the yeare of Jubilee, whether it be house or cite that he hath had in possession. For the houses in the cities of the Leuites are their possession amonge the children of Israel. But the felde before their cities shal not be solde, for it is their awne for ever.

S Whan thy brother wareth poore, and falleth in decaye besyde the, thou shalt receaue him as a straunger, or gese, that he maye lyue by the: and thou shalt take no vsury of him, ner more then thou hast geue, but shalt feare thy God, that thy brother maye lyue besydes the. For thou shalt not lende him y^e money vpon vsury, ner delyuer him thy meate vpon vantage. And ye shal eate of the olde stoare, and shall let go the olde for plenteousnesse of the new. I will haue my dwellinge amonge you, and my soule shal not refuse you. And I wyll walke amonge you, and wyll be youre God, and ye shalbe my people. For I am the LORDE youre God, which brought you out of the lande of Egypte, that ye shulde not be their bondmen. Pro. 28. 2

But yf ye wyll not harken vnto me for all this, then wyll I make it yet seven tymes more, to punysh you for youre synnes, that I maye breake þe pryde of youre strength, and wyll make youre heauen lyke yron, and youre earth as brassey: and youre trauaile and labo shal be but lost, so that youre lande shall not geue hir increase, and the trees in the lande shal not brynge forth their frute.

If ye walke yet agaynst me, and wyll not harken vnto me, then wyll I make it yet seven tymes more, to punysh you because of youre synnes: & wyll sende wyld beestes amonge you, which shal robbe you, and destroye youre catell, and make you fewer, and youre hye waye shal become waist.

But yf ye wyll not yet be reformed here withall, and wyll walke contrary vnto me, then wyll I walke contrary vnto you also, & wyll punysh you yet seven tymes for youre synnes. And I wyll brynge vpon you a swerde of vengeance, which shall auenge my Testament. And though ye gather you together in to youre cities, yet wyll I sende the pestilence amonge you, and wyll delyuer you in to the handes of youre enemies. men, and your breib shal be deliuered out by weight. And whan ye eate, ye shall not haue ynough.

E If ye wyl not yet for all this harken vnto me, & wyl walke contrary vnto me, then wyl I also walke contrary vnto you in wrath full displeasure, and wyl punyssh you seven folde because of youre synnes, so that ye shal eate the flesh of youre sonnes and doughters. And I wyl destroye youre hye altars, and rete out youre ymages, and wyl cast youre bodies vpon the bodics of youre Idols, and my soule shall abhorre you. And youre cities wyl I make waist, and brynge youre churches to naught, and wyl not smell youre swete odoures.

Thus wyl I make the londe desolate, so that youre enemies shall dwell therein, and make it waist: but you will I scatter amonge the heythen, and drawe out the swerde after you, so that youre londe shal be waist, & youre cities desolate.

S Then shall the londe reioyse in hir Sabbathes, as longe as it lyeth waist, and ye be in the enemies londe. Rec then shal the londe kepe holy daye, and reioyse in hir rest, as longe as it lieth waist, because it coude not rest in youre Sabbathes, whan ye dwelt therein.

And as for them that remaine of you, I wyl make them saynte harced in the londe of their enemies, so that a shakynge leaf shall chace them. And they shall flye from it, as though a siverde persecuted them, and shal fall noman felowynge vpon them. And they shall fall one vpon another (as it were before the siverde) and noman yet chacynge them. And ye shall not be so bolde, as to withstonde youre enemies, and shal perishe amonge the heythen, and the londe of youre enemies shal eate you vp.

And they that are left of you, shall pyne awaye in their mysdede, euen in the enemies londe, and in the mysdedes of their fathers shal they consume awaye. Then shall they knowlege their mysdedes, and the mysdedes of their fathers in the trespase, wherwith they haue trespassed agaynst me, and walked contrary vnto me. Therefore wyl I also walke contrary vnto the, and wyl brynge them in to the enemies londe.

G Then shal their vncircumcysed herte be tamed. And then shall they ende their mysdedes. And I shal thinke vpo my covenante with Jacob, and vpon my couenaunt with Isaac, and vpon my couenaunt with Abraham, and wyl thynke vpon the lode. As for the londe, whan it shal be left of them, it shal reioyse in hir Sabbathes, euen then, whan it lyeth waist, and they cille it not. And they shall make attonement for their mysdedes, because they despysed my lawes, & their soules refused my statutes. Moreover I haue not so refused them, that they shulde be in the enemies londe: nether hane I so utterly abhorred them, that I wolde brynge them to naught, and breake my couenaunt w them: for I am I LORD their God. And for their sake I wyl remembre my first couenaunt, whan I brought them out of I londe of Egypte in the sight of the heythen, & I might be their God. Euen I the LORD.

AND the LORD talked with Moses, & sayde: Speake to I children of Israel, & saye vnto them: If eny man make a speciall vowe vnto I LORD, so I he pryse a soule, then shal this be the valucion: A mā of twentye yeare olde vnto the thre score yeare, shalt thou set at fiftie syluer Sycles, after the Sytle of the Sanctuary: but a woman at thirtie Sycles. If he be thre score yeare olde and aboue, the shalt thou set him at fiftene Sycles whan it is a mā a woman at te Sycles. If he be to poore so to be set, the let him present himself to I prest, & I prest shal value him. Neuertheles he shal value him, acordinge as I haue of him that vowed, is able to get. But yf it be a beest I maye be offred vnto I LORD, all I is offred vnto I LORD of soch, is holy: it shal not be altered ner chaunged, a good for a bad, or a bad for a good. If eny man chaunge it, one beest for another, then shal they both be holy vnto I LORD. But yf I beest be vncleane which maye not be offred vnto I LORD, the shal it be set, before I prest, and I prest shal value it, whether it be good or bad, & it shal stonde at the prestes valynge. The iiii. Chapter.

When the LORDE spake vnto Moses & Aaron, & sayde: Take & summe of the childre of Rahath from amonge the childre of Lew, after their kynreds & fathers houses: from thirtie yeare and aboue vntill fiftie yeare, all that are mete for the warre, that they maye do the worke in the Tabernacle of witnessse. This shal be the office of the children of Rahath in the Tabernacle of witnessse, which is most holy.

1. Par. 24. i

When the hoost breaketh vp, Aaron and his sonnes shall go in, and take downe the wayle, and coner the Arke of witnessse therewith, and laye the couerynge of doo slaynes vpon it, and sprede a whole yalowe clothe aboue thereon, and put his stanes therin. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron, & sayde: Ye shal not destroye the trybe of the kynred of the Kahathites amonge the Levites, but this shal ye do with them, y^e they maye lyue & not dye, yf they touche the most holy. Aaron and his sonnes shal go in, and appoynte enery one vnto his office & charge. But they shal not go in, presumptuously to loke vpo^s y^e Sanctuary, lest they die. And y^e LORDE spake vnto Moses and Aaron & sayde: Take the summe of the children of Gerson also, after their fathers house & kynred, from thirtie yeare & aboue, vntyll fiftie yeare, & appoynte them all y^e are meete for the warre, to haue an office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse.

D This shal be the office of the kynred of the Gersonites, eu^e to serue & to beare. They shal beare the curtaynes of the habitacion and of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and his couerynge and the coueringe of doo skynnes, that is aboue theron, and the hanginge in the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the hanginge aboute the court, which goeth aboute the habitacion and the altare, and their cordes, and all the instrumentes y^e serue for the, and all that belongeth to their occupieng. of charge to waite vpon the apparell. Let this be the office of the kynred of the children of Merari, all that they shall do in the Tabernacle of wytnesse vnder the hande of Jehamar the sonne of Aaron the prest.

And Moses and Aaron with the captaynes of the congregacion, nombred the children of y^e Kahathites, acordinge to their kynreds and houses of their fathers, from thirtie yeare and aboue, vntyll fiftie, all that were meete for the warre, to haue office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the summe was, two thousande, seven hundred and fiftie. This is the summe of the kynred of the Kahathites (which all had seruyce in the Tabernacle of wytnesse) whom Moses and Aaron nombred, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The children of Gerson were nombred also in their kynreds and fathers houses from thirtie yeare and aboue vntyll fiftie, all that were meete for the warre, to haue office in y^e Tabernacle of wytnesse, and the summe was two thousande, syre hundred and thirtie. This is y^e summe of the kynred of the childre of Gerson, which all had to do in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, whom Moses and Aaron nombred, acordinge to y^e worde of y^e LORDE.

The children of Merari were nombred also acordinge to their kynreds and fathers houses, from thirtie yeare and aboue vntyll fiftie, all that were meete for the warre, to haue office in the Tabernacle of wytnesse, & the summe was thie thousande, and two hundred. This is the summe of the kynred of the childre of Merari, whom Moses and Aaron nombred, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses.

The summe of all the Levites, whom Moses and Aaron with the captaynes of Israel tolde, after their kynreds and fathers houses, from thirtie yeare and aboue vntyll fiftie, all that wente in to do enery one his office, and to beare the burthen in y^e Tabernacle of wytnesse, was eight thousande fyue hundred and fourescore, which were nombred acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moses, euery one to his office & charge, as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

The V. Chapter.

Q And y^e LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commaunde the children of Israel, y^e they put out of the hoost, all y^e lepers, and all that haue yssues, and that are defyled vpon the deed, both men and women shall they putt out of the hoost, that they defyle not their tentes, wherein I dwell.

amonge them. And 3 children of Israel dyd so, and put them out of the hoost, as 3 LORDE had sayde vnto Moses.

Leui. 5. c

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel & saye vnto them: Whan a man or woman doth a synne to my body, and offendeth therewith agaynst the LORDE, then hath that soule a trespase vpon it. And they shall knowlege their synne, that they haue done, and shall make amendes for their trespase, even with the whole summe, and put 3 fiftieth parte more thereto, and geue it vnto him, agaynst whom they haue trespassed. But yf there be noman to make the amendes vnto for the offence 3 he hath trespassed agaynst him, then shal the reconcylynge be made vnto the LORDE for the prest, besydes the ramme of the attonemet, wherewith he shal be reconcyled.

B Likewyse all the heueofferynges of all that the children of Israel halowe vnto the LORDE, and offre vnto the prest, shal be his. And who so haloweth any thinge, it shal be his. And who so geueth the prest any thinge, it shal be his also.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan any mans wife goeth asyde, and trespaceth agaynst him, & any man lye with her fleshlye, and the thinge be yet hyd from his eyes, and is not come to lichte that she is defiled, and he can brynge no witenesse agaynst her (for she was not takē therin) and the spiete of gelousye kyndleth him, so that he is gelous ouer his wife: whether she be vncleane or not vncleane, then shal he brynge her vnto the prest, and brynge an offeringe for her, even the tenth parte of an Ephah of barley meele, and shal poure no oyle theron, ner put frankensence vpon it: for it is an offeringe of gelousy, and an offeringe of remembraunce, that remembreth synne.

Then shall the prest brynge her, and set her before the LORDE, and take of the holy water in an earthen vessell, and put of 3 dust that is on the floore of the habitacion, in to the water. And he shal set the wife before 3 LORDE, and vncouer hir heade, and the offeringe of remembraunce which is an offeringe of gelousy shal he laye vpon hir handes. And the prest shal haue in his hande bytter cursinge water, and shal comure the wife, & saye vnto her: If no man haue lyē with the, and thou hast not gone asyde from thy husbande, to defyle thy self, then shall not these bytter cursinge waters hurte the. But yf thou hast gone asyde from thy husbande, so that thou art defyled, and some other man hath lyen with the besyde thy husbande, then shall the prest comure the wife with this curse, and shal saye vnto her: The LORDE sett the to a curse and a conuersion amonge thy people, so that the LORDE make thy thye rotte, and thy wombe to berst. So go this cursed water in to thy body, that 3 wombe berst, and 3 thye rotte. And the wife shal saye: Amen Amen.

D So the prest shall wryte this curse in a byll, and wash it out with the water, and shal geue the wife of the bytter cursinge waters to drynke. And whā the cursinge water is gone in her, so 3 it is bytter vnto her then shal the prest take the gelousy offeringe out of the wyues hande, and waue it for a meateofferynge before the LORDE, and of fre it vpon the altare: namely, he shal take an handfull of the meateofferynge for hir remembraunce, & burne it vpon the altare, & then geue the wife the water to drynke. And whā she hath drynken the water, yf she be defyled and haue trespassed agaynst hir husbande, then shal the cursinge water go in to her, and be so bytter, that hir wombe shal berst, and hir thye shall rotte, and the wife shal be a curse amonge hir people. But yf the same wife be not defyled, but is cleane, then shall it do her no harme, so that she maye be with childe.

This is the lawe of gelousy, whan a wyfe geeth asyde from hir husbande, and is defyled: Or whan 3 spiete of gelousy kyndleth a man, so that he is gelous ouer his wyfe, 3 he brynge her before the LORDE, and that 3 prest do all w her acordinge vnto this lawe. And 3 man shal be gilty of the synne, but the wife shal beate hir mysdeede.

The VI. Chapter.

A And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan a man or woman separateth them selues, to vowe a vowe of abstinence vnto the LORDE, he shal absteyne from wyne and stronge drynke. Wyner of wyne & of stronge drynke shal he not drynke, ner that is pressed out of grapes: he shal nether eate fresh ner drye grapes, so longe as his abstinence endureth. Morouer he shal eate nothinge that is made of the vyne tre, from the vyne cornels vnto the hulle.

As longe as the vowe of his abstinence endureth, there shall no rasoure come vpon his heade, tyll the tyme be out which he absteyneth vnto the LORDE, for he is holy.

And he shall let the heer of his heade growe, and stonde bare openly. All the tyme ouer þ he absteyneth vnto the LORDE, shall he go to no deed. Neither shall he defyle himself at y death of his father, of his mother, of his brother, or of his sister. For the abstinence of his God is vpon his heade, and y whole tyme of his abstinence shall he be holy vnto the LORDE.

B And yf it chaunce eny man to dye sodenly before him, then shall y heade of his abstinence be defyled. Therefore shall he shawe his heade in the daye of his clensynge, that is vpon the seuenthy daye: and vpon y eight daye shall he brynge two turtill doves, or two yonge pigeons, vnto the prest before y doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse. And the prest shall make the one a synofferynge, and the ocher a burnt offerynge, and make an attonement for him, because he defyled himself vpon y deed, and so shall he halowe his heade the same daye, that he maye holde out the tyme of his abstinence vnto the LORDE, and he shall brynge a lambe of a yere olde for a trespasse offerynge. But y daies afore shall be but lost, because his abstinence was defyled.

And he shall brynge his offeringe vnto the LORDE, even as he lambe of a yere olde without blemyshe for a burnt offerynge, 2 a she lambe of a yere olde without blemyshe for a synofferynge, and a ramme without blemyshe for an healt offerynge, 2 a manne without leuened cakes of fyne floure myngled with oyle, and swete wafers anoynted with oyle, 2 their meat offerynges 2 drynt offerynges.

And the prest shall brynge it before the LORDE, and shall make his synofferynge and his burnt offerynge, and y ramme shall he make an healt offerynge vnto the LORDE, with y manne of the vlenended bled. His meat offerynge and drinke offerynge shall he make also. And he shall shawe the heade of the absteiners abstinence before the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnesse, and shall take the heade heer of his abstinence, and cast it vpon the fyre that is vnder y healt offerynge.

D And the sodden shulder of the ramme shall he take, and an vlenended cake out of the manne, and a swete waser, and laye them vpon the handes of the absteiner:

This is the lawe of the absteiner, which voweth his offeringe vnto the LORDE for his abstinence, besydes that, which his hande can get. As he hath vowed, so shall he do acordinge to the lawe of his abstinence.

And the LORDE talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake vnto Aaron and his sonnes, and saye: Thus shall ye saye vnto the childre of Israel, whan ye blesse them.

The xi. Chap.

The Manna was like Coriander seede, and to loke vpon, like Bedellion. And the people ranne here and there, & gathered it, & ground it in Milles, and beate it in morters, and baked it in panes, and made cakes of it, and it had a tast like an oyle cake. And whan THE dew fell vpon the eedes in the night, THE Manna fell therewith.

Now whan Moses herde the people wepe amonge their kynreds, euery one in his eete doie, then the wiath of the LORDE waxed excedinge whote. And it grieved Moses also. And Moses sayde vnto the LORDE: Why verest thou thy seruante? And why synde not THE fauoure in THE sight, THE thou layest THE burthen of all this people vpon me? Hane THE created all this people, or begotten them, that thou shuldest saye vnto me: Carry them in thine armes (as a nurse beareth a childe) vnto the londe, that thou hast swome vnto their fathers: Where shal I get flesh, to geue all this people? They wepe before me, and saye: Geue vs flesh, that we maye eate. I am not able to beare all this people alone, for it is to heuy for me. And yf thou wylt deale thus w me: O Kill me then, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, that I se not my wickednesse.

And the LORDE saide vnto Moses: Gather vnto me THE seventy men amonge the Elders of Israel, whom thou knowest THE they are the Elders in THE people and officers ouer them, and brynge them before the Tabernacle of witnesse, and see them there with thee: then wil I come downe, and talke with thee enen there, & take of thy sperte that is vpon the, and putte it vpon them, that they maye beare the burthen of the people with the, THE thou beare not all alone.

And vnto THE people thou shalt saye: See if ye yet selues agaynst tomorrow, THE ye maye eate flesh: for youre wepyng is come into the eares of the LORDE, ye that saye: Who shal geue vs flesh to eate? for we were well at ease in Egipte. Therfore shal the LORDE

And Moses sayde: Sixe hundredth thousande fore men are there of the people amonge whom I am, and thou sayest: I wyll geue you flesh to eate a moneth longe. Shal the shepe and oxen be slayne to be ynough for them? Or shal all the fishes of the see be gathered together, to be sufficient for them? The LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Is the LORDES hande shortened then? But now shal thou se, whether my wordes shal be fulfilled in dede, or no?

And Moses wote out, and tolde the people & worde of the LORDE, and gathered the seventy men amonge the Elders of the people, & set them rounde aboute the Tabernacle. Then came the LORDE downe in a cloude, & spake vnto him, & toke of the spiete & was vpon him, & put it vpon the senentie Elders. And whan the spiete rested vpon them, they prophesied, and ceassed not.

But in the hoost thereremayned yet two men, of whom the one was called Eldad, & other Medad, & the spiete rested vpon them. For they were wyrtten vp also, & yet were they not gone out vnto the Tabernacle, and they prophesied in the hoost. Then ran there a lad, & tolde Moses, & sayde: Eldad and Medad prophesie in the hoost. Then answered Josua & sonne of Nun Moses sernant (whom he had chosen) and sayde: My lord, Moses, for byddethem. But Moses sayde vnto him: Art thou gelous for my sake? wolde God, & all the people of & LORDE coulde prophesie, and that & LORDE wolde geue them his spiete. So Moses and the Elders of Israel gat them to the hoost.

But not so to my sernant Moses, which is faithfull in all my house. lande of Canaan (which I wil geue vnto y^e children of Israel) of every trybe of their fathers a man, and let them all be soch as are captaynes amonge them. Moses sent the out of the wilderness of Paran, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, soch as were all hea- des amonge the children of Israel, and these are their names:

Samua the sonne of Zacur, of the trybe of Ruben. Saphat the sonne of Hou, of the trybe of Simson. Caleb y^e sonne of Jephune, of the trybe of Iuda. Igeal the sonne of Joseph, of the trybe of Isachar. Hesea the sonne of Nun, of y^e trybe of Ephraim. Palti the sonne of Raphu, of the trybe of Ben Jamin. Gadiel the sonne of Sodi, of y^e trybe of Zabulon. Gaddi the sonne of Susi, of the trybe of Joseph of Manasse. Ammiel the sonne of Gemalli, of the trybe of Dan. Sethur y^e sonne of Michael, of the trybe of Asser. Nahbi the sonne of Vaphsi, of the trybe of Nephthali. Guel the sonne of Machi, of the trybe of Gad. These are the names of the men, whom Moses sent forth to spye out the lande. Also for Hosca the sonne of Nun, Moses called him Josua.

Now whan Moses sent the forth to spye out the lande of Canaan, he sayde vnto the: Go vp southwarde, and get you vpe to the mountaynes, and loke vpon the londe how it is: and the peop'le that dwell therein, whether they be stronge or weake, fewe or many: and what maner of lande it is that they dwell in, whether it be good or bad: y^e what maner of cities they be that they dwell in, whether they be fenced with walles, or not: and what maner of lande it is, whether it be fatt or leane, and whether there be trees therein, or not. Be of a good courage, and bringe of the frutes of the londe. It was even about the tyme, that grapes are first ripe.

They wente vp, y^e spied the lande, from y^e wilderness of Zin vntyll Rehob, as me go vnto Hemath. They wente vp also toward the south, and came vnto Hebron, where Abimam was, and Sesai and Thalmai, the children of Enack (Hebron was buylded seven years before Joan in Egipte.)

C And they came to the ryuer of Escol, and there they cut downe a cluster of grapes, and caused two to beare it vpon a staffe, pomegranates also and fygges. The place is called the ryuer of Escol, because of the cluster of grapes, which the children of Israel cut downe there.

And whan they had spied out the lande, they turned backe againe after fourtye daies, and wente, and came to Moses and Aaron, y^e to the whole congregacion of y^e children of Israel into y^e wilderness of Paran, eue vnto Cadis, and brought them worde agayne, and to the whole congregacion, how it stode, and let them see the frute of the lande, and tolde them, and sayde: We came into y^e lande, whicher ye sent vs, where it floweth with mylke and hony, and this is the frute therof: sawynge that stronge people dwell therein, and the cities are exceedinge stronge and greate. And we sawe the children of Enack there also. The Amalechites dwell in the south countre, the Hethites, and Jebusites and Amontes dwell vpon the mountaynes, but the Cananites dwell by the see, and aboune Iordane.

Howbeit Caleb stylled y^e people that was agaynst Moses, and sayde vnto them: Let vs go vp, and conquire the lande, for we are able to overcome it. But the men that wente vp with him, sayde: We are not able to go vp agaynst that people, for they are too stronge for vs. And of the lande that they had searched, they brought vp an euell reporte amonge the childre of Israel, and saide: The lande that we haue gone thorow to spye out, eateth vp the indwellers therof: and all the people that we sawe therein, are men of great stature. We sawe giauntes there also, yee giauntes as the children of Enack: and we seemed in oure sight as y^e greshoppers, and so dyd we in their sight.

The XIII. Chapter.

Then the whole congregacion toke on, and cryed, and the people wepte y^e night. And all the childre of Israel murmured agaynst Moses and Aaron, and the whole congregacion sayde vnto them: Oh that we had dyed in the lande of Egipte, or that we might dye yet in this wilderness. Wherfore bringeth the LORDE vs into this lande, that oure wyues shulde fall thorow the swerde, and oure children be a praye? Is it not better, that we go agayne into Egypte: And they sayde one to another: Let vs make a captayne, and go into Egypte agayne.

But Moses & Aaron fell vpon their faces before y^e whole cōgregation of the multitude of the childre of Israel. And Josua y^e sonne of Nun, & Caleb y^e sonne of Jephune (which also had spied out the lande) rente their clothes, & spake to the whole cōgregation of the children of Israel: The lande y^e we haue walked thorow to spye it out, is a very good lande. If the LORDE haue lust vnto vs, he shal brynge vs into the same lande, & geue it vs, which is a lāde that floweth with mylke & hony. But in anye wyse rebell not ye agaynst the LORDE, & feare not y^e people of this lande, for we wil eat the vp as bred. Their defence is departed frō them, but the LORDE is wth vs, be not ye afraied of them.

And all the people, bad stonethem wth stones. Then appeared the glory of the LORDE in the Tabernacle of witnesse vnto all the children of Israel, & the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: How longe shal this people blaspheme me? And how longe wil it be, or they beleue me, for all the tokēs that I haue shewed amonge them? I wil synete them with pestilence & destroye thē, & wil make of the a greater & mightier people then this is.

But Moses sayde vnto y^e LORDE: Then shal y^e Egipcians heare it (for wth thy power hast thou brought this people from amonge thē) so shal it betolde the inhabitants of this lande also, which haue herde, y^e thou O LORDE art amonge this people, y^e thou art sene from face to face, & that thy cloude stondeth ouer them, and that thou goest before them in the cloudy piler on the daye tyme, and in the synie piler on the night season. If thou shuldest now slaye this people as one man, then the heychen that haue herde so good repoyte of the, shulde saye: The LORDE was not able to brynge the people in to the lande, that he sware vnto them, therfore hath he slayne them in the wyldernes.

So let the power of the LORDE now be greate, acordinge as thou hast spoken and sayde: The LORDE is of longe sufferaunce and of greate mercy, and forgeneth synne and trespase, and leaueth no man innocent, & vysiteth the mysdede of the fathers vpon the children in to the thirde and fourth generation. O be gracious now vnto the synne of this people acordinge to thy greate mercy, like as thou hast forbore this people also, euer from Egypte vnto this place. And the LORDE sayde: I haue forgenē it, as thou hast saide. But as truly as I lyue, all y^e worlde shal be full of my glory. For of all y^e men that haue sene my glory & my tokens, which I dyd in Egypte and in the wilbernesse, and tempted me new ten tymes, & haue not herkened vnto my voyce, there shall not one se the lande that I sware vnto their fathers: nether shal eny of them that haue blasphemed me, se it. But my seruante Caleb, because there is another maner spiete with him, & because he hath folowed me, him wil I brynge in to the lande, which he hath gone thorow, & his sēde shal conquere it, and y^e Amalechites also and the Cananites, that dwell in the lowe countrees. Tomorrow turne you, and get you to the wyldernes, in the waye toward the reed see.

And y^e LORDE spake vnto Moses & Aaron, & sayde: How longe shal this euell multitude murmur agaynst me? For I haue herde the marmuringe of the childre of Israel, y^e they haue murmured agaynst me. Tell them therfore: As truly as I lyue (sayeth y^e LORDE) I wil do vnto you, even as ye haue spoken in myne eares: Your carcasses shall ye in this wilbernesse. And all ye that were nombred from twentye yere and aboue, which haue murmured agaynst me, shall not come in to the lande (cōcernyng the which I lift vp my hāde, y^e I wolde let you dwell therein) save Caleb y^e sonne of Jephune, and Josua the sonne of Nun.

Your children, of whom ye sayde: They shalbe a spoyle, them wyll I brynge in, so y^e they shal knowe the lande, which ye haue refused. But ye with youre carcasses shall lye in this wilbernesse, and yo^r children shal wander in this wilbernesse fourtye yeres, & beare yo^r whordome, tyll yo^r carcasses be waisted in the wilbernesse, acordinge to the nombre of y^e fourtye dayes, wherin ye spied out the lande. A daye for a yere, so y^e fourtye yeres ye shall beare youre mysdede, that ye maye knowe what it is, whan I with drawe my hande. Euen I the LORDE haue sayde it, & wil do it in dede vnto all this euell cōgregation, that haue lift vp them selues agaynst me: In this wilbernesse shal they be consumed, and there shal they dye.

So there dyed and were plaged before the LORDE all the mē, whom Moses sent to spye out the lāde, & came agayne, and made the whole cōgregation to murmur agaynst it, because they brought vp a mysreporite of the lande, that it was euell. But Josua the sonne of Nun, and Caleb y^e sonne of Jephune

S And they arose early in the mornynge, and wente vnto the toppe of the mountayne, and sayde: Lo, here are we, and will go vnto the place, wherof the LORD hath sayde: for we haue synned. But Moses sayde: wherfore go ye on this maner beyonde the worde of the LORD? It shall not prosper with you: go not vp (for the LORD is not amonge you) ye be not slayne before your enemies. For the Amalechites and Cananites are there before you, and ye shall fall thorow the swerde, because ye haue turned your selues from the LORD, and the LORD shall not be with you.

But they were blynded to go vp to the toppe of the mountaine: neuertheles the Arche of the LORDES couenaunt and Moses came not out of the hooste. Then came downe the Amalechites and Cananites which dwelt vpon that mountayne, and smote them and herowed them, euen vnto Horma.

The XV. Chapter.

And the LORD talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the childre of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande of youre dwellinge, which I shall geue you, and wil do sacrifice vnto the LORD, whether it be a burnt offeringe, or an offeringe for a speciall vowe, or a frewill offeringe, or youre feast offeringes, that ye maye make a sweete sauour vnto the LORD, of oxen or of shepe.

But whan there is a ramme offred, thou shalt make the meat offeringe two eech deales of fyne flour myngled with oyle, of the thirde parte of an hin, and the thirde parte of an hin of wyne also for a drynt offeringe: this shalt thou offre for a sweete sauour vnto the LORD.

But yf thou wilt offre an oxe for a burnt offeringe, or for a speciall vowe offeringe, or for an healt offeringe vnto the LORD, thou shalt brynge to the oxe, the meat offeringe, euen thre tenths deales of fyne flour myngled with half an hin of oyle, and half an hin of wyne for a drynt offeringe. He that is one of youre selues, shall do this, that he maye offre a sacrifice of a sweete sauour vnto the LORD. And yf there dwell a straunger with you, or is amonge your kynnsfolkes, and wil do an offeringe vnto the LORD for a sweete sauour, the same shall do as ye do. Let there be one statute for the whole congregacion, both vnto you and to the straungers. A perpetuall statute shall it be vnto youre posterities, that the straunger be eny as ye before the LORD. One lawe, and one ordinaunce shall be vnto you and to the straunger that dwelleth with you.

And the LORD talked with Moses, and sayde: Speake to the childre of Israel, and saye vnto them: Whan ye come in to the lande, in to which I shall brynge you, so that ye eate the bread of the lande, ye shall heue vp an heue offeringe vnto the LORD, namely, a cake of the firstlinges of youre doves shall ye geue for an heue offeringe: as the heue offeringe of the barne, euen so shall ye geue the firstlinges of youre doves also vnto the LORD, for an heue offeringe amonge youre posterities.

And so shall the priest make an attonement for the whole congregacion of the childre of Israel, and it shall be forgiven them: for it is an ignorance. And they shall brynge these their giftes for an offeringe vnto the LORD, and their syn offeringe before the LORD for their ignorance, and it shall be forgiven the whole congregacion of the childre of Israel, and the straunger also that dwelleth amonge you, for so much as all the people is in such ignorance.

And they gat them vp from the dwellynge of Corah, Dathan, z Abiram. But Dathan and Abirā came out, and stode in the dore of their tentes, with their wyues, and sonnes and children.

And Moses sayde: Hereby shal ye knowe that the LORDE hath sent me, to do all these workes, and that I haue not done them of myne awne hert. If these men dye the cemon death of all men, or be vsited as all men are vsited, then hath not the LORDE sent me. But ys the LORDE make a new thinge, and the earth open hir mouth, and swallowe them with all that they haue, so y they go downe quicke in to hell, the shal ye knowe, that the se men haue blasphemed the LORDE.

And the earth closed vpo them, z so they perished from amonge y congregaciō. And all Israel y were aboute the, fled at y crye of the, for they sayde: That y earth swallowe not vs also. Moreover the fyre came out frō the LORDE, and consumed the two hundred and fyste men, that offred the incense.

And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, z sayde: Speake to Eleasar y sonne of Aaron y priest, y he take vp y censers out of y burninge, z scatter y fyre here z there (for the censers of these synners are halowed thorow their soules) y they maye be beatē in to thine plates, z fastened vpon y altare. For they are offred before y LORDE, z halowed: and they shalbe a token vnto y childre of Israel.

And Eleasar the prest toke y brasen censers which they y were burnt, had offred, z bet the to plates, to fasten the vpon y altare for a remēbraunce vnto y childre of Israel y no straunger (and he that is not of y seve of Aaron) come nye to offre incense before the LORDE, y it happē not vnto him as vnto Corah and his companye, a cōdyngē as the LORDE sayde vnto him by Moses.

And Moses z Aarō wēte in before y Tabernacle of witness. And y LORDE spake vnto Moses z sayde: Get you out of this cōgregacion, I wil shortly consume the. And they fell vpon their faces. And Moses sayde vnto Aaron: E Take the cēser z put fyre therin frō of the altare, z laye incēse thereon, z go soone to the cōgregacion, z make an attonement for them. For the wrath is gone out from the LORDE, and the plage is begōne amonge the people.

And Aaron dyd as Moses sayde, z ranne in the myddest amonge y congregaciō. And beholde, y plage was begōne. And he burnt incēse z made an attonemēt for the people, z stode betwene the deed z the luyngē, and the plage ceased. But there were fourtene thousande, and seue hundredē deed in the plage, besydes them that dyed aboute the busynesse of Corah. And the congregacion had no water, z they gathered them selues together agaynst Moses z Aaron, z the people chode with Moses, z sayde: Wolde God y^e we had perished, wth an oure brethre perished before the LORDE. Wherfore haue ye brought the congregacion of the LORDE into this wilderness, y^e we shulde dye here with oure catell? And wherfore haue ye brought vs out of Egipte into this place, where men can not sowe, where are nether fygges, ner vynes, ner pomegranates, z wherether there is no water to drynke?

And Moses z Aaron w^{re} fro the congregacion vnto y^e dore of y^e Tabernacle of witnesse, z fell vpon their faces. And the glory of the LORDE appeared vnto them. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Take the staffe, z gather the cōgregacion together, thou z thy brother Aaron, z spake vnto the rocke before their eyes, z it shal geue his water. And thus shalt thou pronyde thē water out of the rocke, z geue the congregacion drynke, and their catell also.

B Thē toke Moses the staffe before y^e LORDE, as he commaunded him, z Moses z Aaron gathered the congregacion together before the rocke, z sayde vnto thē: Heare ye rebellions: Shal we pronyde you water out of this rocke? And Moses lift vp his hande, z smote y^e rocke wth the staffe two tymes. Then came y^e water out abundantly, so y^e the cōgregacion dranke, and their catell also.

me before y^e childre of Israel, ye shal not bring this congregacion into the lande that I shal geue thē. This is y^e water of strife, where the childre of Israel stroue wth the LORDE and he was sanctified vpon them.

And Moses sent messengers fro Cades vnto y^e kyng of y^e Edomites: This worde sendeth the y^e brother Israel: Thou knowest all y^e trauayle that happened vnto vs, how that oure fathers wente downe into Egipte, z how we haue dwelt in Egipte a longe tyme, z how the Egiptians dealte euill with vs z o^{ur} fathers. And we cryed vnto y^e LORDE which herde oure voyce, and sent his angell, z hath brought vs out of Egipte: And behold, we are at Cades in y^e are without the borders of y^e lande. O let vs go thorow thy lande, we wyl not go thorow y^e felde ner by nyardes, ner drynke the water out of the foue taynes. We wyl go the hye strete, and turne nether to y^e right hande ner to y^e lefte, tyll we be come past y^e borders of thy countre.

But the Edomite answered him: Thou shal not go by me, or I wyl come agaynst y^e with y^e swerde. The childre of Israel saide vnto him: We wil go y^e comō hye waye, z yf we o^{ur} oure catell drynke of thy water, we wil paye for it: we wil do nothyng, but passe thorow on fote onely. But he sayde: Thou shalt not go thorow, And the Edomites came out agaynst them with a mightie people z a stronge hande. Thus y^e Edomites demed to graunte Israel passage thorow the borders of the lande. And Israel turned awaye from them.

And the childre of Israel brake vp fro Cades, and came with the whole congregacion vnto mount Hor. And the LORDE spake vnto Moses z Aaron at mount Hor: Harde vpon the coastes of y^e lande of y^e Edomites, z sayde: Let Aaron be gathered vnto his people: for he shal not come in to y^e lande y^e I haue geuen vnto y^e childre of Israel, because ye were disobedient vnto my mouth at the water of strife. Take Aaron and Eleasar and his sonne, and brynge them vp vnto mount Hor, and strype Aaron out of his vestimentes, and putthē vpon Eleasar his sonne and there shall Aaron be gathered (vnto his people) and dye.

Then dyd Moses as the LORDE cōmanded him, and they wente vp vnto Mount Hor in y^e sight of the whole congregacion. And Moses toke Arons clothes, z putthē vpon Eleasar his sonne. And the children of Israel departed, and pitched in Oboth. And from Oboth they wente on, and pitched in Jgim by Abarim

The xxi. Chap.

In the wyldernesse ouer agaynst Moab, on the East syde. From thence departed they, and pitched by the ryuer of Sared. From thence departed they, and pitched on this syde Arnon, which is in the wyldernesse, and cometh out of the coastes of the Amorites. For Arnon is the border betwixte Moab and the Amorites. Wherfore it is spoken in the booke of the warres of the LORD: And go with violence both on the ryuer of Arnon, and on the founteyne of the river, which boweth downeward to dwell at Ar, and leaneth thereon, to be the border of Moab.

And from thence they came to the well. This is the well, wherof the LORD spake vnto Moses: gather the people together, I wil geue them water. Then sange Israel this songe, and they sange one after another ouer the well: This is the well, that the prynces dygged: the nobles amonge the people haue digged it thorow the teacher and their stauces.

And from this wilderness they wente vnto Mathana, and from Mathana vnto Nahaliel, and from Nahaliel to Bamoth, and fro Bamoth vnto the valley that lieth in the felde of Moab at the toppe of Pisga, and turneth towarde the wilderness.

And Israel sent messaungers vnto Sihon the kynge of the Amorites, and caused to saye vnto him: Let me go thorow thy lande, we wyl not turne in to thy felde ner in to the vynyardes: nether will we drynke the water of the welles, the hye strete wil we go, till we be past the borders of thy countre.

D Horbeit Sihon wolde not geue the children of Israel licence to go thorow the coastes of his lande, but gathered all his people together, and wente out agaynst Israel in the wilderness. And whan he came to Jahaza, he fought agaynst Israel. Neuertheless Israel smote him with the edge of the swerde, and conquered his lande from Arnon vnto Iabock, and vnto the children of Ammon. For the borders of the children of Ammon were stryde. So Israel toke all these cities, and dwelt in all the cities of the Amorites, namely at Heshbon, and in the townes belonginge thereto. For Heshbon the cite was Sihons the kynge of the Amorites, and he had foughten before with the kynge of the Moabites and conquered all his lande from him vntyll Arnon.

Wherfore it is sayde in the prouerbe: Come vnto Heshbon, let vs buylde and prepare the cite of Sihon. For there is a fyre gone out of Heshbon, and a flamme from the cite of Sihon, which hath consumed Ar of Moab

Their glory is come to naught from Hesbon vnto Dibon: waisted are they vnto Nophah, which reacheth vnto Mediba. Thus dwelt Israel in the lande of the Amouites.

Deu. 2. 2 And Moses sent out spyes vnto Jahesar, & they toke the townes belongynge thereto, & cōquered the Amouites y^e were therein. And they turned, & wente vp the waye toward Basan. Then Og the kynge of Basan wote out agaynst them wth all his people, to fight in Edrei. And y^e LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Feare him not, for I haue geuen him wth his lande & people in to thy hande, & thou shalt do with him, as thou dydest with Sihon the kynge of the Amouites, which dwelt at Hesbon. And they smote him, & his sonnes, & all his people (so y^e there remayned none) & cōquered the lande. Afterwarde wote y^e children of Israel, & pitched in y^e felde of Moab beyonde Jordane by Jericho.

The XXII. Chapter.

Now when Balac y^e sonne of Ziphor sawe all that Israel had done vnto the Amouites, and that the Moabites were sore afrayed of the people (y^e was so greate) and that the Moabites stode in feare of the children of Israel, he sayde vnto y^e Elders of the Madianites: Now shal this heape lyke vp all that is aboute vs, euē as an oxe licketh vp the grasse in the felde. (And Balac y^e sonne of Ziphor was kynge of the Moabites at that tyme.)

Num 22. 2 And he sent out messaungers vnto Balaam the sonne of Beor, which was an interpreter. (The same dwelt by the water of the lande of y^e children of his people) that they shulde call him, and he caused to saye vnto him: Beholde, there is come out of Egypte, a people, which couereth y^e face of y^e earth, and lyeth ouer agaynst me. Come now therfore, and curse me this people, for they are to mightie for me, yf peradventure I might be able to smyte them, and to dryue them out of the lande. For I wote, that whom thou blessest, he is blessed: and whom thou cursest, he is cursed.

B And the Elders of the Moabites wente on with y^e Elders of the Madianites, and had the rewarde of y^e soyth sayenge in their handes, and they came vnto Balaam, & tolde him the wordes of Balac. And he saide vnto thē: Tary here all night, & I will buntge you worde agayne, euen as the LORDE shal saye vnto me. So y^e prynces of y^e Moabites abode with Balaam.

And God came vnto Balaam, & sayde: What men are these, which are with y^e? Balaam sayde vnto God: Balac y^e sonne of Ziphor the kynge of the Moabites hath sent vnto me: Beholde, there is a people come out of Egypte, and conereth the face of the earth, come now therfore, & curse me thē, yf peradventure I maye be able to fight with them, & to dryue thē out. But God sayde vnto Balaam: Go not with them, & curse not that people, for they are blessed.

E Then rose Balaam vp in the mornynge, & sayde vnto the prynces of Balac: Get you vnto youre londe, for the LORDE wyll not suffer me to go with you.

And the prynces of y^e Moabites gat thē vp, came to Balac, & saide: Balaam refuseth to come wth vs. Then sent Balac yet a greater cōpany of prynces, & more honorable thē they. When they came to Balaam, they tolde him: Balac y^e sonne of Ziphor senderth y^e this worde: Oh refuse not to come vnto me, for I wyll promote the vnto hye honoure, & wil do what so euer thou sayest vnto me. Come I praye the, curse me this people.

Num 24. 2 Balaam answered, & sayde vnto y^e seruantes of Balac: If Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer & golde, yet coulde I not go beyonde y^e worde of the LORDE my God, to do litle or greace. Neuertheles tary ye here this night, & I maye wete, what the LORDE wil saye more vnto me. Then came God to Balaam by night, & saide vnto him: If the men are come to call the, get the vp then, and go with thē: but what I shal saye vnto the, that shalt thou do.

B Then rose Balaam vp in the mornynge, & saddled his Ass, & wente wth the prynces of y^e Moabites. But the wrath of God waxed whore, because he wote. And the angell of y^e LORDE stode in the waye, to withstōde him. But he rode vpo his Ass, & two seruantes

Then stode the angell of the LORDE in þe pathe by the vynyardes, where there were walles on both the sydes. And whan þe Asse sawe the angell of the LORDE, she wrenshed vnto the wall, z thrust Balaams foot vnto the wall. And he smote her agayne. The wēte the angell of the LORDE farther, z stode in a narrow place, where there was no waye to turne, nether to the righte hāde ner to þe left. And whan the Asse sawe the angell of the LORDE, she fell downe vnder Balaam. Then was Balaams wraich furious, z smote the Asse with a staffe.

E Then opened the LORDE the mouth of þe Asse, and she sayde vnto Balaam: What haue I done vnto the, that thou hast smytten me now thre tymes? Balaam sayde vnto þe Asse: Because thou hast mocked me. Oh þe I had a swerde now in my hande, I wolde kyll the. The Asse sayde vnto Balaam: Am not I thine Asse, which thou hast rydden vpon in þe tyme vnto this daye? Was I euer wont to do so vnto the? He sayde: No.

Then opened the LORDE the eyes of Balaam, þe he sawe þe angell of the LORDE stōdunge in þe waye, z a drawe swerde in his hāde. And he enclyned him selfe, z bowed downe to his face. And the angell of the LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherfore hast thou smytten thine Asse now thre tymes? Beholde, I am come out to resiste þe, for þe waye is frowarde, z contrary vnto me. And þe Asse saue me, z annoyded frome thre tymes: or els yf she had not turned a syde fro me, I had slayne the, z saued the Asse alyue.

S Then sayde Balaam vnto þe angell of þe LORDE: I haue synned, for I wist not, that thou stodest in the waye agaynst me. And now yf it displease þe, I wil turne agayne. The angell of þe LORDE saide vnto him: So wiche the mē: but thou shalt speake nothinge els, then þe I shal saye vnto þe. So Balaam wente forth to the princes of Balac. Whan Balac herde þe Balaam came, he wente out to mete him (in the cite of the Moabites þe lieth on the coaste of Arnon, which is on þe vttemost border) z sayde vnto him: Dyd not I sende for þe to call the? Wherfore camest thou not then vnto me? Thinkst thou þe I am not able to promote þe vnto hono? Balaam answered him: Lo, I am come vnto þe. But how can I saye eny thinge els, the þe

The XXIII. Chapter.

Ald in the mornynge, Balac toke Balaam, and they wēte vp to the hye place of Baal, that from thēce he might se vnto the vttemost parte of þe people. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: Buylde me here seven altares, and pronyde me here seven bullockes, and seven rammes. Balac dyd as Balaam sayde. And both Balac and Balaam offred, on every altare a bullocke z a ramme. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: Stonde thou by þe burnt offerynge, I wil go, yf haply the LORDE wil mete me, z call me, þe I maye tell the, what so euer he sheweth me. And he wente his waye, as he sayde.

And þe LORDE met Balaam. And Balaam saide vnto him: Seven altares haue I prepared, and offred on every altare a bullocke and a ramme. The LORDE put þe worde in Balaams mouth, and sayde: Go agayne vnto Balac, and saye on this wise. And whan he came agayne vnto him, beholde, he stode by his burnt offerynge, with all þe prynces of the Moabites.

Then toke he vp his parable, z sayde: Balac the kynge of the Moabites hath caused to ferme out of Syila from the mountaynes towarde the East, (z sayde:) Come, curse me Jacob: come, besye me Israel. How shall I curse, whom God curseth not? How shal I besye, whom þe LORDE desyereth not? For fro þe toppe of þe stonye rockes I se him, z from the hilles I beholde him. Beholde, þe people shal dwell by thēselues, z shal not be reuēced amonge the heithē. Who can tell the dust of Jacob, z the nombie of the fourth parte of Israel? My soule die yf deach of yf righteous, and my ende be as the ende of these.

The saide Balac vnto Balaam: What doest thou vnto me? I caused to set þe for to curse myne enemies, z beholde, thou blessest the. He answered z saide: Must I not kepe z speake þe, which the LORDE putteth in to me mouth? Balac saide vnto him: Come to me yet vnto another place, fro whence thou mayest se þe vttemost parte of them, z not se them all, and curse me thē there.

And he toke him vp to a fre place, enē vnto the toppe of Pisga, z buyloed seven altares, and offred on every altare a bullocke z a ramme. And he sayde vnto Balac: Sten

And whan he came to him agayne, beholde, he stode by his burnt offeringe with the prynces of the Moabites. And Balac sayde vnto him: What hath the LORD sayde?

And he toke vp his parable, & sayde: Rys vp Balac & heare, marke my testimony wth thine eares thou sonne of Ziphor. * God is not a man y^e he shulde lye, ner a mans childe y^e any thinge shulde repente him. Shulde he saye and not do? Shulde he speake & not make it good? Beholde, I am brought hither to blesse, I blesse, & can not go backe there fra. There is no weerynesse sene in Jacob, ne ther eny labour in Israel. The LORD his God is wth him, & the kynges trompet is amōge thē. God hath brought thē out of Egipte, his strength is as of an Unicorn. For there is no Soicrye in Jacob, & no Soyth saye in Israel. Whan the tyme cometh, it shal be saide vnto Jacob, & to Israel, what God doth. Beholde, the people shal ryse vp as a Lyoness, & heue vp him self as a Lyon. He shal not lye downe, tyll he eate of the pray, and drynke the bloude of the slayne.

Then sayde Balac vnto Balaam: Thou shalt nether curse him ner blesse him. Balaam answered, & sayde vnto Balac: Haue I not tolde the: All y^e the LORD speaketh, I must I do? Balac saide vnto him: Oh come, I wil brynge y^e to another place, yf it maye happily please God, y^e thou mayest curse thē there. And he brought him vp to the toppe of mount Peor, y^e boweth towarde the wyldernesse. And Balaam sayde vnto Balac: Buylde me here seven altares, and prouyde me seven bullockes and seven rammes. Balac dyd as Balaam sayde, and offered on euery altare a bullocke vnd a ramme.

The XXIIII. Chapter.

Now whan Balaam sawe y^e it pleased the LORD, that he shulde blesse Israel, he wente not as he dyd before to sette witches, but set his face straight towarde the wyldernesse, lifte vp his eyes, and sawe Israel, & how they laye acordinge to their trybes, and the spiete of God came vpon him, and he toke vp his parable, and sayde: Thus sayeth Balaam the sonne of Beor: Thus sayeth the man whose eyes are opened: Thus sayeth he which heareth the wordes of God, which sawe the vision of y^e Almightye: which fell downe, and his eyes were opened.

How goodly are thy trees O Jacob, and thy habitacions O Israel: Euen as the brode valleys, as the gardens by the waters syde, as y^e tentes which the LORD hath plaed, & as the Cedar trees vpon y^e water. The water shal flowe out of his boter, and his fede shal be a greate water. His kyng shal be hyer then Agag, & his kyngdome shal be exalted. God hath broughte hi out of Egipte, his strength is as of an unicorn. He shal cate vp the zeichen his enemies, and grynde their bones to poulder, and shute thozow them with his arrowes. * He hath layed him downe as a Lyon and as a Lyoness. Who wyll rayse him vp? Blessed be he, y^e blesseth the: and cursed, that curseth the.

Thē was Balac furious i wiath against Balaam, & smote his hādes together, & sayde vnto him: I haue called the, y^e thou shuldest curse myne enemies, and beholde, thou hast blesseth thē now thre tymes: & now get the hēce to y^e place. I thoughte y^e I wolde promote the vnto honoure, but the LORD hath kepte the backe from that worshipec.

Balaam answered him: Tolde not I thy messaungers (whome thou sendest vnto me) & sayde: * If Balac wolde geue me his house full of syluer and golde, yet coulde I not go beyonde the worde of the LORD, to do either euell or good after myne awne hert: but what y^e LORD speaketh, that must I speake also. And now beholde, for so moch as I go to my people, come therfore, I wyll shewe the what this people shal do vnto y^e people after this tyme.

And he toke vp his parable, and saybet Thus sayeth Balaam the sonne of Beor: Thus sayeth y^e man, whose eyes are opened: Thus sayeth he which heareth the wordes of God, & y^e hath the knowlege of y^e hyst. eue he y^e sawe y^e visio of y^e Almightye, & fell downe, & his eyes were opened: I shal se him, but not now: I shal beholde him, but not nie at hāde. There shal a starre come out of Jacob, & a cepter shal come vp out of Israel, * and shal smyte y^e rulers of the Moabites, and ouercome all the children of Seth.

* Edom shal be his possession, and Seir shal be his enemies possessio, but Israel shal do manfully. Out of Jacob shal come he y^e hath dominion, and shal destroye the remnant of the cities.

And whā he sawe y^e Amalechites, he toke vp his parable, & sayde: Amalec the first amōge the zeichen, * but at y^e last thou shalt perishe vterly. And whan he sawe the Ammites, he toke vp his parable, & sayde: Set

If a damsell make a vowe vnto 3 LORDE, and bynde herself, whyle she is in hir fathers house, and vnmarrid, and hir vowe or bonde that she maketh ouer hir soule, cometh to hir fathers eares, & he holde his

But yf hir father forbyd her y same daye that he heareth it, the shal no vowe ner bonde that she hath boude hir self withall ouer hir soule, be of vayne. And the LORD shalbe mercifull vnto her, for so moch as hir father forbad her.

B If she haue an husbāde, & hath a vowe vpon her, or yf she haue letten go out of hir lippes a bōde ouer hir soule, & hir husbāde heare it, & holdeth his peace therat, the same daye that he heareth it, then hir vowe & bonde wherewith she hath boude hir self ouer hir soule, shal stonde in effecte. But yf hir husbāde forbyd her the same daye that he heareth it, the is the vowe losse y she hath vpon hir, & the bonde also that she hath letten go out of hir lippes ouer hir soule, and the LORD shalbe gracious vnto her.

And they sayde morouer: If we haue founde fauoure before the, the geue thy seruantes this londe in possession, and we wyl not go ouer Jordane.

Moses sayde vnto them: Your brethren shall go to the warre, and wyl ye tary here? Wherfore turne ye þe herdes of the children of Israel, that they shoulde not go ouer in to the londe that the LORDE shall geue them? Thus dyd your fathers also, whan I sent them out from Cabes Bernea, to spye out þe londe. C And beholde, ye are rysen vp in youre fathers steade, to increase the nombre of synfull men, & to augmente yet the wrath & indignacion of the LORDE agaynst Israel. For yf ye turne you backe from folowinge him, he shal yet leaue them more in the wilderness, & so shal ye destroye all this people.

Then stepte they to him, & sayde: we wyll but buylde shepescoldes here for oure shepe & catell, & cities for o' children: As for oure selues, we will go ready armed before the children of Israel, tyll we haue broughte them vnto their place: Oure childre shal remayne in the fenced cities, because of þ indwellers of the londe. From the mountaynes of Abarim they departed, and pitched in þe felde of the Moabites besyde Jordane ouer agaynst Jericho. Fro Beth haichmoch vnto the playne of Sitim laye they in the felde of the Moabites.

S And the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the felde of the Moabites, by Jordane ouer agaynst Jericho, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel, and saie vnto them: Whā ye are come ouer Jordane in the lande of Canaan, ye shal dryue out all the inhabiteurs before youre face, and plucke downe all their pilers, and all their ymages of metall, and destroye all their hye places: that ye maye so take the londe in possession and dwell therein. For I haue geue you the londe to enioye it.

And the londe shall ye deuide out by lotte amonge youre kynreds. Vnto those that are many, shall ye deuide the more: And vnto them that are fewe, shall ye deuide the lesse. Euen as the lotte falleth there vnto euery one, so shal he haue it, a cordinge to the trybes of their fathers.

E But yf ye wyll not dryue out the inhabiteurs of þe lande before yd face, then they whō ye suffre to remayne, shall become thornes in youre eyes, and barres in youre sydes, ⁊ shall vex you in the londe where ye dwell. Then wil it come to passe, that I shal do vnto you euen as I thought to do vnto them.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

E And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: Commaunde the childre of Israel, and saie vnto them: Whā ye come into the londe of Canaan, the londe þe falleth to youre inheritance, shall haue his borders in the londe of Canaan. But the West quarter shal be this: namely the greete see, let y be youre border toward the West.

B The North quarter shal be this: Ye shall compass from the greete see vnto mount Hor. And from mount Hor ye shall compass cyll a man come vnto Hemath, that the outgoynge therof be the coast of Zedada, and that the border of the same go out vnto Siphion, and that the goynge out of it be at Hazor Enan. Let this be youre North quarter.

And youre East quarter shall ye compass from Hazor Enan vnto Sephan, & let the coaste go downe from Sephan and Ribla on the East syde of Ain. The let it go downe, & reache vnto the syde of the see of Chinnereth Eastwarde, and come downe by Jordane, so y the goynge out of it be the Salt see. Let this be youre londe with the borders therof rounde aboute.

C And Moses commaunded the children of Israel, and sayde: This is youre londe that ye shal deuide out amonge you by lot, which the LORDE hath commaunded to geue vnto the nyne trybes, and to the halfe trybe. * For the trybe of the children of Ruben after their fathers house, and the trybe of the children of Gad accordinge to their fathers house, and the half trybe of Manasse haue receaued their porcion. Thus the two trybes and the halfe trybe haue their enheritaunce already, on this syde Jordane, ouer agaynst Jericho, Eastwarde.

D And the LORDE spake vnto Moses, and sayde: These are y names of the men, which shal deuide the londe amonge you. Eleasar the prest, and Josua the sonne of Nun. And the capayne of every trybe shal ye take, to deuide the londe.

D And these are the names of the men: Caleb the sonne of Jephune of the trybe of Iuda. Semuel the sonne of Ammihud of the trybe of Simeon. Elidad y sonne of Cision of the trybe of Ben Jamin. Buti the sonne of Jagli of the trybe of the childre of Dan. Samuel the sonne of Ephod, of the trybe of the children of Manasse amonge the children of Joseph. Remuel the sonne of Siphchan, of the trybe of the children of Ephraim. Elizaphan the sonne of Parnach, of the trybe of the childre of Zabulon. Palthiel the sonne of Man, of the trybe of the childre of Issachar. Abihud the sonne of Selomi, of y trybe of the children of Asser. Pedahel the sonne of Ammihud, of the trybe of the children of Nephthali. These are they whom y LORDE commaunded, that they shulde deuide the inheritaunce vnto the children of Israel in the londe of Canaan.

The XXXV. Chapter.

A And the LORDE spake vnto Moses in the felde of the Moabites by Jordane ouer agaynst Jericho, & sayde: Commaunde the childre of Israel, that they geue vnto y Levites of the inheritaunce of their possession, cities to dwell in. The suburbs also aboute the cities shal ye geue vnto the Levites, that they maye dwell in the cities, and in the suburbs to haue their catell, and substance, and all their bestes.

The suburbs which ye geue vnto y Levites, shal reache fro the wall of y cite outward, a M. cubites rounde aboute. Thus ye shal measure without the cite on y East syde, two thousande cubites: & on y South syde, two thousande cubites: & on y West syde, two thousande cubites: & on y North syde, two thousande cubites, so y the cite be in the myddes. This shal be their suburbs.

* And amonge the cities which ye shal geue vnto the Levites, ye shall geue the sixe fre cities, that he which comitteth a slaughter, maye flye thither. Besydes the same ye shal geue the yet two & fourtie cities: so y all y cities which ye geue vnto y Levites, be eight & fourtye w their suburbs. And of y same ye shal geue the more, from the y haue moche in possession amonge the children of Israel: & the lesse from them, that haue litle in possession. Every one (accordinge to his enheritaunce that is deuided vnto him) shal geue of his cities vnto the Levites.

And the LORDE talked w Moses & saide: Speake to the childre of Israel, & saye vnto the: When ye come ouer Jordane in to y londe of Canaan, ye shall chose out cities to be fre cities, y who so comytteth slaughter vnawares, maye flye thither. And soch fre cities shal be amonge you because of the auenger of bloude, that he which hath commytted slaughter, dye not, cyll he stonde in iudgment before the congregacion. And of these cities which ye shal geue, there shal be sixe fre cities. Thre shal ye geue on this side Jordane, and thre in the londe of Canaan.

These are the sixe fre cities, both for y childre of Israel & for the straungers, & for soch

And thou my lorde hast commaunded thorow the LORDE, that the enheritaunce of & brother Zelaphead shulde be geue vnto his daughters. These are the wordes that Moses spake vnto all Israel on the other syde Iordane in the wilderness, in the playne felde toward the reed see, betwene Paran, Thophel, Laban, Hazeroth, and Disahab, eleven daies iourney from Horeb, by the waye of mount Seir vnto Cades Bernea. And it fortuneth the first daye of the eleuenth moneth in the fortieth yere, that Moses spake vnto þe children of Israel according vnto all as þe LORDE commaunded him, after he had smyten Sihon þe kynge of the Amourites which dwelt at Hesbon: and Og the kynge of Basan, that dwelt at Astaroth, and at Edrei.

On the other syde Iordane in þe lande of the Moabites, beganne Moses to declare this lawe, and sayde: The LORDE our God spake vnto vs vpon mount Horeb, and sayde: Ye haue bene longe ynough vpon this mountayne, turne you, and departe hence, that ye maye come to the mountaynes of the Amourites, and to all their neighbours in þe felde, vpon mountaynes, and in the valleys toward the South and toward the see syde, of the lande of Canaan: and to mount Libanus, euen vnto the greate water Euphrates. Beholde, I haue deliuered you the lande, go in, and take it in possession, which the LORDE swaue vnto yo fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that he wolde geue it vnto the, and their sede after them.

And I charged youre iudges at þe same tyme, and sayde: Heare youre brether, and iudge righteously betwene enery man and his brother, and the stranger. Ye shall knowe no personne in iudgment, but shall heare the small as well as the greate, and be afrayed of no man: for the Iudgment is Gods. Like as he dyd with the childre of Esau, which dwell vpo mount Seir, whan he destroyed the Horites before them: and let them possesse the same, so that they haue dwelt in their steade vnto this daye. And the Caphthorims came out of Caphther, and destroyed þ Anims (þ dwell at Hazarim euen vnto Gaza) & there dwelt they in their steade.

Get you vp now, and departe, and go ouer the ryuer Arnon. Beholde, I haue geue Sihon y kynge of the Amorites at Hesbon in to thy hande: go to and conqwere, and provoke him vnto battayll. This daye wyll I begynne, so that all nacions vnder all the heauen, shal feare & drede þ: In so moch þ whā they heare of the, they shal tremble and quake for thy commynge.

Thou shalt sell me meate for money, that I maye eate: & water shalt thou sell me for money, that I maye drinke. But Sihon the kynge at Hesbon wolde not let vs go by him: for the LORDE þ God hardened his mynde, & made his hert rough that he mighte delyuer him in to thy hādes, as it is come to passe this daye.

And þ LORDE sayde vnto me: Beholde, I haue begonne to delyuer Sihon with his londe before the: go to and cōquere, and pos-sesse his lode. And Sihon came out w all his people to fight agaynst vs at Jahza. But the LORDE oure God delyuered him in to oure handes, so that we smote him with his childre and all his people.

Then toke we all his cities at the same tyme, and destroyed vterly all the cities, men, women, and childre, and let none remayne: saue the catell, which we caught to oure selues, & the spoyle of the cities that we wanne from Aror, which lyeth vpon the ryuer syde of Arnon, and from the cite on the ryuer vnto Gilead. There was no cite that coulde defende it selfe from vs: the LORDE oure God delyuered vs all before vs. But vnto the londe of the childre of Ammon thou camest not, ne to all that was on the ryuer Jabor, ne to þ cities vpo þ mountai nes, ne vnto what so euer the LORDE oure God forbad vs.

The III. Chapter.

When we turned vs, & wente vp þ waie vnto Basan. And Og y kynge of Basan, came out w all his people to fight agaynst vs at Edrei. But the LORDE sayde vnto me: Be not afrayed of him, for I haue delyuered him & all his people w his londe in to thy hande: & thou shalt do w him, as thou dydest w Sihon kynge of þ Amorites, which dwelt at Hesbon. Thus þ LORDE oure God delyuered Og y kynge of Basan in to oure handes also with all his people: so that we smote him, tyll there was no-thinge left euer vnto him.

Then wanne we at the same tyme all his cities, & there was not one cite that we toke not from him, euen thre score cities, the whole region of Argob in the kyngdome of Og at Basan. All these cities were strōge, with hye walles, gates, and barres, besyde many other vnwalled townes.

And we vterly destroyed them, as we dyd with Sihon the kynge at Hesbon. All the cities destroyed we vterly, and the men, women, and childre. But all the catell and spoyle of the cities caughte we for oure selues.

Thus toke we at the same tyme the londe out of the honde of the two kynges of the Amontes beyonde Jordane, from the ryuer of Arnon vnto mount Hermon (which the Sidons call Sirion, but the Amontes call it Senir) all the cities vpon the playne, and all Gilead, and all Basan vnto Salcha and Edrei, the cities of the kyngdome of Og at Basan. And I besoughte the LORDE at the same tyme, & sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thou hast begonne to shewe þe seruante thy greatnesse and thy mightie hāde. For where is there a God in heauen & earth, that can do after þe workes and after thy power? O let me go & se þe good londe beyonde Jordane, & goodly hye countre, and Libanus.

Get the vp to the toppe of mount Pisga, and lifte vp thine eyes toward the west, and toward the north, and toward the south, and toward þe east: and beholde it with thine eyes, for thou shalt not go ouer this Jordane. And geue Josua his charge, and corage him, and bolde him, for he shal go ouer Jordane before the people, and shal deuyde vnto them the londe, that thou shalt se. The hath the LORD thy God chosen, that thou shouldest be his awne peculiar people, from amonge all nacions that are vpon the earth.

It was not because of the multitude of you aboue all nacions, that y LORD had lust vnto you and chose you. (For ye were the leest amonge all nacions) but because he loued you, and that he might keepe the oath, which he sware vnto youre fathers, he broughte you out with a mightie hade, and delyuered you fro the house of bondage, out of the hande of Pharaos kynge of Egypte.

Thou shalt vnderstande now therfore, that the LORD thy God is a mightie and true God, which kepeth couenaunt and mercy vnto them that loue him, and keepe his commandementes, euen thorow out a thousande generacions: And rewardech them that hate him, before his face, that he maye destroye them: and wyll not be longe in taryenge to rewarde them (before his face) that hate him. Kepe now therfore the commaundementes, and ordinaunces and lawes, which y commaunde the this daye, that thou do the after.

And yf ye shall heare these lawes and kepe them, and do the after, then shal the LORD thy God also keepe the couenaunt and mercy with the, which he sware vnto thy fathers: and shal loue the, blesse the, and multiplye the: he shal blesse the frute of y wombe, and the frute of thy londe, thy corne, wyne and oyle, the frute of thy kyne, and the frute of thy shepe, in the londe that he swa re vnto y fathers to geue the. Blessed shalt thou be aboue all nacions, there shal no vnfutefull personne be in the, ner amonge thy catell. The LORD shall put from the all maner of dyssease, and shal brynge vpon the none of y euell sicknesses of Egypte, which thou hast sene, but shall put them vpon all those that hate the.

Thou shalt brynge to naught all the nacions, which the LORD thy God shal delyuer the. Thine eye shall not spare them, and their goddes shalt thou not serue, for that shalbe thy decaye. If thou shalt saye in thyne hert: These nacions are mo then y, how can y dryue them out? Feare them not. Remember what the LORD thy God did vnto Pharaos and to all the Egyptians, thorow grea te tentacions (which thou hast sene with thine eyes) thorow tokens and rodders, thorow a mightie hande and a stretched out arme, wherewith the LORD thy God brought the out. Euen so shal the LORD thy God do vnto all y nacions of whos thou art afrayed.

The LORD y God also shal sende hornettes amonge them, vntyll they that remayne and hyde themselves from the, be destroyed. Be not thou afrayed of them: for the LORD thy God is in the myddes of the, euen the mightie and fearfull God. He (euen the LORD thy God) shall rote out the nacions before the by lile and lile. Thou canst not consume them at one time, y the bestes of the felde increase not vpon the. The LORD thy God shall delyuer them before the, and shall finite them with a grea te slaughter, tyll they be destroyed. And he shal delyuer their kyn ges in to thine hade, and thou shalt destroye their names from vnder heauen. There shal no man make the resistance before the, vntyll thou haue destroyed them.

The ymages of their goddes shalt thou burne with fyre, & shalt not desyre the syluer or golde that is on them: or to take it vnto the, that thou snare not thy self therin: for it is abhominacion vnto the LORD y God. Therfore shalt thou not brynge the abhominacion in to thine house, y thou be not damned as it is, but shalt utterly desyre it, and abhorre it, for it is damned.

The viij. Chapter.

Al the commaundementes which y commaunde y this daye, shal ye keepe, so y ye do the after, that ye maye lyue and multiplye, and come in, and take possession of the lande, which y LORD swa re vnto youre fathers: and thynke vpon all y waies thorow the which the LORD thy God hath led the this fortye yeares in the wyldernes, that he mighte chasten the, and proue the, to wete what were in thyne herte, whether thou woldest keepe his commaundementes or no. And the eyes of the LORDE thy God are allwayes therin from the begynnynge of the yeare vnto the ende,

If ye shal herken therfore vnto my commaundementes, which I commaunde you this daye, & ye loue the LORDE youre God, and serue him, with all youre hert and with all youre soule & then wyl I geue rayne vnto youre lode in due season, early and late, that thou mayest gather in thy corne, thy wyne and thine oyle: and I wyl geue grasse vpon thy felde for thy catell, that ye maye eate & be fylled.

Euen as a Keo or Hert is eaten, maist thou eat it: both the cleane and vncleane maie eat it indifferently.* Onely beware, that thou eat not the bloude: for the bloude is the life. Therefore shalt thou not eat the life w the fleshy, but shalt poure it out like water vpon the earth, y thou mayest prospere, and y children after the, whan thou hast done that which is righte in the sighte of the LORDE.

But whan thou halowest oughte that is thine, or makest a vowe, thou shalt take it, and brynge it vnto the place, that the LORDE hath chosen, and do thy burnt offerynges with the fleshy and bloude vpon the altare of the LORDE thy God. The bloude of thine offryng shalt thou poure vpon the altare of the LORDE thy God, and eat the fleshy. Take hede, and heare all these wordes, which I commaunde the, y it maye go well with the, and thy children after y for euer, & whan thou hast done y which is righte and acceptable in the sighte of the LORDE thy God.

Whan the LORDE y God hath rote out the heithen before the, whither thou comest into conquerethem, & whan thou hast conquered them, & dwelt in their londe, beware then, y thou fall not in the snare after the, whan they are destroyed before the: & that thou are not after their goddes, & saye: Eue as these nacions haue serued their goddes, so wil I do also.* Thou shalt not do so vnto the LORDE thy God. For all that is abhominacion vnto the LORDE, & that he hateth, y same haue they done vnto their goddes. For they haue burnt euen their sonnes and their daughters with fyre vnto their goddes.

For ye shall walke after the LORDE youre God, and feare him, and kepe his commaundementes, & herken vnto his voyce, and serue him, and cleue vnto him.* As for that prophet or dreamer, he shal dye: because he hath spoken to turne you awaye from the LORDE youre God (which broughte you out of the londe of Egypte, and delyuered you from the house of bondage) to thrust the out of the waye, which the LORDE thy God commaunded the to walke in, and so shalt thou put awaie the euill from the.

Thine eye also shal not pytie him, and thou shalt haue no compassion vpon him, ner kepe him secrete, but shalt cause him to be slayne: thine hande shal be first vpon him, to cause him to be slayne, and then the handes of all the people. He shalbe stoned to death, because he wente aboute to thrust the awaye from the LORDE thy God, which broughte the out of the londe of Egypte from the house of bondage: y all Israel maye heare, and feare him, and do nomore soch euill amonge you.

If thou hearest in eny cite which y LORDE thy God hath geue the to dwell in, that it is sayde: There are certayne men, the children of Belial, gone out from amonge you, and haue disceaued the inhabitants of their cite, and sayde: let vs go, and serue other goddes, whom ye knowe not.* Then shalt thou seke, make search, and enquire diligently.

But the Egyptians intreated vs euill, and troubled vs, and layed an harde bondage vpon vs. Then cried we vnto the LORD, the God of our fathers. And the LORD herde our cryenge, and looked on our aduersite, labour, and oppressing, and brought vs out of Egypte with a mighty hande, and a stretched out arme, and with greates terriblenesse thow tokens and wonders, and hath broughte vs vnto this place and hath geuen vs this londe, that floweth with mylke and hony. Therefore brynge I now the first frutes of the londe, which the LORD hath geuen vs. And thou shalt leaue them before the LORD thy God, and geue thanks before the LORD thy God, and reioyse ouer all the good, that the LORD thy God hath geuen thee, and thyne house: thou and the Levite, and the straunger that is with thee.

And thou shalt saye before the LORD thy God: I haue broughte that halowed is, out of my house, and haue geuen it vnto the Levite, the straunger, the fatherlesse, and the wedowe, accordinge to all thy commaundement which thou hast comaunded me. I haue not transgressed thy commaundementes, ner forgotten them. I haue not eaten thereof in my heynynesse, ner taken awaye thereof in vncleynesse. I haue not geue thereof vnto the deed. And Moses with the prestes and Levites spake vnto all Israel, and sayde: Take heed and heare O Israel: This daye art thou become the people of the LORD thy God,

Thou shalt eate the frute of thine awne body, the fleshy of thy sonnes and of thy daughters, which the LORDE y^e God hath geue the, in that straytnesse and sege, wherewith thine enemye shal besege the: so that it shal greue the man y^e a fore hath lyued tenderly and in voluptuousnes amonge you, to loke vpon his brother and vpon his wife y^e lyeth in his bosome, and on the sonne that is left ouer of his sonnes, lest he shulde geue any of them of the fleshy of his children that he eateth, in as moch as there is nothinge left him in that straytnesse and sege, wherewith thine enemye shal besege y^e within all thy gates. And the woman that a fore hath lyued so tenderly and voluptuously amonge you, that she durste not set the sole of hir foete vpon the grounde for tendernes and voluptuousnes, shal be grieved to loke vpon hir husbande that lieth in hir bosome, and on hir sonne, and on hir daughter: enen because of hir daughters which she hath nourished betwixte hir legges in hir lappe, and because of hir sonnes that she hath borne: for she shal eate them secretly for very scarcenesse of all thinges, in the straytnesse and sege, wherewith thine enemye shal besege y^e within all thy gates.

For I make not this couenaunt and this are here this daye, and stonde with vs before the LORDE our God, and also with them that are not here with vs this daye. For ye knowe how we haue dwelt in the londe of Egipte, and how we came thorow the myd-des of the heithen, whom ye passed by, and sawe their abhominacions and their Idols, wodd and stone, syluer and golde, which were with them: Lest there be amōge you man or woman, or an housholde, or a trybe, which turneth awaye his hert this daye from the LORDE our God, to go and to serue ʒ godhert, and saye: Tush, it shal not be so euell.

I wil walke after the meanynge of myne awne hert, that the broken maye perishe with the thyristie.

Then shall not the LORDE be mercifull vnto him, but his wrath and gelousy shall smoke ouer soch a man, and all the curses that are wyrtten in this booke, shall lighte vpon him: and the LORDE shal put out his name from vnder heanen, and shall sepa-rael, acordinge vnto all the curses of the couenaunt, that is wyrtten in the booke of this lawe.

D So the posterities of youre childre which shal ryse vp after you, and the straungers that come out of farre countrees, shall saye (whan they se the plagues of this londe, and the diseases wherwith the LORDE hath smytten it) that he hath brent vp all their londe with brymstone and salt, so ʒ it can not be sowne, ner is frutefull, necher groweth there eny graspe therein. Like as Sodom, Gomor, Adama and Seboim are ouerhis wrath and anger.

Then shall all nacions saye: Wherfore hath the LORDE donethus vnto this lon-they haue forsaken the couenaunt of ʒ LOR-the londe of Egipte) and they were, and ser-ued other goddes, and worshipped the, euen soch goddes as they knewe not, and whom he had not denyed vnto them. Therfore the wrath of the LORDE waxed wroth ouer this londe, to brynge vpon it all the curses

LORDE thy God turne thy captiuyte, and haue compassion vpon the, and shal gather hath scattered the.

And though thou werest thrust out vnto
the vtremost partes of the heanen, yet shal the LORDE thy God gather the from then-

But all these curses shall the LORD thy God laye vpon thine enemyes, and vpon them that hate the and persecute the. But thou shalt turne, and herten vnto the voyce of the LORD, to do all his commaundementes, which I commaunde the this daye. And the LORD thy God shall make the plenteous in all the workes of thine handes, in the frute of thy body, in the frute of thy catell, in the frute of thy londe to good.

For the LORD shall come, to reioyse ouer the to good, as he reioysed ouer thy fathers, so that thou herten vnto the voyce of the LORD thy God (to kepe his commaundementes and ordinaunces, which are wyrtten in the booke of this lawe) and turne vnto the LORD thy God with all thy hert and with all thy soule.

For the commaundement which I commaunde y this daye, is not so wonderfull for the, ner so farre, ner yet in heauen, that thou needest to saye: Who wil go vp for vs in to heauen, and brynge it vnto vs, that we maie heare it and do it? Neither is it beyonde the see, that thou needest to saye: Who wyll go ouer the see for vs, and fetch it vs, that we maye heare it, and do it? But yf thou turnest awaye thine hert, so that thou wilt not heare, but fall a waye, to worshippe other goddes and to serue them, I certifie you this daye, that ye shal perishe, and not lyue longe in the londe, whither thou goest ouer Iordane to possesse it.

When Moses wente, & spake these wordes to all Israel, and saide vnto them: I am this daye an hundred and twētye yeare olde, I can nomore go out and in: the LORD also hath sayde vnto me: Thou shalt not go ouer this Iordane. The LORD thy God himselfe shal go before the ouer Iordane: and he himselfe shal destroye these nacions before the, that thou mayest conquere them: and Josua he shal go ouer before the. as the LORD hath sayde. And the LORD shal do vnto them, as he dyd vnto Sihon and Og the kynges of the Amorites and vnto their lōde, which he destroyed.

Now whan the LORD shal deliuer the before you, ye shal do vnto them accordyng vnto all the commaundementes which I haue commaunded you. Be manly and stronge, feare not, and be not a frayd of them. For the LORD thy God himselfe shal go with the, and shal not fayle the, ner forsake the.

And Moses called Josua, and sayde vnto him before all Israel: Be stronge and bolde, for thou shalt brynge this people in to the londe, which the LORD hath sworne vnto their fathers to geue them, and thou shalt parte it amonge them by lotte. But the LORD himselfe that goeth before you, euē he shal be with the, and shal not fayle the, ner forsake the: Feare not, and be not a frayd.

And Moses wrote this lawe, and deliuered it vnto the prestes the children of Leui (which bare the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORD) and vnto all the Elders of Israel.

And he commaunded them, and sayde: At the ende of seuen yeares, in the tyme of the 3^{re} yeare, in the feast of Tabernacles whan all Israel come to appeare before the LORD thy God, in the place that he shal chose, thou shalt cause this lawe to be proclaimed before all Israel in their eares, namely, before the congregacion of the people, both of men, women, children, and thy straungers which are within thy gates: that they maye heare and lerne to feare the LORD their God, and be diligent to do all the wordes of this lawe: and that their children also which knowe nothings, maye heare and

D And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, thy tyme is come that thou must die, call Josua, and stonde in the Tabernacle of witnesse, that I maye geue him a charge. Moses wente with Josua, and stode in the Tabernacle of witnesse. And the LORDE appeared in the Tabernacle in a cloudy pyler

And the LORDE sayde vnto Moses: Beholde, thou shalt slepe with y^e fathers, and this people wyll rylse vp, and go a whoung after strange goddes of the londe into the which they come, and wyll forsake me, and breake the couenaunt which I haue made wth them. And then shall my wrath waxe whote agaynst them, at the same tyme, and I shal forsake the, and hyde my face fro^m them, that they maye be consumed. And so whan moch aduersitee & trouble cometh vpoⁿ the, they shal saye: Is not all this euell come vpoⁿ me, because God is not with me? But I shal hyde my face at the same tyme because of all the euell that they haue done, in that they haue turned vnto other goddes.
1. Reg. 9. b

E Wryte now therfore this songe, & teach it the children of Israel, and put it in their mouth, that this songe maye be a witnesse vnto me amonge the children of Israel. For I wil brynge them into the londe which I sware vnto their fachers, that floweth with mylke and hony. And whan they eate, and are full and fatt, they shal turne vnto other goddes, and serue them, and blasphememe, and breake my couenaunt.

S So Moses wrote this songe at the same tyme, and taughte it the children of Israel. And the LORDE gaue Josua the sonne of Nuna a charge, and sayde: Be stronge and bolde, for thou shalt brynge the children of Israel into the londe, which I sware vnto them, and I wil be with the.

And vnto Levi he sayde: Thy perfectnes and y lighte be acordinge vnto the man of thy mercy, . whō thou hast tempted at Massasa, whan ye stroue by the water of stryfe. . vnto him: This is the londe that I swaie vnto to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and sayde:
I wyll geue it vnto thy sede. Thou hast se-

So Moses y^e seruaunt of the LORDE died there in the londe of the Moabites, accordin-ried him in a valley, in the londe of the Moabites ouer agaynst the house of Peor. And

And Moses was an hundred and twentye dymme, and his chekes were not fallen. And the children of Israel weped for Moses in þe felde of the Moabites thirtie daies, and the dayes of the wepyng and mournynge for Moses were fulfilled.

And Josua the sonne of Nun was filled with þe spere of wysdome (for Moses had layed his hande vpon him) and the children of Israel herkened vnto him, and dyd as the LORDE commaunded Moses. And there arose no prophet more in Israel, like vnto Moses, whom the LORDE knewe face to face in all tokens and wonders (which the LORDE sent him to do in þe londe of Egypte, vnto pharao, and to all his seruaunall this mightie han-which Moses dyd in the sighte of Josua the sonne of Nun sent out two spyes preuely from Secim, and sayde vnto them: Go your waye, loke vpon the londe and Jericho. They wente forth, and came in to & house of an harlot, called Rahab, and laye there. Then was it tolde the kynge of Jericho: Lo, there are men come in this nighte from the childre of Israel, to spy the londe. Then sent the kynge of Jericho vnto Rahab, saynge: Delyuer the men forth that are come vnto the in to thy house, for they are come to spye out the whole londe. Now as for the twomen, the woman had hyd them, and sayde: There came men in vnto me in deede, but I knewe not whence they were. And at the shutting in of the gate whan it was darcke, they wente out, so & I can not tell whither they be go-

D And ouer the men layed them downe to slepe, she wente vp to them vnto the house toppe, and sayde vnto the: I knowe that the LORDE shal deliuer you the londe, for the feare of you is fallen vpon vs, and all the inhabiteurs of the londe are discouraged at youre commynge. For we haue herde, how the LORDE dried vp the water in the reed see before you, whā ye departed out of Egipte: and what ye dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amorites, Sihon and Og beyonde Jordane, how ye rote them out, and destroyed them. And sence we herde therof, oure hert hath failed vs, nether is there a good stomacke more in eny man, by the reason of youre commynge. For the LORDE ys God is both the God aboue in heauē and beneth vpon earth.

C Swear now then vnto me: euen by the LORDE (for so moch as I haue dealte mercifully with you) that ye wyl also shewe mercy vpon my fathers house: and geue me a true token, that ye wyl let my father lyue, and my mother, my brethien, and my sisters, and all that they haue, and deliuer oure soules from death. The men sayde vnto her: If we shewe not mercy and faithfulnessse vpon the, whan the LORDE genereth vs the londe, then let oure soule dye for you, so farre as thou betrayest not oure deuycce. Then let she them downe thorow the wyndowe by a coarbe: for hir house was in the wall of the cite, and in the wall was hir dwellinge. And she sayde vnto them: Go youre waye vp to the mountaynes, lest they mete you that folowe vpon you: and hyde youre selues there thre dayes, tyll they be come againe & folowe after you: and then get you youre waye.

D But the men sayde vnto her: As for this ooth that thou hast taken of vs, we wyl be discharged of it whan we come in to & londe, excepte thou knyttest in the wyndowe & lyne of this rosecoloured rope (& thou hast lettē vs downe with all) & gatherest vnto & into the house, thy father, thy mother, & brethien & all thy fathers house. And loke who so euer goeth out at the dore of thy house, his bloude be vpon his owne heade, and we guileffe. But of all those & are in & house, ys a hande be layed vpon the, their bloude shalbe vpo o' heade. And ys thou betrayest eny of this deuycce of ours, the wil we be discharged of the ooth & thou hast takē of vs. She sayde: Let it be so as ye saye, and she let

They wente on their waye, and came to the mountaynes, and remayned there thre dayes, tyll they that folowed vpon them were come agayne: for they soughte them thorow every strete, & yet they founde them not. So the two men turned agayne, and departed from the mountaynes, and passed ouer (Jordane) and came to Josua the sonne of Nun, and tolde him every thinge, as they had founde it, & they sayde vnto Josua: The LORDE hath genē vs all the londe in to oure handes, and all they that dwell in the londe, are sore afrayed of vs.

The III. Chapter.

Ald Josua rose vp early, and they departed from Secim, & came vnto Jordane, he and all the children of Israel, and remayned there all night, afore they wete ouer. But a fter thre dayes wente the officers thorow & hoost, and commaunded the people, and sayde: Whan ye se the Arke of & couenant of the LORDE youre God, and the prestes from amōge the Levites bearinge it, departe ye then out of youre place, and folowe after (but so, that there be rowme betwene you and it by two thousande cubites, & that ye come not nye it) & ye maye knowe what waye ye shulde go: for ye neuer wente that waye afore.

And Josua sayde vnto the people: Followe youre selues, for tomorrow shal & LORDE bunge wonderous thinges to passe amōge you. And vnto the prestes he sayde: Beare ye the Arke of & couenant, and go before the people. Then bare they the Arke, and wente before the people. And the LORDE sayde vnto Josua: This daye wyl I begynne to make the greate in the sighte of all Israel, that they maie knowe, how that like as I was with Moses, so am I with the also. And commaunde thou the prestes that beare the Arke, and saye: Whan ye come before in the water of Jordane, stonde styll.

C And Josua sayde vnto the children of Israel: Come hither, & heare the worde of the LORD your God. He sayde moreover: By this shall ye perceane, that the lynyng God is amonge you, and that he shall drye out before you & Cananites, Hethites, Hivites, Pherezites, Girgoshites, Amorites and Jebusites. Beholde, the Arke of the couenaunt of him & hath domynion ouer all londes, shall go before you in Iordane. Take now therfore twelue men out of y^e trybes of Israel, out of euery trybe one. Then dyd the children of Israel as Josua commaunded them, and bare twelue stones out of the myddes of Iordane (as the LORD had sayde vnto Josua) accordinge to the nombre of the trybes of the children of Israel, and broughte the same with them in to the lodginge, and leste them there. And Josua set vp twelue stones in & myddes of Iordane, & here & fete of the prestes stode, that bare & Arke of the couenaunt: and there they be yet vnto this daye. As for & prestes that bare & Arke, they stode in the myddes of Iordane, vntyll all was perfourmed that the LORD charged Josua to saye vnto & people: accordinge as Moses gaue Josua in commaundemēt. Ios. a. b When all the kynges of y^e Amorites that dwelt beyonde Jordane westwarde, and all the kynges of y^e Canaanites by the see syde herde, how y^e LORDE had dryed vp the water of Jordane before the children of Israel, tyll they were come ouer: their hert sayled them, nether was there eny more corage in them at the presence of the children of Israel.

Exod. 4. c At the same tyme sayde y^e LORDE vnto Iosua: Make the knyues of stone, & circuncyse the children of Israel agayne the seconde tyme. Then Iosua made him knyues of stone, and circuncysed the childre of Israel vpon the toppe of the foresayd kynnes. And the cause why Iosua circuncysed all the males of the people y^e were come out of Egypte, is this: for all the men of warre dyed in y^e wil- dernesse by the waye, after they were depar- ted out of Egypte: for all the people that came forth, were circuncysed.

Nu. 14. d But all the people that were borne in y^e wyldernesse by the waye (after they depar- ted out of Egypte) were not circuncysed: for the children of Israel walked fortye yea- res in the wyldernesse, vntyll all the people of the men of warre that came out of Egip- te, were consumed, because they hardened not vnto the voyce of the LORDE, like as the LORDE swaue vnto them, that they shulde not see the londe, which the LORDE swaue vnto their fathers to geue vnto vs, enen a londe that floweth with mylke & ho- nye: their children which were come vp in their steade, dyd Iosua circuncyse: for they had the foresayd kynne, and were not circuncy- sed by the waye.

Then fell Iosua downe to the earth vpon his face, & worshipped him, and sayde vnto him: What sayeth my LORDE vnto his seruaunt? As for Jericho, it was shut & kepte be- cause of the childre of Israel, so that no man mighte go out ner in. But the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Beholde, I ha- ue giuen Jericho with y^e kyng and men of warre therof, into y^e hande. Let all the men of warre go once rounde aboute y^e cite, and do so sixe dayes. But vpon the seuenth daye let the prestes take the seven trompettes of the yeare of Iubilye before the Arke, and go the same seuenth daye seven tymes aboute the cite, and let the prestes blowe the trom- pettes. And when the hōrne of the yeare of Iubilye bloweth and maketh a sounde, so that ye heare the trompettes, all the people shal make a greate shēute, then shal the wal- les of the cite fall downe, and y^e people shal fall in, every one straight before him.

B Then Iosua the sonne of Nun called y^e prestes, and sayde vnto them: Beare ye the Arke of the couenaut, and let seven pres- tes take the seven trompettes of the yeare of Iubilye before the Arke of the LORDE. But vnto the people he sayde: Get you hen- ce, and go rōnde aboute the cite: and let him that is harnessid, go before the Arke of the LORDE. When Iosua had spoken this vnto the people, the seven prestes bare the se- uen trompettes of the yeare Iubilye before the Arke of the LORDE, and wente & blew the trompettes, and the Arke of the LORDES couenaut folowed after them: and who so was harnessid, wente before the prestes that blew the trompettes, and the multitu- de folowed the Arke. ther shall ye geue one worde out of yonre mouth, vntyll the daye & I saye vnto you: Make a shoute, then make a shoute.

C So the Arke of the LORDE wente once rounde aboute the cite, and came agayne into & hoeste, & remayned therein: for Josua used to ryse vp early in the mornynge. And the prestes bare the Arke of the LORDE: so dyd the seuen prestes beare the seuen trompettes of the yere of Iubilie before & Arke of the LORDE, and wente and blew the trompettes: and who so was harnesssed, wente before the, but & multitude folowed & Arke of the LORDE. And all was full of the noyse of the trompettes.

The seconde daye wente they once aboute the cite also, and came agayne into the hoest. Thus dyd they sixe dayes. But vpon the seuen daye whan the mornynge sprynge arose, they gat them vp early, and wente after the same maner seuen tymes aboute & cite, so that vpon the same one seuen daye they wente seuen tymes aboute the cite.

D And at the seuen tyme whan the prestes blew the trompettes, Josua sayde vnto the people: Make a shoute, for & LORDE hath deliuered you the cite: Howbeit this cite, & all that is therein, shalbe damned vnto the LORDE: onely the harlot Rahab shall lyue, & all that are with her in & house, for she hyd the messaungers, whom we sent forth. Onely beware of it that is damned, lest ye damne youre selues (yf ye take ought of it which is damned) and make the hoest of Israel to be damned, and brynge it into mysfortune. But all the syluer and golde, with the ornamente of brasse & yron, shalbe sanctified vnto the LORDE, that it maye come to the LORDES treasure.

Then made the people a greate shente, and the prestes blew the trompettes (for whan the people herde the noyse of the trompettes, they made a greate shoute) and the walles fell, and the people clymmed vp in to the cite, every one straight before him. Thus they wanne & cite, and destroyed all that was in the cite with the edge of the swerde, both man and woman, yonge and olde, ore, shepe, and Asses.

But Josua sayde vnto & two men which had spied out the londe: Go in to the house of the harlot, and bringe out the woman fro theuce with all that she hath, accordynge as ye haue sworne vnto her. Then & yonge men (the spies) wente in, and brought forth Rahab with hir father and mother, & brethren, and all that she had, and all hir kynred, and caused her to dwell without the hoest of Israel. As for the cite, they brent it with fyre, & all that was therein: onely the syluer and golde, and the ornamente of brasse and yron put they vnto the treasure in the house of & LORDE: but Josua let the harlot Rahab lyue, with hir fathers house, and all that she had: & she dwelt in Israel vnto this daie, because she had hyd the messaungers who Josua sent vnto Jericho to spye.

At the same tyme swore Josua, and sayde: Cursed be that man before the LORDE, which setteth vp this cite of Jericho & buyldeth it: Whan he laieth y ffoundaciō therof, let it cost him his first sonne: And whā he setteth vpon the gates of it, let it cost him his yōgest sonne. Thus the LORDE was with Josua, so that he was spoken of in all londes.

The VII. Chapter.

When the children of Israel had comyt a synne in the chynge & was damned: for Achan the sonne of Charmi the sonne of Sabdi the sonne of Serah, of & trybe of Juda, toke some of it & was dāned. Then was the wrath of the LORDE feared over the children of Israel.

Now whan Josua sent out men from Jericho vnto Hai, which lyeth besyde Bethan on & east syde of Bethel, he sayde vnto the: Go vp, and spye the londe. And whan they had gone vp, and spied out Hai, they came agayne to Josua, and sayde vnto him: Let not all the people go vp, but vpon a two or thie thousande, that they maye go vp and smyte Hai, lest all the people weere them selues there, for they are but fewe.

So there wente vp, of the people vpon a thie thousande men, and they fled before the men of Hai, and they of Hai smote vpon a fyre and thyrty men of them, and chased them from the porte vnto Sebarim, and smote them downe the waye. Then was the hert of the people discouraged, and Iosua. 8. 1 feble before them, and fled by the waye to þ wyldernesse. Then cried all the people in the cite, that they shulde folowe vpon them, and they folowed after Iosua and rushed out of the cite, so that there remayned not one man in Hai and Bethel, which wente not out to folowe vpon Israel, and they left the cite stondinge open, that they mighte persecute Israel.

Then sayde þ LORDE vnto Iosua: Reach out the speare that thou hast in thine hande, towarde Hai: for I wyll deliuer it in to thy hande. And whan Iosua reached out the speare that was in his hande, towarde y cite, y hynder watch brake vp out of their place, and ranne (whan he had stretched out his hande) and came in to the cite, and wanne it, and made haist, & set fyre vpon it. And the men of Hai turned them, and looked behynde them, and the smoke of the cite wente vp towarde heauen, and they had no place to flie vnto, nether hither ner thither: and the people that fled towarde the wyldernes turned aboute, to folowe vpon them.

And whan Iosua and all Israel sawe, þ the hynder watch had wonne the cite (for þ smoke of the cite ascended) they turned agayne, and smote the men of Hai. And they in the cite came forth also agaynst them, so þ they came in the myddes amonge Israel on both the sydes, and they slew them, so that there was not one man of them left ouer or escaped: and they toke the kynge of Hai alyue, and broughte him vnto Iosua. And whā Israel had slayne all the inhabiteurs of Hai, which had folowed vpon them in the felde and in the wyldernesse: and whan they were all fallen thorow the edge of the swerde, tyll they were destroyed, the turned all Israel vnto Hai, and smote it with the edge of þ swerde. And of all them which fell that daye from man vnto womā, there were twelue thousande, all men of Hai.

But Iosua withdrew not his hande (wher with he reached out the speare) tyll all the inhabiteurs of Hai were vtterly destroyed, & saynge the catell and the spoyle of þ cite, dyd Israel parte amonge themselves, acordinge vnto the worde of the LORDE, which he commaunded Iosua. And Iosua burned vp Hai and made an heape thereof for euer, which is there yet vnto this daye. And the kynge of Hai caused he to be hanged on a tre vntyll the euen.

But whā the Sonne was gone downe, he commaunded to take his body from the tre, and to cast it vnder the gate of the cite, and made vpon him a greate heape of stones, which is there yet vnto this daye.

G Then buylded Josua an altare vnto the LORDE God of Israel vpon mount Ebal acordinge as Moses the seruauit of J LORDE commanded the children of Israel, as it is wrytten in the booke of the lawe of Moses euen an altare of whole stone, wherupon there was no yron lifted: and he offred burnt-offerings and health offerings, and there vpon the stones he wrote the seconde lawe of Moses, which he wore before the childre of Israel.

Deu. 27. b And all Israel with their Elders and officers and iudges, stode on both the sydes of the Arke, right ouer agaynst the prestes J bare the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE, the straunger as well as one of them selues, the one halfe besyde mount Gaysim, and the other halfe beside mount Ebal, as Moses the seruauit of the LORDE commanded afore, to blesse the people of Israel. Afterwarde caused he to proclame all the wordes of the lawe of the blessinge and cursynge, as it is wrytten in the booke of the lawe. There was not one worde that Moses commanded, but Josua capsed it to be proclaimed before all the congregation of Israel, and before the women, and children, and strangers which walked amonge them.

The IX. Chapter.

A Now whan all the kynges that were beyonde Jordane vpon the mountaynes, and in the lowe countrees, and in all the hauens of the greate see, and besyde mount Libanus, herde this (namely, J Hethites, Amorites, Cananites, Pherezites, Hemitites and Jebusytes) they gathered the selues together with one acorde, to fighte agaynst Josua, and agaynst Israel.

But whan the inhabitants of Gibeon herde, what Josua had done with Jericho and Hai, they dealede craftely, wete on their waite, and made a message, and toke olde sacces vpon their asses, and olde rente wyne botels, and olde mended shues vpon their fete, and put on olde and peced garmentes, and all J bried of their vytayles was harde and moulded, and they wente vnto Josua in to J hoost at Gilgall, and sayde vnto him, and to euery man in Israel: We are come out of a farre countre, therfore make now a couenaunt w vs. Then sayde eueryman in Israel vnto J Heuyte: Peradventure thou dwellest amonge vs, how can I then make a couenaunt with the?

The ix. Chap.

They saide vnto Josua: We are J seruantes. Josua sayde vnto them: What are ye, and whence come ye? They sayde: Thy seruantes are come out of a very farre countre, because of the name of the LORDE thy God: for we haue herde the reporte of him, and all that he dyd in Egypte, and all that he dyd vnto the two kynges of the Amorites beynde Jordane, Sihon the kyng at Heshbo, and Og the kyng of Basan, which dwelt at Ashtaroth. Therfore sayde oure Elders and all the inhabitants of oure countre: Take foode with you for youre iourney, and go meete them, and saye vnto them: We are youre seruantes, therfore make now a bonde with vs: This oure bried that we toke out of oure houses for oure foode, was new whan we toke J iourney towarde you: but now lo, it is harde and moulded. And these bottels fylled we new, and lo, they are rote. And these oure clothes and shues are waxed olde, by J reason of the soe longe iourney.

Then the captaynes toke their vytayles, and axed not the mouth of the LORDE. C And Josua made peace with them, and set vp a couenaunt with them, that they shulde be saued alyue, and the rulers of the congregation swaie vnto them. But thre dayes after that they had made a couenaunt with them, they herde, that they were their neighbours, and drele amonge them: For as the children of Israel wente forth on their iourney, they came on the thirde daye vnto their cities, which are called Gibeon, Caphira, Beeroth, and Cirath Jearim, and smote the not, because that the rulers of the congregation had swome vnto them by the name of the LORDE the God of Israel. C 2 Reg. 21. a

But whan all the congregation murmured agaynst the rulers, all the rulers sayde vnto the whole congregation: We haue swome vnto them by the LORDE the God of Israel, therfore maye we not touch them. But this wil we do vnto them: Let them lyue, that there come no wrath vpon vs, because of the ooth that we haue made vnto them.

And the rulers sayde vnto them: Let them lyue, that they maye be J hewers of wodd and bearers of water for the whole congregation, as the rulers haue sayde vnto them. Then Josua called them, and commened with them, and sayde: Wherfore haue ye disceaued vs, and sayde, that ye were farre from vs, where as ye dwell amonge vs? Therfore shall ye be cursed, so that of you there shall not cesse seruantes to D Deu. 29. b her wodd and to beare water for the house of my God.

They answered Josua, & sayde: It was tolde thy seruantes, that the LORD thy God commaunded Moses his seruant, that he shulde geue you the whole lode, and that he wolde destroye all the inhabiteres of the londe before you: therefore were we sore afrayed of oure lynes before you, and thus haue we done. But now lo, we are in thy handes: loke what thou thinkest good and righte to do vnto vs, that do.

And he dyd euen so vnto them, and deliuered them from the children of Israels hande, that they shulde not slayethem. So vpon the same daye Josua made them hewers of wodd and water bearers for the congregation, and for the altare of the LORD vnto this daye, in the place that he shall chose.

The X. Chapter.

A Han Adonisedech the kynge of Jerusalem herde, that Josua had wonne Hai, and dammed it, and done vnto Hai and y^e kynge of it, like as he dyd vnto Jericho and to the kynge thereof, - and that they of Gibeon had made peace with Israel, and were come vnder them, they were sore afrayed. For Gibeon was a greete cite, like as one of the kynges cities, and greater then Hai, and all the citelynes thereof were men of armes. Therefore sent he vnto Hoham the kynge of Hebron, and to Pinea the kynge of Jarmuth, and to Japhia the kynge of Lachis, and to Debir the kynge of Eglon, and caused to saie vnto them: Come vp vnto me, and helpe me, that we maie smyte Gibeon, for they haue made peace with Josua and the children of Israel. Then came the fyue kynges of the Amorites together, and wente vp, the kynge of Jerusalem, the kynge of Hebron, y^e kynge of Jarmuth, the kynge of Lachis, the kynge of Eglon, with all their armies, & layed sege vnto Gibeon, and foughte agaynst it.

B Howbeit they of Gibeon sent vnto Josua to Gilgall, and caused to saie vnto him: Withdrawe not thine hande from thy seruantes, come vp soone vnto vs: deliuer and helpe vs, for all the kynges of the Amorites that dwell vpon the mountaynes, are gathered together agaynst vs. Josua wente vp from Gilgall, and all the warryers and all the men armes with him. And the LORD sayde vnto Josua: Feare them not, for I haue geue them in to thy hande. There shall not one of them be able to stonde before the.

The x. Chap. Ho. vi.

So Josua came sodenly vpon them, for all that might wente he vp from Gilgall. And the LORD discomfited the before Israel, and smote them with a greete slaughter at Gibeon: & they chased them the waie downe to Beth Horon, and smote them vnto Aska and Makeda.

And whan they fled before Israel, the waie downe to Bethoron, the LORD caused a greete hayle from heauen to fall vpon them, vnto Aska, so that they dyed: & many mo of them dyed of the hayle, then the children of Israel slew with the swerde.

Then spake Josua vnto the LORD (the same daye that the LORD gaue ouer the Amorites before the children of Israel) and sayde in the presence of Israel: Sonne, holde styll at Gibeon, and thou Moone in the valley of Aialon.

Then the Sonne helde styll, and y^e Moone stode, vntyll the people had auenged the selues on their enemies. Is not this wrytten in the booke of the righteous? Thus the Sonne stode styll in the myddes of heauen, and dyfferred to go downe for the space of a whole daye after. And there was no daye like vnto this (nether before ner after, whan the LORD herkened vnto the voyce of one man: for the LORD feught for Israel. And Josua wente agayne to Gilgall in to the retes, and all Israel with him. As for the fyue kynges, they were fled, and had hyd the selues in the caue at Makeda.

Then was it tolde Josua: We haue founde the fyue kynges hyd in the caue at Makeda. Josua sayde: Rolle greete stones then before the hole of the caue, and set men there to kepe them.

As for you, stonde not ye styll, but folowe after youre enemies, and smyte them behynde, and let them not come in their cities, for the LORD youre God hath deliuered the in to youre hande. And whan Josua and y^e children of Israel had ended the sore greete slaughter vpon them, so y^e they were brought to naught, the remnaunt of them came in to the stronge cities.

So all the people came agayne to the hoost vnto Josua to Makeda in peace, and no man durst moue his tunge agaynst the children of Israel. Josua sayde: Open the mouth of the caue, and brynge the fyue kynges forth vnto me. They dyd so, and broughte the kynges vnto him out of the caue: the kynge of Jerusalem, the kynge of Hebron, the kynge of Jarmuth, the kynge of Lachis, the kynge of Eglon.

The booke of Iosua.

When these fyue kynges were broughte forth vnto him, Iosua called every man of Israel, and sayde vnto the rulers of the men of warre that wente with him: Come forth and treade vpon the neckes of these kynges with yourre fete. And they came forth, and trode vpon their neckes with their fete. And Iosua saide vnto them: Be not afrayed, and feare not: be stronge and bolde, for thus shal the LORDE do vnto all yo^r enemies, agaynst whom ye fighte.

And Iosua smote them afterwarde, and put them to death, and hanged them vpon fyue trees. And they hanged styll vpon the trees vntyll the euenynge. But when the Sonne was gone downe, he commaunded to take them of from the trees: and they cast them in the caue, wher in they had hyd them selues, & before the hole of the caue they layed greates stones, which are there yet vnto this daye. The same daye wanne Iosua Makeda also, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and the kyng thereof, and damned it, and all the soules that were therein, and let none remayne escaped: and dyd vnto the kyng of Makeda as he dyd vnto the kyng of Jericho.

Then Iosua and all Israel with him departed from Makeda vnto Lybna, & foughte agaynst it. (And the LORDE gaue it with the kyng thereof into the hande of Israel) and smote it and all the soules that were therein, with the edge of the swerde, and let not one remayne in it: and dyd vnto the kyng thereof as he had done vnto the kyng of Jericho.

Afterwarde wente Iosua and all Israel with him from Lybna vnto Lachis, and layed sege vnto it, and foughte agaynst it. And the LORDE delyuered Lachis also into the hande of Israel, so that they wanne it vpon the seconde daye, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and all the soules that were therein, acordinge to all as he had done vnto Lybna. At the same tyme Horam the kyng of Gazer wente vp, to helpe Lachis. But Iosua smote him with all his people, tyll there remayned not one.

And Iosua wente with all Israel from Lachis, vnto Eglon, and layed sege vnto it, and foughte agaynst it, and wanne it the same daye, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and damned all the soules that were therein the same daye, acordinge vnto all as he had done vnto Lachis.

After that wente Iosua with all Israel from Eglon vnto Hebron, and foughte agaynst it, and wanne it, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and the kyng of it, and all the cities therof, and all the soules that were therein, and let not one remayne, acordinge vnto all as he had done vnto Eglon: and damned it, and all the soules that were therein.

Then turned Iosua agayne with all Israel towarde Debir, and foughte agaynst it, and wanne it, with the kyng of it, and all the cities therof, and smote them with the edge of the swerde, and damned all the soules that were therein, and let not one remayne ouer. Euen as he had done vnto Hebron and Lybna with their kynges, so dyd he also vnto Debir, and the kyng thereof.

Thus Iosua smote all the londe vpon the mountaynes, and toward the south, and in the lowe countrees, and by the ryuers, with all their kynges, and let not one remayne ouer and damned all that had birth, as the LORDE God of Israel had commaunded. And Iosua smote them from Cades Bernea vnto Gaza, and all the londe of Gosen vnto Gibeon, and toke all these kynges with their lorde at one tyme: for the LORDE God of Israel foughte for Israel. And Iosua wente agayne with all Israel to the tentes vnto Gilgal.

The XL Chapter.

When Jabin the kyng of Asor heard this, he sent vnto Iabob the kyng of Madon and to the kyng of Samron, and to the kyng of Achsaph, and to the kynges that dwelt toward the north vpon the mountaynes, and in the playne on the southsyde of Elneroth, and in the lowe countrees, and in the lordshippes of Debay the see syde: and to the Cananites toward the east and west, to the Amorites, Hethites, Pherezites, and Jebusites, vpon the mountaynes and to the Hivites, vnder mount Hermon in the londe of Mispa. These were out with all their armies, a greates people, as many as the sonde of the see, and exceeding many horses and charettes. All these kynges gathered themselves, and came, and pitched together by the water of Meram, to fighte with Israel.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Iosua: Feare them not, for to morrow aboute this tyme wil I delyuer them all slayne, before the children of Israel: thou shalt lame their horses, and burne their charettes with fire. And Iosua came sodenly vpon them, and all the men of warre with him by the water of Merom, & fell vpon them. And the LORDE delyuered them into the handes of Israel, and they smote them, and chased them vnto greates Sidon.

and to the warme water, and to the playne of Mispa towarde þ̄ east: and smote them, vntyll there remayned not one.

Then dealte Iosua with them as þ̄ LORDE had saide vnto him, & lamed theis horses, & brent their charettes. And he returned backe at the sametyme, & wanne Hasor, & smote þ̄ Kyng of it w̄ the swerde (for Hasor was a fo- re tyme y head cite of all these Kyngdomes) and smote all the soules that were therein w̄ the edge of the swerde, and damned it, & let nothinge remayne that had breth, & dam- ned Hasor with fyre. All the cities of these Kyngdomes wane Iosua also, and smote the with the edge of the swerde, and damned them, & a cordinge as Moses the seruante of the LORDE commaunded.

Howbeit the cities that stode vpon the hilles, dyd not the children of Israel burne with fyre: but Hasor onely dyd Iosua bur- ne. And all the spoyle of these cities and the catell, dyd the children of Israel deale a- monge them, but smote all the men with the edge of the swerde, tyll they had destroyed them, and let nothinge remayne that had breth. As the LORDE commaunded his ser- uant Moses, and as Moses commaunded Iosua, even so dyd Iosua, so that there was nothinge vndone of all that the LORDE co- mmaunded Moses.

So Iosua toke all this lode vpon þ̄ moū- taines, & all þ̄ lyeth towarde the south, & all the londe of Gosen, and the lowe countre, & the playne felde, and the mountayne of Is- rael with the valley therof, from the moun- tayne that parteth the londe vp towarde Seir, vnto Baalgad, in the playne of mount Libanus beneth mount Hermon. All their Kynges toke he, and smote them, and put the to death. & Howbeit he warred a longe sea- son with these Kynges.

Yet was there not one cite, that yelded it selfe peaceably vnto the children of Israel (excepte the Heuites, which dwelt at Gibe- on) but they wanne them all with battayll. And this was done so of the LORDE that their hert was so hardened, to come agaynst the children of Israel with battayll, þ̄ they mighte be dāned, & no fauoure to be shewed vnto them, but to be destroyed, & as the LORDE commaunded Moses.

At the same tyme came Iosua, and roted out the Enakims from þ̄ mountayne, from Hebron, from Debir, from Anab, from every mountayne of Iuda, and from every moun- tayne of Israel, and damned the with their cities, and let none of the Enakims remay-ne in the londe of the children of Israel, sa- ue at Gasa, & at Gath, at Asdod, there remay- ned of them.

Thus Iosua conquered all the londe aco- ding to all as the LORDE sayde vnto Moses, & gaue it vnto Israel to inheritaun- ce, & vnto every trybe his porcion, and þ̄ lon- de rested from warre.

The XII. Chapter.

These are þ̄ Kynges of the londe, whō the childre of Israel smote, & conque- red their lode, beyonde Jordane, east- warde, frō the water of Arnon, vnto mount Hermon, and vnto all þ̄ playne felde towar- de the east: & Sihon the Kyng of the Amori- tes, which dwelt at Hesbon, and had domi- nion from Aroer that lieth by the water sy- de of Arnon, and vnto the myddes of þ̄ wa- ter: and ouer halfe Gilead, vnto the water of Iabok, which is the border of the childre of Ammon: and ouer the playne felde, vnto the see of Cyneroth eastwarde, and vnto the see of the playne felde, namely the Salt see towarde the east, the waye vnto Beth Jesi- moth: and from the south beneth by the ry- uers of mount Pisga.

And the border of Og the Kyng of Ba- san, which remayned yet of Raphaim, and dwelt at Ashtaroth and Edrei, and had the dominion ouer mount Hermon, ouer Salcha, and ouer all Basan vnto the border of Ges- sari & Maadati, & of halfe Gilead, which was the border of Sihon the Kyng at Hes- bon. Moses the seruante of the LORDE and the childre of Israel smote them. And Mo- ses the seruante of þ̄ LORDE gaue it vnto the Rubentes, Gaddites and to the halfe trybe of Manasse in possession.

These are the Kynges of the lode, whom Iosua & the childre of Israel smote on this syde Jordane westwarde, frō Baalgad vpō the playne of mount Libanus, vnto þ̄ moū- t that parteth the londe vp towarde Seir, & that Iosua gaue vnto the trybes of Israel in possession, vnto every one his parte, what

These are one and thirtie kynges.

The XIII. Chapter.

A Now when Iosua was olde and wel stricken in age, the LORDE sayde vnto him: Thou art olde and well aged, and there remaineth yet much of the londe to conquer, namely all Galilee of the Philistynes, and all Gessuri, from Sihon which floweth before Egypte, vnto the border of Ekron, northwarde, which is rekened vnto the Cananites: syne lordes of the Philistynes, namely, the Gassites, the Asdodites, the Ascalonites, the Gethites, the Ekronites and the Harnites. But from the north it is all þe londe of the Cananites, and Maara of the Sidonians vnto Aphel, even vnto the border of the Amorites. Moreover the londe of the Gubites eastwarde, from Baalgad vnder mount Hermon, tyll a man come vnto Hamath. All they that dwell vpon the mount, from Libanus vnto the warme waters, and all the Sidonians. I wyl dryue them out before the children of Israel: Only let them be dealt out amonge Israel, as I have commanded the.

B Deuyde thou this lode now to inheritaunce amonge the nyne trybes and þe halfe trybe of Manasse. For the Rubenites and Gadites with þe halfe trybe of Manasse, have receaved their inheritaunce, which Moses gaue the beyonde Jordane Eastwarde, accordinge as Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE gaue them the same, from Aroer which lieth vp by the water syde of Arnon, and the cite in the myddes of the water, and all the coastes of Medba vnto Dibon, and all the cities of Sihon the kynge of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon, vnto the border of the children of Ammon: and Gilead and þe border of Gessuri and Maachati, and all mount Hermon, and all Basan vnto Salcha: all þe kyngdome of Og at Basan, which dwelt at Astaroth and Edrei, that remained yet ouer of Raphaim. But Moses smote them and drewe them out.

The children of Israel drewe not out the Gessurites and Maachathites, but both Gessur and Maachath dwelt amonge the children of Israel vnto this daye. But vnto þe trybe of the Leuites he gaue no inheritaunce: for the offeringe of the LORDE God of Israel is their inheritaunce, accordinge as he hath promysed them.

So Moses gaue vnto the trybe of þe children of Ruben after their kynreds, so that their border was Aroer, which lyeth vpon the water syde of Arnon, and the cite in the myddes of the same water, with all the playne felde vnto Medba: Heshbon, and all the cities therof which lye in the playne felde: Dibon, Bamoth Baal, and Beth Baal Meon, Jahza, Kedemoth, Mephaath, Kiriat-haim, Sibama, Zeretha Sabar, vpon mount Emet, Beth Prior: the ryuers by Pisga, and Beth Jesimoth, and all the cities vpon the playne, and all the realme of Sihon kynge of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon, whom Moses smote with the prynces of Madian, Eui, Rekem, Zur, Hur, and Reba, the mightie men of kynge Sihon, which were inhabitors of the londe. And Balaam the sonne of Beor the prophecier, dyd the children of Israel kill with the swerde amonge the other that were slayne: and the border of þe children of Ruben was Jordane. This is the inheritaunce of the children of Ruben amonge their kynreds, cities and villages.

Vnto the trybe of the children of Gad amonge their kynreds gaue Moses, so that their border was, Jahesar and all the cities in Gilead, and the halfe londe of the children of Ammon, vnto Aroer, which lyeth before Rabbath: and from Heshbon vnto Ramath Misphe and Betonim: and fro Mahanaim vnto the border of Debir. But in the valley, Beth Haram, Beth Nimra, Sanchoth and Zaphon (which remaine yet of the realme of Sihon kynge of Heshbon) and was by Jordane, vnto the edge of the see of Cynroth, on this syde Jordane eastwarde.

Nu. 33. a
His is it that the children of Israel haue enhereted in the londe of Canaan, * which Elcasar the prest, and Iosua the sonne of Nun, and the chiefe of the fathers amonge the trybes of the children of Israel parted out amonge them. * But by lot dyd they denyde it out amōge them, acordinge as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses to geue vnto the nyne trybes and þ halfe: for vnto the two trybes and the halfe dyd Moses geue inheritaunce beyonde Jordane. * But vnto the Levites he gaue no inheritaunce amonge them. * For of the childre of Joseph there were two trybes, Manasse and Ephraim. Therfore gaue they the Levites no porcion in the londe, but cities, to dwell therein, and suburbs for their catell and goodes. * Euen as the LORDE cōmaunded Moses, so dyd the childre of Israel, and denyded the londe.

Then came forth the children of Iuda to Iosua at Gilgall: and Caleb þ sonne of Jephunne the Benisite sayde vnto him: Thou knowest what þ LORDE * sayde vnto Moses the man of God, concerninge me and the in Cades Bernea. I was fortye yeare olde, whan Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE * sent me out from Cades Bernea, to spye out the londe, and I broughte him worde agayne, euen as I had it in my hert. Howbeit my biechienthat wente vp with me, discoraged the hert of the people: but I folowed þ LORDE my God vnto the vttemost.

Then sware Moses vnto me the same daye, and sayde: The londe wher vpon thou hast troden with thy fote, shalbe thine inheritaunce and thy childrens for ever, becau

It is now syue and fortie yeare sence þ LORDE spake this vnto Moses, whā Israel walked in the wilderness. And now lo, this daie am I syue and foure score yeare olde * and am yet as stronge to daye, as I was in that daye whan Moses sent me out: euen as my strength was then, so is it now also to fighte, and to go out and in.

Geue me now therfore this mountayne, wherof the LORDE spake in that daye, and thou herdest it the same days: for now the Enatims dwell thereon, and it hath greate and stronge cities: yf happily the LORDE wyl be with me, that I maye dryue the out, as he hath sayde. Then Iosua blessed him, * and so gaue Hebron vnto Caleb the sonne of Jephunne. Therfore was Hebron the inheritaunce of Caleb the sonne of Jephunne the Benisite, vnto this daye, because he folowed the LORDE God of Israel vnto the vttemost. * But afore tyme was Hebron called Atriatharba, & greate people were there amonge the Enatims. And the lode ceased from warre.

The lot of the trybe of the children of Iuda amonge their kynreds, was þ coaste of Edom by the wyldernes of Sin, which bordereth southwarde on the edge of the south countrees. Their south borders were from the vttemost syde of the salt see, that is, from the coast that goeth southwarde, and commeth out from thēce towarde þ eastsyde of Acrabbim, and goeth forth thorow Sinna, and yet goeth vp from the south towarde Cades Bernea, and goeth thorow Hesron, and goeth vnto Abara, & fetcheth a compase aboute Carcaa, & goeth thorow Asmona, and commeth forth to the ryuer of Egipte, so that the see is the ende of þ border. Let this be youre border southwarde.

But the east border is from the salt see to the vttemost parte of Jordane.

The border northwarde, is from the see coaste which is on þ edge of Jordane, and goeth vp vnto Beth Hagla, and stretcheth out from the north vnto Betharaba, and commeth vp vnto the stone of Bohen the sonne of Ruben, and goeth vp vnto Debir from þ valley of Achor, and from the north coaste that is towarde Gilgall, which lyeth euer agaynst Adummim vprewarde, which is on the north syde of the water. Then goeth

Then goeth it vp to the valley of the sonne of Hinnam, a longe besyde the Jebusite that dwelleth from þ southwarde, that is Jerusalem: and commeth vp vnto the toppe of the mount which lyeth before the valley of Hinnam from the westwarde, that bordereth on the edge of the valley of Raphaim toward the north.

C Then commeth it from the toppe of the same mount vnto the water well of Nephtoah, and commeth out vnto the cities of mount Ephron, and boweth toward Baala, that is Ririath Jarim, and fetcheth a compass aboute from Baala westwarde vnto mount Seir, and goeth by the north syde of the mount Jarim, that is Chessalon: and cometh downe to Bethsemes, and goeth thorow Thimna, and breaketh out on the north syde of Aeron, and stretcheth forth toward Sicon, and goeth ouer mount Baala, and commeth out vnto Jabuel: so that their uttermost border is the see.

10. 1. 14. d The weste border is the greatesee. This is the border of the children of Juda round aboute in their kynreds. Caleb the sonne of Jephune had his porcion geue him amonge the children of Juda (as the LORD commaunded Josua) namely. Ririatharba of the father of Enak, that is Hebron.

Judic. 1. b And Caleb dyed from thence the three sonnes of Enak, Sesai, Ahiman, and Thalmas begotten of Enak. And from thence he wente vp to the inhabitants of Debir. (As for Debir, it was called Ririath Sepher afore tyme.) And Caleb sayde: Who so smytheth Ririath Sepher and wyrmeth it, I wyll geue him my daughter Achsa to wyfe. Then Achiel the sonne of Aenas the brother of Caleb wanne it: and he gaue him his daughter Achsa to wyfe.

1. 1. 17. c And it fortuneth whan they wente in, that she was counceiled of hir housbande, to aue a pece of londe of hir father. And she fell downe from the asse. Then sayde Caleb vnto her: What ayleth the? She sayde: Geue me a blessinge, for thou hast geue me a south (and drye) londe: geue me welles of water also. Then gaue he her welles aboue and beneth.

E This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of Juda amonge their kynreds. And the cities of the trybe of the children of Juda, from one to another by the coastes of the Edomites toward the south, werethese: Cabzeel, Eder, Jagur, Bina, Dimona, Adada,

These are nyne and twenty cities & their villages. 10. 1. 19. a

But in the lowe countrees was Esthaol, Zaren, Asna, Saroah, Engannim, Thapua, Enam, Jarmoth, Adullam, Socho, Meka, Saaraim, Adithaim, Gedera, Giderothim. These are fourtene cities & their villages.

J Zena Hadasa, Migdal Gad, Dilean, Nispa, Jakthiel, Lachis, Bazeth, Eglô, Chabon, Lachma, Chichlis, Gedoroth, Beth Dagou, Maama, Makeda. These are sixtene cities and their villages.

Libna, Echer, Asen, Jephthah, Asna, Mezib, Beila, Achsib, Maresa. These are nyne cities and their villages. Ekron with hir daughters and villages. From Ekron vnto the see, all that reacheth vnto Asdod and the villages therof. Asdod with the daughters and villages therof. Gasa with hir daughters and villages vnto the water of Egipte. And the greatesee is his border.

But vpon the mount was Samir, Jaitir, Socho, Danna, Ririath Sanna, that is Debir: Anab, Esthemo, Aninim, Gosen, Holon, Gilô. These are eleven cities and their villages. Maon, Carmel, Siph, Jata, Jetrach, Jakdea, Sanoah, Rain, Gibe, Thimna. These are ten cities and their villages. Halhul, Bethzur, Gedor, Maarath, Beth Anoth, Elcheton. These are fixe cities and their villages. Ririath Baal (that is Ririath Jearim) Harabba, two cities & their villages. And in the wyldernes was Betharaba, Middin, Sedachia, Libian, and the Salt cite, and Engaddi. These are fixe cities and their villages. But the Jebusites dwelt at Jerusalem, and the children of Juda coude not dryue them awaye. So the Jebusites remayne with the children of Juda at Jerusalem vnto this daye.

The XVI. Chapter.

Ald the lot fell vnto the children of Ephraim fro Jordane ouer agaynst Jericho, vnto the water on the east syde of Jericho, and the wyldernes, & goeth vp from Jericho thorow the mountayne of Bethel, and commeth out from Bethel vnto Lus, and goeth thorow the coast of Arciataroth, and stretcheth downe westwar.

de vnto þe coaste of Japhletico þe border of the lower Bethoron, and vnto Gaser: and the ende therof is by the greatesee. This the children of Ioseph (Manasses & Ephraim) receaued to inheritaunce.

B The Border of the children of Ephraim amonge their kynreds of their inheritaunce from the east, was Ataroth Adar vnto the vpper Bethoron, & goeth out westwarde by Michmethath that lyeth towarde the north, there fetcheth it a compasse toward the east syde of the cite Thaanath Silo, and goeth there thorow from the east vnto Janoha, and commeth downe from Janoha vnto Ataroth and Naaratha, and bordereth on Jericho, and goeth ouer at Iordane. From Chapuah goeth it westwarde vnto Naalkama, and the out goinge of it is at the see.

This is the inheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Ephraim amonge their kynreds. And all the borders, cities with their vyllages of the childre of Ephraim laye scattered amonge the inheritaunce of the children of Manasse. And they drewe not out þe Cananites, which dwelt at Gaser. So þe Cananites remayned amonge Ephraim vnto this daye, and became tributaries.

The XVII. Chapter.

Gen. 48. c AND the lot fell vpon the trybe of Manasse (for he is Iosephs first sonne) and it fell vpon Machir the first sonne of Manasse þe father of Gilead: for he was a man of armes, therfore had he Gilead and Basan. It fell also vnto the other children of Manasse, namely vnto þe childre of Zabiezer, the children of Helek, the children of Asriel, the children of Sechem, the children of Zepher, and the children of Semida: These are the childre of Manasse the sonne of Ioseph, males, amonge their kynreds.

and 36. d

But Zelaphead the sonne of Zepher the sonne of Gilead, the sonne of Machir, the sonne of Manasse, had no sonnes, but daughters, and their names are these: Mahala, Noa, Hagla, Milca, Tirza, and they came before Eleasar the prest, and before Iosua the sonne of Nun, and before the rulers, and sayde: The LORDE commanded Moses, to geue vs inheritaunce amonge oure brethien. And so they had inheritaunce geuen them amonge their fathers brethien, accordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE.

B There fell vpon Manasse ten meetlynes without the londe of Gilead and Basan, which lyeth beyöde Iordane. For y daughters of Manasse receaued inheritaunce amonge his sonnes: but the other children of Manasse had the londe of Gilead. And the border of Manasse was fro Affer south vnto Michmethath, that lyeth before Sichem, and reacheth vnto the righte syde of them of En Tapuah: for the londe of Tapuah fell vnto Manasse, and the border of Manasse is vnto the childre of Ephraim. Then commeth it downe to Naalkama toward the south syde of the ryuer cities, which are Ephraims amonge the cities of Manasse. But from the north is the border of Manasse by the ryuer, and goeth south by the see syde, south warde vnto Ephraim, and to Manasse northwarde, and the see is his coaste. And it shal border on Affer from the north, and on Isachar from the east.

C So (amonge Isachar and Affer) Manasses had Beth Sean and the townes therof, and Jeblaam and the townes therof, and them of Dor and their townes, and them of En Dor and their townes, & them of Taanach and their townes, and them of Maggedo and their townes, and the thirde parte of (the cite) Nophet. And the children of Manasse coude not dryue awaye the inhabitants of these cities, but the Cananites beganne to dwell in the same londe. Howbeit when the children of Israel were able, they made the Cananites tributaries, and drewe them not out.

Then spake the children of Ioseph vnto Iosua, and sayde: Wherfore hast thou geue me but one porcion and one meetlyne of inheritaunce, and I am yet a greate people, as the LORDE hath blessed me so largely? Then sayde Iosua vnto them: For so much as thou art a greate people, go vp therfore into þe wodd, and make thy selfe ron me there in the londe of the pherisites and Raphaim, seynge mount Ephraim is to narrowe for the.

D Then sayde the children of Ioseph: We shal not be able to attayne vnto the mountaynes, for there are yron charettes amonge all the Cananites, that dwell in the londe of Emek, by whom lyeth Beth Sean and the vyllages therof, and Jesrael in Emek. Iosua sayde vnto the house of Ioseph, even to Ephraim and Manasses: Thou art a greace people, & for so much as thou art so greace, thou must not haue one lot, but the mountayne where þe wod is, shal be thine rote þe out for þe, so shal it be the outgoinge of thy

The XVIII. Chapter.

AND all the multitude of the children of Israel gathered them selues together vnto Silo, and they set vp γ Tabernacle of witnesse, and the londe was subdued vnto them. But there were yet seven trybes of the childre of Israel, vnto whom they had not deuyled their enheritaunce. And Iosua sayde vnto the children of Israel: How longe are ye so slowe, to go and conquer the londe, which the LORD God of youre fathers hath geuen you? These you thre men out of every trybe, γ I maye sende them, and that they maye get them vp and go thorow the londe, and descrybe it acordinge to the enheritaunces therof, and come vnto me.

Deuyde the londe in seven partes. Iudas shal remayne vpon his borders of the south syde, and the house of Ioseph shal remayne vpon his borders of the north parte: but descrybe ye the londe in seven partes, and brynge them vnto me, then shal I cast γ lot for you before the LORD our God. For the Levites haue no porcion amonge you, but the priesthode of the LORD is their enheritaunce. As for Gad & Ruben and γ halfe trybe of Manasse, they haue receaued their enheritaunce beyonde Iordane eastwarde, which Moses the seruaunt of the LORD gaue them.

Then the men gat vp, to go their waye. And whan they were aboute to go for to descrybe the londe, Iosua commaunded them, and sayde: Go youre waye, and walke thorow the londe, and descrybe it, and come agayne vnto me, that I maye cast γ lot for you before the LORD at Silo. So the men departed, and wente thorow the londe, and descrybed it in seven partes vpon a letter acordinge to the cities, and came to Iosua in to the hoost at Silo. Then Iosua cast the lot ouer them at Silo before the LORD, and there distributed the londe amonge the children of Israel, vnto euery one his parte.

And the lot of the trybe of the children of Ben Jamin fell acordinge to their kynreds, and the border of their lot wente out betwene the children of Iuda & the children of Ioseph. And their border was on γ north quarter of Iordane, and goeth vp from the north syde of Jericho, and commeth vnto the mountayne westwarde, and goeth out by the wyldernesse of Bethauen, and goeth from thence towarde Lus, euen by the south syde of Lus (that is Bethel) and commeth downe vnto Ataroth Adar by the mountayne which lyeth on γ south syde of the lower Bechozon. Then boweth it downe, and setteth a compasse vnto the south west quarter from the mount that lyeth ouer agaynst Bechozon towarde the south, and goeth out vnto Kiriath Baal, γ is Kiriath Jearim, a cite of the children of Iuda. This is the west border.

But the south border is from Kiriath-Jearim forth, and goeth out towarde the west, and commeth forth vnto γ water well of Nepthoah: and goeth downe by the edge of the mount, that lyeth before the valleye of the soune of Ginnam: and goeth downe thorow the valley of Ginnam on γ south syde of the Jebusites, and commeth downe to the well of Rogell, and stretcheth from the northwarde, and commeth out vnto En Simes, and commeth forth to the heapes that lye vnto towarde Adumim, and cometh downe vnto the stone of Bohen the sonne of Ruben, and goeth a longe besyde γ playne felde which lyeth northwarde, and commeth downe vnto γ playne felde, and goeth besyde Beth Hagla that lyeth towarde the north, and his ende is at the north border of the Salt see, vnto γ edge of Iordane southwarde. This is the south border.

But Iordane shal be the ende of the east quarter. This is the enheritaunce of γ children of Ben Jamin in their borders rounde aboute, amenge their kynreds.

The cities of the trybe of the children of Ben Jamin amēgetheir kynreds are these: Jericho, Beth Hagla, Emek Keziq, Betharaba, Zemaraim, Bethel, Avim, Gaphar, Aphia, Caphar Amonai, Aphni, Gaba: these are twolue cities and their vyllages.

Gibeon, Rama, Beeroth, Mispa, Capharsa, Moza, Rekem, Jeerpeel, Thareala, Zela, Eleph, and the Jebusites, that is Jerusalem, Gibeath, Kiriath: these are fourtene cities and their vyllages. This is the enheritaunce of the children of Ben Jamin in their kynreds.

The XIX. Chapter.

Then fell the seconde lot of the trybe of the children of Simeon acordinge to their kynreds, and their enheritaunce was amonge the enheritaunce of γ children of Iuda. And to their enheritaunce they had Beer Seba, Melada, Hazar Sual, Baala, Azem, El Tholad, Bethul,

And all þe villages that lye aboute the cities vnto Balath Beer Ramath towarde the south. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Simeon in their kynreds: for the enheritaunce of the children of Simeon is vnder the porcion of the children of Juda. For so much as the enheritaunce of the children of Juda was to greate for them, therfore inhereted the children of Simeon amonge their enheritaunce.

B The thirde lot fell vpon the childre of Zabulon after their kynreds. And the border of their enheritaunce was vnto Sarid, and goeth vp westwarde to Marcala, and bordieth vpon Dabath, and reacheth vnto the ryuer that floweth ouer agaynst Jatneam: and turneth from Sarid eastwarde vnto the border of Elishoth Thabor, and cometh out vnto Dabath, and reacheth vp to Japia, and from thence goeth it westwarde thorow Githa Shepher, and Jcha Razim, and cometh out towarde Rimmon, Hamthoar Hanea, and fetcheth a compasse aboute from the north vnto Nathon, and the goynge out of it is in the valley Jephtha El, Katath, Mahalal, Simron, Jedea, and Bethlehem: These are twelue cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the childre of Zabulon in their kynreds: these are their cities and villages.

The fourth lot fell vpon the childre of Issachar after their kynreds, and their border was Jesraela, Chesulloth, Sunem, Hapharaim, Ston, Anaharath, Raabith, Kision, Abes, Remeth, En Ganim, Enhada, Beth Pazez, and bordieth vpon Thabor, Sahazima, Beth Semea, and þe outgoinge of it was at Jordane. These are sixtene cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Issachar in their kynreds, cities and villages.

The fift lot fell vpon the trybe of the children of Asser, after their kynreds. And their border was Helkath, Hali, Beten, Achsaph, Alamelech, Amead, Misael, and bordieth on Carmel vnto the see, and on Sihor, and Libnath, and turneth towarde the east vnto Beth Dagon, and bordieth on Zabulon, and on the valley of Jephthael, and towarde the north syde of Beth Emet and Megiel: and cometh out vnto Cabul on the lefte syde of Ebron, Rehob, Hamon and

C Cana, vnto greete Sidon. And turneth toward Rama, vnto the stronge cite of Zor, and turneth toward Hossa, and goeth out vnto the see, after þe meetlyne toward Achsib, Dma, Apher, Rehob.

These are two and twentye cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Asser in their kynreds cities and villages.

The syxe lot fell vpon the children of Nephtali in their kynreds. And their border was fro Helph Elon thorow Zaanaim, Adai Melech, Jabneel vnto Latum, and goeth out vnto Jordane, and turneth westwarde to Asnoth Thabor, and cometh out from thence vnto Hutot, and bordieth on Zabulon towarde the south, and on Asser towarde the west, and on Juda by Jordane towarde the east: and hath stronge cities, Sidimzer, Hamath Rakach, Chinnaret, Adama, Rama, Hazor, Kedesh, Edrei, En Hazor, Jercon, Migdal Elhar, Beth Anath, Beth Sames. These are nyentene cities and their villages. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Nephtali in their kynreds, cities, and villages.

D The seventh lot fell vpon the trybe of the children of Dan after their kynreds. And the border of their enheritaunce was Zarea, Eshtaoth, Jesames, Saalabin, Aialon, Jechla, Elon, Chinnata, Ekron, Elchete, Giberth Baalath, Jehud, Bnerbarak, Gat Rimmon, Me Jarcon, Rakon with the border by Japho, and on the same goeth the border of the children of Dan out. And the children of Dan wente vp, and foughte agaynst Leshem, and wanne it, and smote it with the edge of the swerde, and toke it in possession, and dwelt therein, and called it Dan, after þe name of their father. This is the enheritaunce of the trybe of the children of Dan in their kynreds, cities, and villages.

And whan þe lode was all parted out with the borders therof, the children of Israel gaue Josua the sonne of Nun, an enheritaunce amonge them, and (acordynge to the commaundement of the LORDE) they gaue him þe cite that he requyred, namely, Thinnath Serah, vpon mount Ephraim: there buylded he the cite, and dwelt therein.

These are the enheritaunces which Eleazar the prest and Josua þe sonne of Nun, and the cheif of the fathers amonge þe tribes, demded out by lot vnto the childre of Israel at Silo before the LORDE, when before the doore of the Tabernacle of wytnes, and so they ended the deuynge out of the londe.

The XX. Chapter.

AND the LORD spake vnto Iosua, and sayde: Speake to the children of Israel: Geue amonge you fre cities, wherof I spake vnto you by Moses, that a deed-slayer which sleyleth a soule vnawarres and unwittingly, maye flye thither, & they maye be fre amonge you from the avenger of bloude. And he that flyeth to one of those cities, shal stonde without before the porte of the cite, and shewe his cause before the Elders of the cite, then shall they take him to them in to the cite, and geue him place to dwell with them.

B And yf the auenger of bloude folowe vpon him, they shall not deliuer the deed-slayer in to his handes, for so much as he hath slayne his neighbour vnawarres, and was not his enemye afore: but he shall dwell in yf cite, tyll he stonde before the congregacion in iudgment, vntyll the hye priest dye, which shall be at that tyme. Then shall the deed-slayer returne, and go vnto his awne cite, and vnto his house to the cite, from whence he was fled.

C Then appoynted they Kedesh in Galile vpon mount Naphtali, and Sechem vpon mount Ephraim, and Biriatharba, that is Hebron vpon mount Iuda. And beyonde Iordane on the east syde of Jericho, they gaue Bezer in the wilderness vpon the playne out of the trybe of Ruben, and Ramoth in Gilead out of the trybe of Gad, and Bisan in Basan out of the trybe of Manasse.

These were the cities appoynted for all yf children of Israel, and for the straungers which dwelt amonge them, that whosoever had slayne a soule vnawarres, might flye thither, that he shulde not be put to death by the auenger of bloude, tyll he had stonde before the congregacion.

The XXI. Chapters.

AND then the chiefe fathers amonge the Levites came forth vnto Eleazar the priest and to Iosua the sonne of Nun, and to yf auncient fathers amonge the trybes of the children of Israel, and spake vnto them at Silo in the londe of Canaan, and sayde: The LORD commaunded by Moses, that we shulde haue cities geuen vs to dwell in, and the suburbs of the same for oure catell. Then the children of Israel gaue of their inheritaunce these cities and the suburbs therof, vnto the Levites, accordyng to the commaundement of the LORD.

The xxi. Chap.

And the lot fell vpon the kynred of the Rahabites, and the children of Aaron the priest amonge the Levites, had by the lott thirtene cities of the trybe of Iuda, of the trybe of Simeon, and of the trybe of Benjamin. The other childre of Rahab of the same kynred, had by the lott ten cities, of the trybe of Ephraim, of the trybe of Dan, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse.

But the children of Gerson of the same kynred had by the lott thirtene cities, of the trybe of Issachar, of the trybe of Asser, of yf trybe of Naphtali, and of the halfe trybe of Manasse at Basan.

The children of Merari of their kynred had twelue cities, of the trybe of Ruben, of the trybe of Gad, and of the trybe of Zabulon. So the children of Israel gaue the se cities and their suburbs vnto the Levites by lott, as the LORD commaunded by Moses.

Of the trybe of the children of Iuda, and of the trybe of the children of Simeon, they gaue these cities (which they named by name) vnto the children of Aaron of the kynred of the Rahabites amonge the children of Levi: for the first lot was theys.

So they gaue them Biriatharba, which was the fathers of Enak, that is Hebron vpon the mount Iuda, and the suburbs therof rounde aboute. But the felde of the cite and the villages therof, gaue they vnto Caleb the sonne of Iephune for his possession.

Thus gaue they vnto the children of Aaron the priest, the fre cite of the deed-slayers, Hebron and the suburbs therof, Libna and the suburbs therof, Jathir and the suburbs therof, Esihuma and the suburbs therof, Holon and the suburbs therof, Debir and the suburbs therof, Ain and the suburbs therof, Iuta and the suburbs therof, Beth Semes and the suburbs therof, euen nyne cities of these two trybes.

But of the trybe of Benjamin they gaue foure cities, Gibeon and yf suburbs therof, Gaba, and the suburbs therof, Anathot and the suburbs therof, Almon and the suburbs therof: so that all the cities of the children of Aaron the priest were thirtene with their suburbs.

The kynreds of the other children of Rahab the Levites, had by their lott foure cities, of the trybe of Ephraim, and they gaue the fre cite of the deed-slayers, Sechem and the suburbs therof vpon mount Ephraim Gaser and the suburbs therof, Buzaim

Of the halfe trybe of Manasse two cities, Thaenach and the suburbs therof, Gath Rimon and the suburbs therof: so that all the cities of the other children of y kynred of Rahath, were ten with their suburbs.

But vnto the children of Gerson amonge the kynreds of the Leuites were geuen, Of the halfe trybe of Manasse two cities, the fre cite for the deedslayer, Gola in Basan and the suburbs therof, Beasthria, and the suburbs therof. Of the trybe of Issachar foure cities, Kisien and the suburbs therof, Dabiach and the suburbs therof, Jarnuth and the suburbs therof, Engannim and the suburbs therof. Of the trybe of Asser foure cities, Misael, Abdon, Helkath and Rehob with the suburbs therof. Of the trybe of Nephthali thre cities, the fre cite Kedesh (for the deedslayer) in Galile, Hamoth, Dor, and Rarchan with the suburbs therof: so that all the cities of the kynred of the Gersonites were thirtene w their suburbs.

E Vnto the kynreds of Merari the other Leuites were geuen, Of the trybe of Zabulon foure cities, Jakneam, Rarcha, Dimna and Mahalal w y suburbs therof. Of the trybe of Ruben foure cities, Bezer, Jahza, Kedemoth and Mephath with their suburbs. Of the trybe of Gad foure cities, the fre cite for the deedslayer, Ramoth in Gilead, Mahanaim, Hesbon and Jafer with their suburbs: so that all the cities of the children of Merari amonge their kynreds of y other Leuites, were twelue. Thus all the cities of the Leuites amonge y possession of the children of Israel, were eight and fortye with their suburbs. And these cities were so dealt out, that euery one had their suburbs rounde aboute, the one as the other.

G Thus the L O R D E gaue the children of Israel all the londe, which he had sworne vnto their fathers to geue: & they toke possession of it, and dwelt therein. And the LORDE gaue the rest before all those y were aboute them: like as he swaie vnto their fathers, & none of their enemies stode agaynst the, but all their enemies deliuered he in to their hande. Then Josua called y Rubenites and Gaddites, and y halfe trybe of Manasse, and sayde vnto them: Ye haue kepte all, & that Moses the seruauit of the L O R D E commaunded you, and haue hearkened vnto my voyce in all y I haue commaunded you. Ye haue not forsaken youre brethre a longe season, vnto this daye, and haue wayted vpon the commaundement of the L O R D E youre God. For so moch now as the L O R D E youre God hath broughte youre brethre to rest, as he promysed them, turne you now, and go youre waye to youre tentes in to the londe of youre possession, which Moses the seruauit of the L O R D E gaue you beyonde Jordane.

But take diligent hede now, that ye do accordinge to the commaundement and lawe which Moses the seruauit of the L O R D E hath commaunded: That ye loue the L O R D E youre God, and walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, and cleue vnto him, and serue him with all youre hert and with all youre soule. So Josua blessed them, and let them go. And they wente vnto their tentes.

Vnto the halfe trybe of Manasse had Moses geuen possession at Basan: vnto the other halfe gaue Josua amonge their brethrien on this syde Jordane westwarde. And whan he let them go to their tentes and blessed them, he sayde vnto them: Ye come home agayne with greate good vnto youre tentes, with exceedyng much catell, syluer, golde, brasse, yron and rayment, & distribute therfore the spoyle of youre enemies amonge youre brethrien.

So the Rubenites, Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasse returned, and wente from the children of Israel out of Silo (which lyeth in the londe of Canaan) to go in to the countre of Gilead to the londe of their possession, that they mighte possesse it, accordinge to the commaundement of the LORDE by Moses.

C And whan they came vnto the heapes by Jordane, which lye in the londe of Canaan, the same Rubenites, Gaddites, and the halfe trybe of Manasses buylded there besyde Jordane, a fayre greate altare. But whan the children of Israel herde saye: Beholde, the children of Ruben, the children of Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasse haue buylded an altare ouer agaynst the lon-

And (in the meane season) they sent to them in to the londe of Gilead, Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest, and with him ten chiefe prynces amonge the houses of their fathers, out of euery tribe in Israel one. And they came to the children of Ruben, to the children of Gad, and to the halfe trybe of Manasse in the londe of Gilead, and sayde:

Iudi. 20. b D Thus sayeth the whole congregacion of the LORDE vnto you: What trespasse is this, ¶ ye haue trespassed agaynst the God of Israel, that ye shulde turne backe from ¶ LORDE this daye, to builde you an altare, for to fall awaye from the LORDE?

Num. 25. 2 ¶ Have we not ynough of the wickednesse of Peor: from the which we are not yet clenfed this daye, and there came a plague amonge the congregacion of the LORDE: and ye turne you backe this daye from the LORDE, and this daye are ye fallen awaye from the LORDE, that he maye be wroth to daye or to morow at the whole congregacion of the LORDE.

Iosu. 7. 2 If the londe of youre possession be vncleane, then come ouer in to the londe that the LORDE possi sseth, where the dwellynge of the LORDE is, and take possi sions amonge vs, and fall not awaye from the LORDE and from vs, to builde you an altare with out the altare of the LORDE oure God. Did not Achan the sonne of Serah trespasse in the thinge that was damned, and the wrath came ouer ¶ whole congregacion of Israel and he wente not downe alone for his mysdede?

ge Then answered the children of Ruben, and the children of Gad, and the halfe trybe of Manasse, and sayde vnto the heades and prynces of Israel: The mightie God ¶ LORDE, the mightie God the LORDE knoweth, and Israel knoweth also, yf this be a transgressynge or trespacynge agaynst the LORDE, then let it not helpe vs this daye: If we haue buylded the altare, because we wolde turne awaye backe from the LORDE, to of fre burntofferynge or meatofferynge ther on, or to make eny deedofferynge vpon it, then let the LORDE requyre it: And yf we haue not done it rather for very feare of this thinge, and sayde: To daye or to morow mighte youre children saye vnto oure children:

The xxij. Chap.

What haue ye to do with the LORDE the God of Israel: The LORDE hath set Iordane for a border betwene vs and you ye children of Ruben and Gad, ye haue no porcion in the LORDE: By this shulde youre children make oure children to turne awaye from the feare of the LORDE.

Therefore sayde we: Let vs make oure S children an altare, not for sacrifice, ner for burntofferynge, ¶ but that it maye be a tokē betwene vs and you, and oure posterities, that we maye serue the LORDE in his sighte with oure burntofferings, deedofferings, and other offeringes: and ¶ youre children to daye or to morow neade not to saye vnto oure children: We haue no parte in the LORDE.

And we sayde: But yf they shulde speake so vnto vs, or to oure posterities to daye or to morow, then maye we saye: Beholde the symilitude of ¶ altare of the LORDE, which oure fathers made, not for sacrifice, ner for burntofferynge, but for a wytnesse betwene vs and you.

God forbydde, that we shulde fall awaye from the LORDE, to turne backe from him this daye, and to buylde an altare for sacrifice, for burntofferynge and for eny present, without ¶ altare of the LORDE oure God, that stondech before his habitation.

But whan Phineas the prest, and the G chiefe of the congregacion, the prynces of Israel which were with him, herde these wordes, that the children of Ruben, Gad, and Manasse had spoken, they pleased them well. And Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest sayde vnto the children of Ruben, Gad and Manasse: This daye we knowe, that ¶ LORDE is amonge vs, in that ye haue not trespassed agaynst the LORDE in this dede. Now haue ye delyuered the children of Israel out of the hande of the LORDE.

Then Phineas the sonne of Eleasar the prest, and the rulers returned out of the londe of Gilead, from the children of Ruben and Gad, vnto ¶ londe of Canaan to the children of Israel, and brought them worde agayne of the matter.

Then were the children of Israel well contente with the thinge. And they praysed the God of Israel, and sayde nomore that they wolde go vp agaynst them with an armye, to destroye the londe that the childre of Ruben and Gad dwelt in. And ¶ childre of Ruben and Gad called the name of the altare: This altare be wytnesse betwene vs, that the LORDE is God.

The XXIII. Chapter.

After a longe season, when the LORD had broughte Israel to rest from all their enemies rounde aboute: and Josua was now olde and well stricken in age, he called all Israel and their Elders, heades, iudges, and officers, and sayde vnto them: I am olde and well aged, and ye haue sene all that the LORD your God hath done vnto all these nacions in youre sighte. For the LORD your God himself hath foughte for you. Beholde, I haue parted amonge you y^e remnant of the nacions by lot, vnto euery trybe his enheritaunce from Iordane south, and all the nacions whom I haue rote out vnto the greatesee westwarde.

B And the LORD your God shal thrust them out before you, and dryue them awaye from you, that ye maye haue their londe in possession, as the LORD your God hath promysed you. Be ströge nowtherfore, that ye maye obserue and do all that is wrytten in the booke of the lawe of Moses: so that ye turne not asyde from it, nether to the righte hande ner to the lefte: that ye come not amonge y^e remnant of these nacions, which are with you: And se that ye make no mention ner sweare by the names of their goddes, nether serue them, ner bowe youre selues vnto them: But cleue vnto the LORD your God, as ye haue done vnto this daye: the shal the LORD dryue awaye greates and mightie nacions before you, like as there hath no man bene able to stonde before you vnto this daye. One of you shall chace a thousande: for the LORD your God fighteth for you, accordinge as he promysed you. Take diligent hede therfore vnto youre selues, that ye loue the LORD your God.

C But yf ye turne backe, and cleue vnto the se other nacions, and make mariages with them, so that ye come amonge them, and they amonge you, be ye sure then, that the LORD your God shal nomore dryue out all these nacions before you, but they shal be vnto you a snare and net, and prickes in youre sydes, and thornes in youre eyes, vntyll he haue destroyed you from the good löde, which the LORD your God hath geuen you.

Beholde, this daye do I go the waye of all the worlde, and ye shal knowe even from all youre hert and from all youre soule, that there hath not fayled one worde of all the good that the LORD your God promysed you. Nowe like as all the good is come that the LORD your God promised you:

The xxiii. Chap. Jo. xij.

• euen so shal the LORD cause all euell to come vpon you, tyll he haue destroyed you from this good löde, which the LORD your God hath geuen you: yf ye transgresse y^e couenaunt of the LORD your God, which he hath commaunded you. And yf ye go y^e waye and serue other goddes, and worshipecthe, then shal the wrath of the LORD beare where over you, and shal shortly destroye you out of the good löde; y^e he hath geuen you.

The XXIII. Chapter.

Josua gathered all the trybes of Israel together vnto Sichem, and called the Elders of Israel, the heades, iudges and officers. And when they were come before God, he sayde vnto all the people: Thus sayeth the LORD the God of Israel: y^e fathers dwelt afore time beyöde y^e water, Abrahā and Nahor wth Tarah their father and serued other goddes. Then toke I y^e father Abrahā beyönde the water, and caused him to walke in the löde of Canaan, and multiplied his scde, and gaue him Isaac, and vnto Isaac I gaue Jacob and Esau, and gaue Esau mount Seir to possesse. As for Jacob, and his childre, they wente downe in to Egypte.

Then sent I Moses and Aaron, and plagued Egypte as I haue done amonge the. After y^e broughte I you and youre fathers out of Egypte. And when ye came to y^e see, and the Egyptians folowed vpon youre fathers with charrettes and horse men vnto the reed see, then cryed they vnto the LORD, which put a darcknesse betwene you and the Egyptians, and broughte the see vpon them, and ouerwhelmed them. And youre eyes haue sene what I dyd to y^e Egyptians, and ye dwelt in y^e wilderness a löge season. And I broughte you in to y^e löde of the Amorites, which dwelt beyönde Iordane: and when they fought agaynst you, I delyuered them into y^e hande, that ye mighte haue their countre in possession, and I destroyed them before you. Then Balac the sonne of Ziphor the kynge of the Moabites gat him vp, and foughte agaynst Israel: and he sente and bad call Balaam the sonne of Beor, to curse you, neuertheles I wolde not heare him, but I blessed you, and delyuered you out of his hande.

And when ye wente over Iordane, and came vnto Jericho, the citesyns of Jericho foughte agaynst you, the Amorites, Phere-sites, Cananites, Hethtes, Girgositcs, Hcnites, and Jebusites: howbeit I delyuered the into youre hande. And I sent hornettes before you, which droue them out before you, na mely the two kynges of the Amorites: not thou with thy swerde, ner thou with thy bowe. And I haue geuen you a lande wherupon ye bestowed no labour, and cities which ye haue not buylded, that ye might dwell therein, and that ye might eate of the vynyardes and olyue trees which ye haue not planted. Feare the LORDE now therefore, and serue him perfectly and in the trueth, and let go the goddes, whom youre fathers serued beyonde the water and in Egypte, and serue ye the LORDE.

But yf ye like not to serue the LORDE, then chose you this daye whom ye wyll serue: the God whom youre fathers serued beyonde the water, or the goddes of the Amorites, in whose lande ye dwell. As for me and my house, we wyll serue the LORDE. Then answered the people, and saide: God forbidde, that we shulde forsake the LORDE, & serue other goddes. For the LORDE oure God brought vs and oure fathers out of the lande of Egypte fro the house of bondage, and did soch greates to vs before oure eyes, and preserved vs all the waye that we wente, and amonge all the nations, whom we trauayled by. And the LORDE thrust out before vs all the people of the Amorites that dwelt in the lande. Therefore wyll we also serue the LORDE, for he is oure God.

Iosua sayde vnto the people: Ye can not serue the LORDE: for he is an holy God, mighty, and gelous, which spareth not youre transgressions and synnes. But yf ye forsake the LORDE, and serue a straunge god, then shall the LORDE turne him, and do you euell, and consume you, after that he hath done you good. The people sayde vnto Iosua: Not so, but we will serue the LORDE. Then sayde Iosua vnto the people: Ye are witnesses ouer youre selues, that ye haue chosen you the LORDE, to serue him. And they sayde: Yee. Then put awaye from you (sayde he) the straunge goddes which are amonge you, and enclyne youre hert vnto the LORDE the God of Israel. And the people sayde vnto Iosua: We wyll serue the LORDE oure God, and be obedient vnto his voyce. So Iosua made a coneuant with the people the same daye, and laied statutes & lawes before them at Sichem.

Iosua wrote this acte in the booke of the lawe of God, and toke a greates stone, & set it vp there vnder an oke, which was in the Sanctuary of the LORDE, and sayde vnto all the people: Beholde, this stone shall be witnesse ouer you: for it hath herde all the wordes of the LORDE, which he hath spoken vnto vs, and shall be a witnesse ouer you, that ye denye not youre God. So Iosua let the people go euery one to his inheritaunce.

And it fortuned after these aetes, that Iosua the sonne of Nun & seruaunt of the LORDE dyed, when he was an hundred and ten yeare olde, and was buried in the border of his inheritaunce at Thimnath Serah, which lyeth on the mount Ephraim, on the north side of mount Gaas. And the children of Israel serued the LORDE as long as Iosua lyued, and the Elders (that lyued longe after Iosua) which knewe all the workes of the LORDE, that he had done vnto Israel. The bones of Ioseph, which the children of Israel had broughte out of Egypte, buried they at Sichem, in the peece of the lande, which Iacob boughte of the children of Hemor & father of Sichem for an hundred pens, and was the inheritaunce of the children of Ioseph. And whan all the same generacion was gathered vnto their fathers, there came vp after them another generacion, which knew not the LORDE, ner the workes that he had done for Israel.

Then wroughte the children of Israel euell before the LORDE, and serued Baalim, and forsoke y^e LORDE the God of their fathers (which broughte them out of the londe of Egypte) and folowed other geddes & the geddes of the nations that dwelt rounde aboute them, & worshipped them, & displeased the LORDE: for they forsoke y^e LORDE euery more and more, and serued Baal and Astaroth.

4. 2. 2. 2

Then y^e wrath of the LORDE waxed roghte vpon Israel, & he delynered the in to y^e handes of the, & spoyled the, that they mighte spoyle them, & sold the in to the handes of their enemies rounde aboute, & they were not able to withstonde their enemies any more, but what waye so euer they wolde out, y^e hande of the LORDE was agaynst the to their hurte (euery as the LORDE sayde and sware vnto them) and they were sore oppressed.

Deu. 28.

Now whan the LORDE raysed them vp iudges, which helped them out of the hande of such as spoyled the, they folowed not the iudges nether, but wente a whoringe after other geddes, & worshipped them, and were soone gone out of y^e waye y^e their fathers walked in, to heare the commaundementes of the LORDE, & dyd not as they dyd.

But whan y^e LORDE raysed vp iudges vnto them, the LORDE was wth y^e iudge, and helped them out of the hande of their enemies, as longe as the iudge lyaed. * For the LORDE had pitie of their complaynte, which they made ouer those y^e subdued the and oppressed them.

Nevertheless whan the iudge dyed, they turned backe, and marred all more the their fathers, so that they folowed other goddes to serue them and to bowe them selues vnto them: they wolde not fall from their purposes, ner from their obstinate waye.

Therefore waxed the wrath of the LORDE allwaie so whote ouer Israel, that he sayde: For so moch as the people haue transgressed my couenaunt, which I commaunded their fathers, & folowe not my voyce, I wil from hence forth dryue out none of the heythen, whō Josua lefte behynde him, whā he dyed, * that by them I maye proue Israel, whether they wil kepe the waye of the LORDE, to walke therein, as their fathers dyd, or not. Thus the LORDE suffred all these nacions, so that in a shorte tyme he droue them not out, whom he had not geuen ouer in to Josuas hande. The III. Chapter.

These are the nacions, whom the LORDE suffred to remayne, y^e by them he mighte proue Israel, which had no vnderstandinge in the warres of Canaan: onely because y^e the trybes of the childre of Israel might knowe & lerne to warre, which afore had no knowlege therof, namely: The fyue lordes of y^e Philistynes, & all the Canaanites, & Sidonians, & the Hethites y^e dwelt vpon mount Libanus, fro mount Baal Hermon, vntyll a man come vnto Hemath. The same remayned, that Israel mighte be proued by them, that it mighte be knowne whether they wolde herten to the commaundementes of the LORDE, which he commaunded their fathers by Moses.

Now whan the children of Israel dwelt thus amōge the Canaanites, Hethites, Amorites, Pherecites, Heuites & Jebusites, they toke their daughters to wyues, & gaue their daughters vnto their sonnes, & serued their goddes, and wroughte wickednes before the LORDE, & forgat the LORDE their God, & serued Baalim & Astaroth. Then y^e LORDE waxed whote ouer Israel, & he solde the vnder the hāde of Cusan Rishathaim kynge of Mesopotamia, & so y^e childre of Israel serued Cusan Rishathaim viij. yea-

The childre of Israel vnto (re. the LORDE, & the LORDE raysed the vp a saviour whiche delyuered the, namely * Achniel y^e sonne of Benas, Calebs yongest brother.

The iii. Chap. Ho. xiiij.

And the sperte of the LORDE came vpon him, & he was indge in Israel, & wente out a warre fare. And y^e LORDE delyuered Cusan Rishathaim the kynge of Syria in to his hāde, so y^e his hande was to stroge for him. * Then was the londe in rest fortye yeares. And Achniel the sonne of Benas dyed.

But the children of Israel dyd yet more euell before the LORDE. Then the LORDE strengthed Eglon the kynge of y^e Moabites agaynst y^e childre of Israel, because they wrought wickednesse before y^e LORDE. And he gathered vnto him y^e childre of Ammon, & the Amalechites, & wete and smote Israel, and conquered the cite of the palme trees. And the children of Israel serued Eglon y^e kynge of y^e Moabites eightene yeares. The childre of Israel vnto the LORDE. And the LORDE raysed the vp a saviour, namely Ehud the sonne of Gera y^e sonne of Jammi, which was a man that mighte do nothinge with his righte hande.

And whā the childre of Israel sent a present by him vnto Eglon the kynge of the Moabites, Ehud made him a two edged dagger of a spanne longe, & gyrded it vnder his garmēt vpo his righte thye, & broughte y^e present vnto Eglon the kynge of y^e Moabites. As for Eglon, he was a very fat man.

And whan he had delyuered the present, he let the people go that had caried the present, and he himselfe turned backe from the Idols at Gilgall, & caused to saye thus (vnto the kynge:) I haue a secreete thinge to tell the O kynge. And he commaunded to kepe sylence, & all they that stode aboute him, wente out from him.

And Ehud came in vnto him. He sat in a sylled Sommer perler, which was for him selfe alone. And Ehud saide: I haue som what to saye vnto the of God. The rose he vp fro his seate. But Ehud put forth his lefte hande, & toke the dagger from his righte thye, & thrust it in to his bely, so y^e the heste wente in also after the blade, & the fette closed the heste: for he diue not y^e dagger out of his bely, & y^e fylthines departed fro him. But Ehud gat him out at the backe dore, & put to y^e dore after him, and lockte it.

Now whan he was gone, his seruantes came in, and sawe that the dore of the Sommer perler was lockte, and they sayde: peradventure he is gone to the priuie in the sylled Sommer perler.

But whan they had wayted so lōge tyll they were ashamed (for no man opened the perler dore) they toke the keye, and opened it.

The boke of the Judges.

Beholde, then laye their lordē deed vpo the earth. As for Ehud, he was gotten awaye, whyle they made so longe tarynge, & he wente ouer by the Idols, and ranne his waye vnto Seirath.

Nu. 10. 2

And whan he came in, he blewē & trompet vpo mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel wente with him from the mount, and he before them, and he saide vnto them: Followe me, for the LORD hath deliuered the Moabites youre enemies in to yo^r hande. And they folowed him, & wanne y^e ferye of Jordane, & goeth towarde Moab, & suffred no man to go ouer, and at y^e sametyme they smote of the Moabites vpo a tenthousandē men, all nobles and men of armes, so that there escaped not one. Thus were the Moabites broughte vnder the hande of the children of Israel at that tyme, and the londe was in rest foure score yeares.

Jud. 3. 2

Afterwarde was Samgar y^e sonne of Anath, which slewe sixe hundred Philistynes with an oxes gadd, and deliuered Israel also.

The III. Chapter.

21 Whiche children of Israel dyd yet more euell before y^e LORD, whan Ehud was deed. And the LORD solde the in to the hande of Jabin the kynge of the Canaanites, which dwelt at Hazor, & the chiefe capteyne of his hooste was Sissera, and he dwelt at Haroseth of the Heythen. And the childre of Israel cried vnto the LORD: for he had nyne hundred yron charrettes, and subdued the children of Israel by violence twentye yeaere.

d. 3. b

At y^e sametyme was Judgesse in Israel the prophetisse Debboia, the wyfe of Lapidoth, and she dwelt vnder y^e palme of Debboia betwene Rama & Berhel, vpon mount Ephraim, and the children of Israel came vp vnto her to the lawe. She sent forth, & called for Barak the sonne of Abi Noam of Kedes Neptali, and sayde vnto him: Hath not y^e LORD the God of Israel commaunded the: Go thy waye, and get the vp vnto mount Thabor, & take wth the tenthousandē men of the children of Neptali & Zabulon? For I wil make Sissera the chiefe capteyne of Jabin's hoost to come to the vnto y^e water of Cyson, with his charrettes and with his multitude, and I wyll deliuer him into thy hande. Barak sayde vnto her: If thou wilt come wth me, I wil go: but yf thou wilt not come with me, I wil not go.

ney that thou goest, but y^e LORD shal deliuer Sissera in to a womā's hande. So Debboia gat hir vp, and wente with Barak vnto Kedes. Then Barak called Zabulon and Neptali vnto Kedes, and wēt on fote wth ten thousandē men. And Debboia wente wth him also. As for Heber the Kenyte he was departed from the Kenytes from the children of y^e Hobab Moses brother in lawe, and had pitched his tent by y^e Oke of Zaanaim besyde Kedes.

Nu. 10. 6

Then was it tolde Sissera, & Barak the sonne of Abi Noam, was gone vp vnto mount Thabor: & he gathered all his charrettes together, nyne C. yron charrettes, & all the people y^e was with him from Haroseth of the Heythē, vnto the water Cyson. Debboia sayde vnto Barak: Up, this is the daie wherein the LORD hath deliuered Sissera in to y^e hande: for y^e LORD shal go forth before y^e. So Barak wente fro mount Thabor, and y^e ten thousandē men after him.

But the LORD discomfited Sissera wth all his charrettes & hoost, & made the a frayd of the edge of the swerde before Barak, so y^e Sissera leapt of his charret, & fled on fote. Neuertheless Barak folowed vpon the charrettes & the hoost vnto Haroseth of the Heythen, & all Sissers hoost fell thorow y^e edge of the swerde, so y^e not one escaped. As for Sissera, he fled on fote vnto the tente of Jael, y^e wife of Heber y^e Kenite. For there was peace betwene kynge Jabin at Hazor, & the house of Heber the Kenite.

Jael wēt forth to mete Sissera, & sayde vnto him: Turne in my lordē, turne in to me, & be not a frayd. And he turned in vnto her in to the tente, & she couered him with a tarmēt. She sayde vnto her: I praye y^e geue me a litle water to drynke, for I am a chyist. The opened she a mylke pot, & gaue him to drynke, and couered him. And he sayde vnto her: Stode in the tente doze, & yf one come & aske, is there eny man here? saye No man.

Jud. 4. 18

Then Jael the wife of Heber toke a nale of the tente, and an hammer in hir hande, & wente in piously vnto him, & smote the nale in thorow the temples of his heade, so y^e he sancte to y^e earth. As for him, he was fallen on a slomber, and weery, and so he dyed.

But whā Barak folowed after Sissera, Jael wente for to mete him, and sayde vnto him: Come hither, I wil shewe the the man, whom thou sekest. And whan he came in vnto her, he sawe Sissera deed, & the nale sticke in his temples. Thus God broughte downe Jabin the kynge of the Canaanites

LORDE: but they that loue the, shal be enen as the Sonne rysinge vp in his myghte.

And the londe had peace fortye yeares.

The VI. Chapter.

AND whan the children of Israel dyd dwell in the sighte of the LORDE, the LORDE deliuered them vnder the hande of the Madianites vij. yeares. And whā the hande of the Madianites was to myghtie ouer the children of Israel, the children of Israel made them clyffes in y^e mountaynes, and caves and holdes, to defende them selves from y^e Madianites. And whan Israel sowed eny thinge, y^e Madianites and Amalechites, and the children towarde the south came vp vpon them, and pitched their tētes agaynst them, and destroyed the increase of the londe downe vnto Gaza, & let nothinge remayne ouer of the beestes in Israel, nether shepe, ner oxen, ner asses. For they came vp with their catell and tentes, as it had bene a greate multitude of greshoppers (so that neither they ner their camels myghte be nombred) and fell in to the londe, that they myghte destroye it. Thus was Israel excedinge small before the Madianites. Then cried the children of Israel vnto the LORDE.

BUT whan they cried vnto the LORDE the cause of y^e Madianites, y^e LORDE sent the a prophet, which sayde vnto the: Thus saith the LORDE the God of Israel: I caried you out of Egypte, & broughte you out of y^e house of bondage, & deliuered you from the hande of the Egipcians, & from the hāde of all them that oppressed you, and I haue thynst them out before you, & geuen you their lōde and sayde vnto you: I am the LORDE youre God. Feare not ye the goddes of the Amorites, in whose londe ye dwell: neuertheles ye haue not hearkened vnto my voyce.

And there came an angell of the LORDE, & sat him downe vnder an Oke at Aphia, which belonged vnto Joas the father of y^e Efrites, and his sonne Gedeon was thosfhyng wheate in the barne, that he myghte flye awaye before the Madianites.

CThen appeared vnto him the angell of y^e LORDE, and sayde vnto him: The LORDE with y^e thou myghtie gaunte. But Gedeon sayde vnto him: Syr, yf the LORDE be wth vs, wherfore is all this then happened vnto vs? And where are all the wonders, which oure fathers tolde vs, & sayde: The LORDE brought vs out of Egypte? But now hath the LORDE forsaken vs, and deliuered vs in to the hande of the Madianites.

The LORDE turned him vnto him, & say

de: Go thy waye in this thy strength, thou shalt deliuer Israel out of the hande of y^e Madianites. I haue sent the. But he sayde: My LORDE, wherwithall shal I deliuer Israel? Beholde, my kynred is the smallest in Manasse, & I am the leest in my fathers house. The LORDE sayde vnto him: I will be wth the, so y^e thou shalt smyte the Madianites, even as though they were but one man.

He sayde vnto him: If I haue founde grace in thy sighte, then make me a token, that it is thou, which speakest wth me: go not awaye, tyll I come to y^e, and brynge a meat-offerynge, to set before the. He sayde: I wyll tary, tyll thou comest agayne. And Gedeon wōte, and made ready a kydd, and an Ephā of unleuended floure, and layed the flesh in a maunde, and put the broth in a pot, and broughte it forth vnto him vnder the Oke, and came nye. But the angell of God sayde vnto him: Take the flesh and the unleuended bried, & set it vpon the stonye rocke that is here, and poure the broth thereon. And he dyd so. Then the angell of the LORDE stretched out the staffe that he had in his hande, and with the ende of it he touched the flesh and the unleuended floure: and the fyre came out of the rocke, and consumed the flesh and the unleuended floure. And the angell of the LORDE vanysht out of his sighte.

Now whā Gedeon sawe that it was an angell of y^e LORDE, he sayde: O LORDE LORDE, haue I thus sene an angell of y^e LORDE face to face? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Peace be wth the, feare not, thou shalt not dye. The Gedeon buylded an altare there vnto y^e LORDE, & called it: The LORDE of peace. The same stondeth yet vnto this daye at Aphia, y^e belōgeth vnto the father of y^e Efrites.

And in y^e same nyghte sayde y^e LORDE vnto him: Take a fedd bullocke frō amōgethy fathers oxen, & another bullocke of seven yeare olde, and breake downe the altare of Baall which is thy fathers, and cut downe the groue that stondeth by it, and buylde thou an altare vnto the LORDE y^e God aboue vpon the toppe of this rocke, and make it ready, and take the other bullocke, and offre a burnt offerynge wth the wodd of the groue that thou hast hewen downe. Then toke Gedeon ten men of his seruantes, and dyd as y^e LORDE sayde vnto him: but he was afrayed to do this by daye tyme, for his fathers house and the people in y^e cite, and so he dyd it by nyghte.

Now whan the people in the cite rose vp early in the mornynge, beholde, Baals alta-

re was broken, and the groue hewen downe by it, and the other bullocke a burnt offering vpon the altare that was buylded, & one sayde vnto another: Who hath done this? And whan they soughte & made searche, it was sayde: Gedeon the sonne of Joas hath done it. The sayde the people of γ cite vnto Joas: Brynge forth γ sonne, he must dye, because he hath broken Baals altare, and hewen downe the groue therby. But Joas sayde vnto all them that stode by him: Wyl ye sturue for Baal? Wil ye deliuer him? he γ sturue for him, shal dye this mornynge. If he be God, let him auenge him selfe, because his altare is broken downe. From γ daye forth was he called Jerubaal, because it was sayde: Let Baal auenge him selfe, that his altare is broken downe.

G Whan γ Madianites now & γ Amalechites, & the childre towarde the south had gathered the selues together, & were passed the row (Iordane) & had pitched their tentes in the valley of Jesrael, the spere of the LORDE endued Gedeon. & he caused the trompet to be blowne, & called (the house of) Abieser, that they shulde folowe him: & he sent messengers vnto all Manasse, & called them, & they shulde folowe him also: and he sent messengers likewise vnto Asser & Zabulon & Nephthali, which came vp to meete him.

And Gedeon sayde vnto God: If thou wilt deliuer Israel thorow my hande, as thou hast saide, the wil I laye a fiese of woll in the court: yf γ dew be onely vpon γ fiese, & drye vpon all the grounde, then wyll I perceaue, that thou shalt deliuer Israel thorow my hande, as thou hast sayde. And it came so to passe. And whan he rose vp early on the morow, he wrage γ dew out of the fiese, and fylled a dyshe full of water. And Gedeon sayde vnto God: Be not wroth at me, that I speake yet this one tyme. I wyll proue yet but once with the fiese, let it be drye onely vpon the fiese, and dew vpon all the grounde. And God dyd so the same night:

so that it was drye onely vpon the fiese, and dew vpon all the grounde.

The VII. Chapter.

Then Jerubaal (that is Gedeon) gat him vp early, and all the people that was with him, and pitched their tentes besyde the well of Harod, so that he had the hoost of the Madianites on the north side behynde the hyll of More in the valley. But the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: The people that be with γ are to many for me to deliuer Madian in to their hande, lest Israel boost them selues agaynst me, and saye: My hande hath deliuered me. Cause a proclamation now to be made in the eares of the people, and saye: He that feareth, and is a fray-ed, let him turne backe, and get him soone from mount Gilead. Then returned there of the people aboute a two and twenty thousande so that there was left butten thousande.

And the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon. The people are yet to many: brynge them downe to the water, there wyll I proue them for γ : and of whom I saye that he shal go w the, the same shal go with the: but of whō I saie that he shal not go with the, the same shal not go. And he broughte the people vnto γ water. And the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: Whosoever licketh of the water with his tūge, as a dogg licketh, make him stonde asyde and lyke wyse who soeuer falleth downe vpon his knees to drynke. Then was the nombre of them that had licked out of the hande to the mouth, thre hundred men. And the LORDE sayde vnto Gedeon: Thorow the thre hundred which haue licked, wyll I deliuer you, and geue ouer the Madianites in to thy hande: As for the other people, let them go euery one vnto his place.

And they toke vytayles with them for γ people, and their trompettes: but the other Israelites let he go, euery one vnto his tent. And he strengthened himselfe with the thre hundred men, and the Madianites hoost laye before him beneth in the valley. And the same night sayde the LORDE vnto him: Up, and go downe in to the hoost, for I haue geuen them ouer in to thy hande. But yf thou be afrayed to go downe, then let γ seruant Pura go downe with the vnto the hoost, & thou maiest heare what they saie: after that shalt thou be bolde, and thy honde stronge, that thou mayest go downe in to the hoost.

Then wente Gedeon downe with his seruant vnto γ watchme of γ watchme of armes γ were in γ hoost. And γ Madianites and Amalechites, and all the children of the south, had layed them selues beneth in the valley, as a multitude of greschoppers, and their Camels were not to be nombred for multitude, euē as the sonde on y^e see shore. Now whan Gedeon came, beholde, one tolde another his dreame, & sayde: Beholde, I haue dreamed a dreame: We thoughte a battē barlye lose came rollinge downe to y^e hoost of y^e Madianites: and whan it came to the tente, it smote it, and ouerthrew it, and turned it vpsyde downe, so that the tente fell. Then answered the other: That is nothinge els then y^e swerde of Gedeon the sonne of Ioas y^e Israélite: God hath genē ouer the Madianites with all the hoost in to his hande.

E Whan Gedeon herde this dreame tolde, & the interpretation of it, he worshipped, and came agayne in to the hoost of Israel, and sayde: Up, for the LORDE hath deliuered y^e hoost of the Madianites in to youre hāde. And he deuēded the thre hundred men in to thre partes, and gaue every one a trompet in his hande, and emptye pytchers, and lampes therin, and sayde vnto them: Loke vnto me, and do ye euē so, and beholde, whā I come to the vttemost parte of the hoost, euē as I do, so do ye also. Whan I blowe y^e trompet, and all that are wth me, then shal ye blowe y^e trōpettes also rounde aboute all the hoost, and saye: Here the LORDE & Gedeon. Thus came Gedeon and the thre hundred men with him vnto the vttemost parte of y^e hoost (aboute the tyme whan the mydwatch begynneth) and waked vp the watchmē, and blew with the trompettes, and smote asunder the pitchers in their handes.

J So all the thre companies blew with y^e trompettes, and brake the pitchers. But the lampes helde they in their lefte hande, and the trompettes in their righte hāde, so that they blew, and cried: Here the swerde of the LORDE and Gedeon. And every one stode in his place aboute the heest. Then ranne all the hoost, and cried and fled. And whyle the thre hundred men blew the trompettes, y^e LORDE broughte it so to passe, that every mans swerde in all y^e hoost was agaynst another, and the hoost fled vnto Bethsicha Bereratha, and vnto the border of the playne of Mehobab besyde Tabath. And y^e men of Israel of Ephraim, of Asser, & of Manasse cried, and folowed vpon the Madianites.

And Gedeon sent messengers vp vnto all mount Ephraim, sayenge: Come downe agaynst the Madianites, and stoppe the water from them vnto Bethbara and Jordane. And then cryed all they that were of Ephraim, and stopped the water from them vnto Bethbara and Jordane, and toke two prynces of the Madianites Oreb and Zeb, and slewe Oreb vpon the rocke of Oreb, and Zeb in the wynepresse of Zeb, and folowed vpon the Madianites, and broughte the heades of Oreb and Zeb, vnto Gideon ouer Jordane.

The VIII. Chapter.

When the men of Ephraim sayde vnto him: Wherfore hast thou done this vnto vs, that thou hast not called vs, whā thou wentest forth to fight agaynst y^e Madianites? and they chode sore with him. But he sayde vnto them: What haue I done now that is like youre acte? Is not the eftergadderynge of Ephraim better then the whole harvest of Abieser? God hath deliuered y^e prynces of the Madianites Oreb and Zeb in to youre hande, how coulde I do that ye haue done? Whā he had sayde this, their blast was swaged from him.

Now whan Gedeon came vnto Jordane, he wente ouer with the thre hundred mē that were with him, and they were weery, and folowed vpon their chace. And he sayde vnto the men of Succoth: I praye you geue the people that are with me, some loanes of bried (for they are weery) that I maye folowre vpon Zebia and Salmana the kinges of the Madianites.

But the rulers of Succoth sayde: Are the handes of Zebia and Salmana in thy handes already, that we must geue bried vnto thy men of warre? Gedeon sayde: Well, whan the LORDE deliuereth Zebia and Salmana in to my hāde, I wyll chrefshe youre flesh with thornes of the wyldernesse and with breares. And from thence he wente vp vnto Penuel, and spake euē so vnto them. And the mē of Penuel gaue him like answeere as they of Succoth. And he sayde also vnto the men of Penuel: If I come peaceably agayne, I wil breake downe this tower.

As for Zebia and Salmana, they were at Rarkar, and their hoost with them vpon a systenethousande, which were all that were lefte of the whole hoost of the children of the Easte: for there were fallen an hundred and twentye thousande, that coulde drawe the swerde.

And Gedeon wente vp by the waye, where they dwell in the tentes on the east side of Nobah and Jatbea, & smote the hoost, for the hoost was carelesse, and mystrosted nothinge. And Zebia and Salmana fled, but he folowed after them, and toke y^e two kynges of the Madianites Zebea and Salmana, and put all the hoost in feare.

Now whan Gedeon y sonne of Joas came agayne fro the battayll out of y east, he toke a lad of the men of Sucoth, & examyned him, which wrote him vp the names of the rulers of Sucoth, and their Elders, enē thre score and seuentene men.

D And he came to the men of Sucoth, & sayde: Beholde, here is Zebea & Salmana, cōcer nyngē whō ye laughēd me to scorne, & sayde: Are the handes of Zebea and Salmana in thy hādes all ready, that we must geue bried vnto thy men which are weery? And he toke the Elders of the cite, and thornes out of the wildernes, and bieres, and causēd y men of Sucoth to be tome therwith. * And the tower of Penuel brake he downe, and slewe the men of the cite.

2. Re. 12. d

And he saide vnto Zebea and Salmana: What maner of mē werethey whō ye slewe at Tabor? They sayde: They were euen like the, & goodly men, as yf they had bene a kynges childrē. He sayde: They were my brethren, euen my mother sonnes: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, yf ye had lettē them lyue, I wolde not slaye you.

E And he saide vnto his first borne sonne Jether: Stonde vp, & slaye them. Howbeit the lad dre not out his swerde, for he was a frayd, for so moch as he was yet but a lad. Zebea & Salmana sayde: Stonde thou vp, & slaye vs, for as the man is, soch is also his strength. So Gedeon arose, and slewe Zebea and Salmana, and toke the ornaments that were aboute their Camels neckes.

Then sayde certayne in Israel vnto Gedeon: Bethou lorde ouer vs, thou and thy sonne, and thy sonnes sonne, for so moch as thou hast deliuered vs from y hande of y Madianites. Nevertheless Gedeon saide vnto them: I wil not be lorde ouer you, nether shal my sonne be lorde ouer you, but the LORDE shal be lorde ouer you.

S Gedeon sayde vnto them: One thinge I desyre of you, Every man geue me the earring that he hath spoyled. (For in so moch as y men were Ismaelites, they had earringes.) They sayde: Them wyll we geue the. And they spred out a cloth, and every man cast the earring theron that he had spoyled. And the golden earynges which he requyred, had in weight, a thousande and seven hundred Syckles of golde, besyde the spanges and cheynes, and scarlet rayment which the kynges of the Madianites dyd weere, and besyde the neckbandes of their Camels. And Gideon made a cote armour therof, and set it in his cite at Aphra. And all Israel wente there a whoringe after it, and it turned to an occasion of fallinge vnto Gedeon and his house.

Thus were y Madianites brought downe before the children of Israel, and lifte vp their heade nomore: and the londe was in rest fortye yeares, as lōge as Gedeon lyued.

And Jerubaal the sonne of Joas wēt & dwelt in his house. And Gedeon had thre score & ten sonnes, which were come out of his thye: for he had many wyues. And his concubyne which he had at Sichē, bare him a sonne also, whom he called Abimelech. And Gideon the sonne of Joas dyed in a good age, & was buried at Aphra in y sepulchre of his father Joas the father of the Esrites.

4. Re. 10. a

But whan Gedeon was deed, the childrē of Israel turned backe, and wente awhoringe after Baalim, and made a couenaunt wth Baal Berith, y he shulde be their God. And y childrē of Israel thoughte not on y LORDE their God, which had deliuered them fro the hande of their enemies rounde aboute: and they shewed not mercy vnto the house of Jerubaal Gedeon, acordinge to all the good that he had done vnto Israel.

The IX. Chapter.

A Bimelech the sonne of Jerubaal, wente vnto Sichē to his mothers brethren, & spake vnto them, & to all the kynred of his mothers fathers house, and sayde: I praye you speake in the eares of all the men at Sichem: What is better for you, that thre score and ten men all children of Jerubaal shulde be lordes ouer you, or that one man shulde be lorde ouer you? Remembre also that I am youre bone and youre flesh.

Then spake his mothers brethre all these wordes for him, in y eares of all y men at Sichem. And their hert enclyned to Abimelech, for they thoughte: He is oure brother: and gaue him thre score and ten syluerlinges out of y house of Baal Berith. And wth them Abimelech hyred men that were vagabundes and of light condicions, which followed him. And he came to his fathers house vnto Aphra, and slew his brethren the childrē of Jerubaal, euen thre score men and eū vpon one stone. But Jorham the yongest sonne of Jerubaal remayned ouer, for he was hydd. And all the men of Sichem, and all the house of Millo gathered them selues together, and wente and made Abimelech kyng by the Oke that stondech at Sichem.

The booke of the Judges.

B When this was tolde Jotham, he wente, and stode vpon the coppe of mount Gussim, and lifte vp his voyce, cried, and sayde: Heare me ye men of Sichem, that God maye heare you also. The trees wente to anointe a kinde ouer them, and sayde vnto the Olyue tree: Bethou oure kynge. But the Olyue tree answered them: Shall I go and leane my fatnesse (which both God and men commende in me) and go to be puse vp aboute the trees? Then sayde the trees vnto the fygge tree: Come thou and be kynge ouer vs. But the fygge tree sayde vnto the: Shal I leane my sweetnes and my good frute, and go to be puse vp aboute the trees? Then sayde the trees vnto the vyne: Come thou and be oure kynge. But the vyne sayde vnto them: Shal I leane my sweete wyne, which reioyseth God and men, and go to be puse vp aboute the trees? The sayde all the trees vnto the thorne busshie: Come thou, and be kynge ouer vs. And the thorne busshie sayde vnto the trees: If it be true, & ye anoynte me to be kynge ouer you, the come, and put youre trust vnder my shadowe. If no, then go fyre out of the thorne busshie, & consume & Cedar trees of Liban.

C If ye haue done right now and iustly, & ye haue made Abimelech to be kynge: and yf ye haue done well vnto Jerubaal and to his house, and haue done vnto him as he deserued vnto you. Which (euen my father) foughte for youre sakes, and ioperde his lyfe, to deliuer out of the Midianites hande, euē you, which are rysen vp this daye agaynst my fathers house, & haue slaine his childre, the score personnes & ten vpon one stone, and haue made you a kynge (euen Abimelech the sonne of his handmaide) ouer the men at Sichem, for somoch as he is youre brother.

If ye haue done right now and iustly vnto Jerubaal and his house this daye, then reioyse ouer Abimelech, and let him reioyse ouer you. If no, then go fyre out from Abimelech, and consume the men of Sichem and the house of Millo: And fyre go out also fro the men of Sichem, and from the house of Millo, and consume Abimelech. And Jotham (whan he had spoken this out) fled, and gat him out of the waye, and wente vnto Ber, and dwelt there because of his brother Abimelech.

D Now whan Abimelech had reigned thre yeare ouer Israel, God sent an euell mynde betwene Abimelech and the men of Sichem (for the men of Sichem despyed Abimelech, and rehearsed the wronge done to the sonnes of Jerubaal, and their bloude, and layed it vpon Abimelech their brother which slewe them, and vpon the men of Sichem that strenghted his hande therto, that he mighte slaye his brethren.

And the men of Sichem set an hynder watch vpon the toppes of the mountaynes, and spoyled all them that walked nye them by the waye, and it was tolde Abimelech. But there came Gaal the sonne of Ebed and his brethien, and entred into Sichem, and the men of Sichem put their trust in him, and wete out in to the felde, and gathered their vynyardes, and pressed them, and made a daunse, and wente in to their gods house, and ate and dranke, and cursed Abimelech.

And Gaal & sonne of Ebed sayde: Who is Abimelech? and what is Sichem, that we shulde serue him? Is he not the sonne of Jerubaal, and hath set Sebul his sernaunt ouer the men of Sichem? Wherfore shulde we serue him? Wolde God the people were vnder my hande, & I mighte put downe Abimelech.

And it was tolde Abimelech: Increase thine hooste, and departe. For Sebul the chiefe ruler of the cite, whan he herde the wordes of Gaal & sonne of Ebed, he was wroth fully displeased, and sente message secretly to Abimelech, and caused to saye vnto him: Beholde, Gaal the sonne of Ebed and his brethien are come to Sichem, and make the cite to be agaynst the.

Arise therefore by nyght, thou and thy people that is with the, and laye wayte for the in the felde: and tomorrow whan the Sonne aryseth, get the vp soone, and fall vpon the cite: and yf he and the people that is with him come out vnto the, the deale with him, as thynne hande fyndeth.

Abimelech stode vp by nyght, and all the people that was with him, and layed wayte for Sichem with foure companies of men of warre. And Gaal the sonne of Ebed wete out and stode at the dore of the gate of the cite. But Abimelech gat him vp out of the hinder watch, and the people that was with him. Now whan Gaal sawe the people, he sayde vnto Sebul: Beholde, there cometh a people downe from the toppe of & mount. Sebul saide vnto him: Thou seist & shadowe of the mountaines as though they were men. Gaal spake yet more and sayde: Beholde, there cometh a people downe from & myddes of the londe, & one bonde of men cometh by the waye to & witch Oke. The sayde Sebul: Where is now & mouth & sayde: Who is Abimelech, that we shulde serue him? Is not this y people, whom thou hast refused? Go forth now, and fighte with him.

Gaal wente forth before the citsens of Sichem, and foughte with Abimelech. But Abimelech chased him, so that he fled, and there fell many slayne even vnto the gate of the cite. And Abimelech abode at Arma. But Sebul droue away Gaal and his brethren, so that they must not remayne at Sichem. Vpon the morowe wente the people forth into y felde. Whā this was tolde Abimelech, he toke the people, and parted them into thre bōdes of men, and wayted for thē in the felde. Now whan he sawe y the people wēte out of the cite, he rose agaynst thē, and smote them.

G Abimelech and y company of men that was with him, fell vpon them, and stepte vnto the dore of the poire: but the other two companies fell vpon all them that were in the felde, and slewe them. Thē foughte Abimelech agaynst the cite all y same daye, and wanne it, and slewe the people that was there in, and brake downe y cite, and sowed salt thereon.

Whan all the men of the tower of Sichem herde this, they wente into a stronge holde of y house of their God Berich. But whan Abimelech herde, that all the men of the tower of Sichem had gathered thē selues together, he wente vp vnto mount Zelmon, and all the people that was with him, and toke an are in his hāde, and hewed downe a braunch of a tre, and toke it vp, & layed it vpon his shulder, and sayde vnto all the people that was with him: As ye haue seene me do, make ye haist, and do even so as I. Then all the people hewed downe euery one a braunch, and folowed Abimelech: and they layed them to the holde, and set fyre vpon them agaynst them and the holde: and all the men of the tower of Sichem dyed thorough the smoke and fyre, vpon a thousande men and women.

The x. Chap. Ho. xviij.

As for Abimelech, he wēte vnto Thebez, and layed sege vnto it, and wanne it. But in the myddes of the cite, there was a stronge tower, vnto the which all the men and women, and all the citsens of the cite fled, and shutt it after them, and clymmed vp to the toppe of the tower. Then came Abimelech vnto the tower, and soughte agaynst it, and came nye vnto the dore of the tower, that he might burne it with fyre. But a woman cast a pece of a mylstone vpon Abimelechs heade, and brake his brane panne. Then Abimelech in all the haist, called the seruaunt that bare his wapen, and sayde vnto him: Drawe out thy swerde, and kyll me, that it be not sayde of me: A woman hath slayne him. Then his seruaunt thrust him thorow, and he dyed. Whan the Israelites which were with him, sawe, y Abimelech was deed, they gat them awaye euery one vnto his awne place.

Thus God recompenced Abimelech the euell that he had done vnto his father, whā he slewe his thre score and ten brethren: like wyse all the euell of the men of Sichem, dyd God rewarde them vpon their heade: and so the curse of Jochem y sonne of Jerubaal came vpon them.

The X. Chapter.

After Abimelech there rose vp another sauoure in Israel, Thola a man of Isachar, and the sonne of Pua, the sonne of Dodo. And he dwelt at Samir vpon the mount Ephraim, and iudged Israel thre and twentye yere, and died, and was buried at Samir.

After him stode vp one Jair a Gileadite, and iudged Israel two and twentye yere, and had thirtie sonnes, rydinge vpon thre asses soales: and had thirtie cities, whose names are Hauoth Jair (that is, the cities of Jair) vnto this daye, and lye in Gilead. And Jair dyed, and was buried at Camon.

But the children of Israel wrought wickednes in the sighte of the LORDE, and serued Baalim and Astaroth, and the goddes of Siria, and the goddes of Sidon, and the goddes of Moab, and the goddes of y children of Ammon, and the goddes of the philistines, and forsoke y LORDE, and serued him not. Then was y wrath of y LORDE seare vpon Israel, and he gaue thē ouer vnder the hāde of the philistynes, and of the children of Ammō. And they vexed and oppressed y children of Israel eightene yere longe, all the children of Israel that were beyonde Jordane in the londe of the Moabites, which lyeth in Gilead. The children of Ammon also wente ouer Jordane, and fought agaynst Juda, Ben Jamin, and agaynst the house of Ephraim, so that Israel was very sore troubled.

C Then cryed the children of Israel vnto the LORDE, and sayde: We haue synned agaynst the, for we haue forsaken oure God, & serued Baalim. But the LORDE sayde vnto the childre of Israel: Did not the Egipcians, the Amorites, the children of Ammon, & Philistines, the Sidonians, the Amalechites and Moabites oppresse you, and I helped you out of their hande, whan ye cryed vnto me? Yet haue ye forsaken me, and serued echer goddes? Therefore wyll I helpe you no more. Go youre waye, and crye vpon the goddes whom ye haue chosen, let them helpe you in the tyme of youre trouble.

Ier. 2. d

D But the childre of Israel sayde vnto the LORDE: We haue synned, do thou vnto vs what pleaseth the, onely deliuer vs at this tyme. And they put the straunge goddes fro them, and serued the LORDE, And his soule had pytie on the mysery of Israel.

And the children of Ammon called themselves together, and pitched in Gilead: But the children of Israel gathered them selues together also, and pitched at Mispa. And 3 people of the chiefe of Gilead sayde amōge them selues: Who so euer begynneth to fight agaynst the children of Ammon, shalbe heaue ouer all them that dwell in Gilead.

The XL Chapter.

A Jephthae a Gileadite was a valiant man of armes, but an harlots child. Gilead begat Jephthae. But whan the wyfe had borne children vnto Gilead, and the same wyues childre were waxe greate, they thrust out Jephthae, and sayde vnto him: Thou shalt not be here in oure fathers house, for thou art another womans sennet. The fled he from his birth, and dwelt in the londe of Tob. And there resorted vnto him vagabondes, and were cut with him. And after a certayne tyme foughte the children of Ammon with Israel.

Now whā the childre of Ammon foughte thus with Israel, the Elders wente from Gilead to fetch Jephthae out of the londe of Tob, and sayde vnto him: Come, and be oure capayne, and fight agaynst the children of Ammon. But Jephthae sayde vnto the Elders of Gilead: Are not ye they that hate me and haue thrust me out of my fathers house, and now come ye to me whan ye are in trouble?

The xi. Chap.

The Elders of Gilead sayde: Therefore come we now againe vnto the, that thou mayest go with vs, and fighte agaynst the children of Ammon, and be oure capayne ouer all that dwell in Gilead. Jephthae sayde vnto the Elders of Gilead: If ye seech me agayne to fighte agaynst the childre of Ammon, and the LORDE deliuer them before me, shal I then be youre heade? The Elders of Gilead saide vnto Jephthae: The LORDE be hearer betwene vs, yf we do not as thou hast sayde. So Jephthae wrote with the Elders of Gilead. And the people made him heade and duke ouer them. And Jephthae spake all this before the LORDE at Mispa.

Then sente Jephthae messaungers to the kynge of the children of Ammon, and caused to saye vnto him: What hast thou to do with me, that thou comest vnto me to fighte agaynst my londe? The kynge of the childre of Ammon answered Jephthaes messaungers Because that Israel toke awaye my londe (whan they departed out of Egypte) from Arnon vnto Jabock, and vnto Jordane: geue it me agayne now therefore peaceably.

But Jephthae sent yet mo messaungers to the kynge of the children of Ammon, which sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth Jephthae: Israel hath taken no londe, neither from the Moabites ner from the children of Ammon: for when they departed out of Egypte, Israel walked thorow the wyldernes vnto the reed see, and came to Cades, and sent messaungers to the kynge of the Edomites, and sayde: Let me go thorow thy londe. But the kynge of 3 Edomites wolde not heare the. They sent lykewyse vnto the kynge of the Moabites, which wolde not also. Thus Israel abode in Cades, and compassed the lode of the Edomites and Moabites, and came on the east syde of the londe of the Moabites and pitched beyonde Arnon, and came not within the coaste of the Moabites. For Arnon is the border of the Moabites.

And Israel sent messaungers vnto Sihon the kynge of the Amorites at Heshbon, and caused to saye vnto him: Let me go thorow thy londe vnto my place. Neuertheles Sihon wolde not trust Israel to go thorow the border of his londe, but gathered all his people, and pitched at Jahza, and foughte with Israel. Howbeit the LORDE God of Israel gaue Sihon with all his people in to Israels hande, so that they slew them. Thus Israel conquered all the londe of the Amorites that dwelt in 3 same countre. And they toke possessiō of all the borders of the Amō of Israel droue awaye the Amorites before his people of Israel, and wile thou coquere them? Is it not so, yf thy God Camos gaue in the villages therof, and in all the cities

The LORDE geue sentence this daie betwe-

Nevertheless the kynge of the children of Ammon wolde not heare yf wordes of Jeph-spere of the LORDE vpon Jephthae, and he wente thorow Gilead and Manasse, and thorow Mispa which lieth in Gilead, and fro Mispa that lieth in Gilead, vnto þe chil-

And Jephthae vowed a vowe vnto the so euer cometh (first) out at the dore of my house in my waye, whan I returne agayne peaceably from the childre of Ammon, that same shalbe the LORDES, and I wyl offre

So Jephthae wente vpon the children of Ammon, to fighte agaynst them. And yf LOR-

Now whan Jephthae came to Mispa vnto his house, beholde, his daughter wente out to mete him with tabrettes and daunces: and she was his onely childe, & he had els necher sonne ner daughter. And whan he sawe her, he rente his clothes, & sayde: Alas my daughter, thou makest my hert sorowfull, and discomfortest me: for I haue opened my mouth vnto the LORDE, and can not call it agayne.

She sayde: My father, yf thou hast opened thy mouth vnto the LORDE, then do

And she sayde vnto hir father: Do this for taynes two monethes, that I maye bewepe my virginite with my playsecres. He sayde: Go thy waye. And he let her go two mone-thes. Then wente she with her playsecres, and bewayled hir mayden heade vpon the mountaynes. And after two monethes she came agayne vnto hir father. And he dyd vnto her acordinge as he had vowed. And she had neuer bene in daunger of eny man.

And it was a custome in Israel, that the doughters of Israel shulde go every yere, and mourne for the daughter of Jephthae the Gileadite, foure dayes in the yere.

ye helped me not out of their handes. Now the men in Gilead smote Ephraim, because Ephraim & Manasse. And the Gileadites to-ke yf ferye of Iordane from Ephraim. Now whan one of yf fugityue Ephraimites dyd saye:

thou an Ephraimite? yf he answered: No, they bad him saye: Schiboleth, & he sayde: Sib-

But there was a man at Zarga, of one of y kynreds of the Danites, named Manoah, and his wife was vnfrutefull & bare him no gynne to deliuer Israel out of the hande of the Philistynes.

1. Reg 1. b

B Then came y woman and tolde hir hus-an angell of God, very terrible, so y I axed him not whence he came, & whither he wol-

Then Manoah prayed the LORDE, & sayde: Oh LORDE, let y man of God whom thou hast sent, come to vs agayne, y he maye enfourme vs what we shall do vnto the childe which shalbe borne. And God herde the voyce of Manoah, & the angell of God came to his wife agayne. But she sat in y felde, and hir husbāde Manoah was not w her. The ranne she in all the haist, & tolde hir husbanhim: Art thou y man that spake to the wo-

it was an angell of the LORDE.) And Ma-

Samson sayde vnto his father: Gene me this womā, for she pleaseth myne eyes. But his father z his mother knewe not y it came of the LORDE, z that he soughte an occasi on agaynst the philistynes. For the philistynes reigned ouer Israel at y same tyme. So Samson wente downe with his father and with his mother vnto Thimnath.

B And whan they came to the vynyardes of Thimnath, beholde, there came a yonge rearinge lyon agaynst him. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpon him, and he rente him in peces, euen as a kydd is parted a sun der, and yet had he nothinge at all in his hā de, and he tolde it not vnto his father z his mother.

Now whan he came downe, he spake w the woman, and she pleased Samsons eyes. And after certayne dayes he came agayne, to receaue her, z wente out of y waye, that he mighte se y deed carcas of the lyon: and beholde, in y lyons carcas there was a swar me of beyes, and hony: and he toke of it in his hande, and ate therof by the waye: and wete vnto his father and to his mother, and gaue them to eat also. But he tolde them not, that he had taken the hony out of the lyons carcas.

C And whan his father came downe to the woman, Samson made a feast there, as the yonge men vsed to do. And whan they sawe him, they gaue him thirtie companyons to be with him. Samson sayde vnto them: I wil expresse a darke sentence vnto you, yf ye expounde me the same wch in these seven dayes of the feast, I wyll geue you thirtie shertes, and chirtie chaunge of rayment. But yf ye can not expounde it, then shall ye geue me thirtie shertes, z chirtie chaunge of rayment. And they sayde vnto him: Shewe forth thy ryddle, let vs heare it. He sayde vnto them: Meate wente out from the denou- rer, and sweetenesse from the mightie. And in thre dayes they coude not expounde the ryddle.

Vpon the seventh daye they sayde vnto Samsons wife: Persuade thy husbāde, that he tell vs what the ryddle meaneth, or els we shal burne the and thy fathers house with fy re. Haue ye called vs hither, to brynge vs to pouerte? Then wepte Samsons wife before him, and sayde: Thou art displeased at me,

But he sayde vnto her: Beholde, I ha- ue not tolde it vnto my father and mother, and shulde I tell it the? And she wepte befo re him those seven dayes, whyle they had y feast. But on the seventh daye he tolde it her, for she was so importune vpon him. And she expounded the darke sentence vnto the chil- dren of her people. Then sayde the men of the cite vnto him vpon the seventh daye or- euer the Sonne wente downe: What is swe- ter then hony? What is stronger then the lyon? But he sayde vnto the: Xf ye had not ploxed w my calfe, ye shulde not haue foun- de out my ryddle. And the sprete of y LOR DE came vpon him, and he wente downe vnto Ascalon, and slewe thirtie men of them, z toke their spoyle, and gaue chaunge of ray- ment vnto the, y had expounded the ryddle. And he was wrothfully displeased, z wente vp vnto his fathers house. As for Samsons wife, she was geuen vnto one of his compa- nyons, which belonged vnto him.

The XV. Chapter.

Sfortuned after certayne daies abou te the wheate harvest tyme, y Sam- son visited his wife w a kydd. And whā he thoughte, I wil go to my wife in to the chamber, hir father wolde not let him in; and sayde: I thoughte thou wast displeased at her, and I gaue her vnto thy frende. But she hath a yonger sister which is more beuty full then she, let y same be thine for her. The sayde Samson vnto the: I haue once gottē a righte occasion agaynst the philistynes, I wil do you displeasure.

And Samson wete and caughte thre hun- drieth foxes, and take fyre brandes, and feste- ned one rayle to another, and put ever a fyre brande betwene two rayles, and kynled the same with fyre, and let them go amonge the philistynes corne, and thus he brient y stou- tes and the stondinge corne, and y vynyar- des, and the olyue trees.

Then sayde the philistynes: Who hath done this? And they sayde: Samson the hus- bande of the Thimnites daughter, because he toke awaye his wife from him, and gaue hir vnto his frende. Then wente the philis- tynes vp, and brient her and hir father also with fyre.

But Samson sayde vnto them: I can suf- fre you to do this, neuertheles I wil be auē ged vpon you my selfe, and then wil I lea- ue of. And he smote them sore both vpo the

But they of Iuda sayde: Wherfore are ye come vp against vs? They answered: we are come vp to bynde Samson, & we maye do vnto him, as he hath done vnto vs.

C Then wete there thre M. men of Iuda downe to the stone clyffe of Etam, & sayde vnto Samson: Knowest thou not that the Philistynes raigne ouer vs? Wherfore hast thou done this then vnto vs? He sayde: As they dyd vnto me, so haue I done vnto the agayne. They sayde vnto him: We are come downe to bynde the, & to deliuer & into the hande of the Philistynes. Samson sayde vnto the: Then sweare & promyse me, & ye wyll not slaye me. They answered him: We wyll not kyll the, we wil but bynde the, & deliuer the in to their hande, & wyl not slaye &. And they bounde him with two new coardes & caried him from the stone. And whan he came vnto Lechi, the Philistynes shouted, and rane vnto him. But & spere of & LORDE came vpon him, & the coardes aboute his armes were like thredes burnt in the fyre, so & the bondes were lowsed from his handes.

D And he founde the cheke bone of a deebasse: then put he forth his hande, and roke it, & slewe a thousande men therewith: And Samson sayde: With an olde asses cheke bone, yee euē with the cheke bone of an asse haue I slayne a thousande men. And whan he had sayde &, he cast & cheke bone out of his hande, & called the place Ramath Lechi. But whā he was sore a thyist, he called vpo the LORDE, & saide: Soch greate healtch hast thou geue by the hande of thy seruaunt, but now must I dye a thyist, & fall in to & hande of y vncircūcised. Thē God opened a gome to the in & cheke bone, so & water wete out: & whan he dranke, his spere came agayne, & he was refreshed. Therfore vnto this daye it is yet called & well of & cheke bone of him & made intercession. And he iudged Israell in the tyme of the Philistynes twetye yere.

After this he fell in to the loue of a woman by & broke of Sorke, whose name was Dalila, vnto whom the prynces of the Philistynes came vp, and sayde vnto her: Persuade him, and loke wherin he hath soch greate strength, & how we maye encreme him, & we mighte bynde him & subdue him, so wyll we geue the every man a M. and an C. syluerlinges. And Dalila sayde vnto Samson: I praye the tell me, wherin thy greate strength is, & how thou mightest be bounde to be subdued. Samson sayde vnto her: If I were bounde with seue roapes of fresh senowes, which are not yet dried vp, I shulde be weake, and as another man. Thē the prynces of the Philistynes broughte vp vnto her seuen new roapes, which were not yet dried vp. And she bounde him therewith. (But there was wayte layed for him besyde her in the chamber) and she sayde vnto him: The Philistynes vpon the Samson. Nevertheless he brake the roapes in sunder, euē as a twyned threde breaketh, whan it hath catched the heate of the fyre. And it was not knowne wherin his strength was.

C Then sayde Dalila vnto Samson: beholde, thou hast begyled me & dyssembled with me: tell me yet, wherewithall mayest thou be bounde? He answered her: If they bounde me with new coardes, wherewith no labo hath bene done, I shulde be feble, & as another man. Then toke Dalila new coardes, & bounde him withall, and sayde: The Philistynes vpo the Samson (but there was wayte layed for him in the chamber.) And he brake them from his armes, euē as it had bene a threde.

Dalila sayde vnto him: Yet hast thou begyled me & dessembled w me: O tell me yet, wherewithall mightest thou be bounde? He answered her: If thou playtest seue hayue lockes of my heade together in a fyllet, and fastenest them in with a nayle (I shulde be weake.) And she saide vnto him: The Philistynes vpo the Samson. But he awaked out of his slepe, & dide cut & playted hayrie lockes with the nale and the fyllet.

D Thē sayde she vnto him: How cast thou saye & thou louest me, where as thine hert is not yet with me? Thre tymes hast thou disceined me, and not tolde me wherin thy

So whan she was every daye importune vpon him wth her wordes, & wolde not let him haue rest, his soule was faynte enen vnto the death, & he shewed her his whole hert, & sayde vnto her: There came neuer rasoure vpon my heade, for I am a Nazaree of God fro my mothers wombe. If I were shaven, my strength shulde departe from me, so that I shulde be weake, and as all other men. Now whan Dalila sawe that he had opened all his hert vnto her, she sent & called for the prynces of the philistynes, & sayde: Come yet once vp, for he hath opened his whole hert vnto me.

E The came the prynces of the philistynes vp vnto her, & broughte the money wth them in their handes. And she made him to slepe vpon hir lappe, & called one which shoue of the seuē hayne lockes of his heade. And she begaune to vexe him. The was his strength departed fro him. And she sayde vnto him: The philistynes vpon the Samson. Now whā he awoke out of his slepe, he thought: I wil go forth as I haue done aforetyme, & ease my selfe, & knewe not y^e the LORDE was departed from him. But the philistynes toke him, & put out his eyes, and broughte him downe to Gasa, & bonnde him wth fetters, and made him to grynde in the prison. But the heer of his heade begaune to growe agayne, where it was shaven of.

S Whan y^e prynces of the philistynes were gathered together, to make a greate sacrifice vnto Dagon their god, and to be ioyfull, they sayde: Oure god hath delyuered Samson of enemye into o^ur hande. Like wyse whan y^e people sawe him, they praysed their god, & sayde: Oure god hath delyuered in to oure handes oure enemye, y^e destroyed oure londe, & slewe many of vs. Now whan their hert was ioyfull, they sayde: Let vs fetch Samson, that he maye make some pastyme before vs. Then fetched they Samson out of the prison, & he made pastyme before them. And they set him betwene two pilers. But Samson sayde vnto the lad y^e led him by the hande: Let me touche the pilers wher vpon the house stonderth, y^e I maye leane ther vnto. As for y^e house, it was full of men & women. All the prynces of the philistynes were there also, and vpon the rose were aboute a thie thousande men and women, which behelde what pastyme Samson made.

But Samson called vpon the LORDE, & sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thynke vpon me, & strength me but this once O God I beseeke the, y^e for both myne eyes I maye auēge me on the philistynes. And he toke holde of y^e two mydpilers, that the house stode vpon & was holden by, the one in his righte hāde, & y^e other in his left, & saide: My soule dye wth the philistynes, & he bowed him selfe mightely. Then fell the house vpon the prynces & vpon all the people that were therein, so that there were mo of y^e slayne which dyed in his death, thē he slewe whyle he lyled. Then came his biethren downe and all his fathers house, and toke him, and caried him vp, and buried him in the grane of his father Manoah betwene Zarga and Eschaol. He indged Israel twentye yeare.

The XVII. Chapter.

There was a man vpo mount Ephraim, named Mich. which sayde vnto his mother: The thousande and hundred syluerlinges which thou hast taken vnto the, & sworne, and spoken of before myne eares: beholde, y^e same money is by me, I haue taken it vnto me. Then sayde his mother: The blessinge of the LORDE haue thou my sonne. So he gaue his mother the thousande & hundred syluerlinges agayne. And his mother saide: That money haue I sanctified vnto the LORDE wth my hande for my sonne, to make a molten ymage: therefore I gene it the agayne. Neuertheles he delyuered y^e money agayne vnto his mother.

Then toke his mother two hundred syluerlinges, & put them forth to y^e goldsmith, which made a molten ymage, y^e was afterwarde in Michas house. And thus the man Micha had a gods house, & made an ouerbo dy cote, & Idols, and fylled y^e handes of one of his sonnes, y^e he mighte be his prest. At y^e tyme was there no kynge in Israel, & every man dyd the thinge y^e was righte in his awne eyes. There was a yōgemā of Bethleem Juda, amēgethe kynreds of Juda, and he was a Leuite, and was a stranger there. The same wente out of the cite of Bethleem Juda, to walke whither he coude.

Micha sayde vnto him: Tary with me, thou shalt be my father and my prest, I will geue the every yere ten syluerlinges and thy appointed raymēt, and meate and drynke: and the Leuite wete on. And the Leuite agreed to abyde with the man: and he helde the yongema, as one of his owne sonnes. And Micha fylled the Leuites hande, that he might be his prest, and so he was in Michas house. And Micha sayde: I am sure the LORDE wyll do me good now, that I haue a Leuite to my prest.

The XVIII. Chapter.

At that tyme was there no kynge in Israel. And y trybe of Danentes soughte them an enheritaunce to dwell in, for vnto that daie there was no enheritaunce fallen vnto them amonge the trybes of Israel. And the childre of Dan sent out of their kynreds fyue captaynes (which were men of armes) from Zarga and Esthaol, to spye and search out the londe. And they sayde vnto them: Go youre waie, and search out the londe. And they came vp to mount Ephraim in to y house of Micha, and taried there all night. And whyle they were there to Michas hussholde, they knewe y voyce of the yonge man the Leuite, and sayde vnto him: Who broughte y hither? What makest thou here? and why woldest thou come hither?

He answered the: Thus & thus hath Micha done vnto me, & hath hyed me to be his prest. They sayde vnto him: Ware at God, y we maye perceaue, whether oure iourney which we go, shal prospere well or not. The prest answered them: Go youre waye in peace, youre iourney y ye go, is before the LORDE. Then the fyue men wente their waye, & came vnto Laia, and sawe that the people which was therein, dwelt sure, even as y Sidonians, at rest, and carelesse, and that there was no lorde in the londe to vex them, and were farre from the Sidoniās, and had nothynge to do with eny man.

And they came to their brethre to Zarga and Esthaol. And their brethrien saide vnto them: How is it to you? They sayde: Arise, let vs go vp vnto them, for we haue sene the londe, y it is a very good londe: make haist therfore, & be not slacke to go, that ye maye come to take possession of the londe. Whan ye come, ye shall come to a carelesse people, and the londe is wyde: for God hath deliue red this place in to yoʒ hande, where nothynge wanteth of all y is vpon earth.

Then wente there thence out of the kynreds of Dan from Zarga and Esthaol, sixe hundred men ready wapened to y battayll, and wente vp, and pitched at Kiriath Jearim in Juda: therfore called they the same place, y hoost of Dan, vnto this daye, which is behinde Kiriath Jearim.

And fro thence they wete vp vnto mount Ephraim, and came to the house of Micha. Then answered the fyue men that wete out to spye the londe of Laia, & sayde vnto their brethrien: Knowe ye not that in these houses there is an overbody cote, Idols, & molten ymages? Now maye ye loke what ye haue to do. They departed thence, and came to the house of the yonge man the Leuite in Michas house, and saluted him frendly. But the sixe hundred men, which were of y childre of Dan, stode ready harnesssed before y gate. And the fyue men that were gone out to spye y londe, wete vp, and came thither, and toke the ymage, the overbody cote, & the molten Idols. In the meane whyle stode y prest at the gate, with the sixe hundred ready harnesssed.

Now whā these were come in to Michas house, and toke the ymage, the overbody cote, and the molten Idols, the prest sayde vnto them: What do ye? They answered him: Holde thy peace, and laye thine hande vpon thy mouth, and go with vs, y thou mayest be oure father & prest. Is it better for the to be prest in one mans house, then amonge a whole trybe & kynred in Israel? This pleased the prest well, & he toke both the overbody cote, and the Idols, and the ymage, and came in amonge the people. And whan they turned them and wente thence, they sent their childre, and catell, and sodch precious thynges as they had, before them.

Whan they were come farre now from the house of Micha, the men y were in Michas houses gathered the together by Michas house, & folowed y childre of Dan, and cried vpon the childre of Dan. They turned their faces aboute, and sayde vnto Michas: What ayleth the, y thou makest sodch a crien ge? He answered: Ye haue taken awaye my goddes, and the prest, & are goinge yoʒ waie, and what haue I behynde? What is here? And yet ye saye vnto me: What ayleth the? But the childre of Dan saide vnto him: Let not thy voyce be herde amōge vs, that seme wrothfull me thrust not at the, and so y soule and the soule of y house be destroyed. So the childre of Dan wete on their waye. And Micha, whan he sawe y they were so stronge for him, turned backe, and came agayne to his house.

But they toke that Micha had made, & the prest whom he had, & came vnto Laish, to a quyet carelessse people, and slewe them with the edge of the swerde, and burnt the cite with fyre, and there was no man to deliuer them: for they laye farre fro Sidon, and had to do with no man. And they laye in the valley, which is besyde Beth Rehob. Then bnylded they the cite, & dwelt therin, & called it Dan, after name of their father Dan, whom Israel begat. And y cite was called Laish afore tyme.

4-Re. 17. a And the children of Dan set vp the ymage for them, and Jonathan y sonne of Ger son the sonne of Manasse, & his sonnes were prestes amoge the trybe of y Danites, vnto the tyme y they were led awaye captiue out of the londe. And thus they set amonge the ymage of Micha, which he had made, as lōge as y house of God was at Silo.

The XIX. Chapter.

At the same tyme was there no kynge in Israel, and there was a man of Leui, which was a straūger besyde mount Ephraim, and had taken him a concubine of Bechleem Juda to wife. And whā she had played the harlot besyde him, she ranne fro him to hir fathers house vnto Bechleem Juda, & was there foure monethes longe. And hir husbāde gat him vp, & wente after her, to speake frendly w her, & to fetch her agayne, & had a seruante & a couple of asses w him. And she led him into hir fathers house. But whan the damfels father sawe him, he was glad, & receaued him: & his father in lawe, y the damfels father kepte him, so y he taried thre dayes w him: thus they ate and drōke, and remayned there all nighte.

But on y fourth daye he gat him vp early, & wolde go his waye. Then sayde y damfels father vnto his sonne in lawe: Refresh thine hert first w a morsell of bried, and then shal ye go. And they sat them downe, & ate and drōke both together: Then sayde the damfels father vnto the man: Oh tarye all nighte, y we waie refresh thine hert. But y mā arose, & wolde nedes go. And his father in lawe constrayned him to tarye all nighte. On the fift daye in the momynge he gat him vp, and wolde be gone. Then sayde the damfels father: I praye the comfort thine hert, & let vs tarye tyll y daye be farther past, and so they ate both together.

The xix. Chap. Fo. xxij.

E And the man gat him vp, and wolde go with his concubine and with his seruante. But his father in lawe the damfels father, saide vnto him agayne: Lo, the daye is spent, & it begynneth to be even, tary all nighte: beholde, here is lodginge yet this daye, abyde here this night, it shal refresh thine hert: to morow by times get you vp, and go youre waye vnto thy tent. Nevertheless the man wolde not tary, but gat him vp, and wete his waye, and came ouer agaynst Jebus (that is Jerusalem) and his couple of asses ladē, and his concubine with him.

D Now whan they were come nye vnto Jebus, the daye fell fast awaye. And y seruante saide vnto his master: I praye you go on, and let vs turne in to this cite of the Jebusites, and tarye therin all night. Not withstandinge his master sayde vnto him: I wil not turne in to y cite of the aleauntes, that are not of the children of Israel, but I wyl go ouer vnto Gibeā. And he sayde vnto his seruante: Go thou before, that we maye come to some place, and tarye at Gibeā or at Ramah all night. And they wente on and walked, and the Sonne wente downe vpon the harde by Gibeā, which lyeth in the trybe of Ben Jamin: and they turned in there, y they mighte come in, and tarye at Gibeā all nighte. But whan he came in, he sat him downe in y strete of the cite: for there was noman that wolde lodge them in his house that night.

E And beholde, then came there an olde mā from his worke out of the felde in the eueninge: and he was also of mount Ephraim, and a straūger at Gibeā: but y mā of that place were y childre of Jemini. And whan he liſte vp his eyes, & sawe the straūger in the strete he sayde vnto him: Whither wilt thou go? & whence comest thou? He answered him: We are goinge on oure iourney from Betleā Juda, vntyll we come besyde mount Ephraim, whēce I am, and wente vnto Bechleem Juda, and now I go vnto y house of y LORDE & no mā wil harborow me. Wellhaue strawe and prouēder for oure asses, and bried and wyne for me and thy handmayden, and for the yonge man which is with thy seruante, so y we wante no thinge.

S The olde man sayde: Peace be with the: what soener thou wantest, thou findest it w me, onely tarye not in the strete all nighte. And he broughte him into his house, and gaue the asses prouender: and they washed their fete, and ate & drōke. And whā their hert was now ioyfull, the men of the cyte, the childre of Belial, came, and compassed the house rounde aboute, and ruffhed at β doie, and sayde vnto β olde man, which was the good man of β house: Bynge out the mā which is come in to thy house, that we maye knowe him.

Gen. 19. b

But the good man of the house wente forth to them, and sayde vnto them: Oh no my brethien, do not so wickedly, consideringe this man is come in to my house: Oh do not soch folye. Beholde, I have a doughter yet a virgin, and this man hath a concubine, these wil I brynge forth vnto you, that ye maye humble them, and do with them as ye lyke: but do not soch foly vnto this man. Nevertheless the men wolde not herken vnto him. Then toke β man his concubine and broughte her forth vnto them: and they knewe her, and dealee shamefully with her all β nyght vntill the mornynge. And whan the mornynge brake on, they let her go.

Then came the woman early in the mornynge, and fell downe at the doore of the mā's house that her lorde was in, and laye there tyll it was light. Now whan hir lorde rose vppon the mornynge, and opened the doore of the house, and wente forth to go on his iourney, beholde, his concubine laye at the doore of the house, and hir handes vpon the threshold. He saide vnto her: stande vp, let vs go, Nevertheless she gave him no answer. Then toke he her vp vpon his asse, gat him vp, and wente vnto his place.

Now whan he came home, he toke a swerde, and helde his concubine, and cut her w the bones and all in to twolve peces, and sent them in to all the coastes of Israel. Who so ever sawe it, sayde: Soch a thinge hath not bene done ner sene, sence the tyme that β children of Israel departed out of the londe of Egypte, vnto this daye. Now as concerninge this, take youre advysment, and geue y β counsell, and shew it forth.

The XX. Chapter.

A Then wente the children of Israel out and gathered a congregacion together as one man, fro Dan vntill Bersaba, and from the londe of Gilead vnto the LORDE to Mispa: and there came together of all the quarters of the people, and of all the trybes of Israel in to the congregacion of the people of God, foure hundred thousande fote men that drewe out β swerde. But the children of Ben Jamin herde, how that β children of Israel were gone vp vnto Mispa. And the children of Israel sayde: Tell vs, how happened this euell?

Then answered the Leuite the husbände of the woman that was slayne, and sayde: I came to Gibeā in Ben Jamin with my concubine, to tary there all nyght, then the cytesins of Gibeā gat them vp agaynst me, and compassed me aboute in the house by nyght, and thoughte to slaye me, and defyled my concubine, so that she dyed: then toke I my concubine, and cut her in peces, and sent the peces in to every countre of the inheritance of Israel: for they have done an abhominacion and folye in Israel. Beholde, here are ye children of Israel: aduise you well, and take this matter in hande.

So all the people gat them vp as one mā, and sayde: Gomā shal go in to his tente, ner departe to his house, but this wil we do now agaynst Gibeā: Let vs cast lot, and take ten men of an hundred, and an hundred of a thousande, and a thousande of ten thousande, out of all β trybes of Israel, β they maye take fode for β people, to come & do with Gibeā Ben Jamin, acordinge to their folye which they haue done in Israel. Thus all the men of Israel beyngc considerate, gathered them selues together as one man vnto the cite: and the trybes of Israel sent men vnto all the kindreds of Ben Jamin, and caused to saye vnto them: What maner of wickednes is this, that is done amonge you? Deluyet her therfore the men the children of Belial at Gibeā, that we maye put them to death, and do awaye the euell out of Israel. Nevertheless the children of Ben Jamin wolde not followe the voyce of their brethien the children of Israel, but gathered them selues out of β cities vnto Gibeā, to go forth in battayll agaynst the children of Israel.

And the same daye were there nombred of the children of Ben Jamin out of the cities, fyfe and twenty thousande men, that drewe the swerde, beside the cytesins of Gibeā of whom there were tolde seue hundred chosen men. And amonge all this people there were chosen out seuen hundred men, which vsed not the right hande but the lefte, and yet w the slynge couide they touch an heer, and not mysse. But the men of Israel, beside them of Ben Jamin, were nombred foure hundred thousande, which drewe the swerde, & were all men of armes. And the children of Israel arose, and wente vp to the house of God (in Silo) and axed at God, and sayde: Who shal go vp for vs to beginne the battayll with β children of Ben Jamin? The LORDE saide: Iuda shal begynne.

So the children of Israel gat the vp in β mornynge, & pitched ouer agaynst Gibeā, & every man of Israel wete out to fighte with Ben Jamin, and set them selues in araye to fighte agaynst Gibeā. Then fell the children of Ben Jamin out of Gibeā, and slewe the same daye amonge Israel two & twentye thousande to the grounde.

But the people of the men of Israel comforted them selues, and made them ready to fighte yet more in the same place, after they had prepared them selues the daye afore. And the children of Israel wente vp, and wepte before the LORDE vntyll the enenynge, and axed at the LORDE, & sayde: Shall we go enymore to fighte with oure brethien the children of Ben Jamin? The LORDE sayde: Go vp vnto them. And whan the children of Israel gat them vp to the childre of Ben Jamin on þ next daye, the Ben Jaminites fell out of Gibeā agaynst them the same daye, and slewe yet eightene thousande of þ children of Israel to the grounde, which all dide the swerde.

Then wente all the children of Israel vp, and all the people, and came to the house of God, and wepte, and taried there before the LORDE, & fasted that daye vntyll the euen, and offred burnt offerynges and deed offerynges before the LORDE. And the children of Israel axed at the LORDE (the Arke of the couenaunt of God was there at that tyme, and phineas the sonne of Eleasar the sonne of Aaron stode before him at the same tyme) & they sayde: Shal we go forth enymore to fighte with oure brethien the childre of Ben Jamin, or shal we leaue of? The LORDE sayde: Go vp, to morow wyll I deliuer them into youre handes.

And the children of Israel set a priuy watch agaynst Gibeā rounde aboute, and so the children of Israel wente vp to the children of Ben Jamin on the thirde daye, and set them selues in araye agaynst Gibeā like as the other two tymes afore. The children of Ben Jamin out agaynst the people, & brake out of the cite, & beganne to slaye certaine wounded of the people (like as the other two tymes afore) in the felde vpon two stretes: wherof one goeth towarde Bethel, the other vnto Gilcad vpon a thirtie men in Israel. Then thought the childre of Ben Jamin: They are synnten before vs like as afore. But the childre of Israel sayde: Let vs flye, that we maie prouoke them out of the cite in to the hye stretes.

Then all the men of Israel gat them vp from their place, and prepared them selues vnto Baal Thamar. And the hinder watch of Israel brake out of their place, from þ caue of Gaba, and came vnto Gibeā, twentye thousande chosen men out of all Israel, so that it was a sore battayll: but they knewe not that the euell shulde happen vnto them. Thus the LORDE smote Ben Jamin before the children of Israel, so that the same daye the children of Israel destroyed fyue & twentye thousande and an hundred men in Ben Jamin, which all dide the swerde.

For whan the childre of Ben Jamin sawe that they were smitten, the men of Israel gat them rowme (to flye). For they trusted to the watch, which they had sett by Gibeā. And the watch made haist also, & brake forth vnto Gibeā, and wente vpon it, and smote all the cite with the edge of þ swerde. They were appoynted betwene them selues the men of Israel and the hynder watch, to flye vpon them with the swerde, whan the smoke of the cite arose. Now whan the men of Israel turned them in the battayll, and Ben Jamin beganne to synnte the wounded in Israel vpon a thirtie men, and thoughte, they are synnten before vs, like as in the battayll afore, then beganne there a piler of smoke to arise vp from the cite. And Ben Jamin looked behinde them: and beholde, the flamme of þ cite wente vp vnto heauen. And the men of Israel turned them, and were scarce vpon þ men of Ben Jamin: for they sawe that the euell wolde happen vnto them.

And they turned them before the men of Israel in the waye to the wyldernesse, but the battayll folowed vpon them. And them of the cite destroyed they amonge them. And they compased Ben Jamin rounde aboute, and folowed vpon them vnto Mennah, and trode them downe tyll afore Gibeā eastwarde. And there fell of Ben Jamin eightene thousande men, which were all men of armes.

Whan the remnaunt of Ben Jamin sawe that, they turned them and fled towarde the wyldernesse vnto the stonye rocke of Rimmon.

The booke of the Judges.

But in the same fyre they slewe fyne thousande men, and folowed vpon them vnto Gideon, and slewe two thousande of the: and so there fell the same daye of Ben Jamin fyue and twenty thousande men which dreue & swerde, and were all mē of armes. Onely sixe hundred men turned backe, and fled toward the wyldernesse vnto the stonye rocke of Rimmon, and abode in the rocke of Rimmon foure monethes. And the men of Israel came agayne to the children of Ben Jamin, and smote them that were in the cite with & edge of the swerde, both mē and catell and all that was founde: and what soeuer was founde in the cite, they cast it into the fyre.

The XXI. Chapter.

A The men of Israel had sworn at Mispah, and sayde: Noman shal geue his daughter to the Ben Jaminites to wyfe. And the people came to the house of God (in Silo) & abode there before God vntill the enenynge, and lifte vp their voyce, and wept sore, and sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, wherfore is this come to passe in Israel this daye? But on the morow the people gat the vp early, and builded there an altare, and offered burnt offerings and deed offerings.

And the children of Israel sayde: Where is there eny mā of the trybes of Israel, that is not come vp with the congregacion vnto the LORDE? For there was a greate oath made, that who so came not vp to Mispah vnto the LORDE, shulde dye the deeth. And the children of Israel were sory for Ben Jamin their brother, and sayde: This daye is there one trybe lesse in Israel. How wyll we do that the remnant maye haue wyues? For we haue sworne by the LORDE, that we wyl not geue the wyues of oure daughters. And they saide: Where is there eny mā of the trybes of Israel, that is not come vp to the LORDE vnto Mispah? And beholde, there was not one man of the citesyns of Jabes in Gilead.

Then sent the congregacion twelue thousande men of armes thither, and commaunded them, and sayde: Go youre waye, and smite the citesyns of Jabes in Gilead with the swerde, the women also and the children, but so that ye do after this maner: * Se that ye damne all them that are males, and all the women that haue lyen with men. And amonge the citesyns of Jabes in Gilead they founde foure hundred damselfe, which were virgins, and had lyen with noman: those they broughte into the hoost vnto Silo, which lyeth in the londe of Canaan.

The xxi. Chap.

Then sent the whole congregacion, and caused to talke with the children of Ben Jamin, which were in the stonye rocke of Rimmon, and called vnto them frendly. So the children of Ben Jamin came agayne at the same tyme, and they gaue them women which they had of the women of Jabes in Gilead, and founde no more after that maner. Then were the people sory for Ben Jamin, that & LORDE had made a gappe in the trybes of Israel. And the Elders of the congregacion sayde: What wil we do, that the remnant maye haue wyues also? for the weyre in Ben Jamin are destroyed, and they sayde: The inheritance of them of Ben Jamin that are escaped, must nedes remayne, that there be not a trybe destroyed out of Israel: & we can not geue them oure daughters to wyues. For the children of Israel haue sworne and sayde: Cursed be he that geueth a wyfe to the Ben Jaminites.

And they sayde: Beholde there is a yearly feast of the LORDE at Silo, which lieth on the northsyde of the Gods house, and on the eastside of the strete as a mā goeth from Bethel vnto Sichem, and lieth on the south side of Libona. And they commaunded the children of Ben Jamin, & sayde: Go youre waye, and wayte in the vynyardes. And whan ye se that the daughters of Silo go forth by companyes to daunce, get you out of the vynyardes, and every man take him a wyfe of the daughters of Silo, and go youre waye in to the lode of Ben Jamin. As for their fathers and brethren, whan they come to lawe with vs, we wyll saye vnto them: Be favourable to them, for they haue not taken the in battail: but ye gaue the not vnto them by time, and it is youre faulte.

The children of Ben Jamin did so, and accordinge to their nombre toke them wyues from the daunce, whom they caught by violence, and wente their waye, & dwelt in their awne inheritance, and buylded cities and dwelt therein. The children of Israel also gat them vp from thence at the same time, every one to his trybe and to his kinred, and departed thence, every man to his awne inheritance.

At & time was there no kynge in Israel, and every man dyd & thinge & was right in his awne eyes.

Chap. IIII. Boos marieth Ruth, which bea-

The first Chapter.

At y tyme whan the Judges ruled, there was a derth in the lon-de. And there wente a mā from Bethleē Juda to take his iourney into the londe of the Moabites wth his wife and two sonnes, which man was called Elimelech, and his wife Naomi, z his two sonnes, the one Mahlon, and the other Chilion: these were Ephrātes of Bethleem Juda. And whan they came into the londe of y Moabites, they dwelt there. And Elimelech Naomis husbāde dyed, z she was left behinde wth hir two sonnes, which toke Moabitish wyues: the one was called Arpa, the other Ruth. And whan they had dwelt there ten yere, they dyed both, Mahlon and Chilion, so that the woman remayned desolate of both hir sonnes and hir husbāde.

When gat she her vp wth both hir sonnes wyues, z wente agayne out of the lōde of y Moabites (for she had herde in the londe of the Moabites, y the LORDE had visited hir people z geuen them bred) z so she departed from y place where she was, z both hir son-nes wyues wth her. And as they wēte by the waye to come agayne into the londe of Juda, she sayde vnto both hir sonnes wyues: Go y^o waye, z turne backe ether of you to hir mothers house: the LORDE shewe mercy vpon you, as ye haue done on the y are deed z on me. The LORDE graunte you, y ye maie fynde rest ether of you in hir husbādes house (whom ye shal get) and she kyssed them.

Then list they vp their voyce, and wepte, z sayde vnto her: We wil go with the vnto

y people. But Naomi sayde: Turne agayne my doughcers, why wolde ye go with me?
How can I haue children eny more in my body, to be youre husbādes? Turne agayne my doughcers, and go youre waye, for I am now to olde to take an husbāde.

E And though I shulde saye: I hope this night to take an husbāde z to brynge forth children, yet coulde ye not tary till they were growne vp: for ye shulde be to olde, so that ye coulde haue no husbādes. To my dough-cers, therfore am I sory for you, for y haue of the LORDE is gone forth ouer me.

Then list they vp their voyce, and wep-te yet more, and Arpa kyssed hir mother in lawe (and turned backe agayne) but Ruth abode styll by her. Nevertheless she sayde: Be-holde, thy syster in lawe is turned backe vnto hir people and to hir god, turne thou agai-ne also after thy syster in lawe. Ruth answered: Speake not to me therof, that I shulde forsake the, and turne backe from the: whi-cher so euer thou goest, thither wil I go also:
and loke where thou abydest, there wil I abide also: Thy people is my people, z thy God is my God. Loke where thou diest, there wil dye, and even there wil I also be buried. The LORDE do this and that vnto me, deach one ly shal departe vs.

Now whan she sawe, that she was sted-fastly mynded to go with her, she spake no-more to her therof. So they wente on both together, till they came vnto Bethleem. And whan they were come in to Bethleem, the whole cite was moued ouer them, and sayde Is not this Naomi? Nevertheless she sayde vnto them: call me not Naomi, but Mara: for the Allmightie hath made me very sory. I departed full, but the LORDE hath brought me home agayne emptye. Why call ye me then Naomi? whā the LORDE hath brought me lowe, and the Allmightie hath made me sory?

It was aboute the tyme of the begynninge of the barley harvest, whan Naomi and his sonnes wife Ruth y Moabitisse, came agayne from the londe of the Moabites vnto Bethleem. There was a kinsman also of y kynred of Elimelech Naomis husbāde, whose name was Boos, which was an honest man. The II. Chapter.

Ald Ruth the Moabitisse saide vnto Naomi: Let me go in to y felde, z gather eares of corne, after him, in whose sight I shal finde sand. She sayde vnto her: Go y waie my daughter. She wēte on, z came z gathered after y reapers in y felde. And it fortuneth that the same felde was the enheritance of Boos, which was of the kynred of Elimelech, and beholde, Boos came from Bethleem, and sayde vnto the reapers: The LORDE be with you. They answered: The LORDE blesse the. And Boos sayde vnto his yongman which had the oversight of 3 reapers, Whose damsell is this? The yongman that was set ouer 3 reapers, answered and sayde: It is the damsell the Moabitisse, which came agayne with Naomi from the Blonde of the Moabites. And she sayde: Let me plucke vp and gather (I prae the) betwene the sheues after the reapers: and thus is she come, and hath stonde here ever sence the mornynge, and within a litle whyle she wolde haue bene gone home agayne.

Then sayde Boos vnto Ruth: Hearst thou my daughter? Thou shalt not come vpon another mans londe to gather, and go not awaye from hence, but tary with my dausels, and loke where they reape in 3 felde, go thou after them: for I haue commaunded my seruantes that no man touch the. And yf thou be a thyrist, go thy waye to the vessell & drynke, where my seruantes drinke. Then fell she downe vpon hir face, and bowed hir self downe to the earth, and sayde vnto him: How haue I founde this fauoure in 3 sighte, that thou woldest knowe me, which am yet a straunger?

C Boos answered and sayde vnto her: It is tolde me altogether, what thou hast done vnto thy mother in lawe after thy husbands death, how that thou hast left 3 father and thy mother, and thy native countre, and art come to a people, whom thou hast not knowne afore. The LORDE recompence the thy doinge, and thy rewarde be perfecte wth the LORDE God of Israel, vnto whom thou art come to put thy trust vnder his wynges. She sayde: let me fynde fauoure (say) before thyne eyes, for thou hast comforted me, and spoken frendly vnto thy handmayde, where as I am not yet like one of 3 handmaydes.

Boos sayde vnto her: Whan it is eatinge tyme, come hither, and eate of the bried, and dyppe thy morsell in the vyneger. And she sat hir downe besyde the reapers. And he set parched come before her, and she ate, & was Dsatisfied, and lefte ouer. And whā she rose to gather, Boos commaunded his seruantes, and sayde: Let her gather betwene the sheues also, and do her no dishonestye: and cast of the sheues vnto her, and let it lye that she maye gather it vp, and se that noman reprove her for it.

The iii. Chap.

So she gathered in the felde vntyll even and she shakid out what she had gathered, and it was almost an Epha of barley: and she toke it vp, and came in to the cite, and shewed hir mother in lawe what she had gathered. She toke southe also, and gaue her of that which was left, whereof she was satisfied. The sayde hir mother in lawe vnto her Blessinge haue the man that hath knowne the, where thou hast gathered and laboured this daye.

She tolde hir mother in lawe by whom she had laboured, and sayde: The mans name, by whom I haue wroughte to daye, is Boos. Naomi sayde vnto hir daughter in lawe: The blessinge of the LORDE haue he, for he hath not lefte of to be mercifull vnto the lyuynge - and to the deed. And Naomi sayde vnto her: The same man belongeth vnto vs, and is oure nye kynsman. Ruth the Moabitisse saide: He saide more ner vnto me: Thou shalt resorte vnto my seruantes, tyll they haue made an ende of all my harvest. Naomi sayde vnto Ruth hir daughter in lawe: It is better my daughter, that thou go forth with his damfels, lest any man withstode the in another felde. Thus she kepte herselfe with Boos damfels, so that she gathered vntill the barley harvest and the wheate harvest was out, and came agayne to hir mother in lawe.

N Naomi hir mother in lawe sayde vnto her: My daughter, I wyll prouyde rest for the, that thou maiest prosper. Boos oure kynsman, by whose damfels thou hast bene, casteth vp barley now this night in his barne. Wether thy selfe therfore, and a messell the, and put on thy clothes, and go downe vnto the barne, so 3 nomā knowe the, tyll they haue all eaten and dronken.

Whan he layeth him downe then to sleape, make 3 place where he lyeth downe, and come thou, and take vp the couerynge at his fete, and laye the downe, so shall he tell the what thou shalt do. She sayde vnto her: what so ever thou saiest vnto me, I wil do it.

She wente downe to the barne, & dyd all as hir mother in lawe had commaunded her. And whā Boos had eatē & dronkē, his hert was mery, & he came and layed him downe behynde a heape of sheues. And she came secretly, and toke vp the couerynge at his fete, and layed hir downe. Now whā it was mid night, the man was a frayed, and groped aboute him, and beholde, a woman laye at his fete. And she rose vp ouer one coude knowe another. And he meet her sixe measures of barlye, and layed it vpon her, z she wente in to the cite, z came to hir mother in lawe, which sayde: How is it wth the my daughter? And she tolde her all y^e the mā had done vnto her, z sayde: These sixe measures of barlye gaue hente, for I sayde: Thou shalt not come empyre vnto y^e mother in lawe. She sayde: Abyde my daughter, tyll thou se what y^e matter wil growe to: for the man wil not ceasse, tyll he brynge it to an ende this daye.

ritauce. The sayde he: I can not redeme it, lest I haplye destroye myne awne inheritance. Redeme thou y^e I shulde redeme, for I can not redeme it. But this was an olde custome in Israel concernynge the redemynge z chaūginge, y^e all matters mighte be stable, the one put of his shue, z gaue it vnto y^e other: y^e was the testimony in Israel.

And the nye kynsman sayde vnto Boos: Bye thou it, z he put of his shue. And Boos sayde vnto the Elders and to all the people: Ye are witnesses this daie, y^e I haue boughte cut of the hande of Naemi, all that belenged to Eli Melech, and all that was Chilion and Mahelons: And Ruth the Moabitisse Mahelons wife, take I to wife, * that I maye rayse vp a name vnto y^e deed in his inheritance, and that his name be not rote out from amonge his brethren, and out of the gate of his place: Of this are ye witnesses. And all the people that was in the gate wth the Elders, saide: We are witnesses. The LORDE make the woman that cometh in to thy house, as Rachel and Lea (* which both haue buylded vpon the house of I^{sr}el) that she maye be an ensample of vertue in Ephraim, and haue an honorable name in Bethleem. And thy house be as y^e house of Phares (* whō Thamar bare vnto Iuda) wherow the sede, that the LORDE shall geue the of this damsell.

So Boos toke Ruth, and she becam his wife. And whan he laye with her, the LORDE graunted her y^e she conceaued, and bare a sonne. The sayde the women vnto Naemi: Praises be the LORDE, which hath not suffred a kynsman to ceasse from the arch's eye, that his name maye conynue in Israel: he shal restore thy life agayne, and prouyde for thine age. For y^e sonnes wife which hath loued the, hath borne him that is better vnto the, then seven sonnes.

And Naemi toke the childe, and layde it vpon hir lappe, and became the nurse of it, and hir neighbours gaue him a name z sayde: There is a childe borne vnto Naemi, and they called his name Obed. The same is the father of Isai, which is y^e father of Dauid.

This is y^e generation of Phares. * Phares begat Hesrom. Hesrom begat Aram. Aram begat Aminadab. Aminadab begat Naasson. Naasson begat Salmon. Salmon begat Boos. Boos begat Obed. Obed begat Isai. Isai begat Dauid.

Exo. 23. b
Deut. 10. a

Gen. 29. d
and 30. a

There was a man of Ramathaim Sophim of mount Ephraim, whose name was Elcana y sonne of Jeroham, y sonne of Elihu, y sonne of Tohu, y sonne of Zuph, y was an Ephraite. And he had two wyues, y one was called Anna, y other Peninna. As for Peninna, she had children, but Anna had no child. And y same man wete vp fro his cite at his tyme, to worshippe and to offer vnto the LORDE Zebaoth at Silo. There were the prestes of the LORDE Ophni and Phineas, the two sonnes of Eli. Now whan it came vpon a daye that Elcana offered, he gaue partes vnto his wife Peninna, and to all his sonnes and daughters. But vnto Anna he gaue one deale henely, for he loued Anna. Neuertheles the LORDE had closed hir wombe, y hir adversary cast her in the tette with hir vnfructefulnes, because the LORDE had closed hir wombe: thus dyd she enery yere, whan they wente vp to the house of the LORDE, and thus she provoked her. So she wepte, and ate no thinge. But Elcana hir husbände sayde vnto her: Wherfore wepest thou? and why eatest thou not? And wherfore is thine hert so greued? Am not I better vnto the then ten sonnes?

Then stode Anna vp, whan she had eaten and dronken at Silo. But Eli the prest sat vpon a stole by the poste of the temple of the LORDE. And she was full of herynes in hir herte, and prayed vnto the LORDE, and wepte, and vowed a vowe, and sayde: O LORDE Zebaoth, yf thou wilt loke vpon the aduersite of thy handmayden, and thynke vpon me, o id not forget thy handmayden, and wilt geue thy handmayden a sonne, I wil geue him vnto the LORDE all his life longe, and there shal no rasoure come vpon his heade.

Iud. 13. a
Num. 6. a

And whā she had prayed longe before y LORDE, Eli toke hede to hir mouth, for Anna spake in hir hert, hir lippes onely moued, but hir voyce was not herde. Then thoughte Eli she had bene dronken, and sayde vnto her: How longe wilt thou be dronken? Let come from the the wyne that thou hast by the. Neuertheles Anna answered and sayde: No my lord, I am a sorowfull woman, wyne and stronge drynke haue I not dronken, but haue poured out my hert before y LORDE. Counte not thy handmayden a daughter of Belial: for out of my hery thoughte and sorow haue I spoken hitherto.

Psal. 41. a

Eli answered her, and sayde: Go y waye in peace, the God of Israel shal graunte y thy peticion that thou hast desyred of him. She sayde: Let thy handmayden fynde fauoure in thy sighte. So the woman wente hir waye and ate, and loked nomore so sorowfully: and on y morow they gat them vp by tymes. And whan they had worshipped before y LORDE, they returned, and came home vnto Ramatha.

And Elcana laye with Anna his wife, and the LORDE remembred her. And after certayne dayes, she coeained and bare a sonne, and called his name Samuel, for I haue desyred him (sayde she) of the LORDE. And whan the man Elcana wente vp with all his housholde to offre sacrifice and his vowe vnto the LORDE at soch tyme as y custom was, Anna wente not vp, but sayde vnto hir husbände: (I wil not go vp) tyll y childe be weened: then will I brynge him, that he maye appeare before the LORDE, and coe tynue there for ever.

Elcana hir husbände sayde vnto her: The do as thou thynkest best, tary tyll thou haue weened him: but the LORDE perfourme that he hath spoken. So the woman abode, and gaue hir sonne sucke, tyll she weened him. And whan she had weened him, she broughte him vp with her, with the bullockes, with an Ephie of fyne floure, and a bottell of wyne, and broughte him in to y house of the LORDE at Silo.

Neuertheles the childe was yet but yonge. And they slewe a bullocke, and broughte the childe vnto Eli. And she sayde: O my lord, as truly as thy soule lyneth my lord, I am the woman that stode here by y, and made intercession vnto the LORDE, whan I prayed for this childe. Now hath y LORDE graunted me my peticion, which I desyred of him, therefore haue I geuen him ouer vnto the LORDE, as longe as he is lent vnto the LORDE. And they worshipped y^e LORDE there.

The II. Chapter.

And Anna prayed, and sayde:

My hert reioyseth in the LORDE, & my home is exalted in the LORDE.

My mouth is opened wyde vpon myne enemies, for I am glad of thy saluacion.

There is no man holy as the LORDE, for without the is nothinge, and there is no coforte like vnto oure God.

Let go yo^r greate boostinge of hye thynges, let go out of youre mouth that olde byworde: for the LORDE is a God y^e knoweth all thynges, & he hath set all workes in order.

The bowe of the mightie is broken, and the weake are gyded aboute with strength.

They that were fylled afore, are solde for bryd: and they that were hongrie, are satisfied: vntyll the baren bare seuen, and tyll she that had many childre, was become weake.

The LORDE slayeth, and geueth life: he ledeth vnto hell, and bryngeth out agayne.

The LORDE maketh poore and maketh riche: he bryngeth lowe and exalteth.

He taketh vp the mealy out of the dust, and lifseth vp y^e poore out of the myre, that he maye set them amonge the prynces, and to let them inheret the seate of honoure: for the foundations and corners of the worlde are the LORDES, and he hath set the compass of the earth thereon.

He shall preserve the fete of his sayntes, but y^e vngodly shal be put to sylence in darrenesse. For there is no man that can do oughte of his owne power.

The LORDES enemies shal be put in feare before him, he shal chode vpon the in heauē.

The LORDE shall iudge the endes of the worlde, & shal geue strenght vnto his kynge, & shal exalte the home of his anoynted.

Eleana wente his waye to Ramath vnto his house. And the childe became the LORDES mynister before Eli the prest. But Elis sonnes were the childre of Belial, and knewe not the LORDE, ner the dutye of the prestes vnto the people: but whan eny man wolde offere oughte, the prestes boye came, whyle the flesh was seethinge, and had a thre forked fleshete in his hande, and thrust it in to the cauldren, or fetell, or panne, or pot: and toke what he dwe forth with the fleshete, that toke the prest therof. Thus dyd they vnto all Israel which came thither vnto Silo.

Like wyse, or euer they burned the fatt, the prestes lad came, and sayde vnto him that broughte the offerynge: Geue me the flesh, that I maye roste it for the prest, for he wyl receaue no sodden flesh of y^e, but rawe. If eny man sayde then vnto him: Let the fat burne as it oughte to do this daye, and afterwarde take what thine hert desyret, then sayde he vnto him: Thou shalt geue it me euen now: yf no, I wyl take it from the by violence. Therefore was the synne of y^e childre very greate before the LORDE, for y^e people spake euell of y^e meat offerynge of y^e LORDE. But Samuel was a mynister before the LORDE, and the childe was gyded with an ouer body cote of linnen. His mother also made hym a litle cote of sylke, and broughte it vp vnto him at couenient tymes, whan she wente vp with hir husbande to offer y^e offerynge in due season.

And Eli blessed Eleana & his wife, and sayde: The LORDE geue the seide of this woman, for this good that thou hast lent vnto the LORDE. And they wete vnto their place. And the LORDE vysited Anna, so that she conceaued and bare thre sonnes and two daughters: but the childe Samuel grewe vp with the LORDE.

As for Eli, he was very olde, and herde of all that his sonnes dyd vnto all Israel, and how they laye with the women that serued God before the doore of the tabernacle of witnesse, and he sayde vnto them: wherfore do ye this? For I heare of youre euell conuersacion of all this people. Not so my childre, this is no good reporte that I heare, ye cause the people of the LORDE to offende. If eny man synne agaynst a man, the iudge can redresse it. But yf eny man synne agaynst y^e LORDE, who can redresse it? Nevertheless they herkened not vnto the voyce of their father, for the LORDES wyll was to slaye them. But the childe Samuel wente and grewe vp, & was accepted of the LORDE & of men.

There came a man of God to Eli, and sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I shewed my selfe vnto thy fathers house, whan they were yet in Egypte vnder y^e house of pharao, and chese him there vnto my selfe before all the trybes of Israel, for the presthode, that he shulde offer vpon myne altare, and burne incense, and wete the ouerbody cote before me, & vnto thy fathers house I gaue all the offeringes of the children of Israel. Why layest thou thy selfe then agaynst my sacrifices and meat offeringes, in which I commaunded (to offer) in the habitacion: and thou honourest thy sentres more then me, that ye myghte fede youre selues with the firstlinges of all the meat offeringes of my people of Israel?

Therefore sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: I haue spoken, that thy house and thy fathers house shulde walke before me for ever. But now sayeth the LORDE: That be farre fro me. But who so ever honoureth me, him wil I hono^r also: as for those þe despise me, they shal not be regarded. Beholde, * the tyme shal come, that I wyll breake thyne arme in two, and the arme of thy fathers house, so that there shal no oldeman be in thy house. And thou shalt se thine aduersaries in the habitation, in all the good of Israel, and there shal neuer be olde man in thy fathers house. Yet wyll I not rote out every man of the fro myne altare, but þe thyne eyes maye be consumed, & that þe soule maye be fory: * & a greate multitude of thy house shal dye, whan they are come to be men.

And this shalbe a token vnto the, that shal come vpon thy two sonnes Ophni and Phineas: They shal both dye in one daye. * But vnto my selfe I wyll rayse vp a faithfull prest, which shal do acordinge as it is in my hert & in my soule: vnto him wyll I buylde a sure house, that he maye allwaye walke before myne annoynted. The iii. Chapter.

When the childe Samuel mynistred vnto the LORDE vnder Eli, the worde of þe LORDE was deare at the same tyme, nether was there eny sure & manifest vision. And it fortunied at the same tyme, that Eli laye in his place, * and his eyes beganne to be dymme, so that he coulde not se. And Samuel had layed him downe in þe temple of the LORDE (where the Arke of God was) before þe lampe of God was put out. And the LORDE called Samuel. He answered: Beholde, here am I. And he ranne vnto Eli, & sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. But he saide: I haue not called the, go thy waye agayne, and laye the downe to slepe. And he wente his waye, and layed him downe to slepe.

The LORDE called agayne: Samuel. And Samuel arose, & wente vnto Eli, & sayde: Beholde, here am I, thou hast called me. Neuer theles he sayde: My sonne, I haue not called the. So thy waye agayne, and laye the downe to slepe. As for Samuel, he knewe not the LORDE as yet, & the worde of þe LORDE was not yet shewed vnto him. And þe LORDE called Samuel þe thirde tyme. And he arose, & wente vnto Eli, & sayde: Beholde, here am

The iiij. Chap. Fo. xxvij.

I, thou hast called me. Then perceaued Eli þe LORDE called þe childe, & he sayde vnto him: Go thy waye agayne, & laye the downe to slepe: and yf the LORDE call the enymors, then saye: Speake LORDE, for þe seruant heareth. Samuel wote his waye, and layed him downe in his place. The came þe LORDE, & stode, and called like as afore: Samuel, Samuel. And Samuel sayde: Speake (LORDE) for thy seruant heareth. And the LORDE saide vnto Samuel: Beholde, I do a thinge in Israel, þe who so ever shal heare it, both his eares shal glowe. In þe daie will I rayse vp vpon Eli * all þe I haue spokē coⁿcernynge his house. I will take it in hande, & perfourme it: for I haue tolde him, þe I wilbe Judge ouer his house for ever, because of the wickednes, þe he knewe how shamefully his childre behaued the selues, and hath not onceloked somerly therto. Therefore haue I swome vnto þe house of Eli, þe this wickednes of þe house of Eli shal not be recocyled nether wth sacrifice ner wth meut offringe for ever. And Samuel laye vnto þe morow, & opened the dores of the house of the LORDE.

But Samuel was afrayed to tell the vision vnto Eli. Then Eli called him & sayde: Samuel my sonne. He answered: Beholde, here am I. He sayde: What is þe worde þe the LORDE hath spokē vnto the: hyde it not fro me. God do this & that vnto þe, yf the hyde oughte fro me, of all that he hath talked wth the. Then Samuel tolde him altogether, & hyd nothinge from him. He sayde: It is the LORDE, let him do what pleaseth him.

Samuel grewe vp, & the LORDE was wth him, & there fell none of all his wordes vpoⁿ the earth. And all Israel fro Dan vnto Bersaba, knewe þe Samuel was faithfull to be a prophet of the LORDE. And the LORDE appeared agayne at Silo: for the LORDE shewed himselfe vnto Samuel at Silo, tho^{ro} the worde of the LORDE.

The iii. Chapter.
When all Israel spake of Samuel. And Israel wente forth to the battayll against the Philistynes, & pitched besyde the. * Helpe stone: As for the Philistynes, they pitched at Aphel, and prepared them selues agaynst Israel. And whan the battayll beganne, the hoost was denyded, so that Israel was smytte before the enemies, & in the edga in the feld they slewe aboute a foure thousande men. And whan the people came in to the hoost, the Elders of Israel sayde: Wherefore hath the LORDE caused vs to be smytten this daie before the Philistynes? Let vs take vnto vs the Arke of the LORDE & coremaine from Silo, and let it come amonge vs, that it maye helpe vs from the hande of oure enemies. And the people sent vnto Silo, and caused to set thence the Arke of y^e couenaunt of the LORDE Zebaoth, that sitteth vpon the Cherubins. And with the Arke of the couenaunt of God there were the two sonnes of Eli, Ophni and Phineas.

B And whan the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE came in to the hoost, all Israel shouted wth a greate shoute, so that the earth sounded withall. But whan the Philistynes herde y^e noyse of y^e shoute, they sayde: what noyse is this of soch greate shoutinge in the tentes of the Hebrewes? And whan they perceaued y^e the Arke of the LORDE was come in to the hoost, they were afayed and sayde: God is come in to the hoost. And they sayde morouer: Wo vnto vs, for it hath not bene thus afore tyme. Wo vnto vs. Who wil deliuer vs fro the hande of these hye goddes? These are the goddes that smote Egyp^t wth ail maner of plagues in the wyldernesse. Be stronge now and manly ye Philistynes, that ye serue not the Hebrewes: as they haue serued you. Be manly and fighte.

Iud. 19. 2

C Then foughte the Philistynes, and Israel was smytten, and every one fled vnto his cite, and there was a very greate slaughter, so that there fell of Israel thirtie thousande fore me, and the Arke of God was take, and the two sonnes of Eli, Ophni and Phineas dyed.

1. Re. 3. 8

Then rane there one of Ben Jamin out of the fore fronte of the battayl, and came vnto Silo the same daye, and had his clothes rent, and had earth vpon his heade. And whan he came in, Eli sat vpon the seate, that he mighte loke rowarde the waye: for his herte was fearfull aboute y^e Arke of God. And whan the man came in to the cite, he tolde it forth: and all the cite cried. And whan Eli herde y^e noyse of the crynge, he ased: What noyse of busynes is this? The man came haistely, and tolde Eli. (As for Eli, he was fourescore and eightene yere olde, and his eyes were dymme, so that he coulde not se.) The man sayde vnto Eli: I come and am fled this daye out of the hoost. He sayde: How is it my sonne?

1. Reg. 2. 2

D Then answered the tydinge bringer, and sayde: Israel is fled before the Philistynes, and a greate slaughter hath there bene amonge the people, and thy two sonnes Ophni and Phineas are deed, yee and the Arke of God is take awaye. Whan he had made mencien of the Arke of God, he fell dorene backwarde from the seate by the gate, and brake his neck, and dyed: for he was olde, and an heny man. He iud ged Israel fortie yeres. The wife of his sonne Phineas was wth childe, and shulde shortly be deliuered, whan she herde the tydinges y^e the Arke of God was taken, and y^e hir brother in lawe and hir husbāde were deed, she bowed hir selfe and trauayled: for hir payne came vpon her. And whan she was now at the poynte of death, the women that stode by her, sayde: Feare not, thou hast a yonge sonne. But she gaue no answer, nether regarded it, and she called the childe Icabod, and sayde: The glory is gone from Israel, because the Arke of God was taken awaye, and hir brother in lawe and hir husbāde. And she sayde morouer: The glory is gone from Israel, for the Arke of God is take awaye.

The V. Chapter.

AS for the Arke of God, the Philistynes toke it and broughte it from the stone of helpe vnto Asdod in to the house of Dagon, and set it besyde Dagon. And whan they of Asdod rose vp early on the morowe, they founde Dagon lyenge on his face vpon the earth, before the Arke of the LORDE. But they toke vp Dagon, and set him agayne in his place. Nevertheless whan they rose vp early on the nexte morowe, they founde Dagon lyenge on his face agayne vpon the earth before the Arke of the LORDE: but his heade and both his handes weren of vpon the threshold, so that the block laie there onely. Therefore the prestes of Dagon, and all they that go in to his house, treade not vpon the threshold of Dagon at Asdod vnto this daye.

But the hande of the LORDE was heuy vpon them of Asdod, and destroyed them, and smote Asdod and all the borders therof in secrete places. Whan the men of Asdod sawe that they were so plagued, they sayde: Let not the Arke of the God of Israel tarry with vs, for his hande is to harde vpon vs and vpon y^e god Dagon. And they sent forth and gathered all the prynces of the Philistynes vnto them, and sayde: What shal we do with the Arke of the God of Israel? Then answered they of Beth: Let the Arke of the God of Israel be borne aboute. And they carried the Arke of the God of Israel rounde aboute.

C But whā they bare it aboute, there was a very greate rumoure in the cite thow the hande of the LORDE, and smote the people of the cite, from the smallest vnto the greatest, and destroyed them in the secrete places. Then sent they the Arke of the LORDE vnto Ekron. But whā the Arke of the LORDE came vnto Ekron, they of Ekron cried: They haue caried the Arke of God aboute vnto me, to slaye me and my people.

D Then sente they forth, and gathered all þe prynces of the philistynes together, and sayde: Sende awaye the Arke of the God of Israel agayne vnto hir place, that it slaye not me & my people: for there is a very greate rumoure with the deed in all the cite, and the hande of God is there. And the people that dyed not, were smytten in secrete places, so that the noyse of the cite wote vp vnto heauen. The VI. Chapter.

A Thus was the Arke of the LORDE in the londe of the philistynes seven monethes. And the philistynes called their prestes and soythsayers, and sayde: What shal we do with the Arke of the LORDE? Shewe vs, whir with shal we sende it vnto hir place? They sayde: If ye wyll sende awaye the Arke of the God of Israel, sende it not awaye emptye, but giue a trespase offerynge: so shal ye be made whole, and ye shal knowe, why his hande departeth not from you.

They sayde: What is the trespase offerynge that we shall geue him? They answered: fyue hynder partes of golde, and fyue golden myce, acordynge to the nombre of the fyue prynces of þe philistynes. For there hath bene one maner of plage vpon you all, and vpon youre prynces. Therefore must ye make youre hynder partes of one fashon and youre myce, which haue destroyed youre londe, that ye maye geue the God of Israel the honoure: peradventure his hāde shal be the lighter vpon you and vpon youre God, and vpon youre lende. Why harden ye youre hert, as the Egipcians and Pharaos hardened their hert? Whan he shewed him selfe vpon them * dyd not they let them departe to go their waye?

Exo. 12. 6

So to now therefore, and make a new cart, and take two mylke kyne, vpon þe which there neuer came yock, and yocke them to þe cart, and let their calues rary behynde them at home: and take ye the Arke of the LORDE

and laye it vpon the cart: and the Jewels of golde that ye geue him for a trespase offerynge put in a coffer beside it, & sende it awaye and let it go. And loke well: yf it go the waie of hir awne coaste Beth Sames, thē hath he done vs all this greate euell: If no, then shal ye knowe that his hande hath not touched vs, but þe it is happened vnto vs by chauce.

The men dyd so, and toke two yonge mylke kyne, and yocked them to a cart, and helde their calues at home, and layed the Arke of the LORDE vpon the cart, and the coffer with the golden myce, and with the ymagines of their disease. And the kyne wente straight waye vnto Beth Sames vpon one hye strete, and wente on blearynge, and turned nether to the righte hande ner to the left. And the prynces of the philistynes wente after them vnto þe coast of Beth Sames.

The Beth Samites were euen reapyng downe their wheate harvest in the valley, and lyfte vp their eyes, and sawe the Arke, and reioysed to se it. The cart came in to the felde of Josua the Beth Semite, and there it stode styll. And there was a greate stone, and they claued the tymber of the cart, and offred the kyne vnto the LORDE for a burnt-offerynge.

But the Levites toke downe the Arke of the LORDE, and the coffer that was by it, wherein the Jewels of golde were, and set the vpon the greate stone. The men of Beth Sames offred burnt offerynges, and other offerynges also vnto the LORDE the same daye. And whan the fyue prynces of the philistynes had sene it, they departed agayne the same daye towards Ekron.

These are the golden diseases, that the philistynes offred for a trespase offerynge vnto the LORDE: Asdod one, Gasa one: Ascalon one, Gath one, and Ekron one: and golden myce, acordynge to the nombre of all the cities of the philistynes amonge the fyue prynces, from the walled cite vnto the vyl lage, and vnto the greate playne felde, wher vpon they set the Arke of the LORDE (which was vnto this daye vpon the felde of Josua the Beth Semite.

And certaine of Beth Sames were slaine because they had sene þe Arke of the LORDE, and he slewe fyfthe thousande and seuentye men of the people. Then mourned the people, because the LORDE had done so greate a slaughter in the people. And the men at Beth Sames sayde: Who maye stode before the LORDE so holy a God? And to whō shal he go frō vs? And they sent messaungers to þe inhabitants of Kiriat Jearim, sayng: The Philistynes haue brought the Arke of God agayne, come downe, & fetch it vp vnto you.

The VII. Chapter.

And the men of Kiriath Jearim came downe, & fetched vp the Arke of the LORD, & brought it in to the house of Abinadab at Gibeā, & they consecrated Eleazar his sonne, for he might keepe the Arke. And from that daye that the Arke of the LORD abode at Kiriath Jearim, the tyme extended forth so longe tyll it came to twentye yeares: and all the house of Israel wepte after the LORD.

But Samuel sayde vnto all the house of Israel: * If ye turne you withall youre hert vnto the LORD, then put away from you the straunge goddes and Astaroth, and directe youre hert vnto the LORD and serue him onely, so shall he deliuer you out of the hande of the Philistynes. Then the childre of Israel put away Baalim and Astaroth from them, and serued the LORD onely.

And Samuel saide: Gather all Israel together vnto Mizpa, that I maye praye for you vnto the LORD. And they came together vnto Mizpa, and drue water, & poured it out before the LORD, and fasted the same daye, and there they sayde: We haue synned vnto the LORD. So Samuel iudged the children of Israel at Mizpa.

But when the Philistynes herde that the children of Israel were come together vnto Mizpa, the prynces of the Philistynes wrote vp against Israel. When the childre of Israel herde that, they were afrayed of the Philistynes, & sayde vnto Samuel: Ceasse not to crye vnto the LORD our God for vs, for he maye helpe vs out of the hande of the Philistynes.

Samuel toke a fat lambe, & offered an whole burnt offering vnto the LORD, & cried vnto the LORD for Israel, and the LORD herde him. And whyle Samuel was offering the burnt sacrifice, the Philistines came to fight agaynst Israel. But the LORD thondred a thonder vpon the Philistynes the same daye & discōfytēd thē, so that they were smytēd before Israel. Thē wente the men of Israel forth, & chased the Philistynes, & smote them till vnder Beth Car. Then toke Samuel a stone, & set it vp betwene Mizpa & Sen, & called it the help stone, & sayde: Hither to hath the LORD helped vs. Thus were the Philistynes brought downe, & came nomore within the border of Israel. And the hande of the LORD was agaynst the Philistynes, as longe as Samuel liued.

So Israel gat the cities agayne, that the Philistynes had conquered, from Ekron vnto Gath, with the borders therof. Those did Israel rescue out of the hande of the Philistynes.

The viij. Chap.

Israel had peace with the Amouites. Samuel iudged Israel as longe as he liued, & wētte aboute euery yeare vnto Bethel & Gilgal & Mizpa: & whā he had iudged Israel in all these places, he came agayne vnto Ramath for there was his house, & there he iudged Israel, & builded an altare there vnto the LORD.

The VIII. Chapter.

When Samuel waxed olde, he set his sonnes to be iudges ouer Israel. His firstborne sonne was called Joel & the secōde Abia, & they were iudges at Bersaba. Neuertheles his sonnes walke not in his wayes, but enclyned vnto couetousnes, & toke gifies, & wiaysted the lawe. Then all the Elders in Israel gathered thē selues together, & came to Ramath vnto Samuel, & said vnto him: Beholde, thou art waxen olde, & thy sonnes walke not in thy wayes, set a kynge now ouer vs therfore, to iudge vs, as all the Gentē haue. Thē was Samuel displeased whā they sayde: Geue vs a kynge, to iudge as. And Samuel prayed before the LORD.

The LORD saide vnto Samuel: Herten vnto the voice of the people in all that they haue sayde vnto the. For they haue not refused the, but me, for I shulde not be kynge ouer them. They do vnto the as they haue done euery sence the daie that I brought them out of the lande of Egypte vnto this daye, and haue forsaken me, and serued other goddes. Her tē now therfore vnto their voyce. Yet testifie vnto them, and shewe them the lawe of the kynge that shall raigne ouer them.

And Samuel tolde all the wordes of the LORD vnto the people, that requyred a kynge of him. This shal be the lawe of the kynge that shal raigne ouer you: * Your sonnes shall he take for his charettes, and for horsmen to runne before his charettes, and to be rulers & captaines, to be plowemen to tyll his lande and to be reapers in his harvest, and to make his harnesse, and soch thinges as belonge to his charettes. As for yō doughters, he shall take thē, to be Apotecaries, cōkes and bakērs. Your best lande and vynyardes, and oylegardens shall he take, and geue vnto his seruautes: Of youre sedes also and vinyardes shal he take the Tithes, & geue vnto his chamberlaynes and seruautes. And youre seruantes and youre maydes, and youre best yongemen, and youre asses shal he take, and do his busynes withall. Of youre flockes shal he take the Tithes, and ye shal be his seruantes. When ye shal crye then at the same tyme ouer youre kynge, whom ye haue chosen you, the LORD shal not heare you at the same tyme. Neuerthelesse the people refused to heare the voyce of Samuel, and sayde: Not so, but there shall be a kyng over vs, & we maye be as all other heithē, & a kyng maie iudge vs, & go forth before vs, and gouerne oure warres. The hertened Samuel vnto all & people sayde, & tolde it before & cares of the LORDE. The LORDE sayde vnto the: Herken thou vnto their voyce, and make them a kyng. And Samuel sayde vnto the men of Israel: Go youre waye euery one vnto his cite.

The IX. Chapter.

i. Par. 9. a

There was a man of Ben Jamin named Cis, the sonne of Abiel, the sonne of Zeor, the sonne of Bethorah, & sonne of Apiah, the sonne of a man of Jemini, a valeant man, which had a sonne named Saul, which was so goodly a yonge man, that there was not a goodlier amonge the children of Israel, higher by the heade then all the people. Cis the father of Saul had lost his asses, and he sayde vnto Saul his sonne: Take one of the children with the, get the vp, go thy waye, and seeke the asses. And he wente his waye thorow mount Ephraim, and thorow the lode of Solisa, and founde them not. They wente thorow the lode of Saalum, & there they were not. They passed thorow & lode of Jemini, & founde the not. But whā they came in to the londe of Zuph, Saul sayde vnto the childe that was with him: Come, let vs go home agayne, lest my father let go the asses, and take care for vs. He sayde: Beholde, here is an honorable man of God in this cite, all that he sayeth, cometh to passe. Let vs go thither now, peradventure he maye shewe vs oure waye which we go. But Saul saide vnto his childe: Though we shulde go, what brynge we the man? For the bried is gone out of & water, and els haue we no giste to brynge the man of God, what haue we? The childe answered agayne, and sayde: Beholde, I haue the fourth parte of a syluer Sycle by me, & same wyll we geue the man of God, that he maye shewe vs oure waye.

(Afore tyme in Israel, whan a man wente to axe counsell at the LORDE, he sayde: Come, let vs go to the Seer: for they that now are called prophetes, were called Seers afore tyme). Saul sayde vnto his childe: Thou hast well spoken, come let vs go. And whan they wente vnto the cite where the man of God was, and came vp to the cite, they founde damfels which were gone forth to drawe water, vnto them they sayde: Is the Seer here? They answered them and sayde: Yee. Beholde, he is there, make haist, for he came in to the cite this daye, because the people haue a sacrifice to do to daye in the hye place. Whan ye come in the cite, ye shal fynde him, afore he go vp to the hye place for to eate: for the people wyll not eate tyll he come. For he shall blesse the offerynge, then shal they eate that are called. Therefore go yō waie vp, for euē now shal ye fynde him.

And whan they came vp to the cite, and were euē in the myddes of the cite, behelde, Samuel came forth in their waye, and wolde go vp to the hye place. (But the LORDE had opened Samuels eare the daye afore, or ever Saul came, and sayde: Tomorrow aboute this tyme wyll I sende a man vnto the out of the lode of Ben Jamin, him shalt thou anoynte so be pryncē ouer my people of Israel, that he maye belyuer my people from the hande of the philistynes: for I haue looked vpon my people, and their crye is come before me.) Now whan Samuel behelde Saul, the LORDE answered him: lo, & is the man of whom I tolde the, that he shulde raigne ouer my people.

Then came Saul vnto Samuel vnder & gate, and sayde: Tell me (I praye the) where is the Seers house? Samuel answered Saul, and sayde: I am the Seer. Go vp before me vnto the hye place: for ye shall eate with me to daye, tomorrow wyll I lett the go, and all that is in thynne here, wyll I tell the: and as for the Asses which were lost the dayes ago, care not thou for them, for they are founde. And to whom shall belonge all that is pleasant in Israel? Shall it not belonge vnto the and to all thy fathers house? Saul answered: Am not I a sonne of Jemini, and of the smallest trybe, and my kynred the leest amonge all the kynreds of & trybe of Ben Jamin? Why speakest thou so the vnto me? Samuel toke Saul & his childe & brought them in to the perler where they shulde eate, and satt them aboue those that were called, of whom there were aboute a thirtie men. And Samuel sayde vnto the coke: Geue me the porcion that I gaue the, and had the kepe it by the. Then the coke toke vp a shulder, and bare it forth, and set it before Saul. And (Samuel) sayde: Beholde, this is left, laye it before the, and eate: for it was kepte for the agaynst this tyme, whan I called the people. Thus Saul ate with Samuel the same daye.

And whan they were gone dorone from the hye place vnto the cite, he talked with Saul in the chamber. And they rose vpearly on the morow. And whan the mornynge sprynge arose, Samuel called Saul in the chamber, and sayde: Up, & I maye sende the thy waye. And Saul gat him vp: & they both wete forth together, he and Samuel. And whan they came downe to the ende of the cite, Samuel sayde vnto Saul: Speake vnto y childe, that he go on forth before vs, but stode thou styll now, that I maie shewe the what God hath sayde:

The X. Chapter.

21 Then toke Samuel a glasse of oyle, and poured it vpo his heade, and blessed him, and sayde: Seist thou that the LORDE hath anoynted the, to be the prince ouer his enheritaunce? Whan thou goest now fro me, thou shalt fynde two men besyde. Rachels graue in the coast of Ben Jamin at Zelzah, which shal saie vnto the: The asses are founde, whom thou wentest to sette: and beholde, thy father hath put the asses out of his mynde, and catcheth thoughte for the, and sayeth: What shall I do for my sonne?

And whan thou goest on forth from thence, thou shalt come to the Oke of Tabor, there shall thre men fynde the, which go vp vnto God towarde Bethel: one beareth thre kiddes, another thre loanes of bried the thyrde a bottel with wyne: and they shall salute the, and geue the two loanes, which thou shalt take of their hande. After that shalt thou come to the hyll of God, where the Philistynes watch is: and whā thou comest there in to the cite, there shall meete the a company of prophetes commynge downe from the hye place, and before them a psaltery, and tabier, a pype and a harpe, and they them selues prophesie. And the spiete of the LORDE shall come vpon the, and thou shalt prophesye with them, and shalt be chaanged in to another man.

Whan these tokens now come vnto the, then do what so euer cometh vnder thyne hande: for God is with the. Thou shalt go downe before me vnto Gilgall: Beholde, thither wyl I come downe vnto the, that thou mayest offre burnt offerynges and deed offerynges. Seven dayes shalt thou tarye till I come to the, and shewe the what thou shuldest do. And whan he turned his shulder to go from Samuel, God chaunged him another hert, and all these tokens came the same daye.

And whan they came vnto the hill, beholde, there met him a company of prophetes: and the spiete of God came vpon him, so that he prophesied amonge them. But whā they which knewe him before, sawe him that he prophesied with the prophetes, they sayde all amonge them selues: What is hapened vnto the sonne of Cis? Is Saul also amonge the prophetes? And one y was there, answered and sayde: Who is their father? Hereof came the prouerbe: Is Saul also amonge the prophetes? And whā he had lest of prophesyinge, he came vp to the hyll.

Sauls vncle sayde vnto him and to his childe: Whither wente ye? They answered: To sette the asses. And whan we sawe that they were awaye, we came vnto Samuel. Then sayde Sauls vncle: Tell me, what sayde Samuel vnto you? Saul answered his vncle: He tolde vs, y the asses were foude. But of y kyngdome he tolde him nothinge what Samuel had sayde.

Samuel called the people together vnto the LORDE to Mispa, and spake vnto the chuldren of Israel: Thus saierh y LORDE the God of Israel: I broughte Israel out of Egypte, and deliuered you from the hande of y Egipcians, and from the hande of all the kyngdomes that oppressed you. But now haue ye refused y God, which hath helped you out of all youre sorowes and troubles, & ye haue saide vnto him: Set a kinge ouer vs. Well, stonde ye now before y LORDE accordinge to youre trybes and kynreds.

Now whan Samuel had brought forth all the trybes of Israel, the trybe of Ben Jamin was taken. And whan he had broughte forth the trybe of Ben Jamin with his kynreds, the kynred of Natri was take, & Saul the sonne of Cis was take. And they sought him, but they founde him not.

Then aied they further at the LORDE, whether he was for to come thither. The LORDE answered: Beholde, he hath hyd him selfe amonge y vessels. Then ranne they thither, and fetched him. And whan he stode amonge the people, he was hygher by the heade then all the people. And Samuel sayde vnto all the people: There se ye him whom the LORDE hath chosen, for in all the people there is none like him. Then gaue all the people a shoute, and sayde: * God saue the new kyng.

Samuel tolde the people all the lawe of the kyngdome, and wrote it in a boke, and layed it before the L O R D E. And Samuel let all the people go, euery one to his awne house. And Saul wente home also vnto Gibea, and there wente with him one parte of the hoost, whose hertes God had touched. But the childre of Belial sayde: What shal this felowe helpe vs, * and despysed him, z broughte him no presente. But he made him as though he herde it not.

The XI. Chapter.

A Has y Ammonite wete vp z layed sege vnto Jabes in Gilead. And all the men of Jabes sayde vnto Nahas: Be at one with vs, z we wyll serue the. But Nahas y Ammonite answered them: I wil make a conenaut with you, of this condicion, that I maye thrust out all youre right eyes, and put you to shame amonge all Israel. Then sayde all the Elders of Jabes vnto him: Gene vs seven dayes respyte, that we maye sende messaungers into all y coastes of Israel: If there be then no sauoure, we wyl go forth vnto the.

So the messaungers came vnto Gibea of Saul, and spake this before the eares of the people. Then all y people lifte vp their voyce, and wepte. And beholde, Saul came after the oren out of the felde, and sayde: What ayleth the people that they wepe? So they tolde him the earande of the men of Jabes. Then came the spirete of God vpon him, when he had herde these wordes, and his wrath was sore moued, and he toke a couple of oxen, and hewed them in sunder, and sent them in to all the coastes of Israel by the messaungers, sayenge: Who so euer goeth not forth after Saul and Samuel, his oren shalbe thus dealte withall.

Then fell the feare of the L O R D E vpon the people, so that they wente forth like as one man, * and they were tolde at Baseth, and of the childre of Israel there were thre hundred thousande men, and thirtie thousande of the children of Juda. And they spake vnto the messaungers that were come: Saye thus to the men of Jabes in Gilead: Tomorrow shal ye haue helpe, when y Sonne is at the whotest. When y messaungers came and tolde this to the men of Jabes, they were glad. And the men of Jabes sayde: Tomorrow wyll we come forth vnto you, that ye maye do vnto vs, what so euer

it pleaseth you. And on y nexte morow Saul set the people in thre partes, and came into the hoost aboute the mornynge watch, and smote the Ammonites tyll the daye was at the whotest. As for those y remayned, they were so scared, that two of them abode not together.

Then sayde the people vnto Samuel: Where are they that sayde: * Shulde Saul raigne ouer vs? Delyuer vs here the men, that we maye put them to death. But Saul sayde: There shal noman dye this daye, for to daye hath the L O R D E geuen health in Israel. Samuel sayde vnto the people: Come, let vs go vnto Gilgall, and renue the kyngdome there. Then wente all the people vnto Gilgall, and there they made Saul kinge before the L O R D E at Gilgal, and offred deedofferinges before the L O R D E. And Saul with all the men of Israel reioysed there greatly.

The XII. Chapter.

Samuel sayde vnto all Israel: Beholde, I haue hertened vnto youre voyce in all that ye sayde vnto me, and haue made a kyng ouer you. And now lo, the re goeth youre kyng before you. As for me, I am waxen olde and graye heered, and my somes are with you: and I haue gone before you fro my youth vp vnto this daye. Beholde, here am I: answere ye agaynst me before the L O R D E and his anoynted, * yf I haue taken eny mans oxe or asse, yf I haue done eny man violence or wronge, If I haue oppressed eny man, yf I haue receaued a gifte of eny mans hande, and kepte it secretly, I wil restore it you agayne.

They saide: Thou hast done vs nether violence ner wronge, nether oppressed, ner taken ought of eny mans hande. He sayde: The L O R D E be witnesse agaynst you, and so be his anoynted this daye, that ye haue founde nothinge in my hāde. They saide: Yee they shalbe witnesses. And Samuel sayde vnto the people: The L O R D E which made Moses and Aaron, and broughte youre fathers out of the londe of Egipte (is here present.) Stode forth now therfore, that I maye iudge you before the L O R D E ouer the righteousnes of the L O R D E, which he hath done for you and youre fathers.

* When Jacob was come in to Egipte, youre fathers cryed vnto the L O R D E. * And he sent Moses and Aaron to brynge youre fathers out of Egipte, and to cause them for to dwell in this place.

But whan they forgat the LORDE their God, he solde them vnder the power of Sisera, the capayne at Hazor: and vnder the power of the philistynes: and vnder the power of the kinge of the Moabites, which foughte agaynst them. But they cried vnto the LORDE, and sayde: We haue synned, in that we haue forsaken the LORDE, and serued Baalim and Astaroth. But now deliuer vs from the hande of oure enemies, and we wyl serue the. Then the LORDE sent Jerubbaal, Bedan, Jephthae, and Samuel, and deliuered you from youre enemies rounde aboute, and caused you to dwell safe.

But whan ye sawe that Nabal the kynge of the children of Ammon came agaynst you: ye sayde vnto me: Not thou, but a kynge shal raigne ouer vs, where as notwithstandinge your God was your kynge. Now, there haue ye your kynge, whō ye haue chosen and desired: for lo, the LORDE hath set a kinge ouer you. If ye shal feare the LORDE now, and serue him, and hearken vnto his voice, and not be disobedient vnto the mouth of the LORDE, then shall both ye and your kynge that raigneth ouer you, folowe the LORDE your God. But if ye hearken not vnto the voice of the LORDE, but be disobedient vnto his mouth, then shal the hande of the LORDE be agaynst you, and agaynst your fathers.

Yet wyll I call vpon the LORDE, so that he shal cause it thonder and rayne, that ye shall knowe and se the greate euell, which ye haue done in the sight of the LORDE, in that ye haue desired to haue a kynge.

And whan Samuel called vpon the LORDE, the LORDE caused it to thonder and raine the same daye.

Then all the people feared the LORDE greatly and Samuel, and they sayde all vnto Samuel: please thou vnto the LORDE thy God for thy seruantes, that we dye not: for beside oure sinnes we haue done this euell also, that we haue desired vnto vs a kinge. Samuel sayde vnto the people: Feare not, ye haue done all this euell in dede. Feare ye the LORDE therefore, and serue him faithfully with all yō hert: for ye haue sene, how greate thinges he doth vnto you. But if ye do wickedly, both ye and your kynge shal perishe.

The XIII. Chapter.

Saul had bene kynge one yeaere, and whā he had raigned ouer Israel two yeaeres, he chose him thre thousande men out of Israel: two thousande were with Saul at Michmas vpon the mount of Bethel, and one thousande with Ionathas at Gibeā of Ben Jamin. As for the other people, he let them go euery one vnto his tente. But Ionathas smote the philistynes in their awne watch, which was at Gibeā. That came to the philistynes eares. And Saul called to blowe the trompes in all the lande, and to saye: Let the hebrues heare. And all Israel herde saye: Saul hath smitten the philistynes watch, for Israel stande before the philistynes. And all the people cried after Saul vnto Gilgal.

Then the philistynes gathered themselves together to fighte with Israel, thirtie thousande charrettes, sixe thousande horsmen, and other people besyde, in nombere as the sonde by the See shore, and wente vp, and pitched at Michmas on the eastsyde of Bethauen. But the hebrues wente ouer Iordane in to the lande of Gad and Gilead. As for Saul he was yet at Gilgal, and all the people were saynhearted after him. Then taried he seuen dayes acordinge to the tyme apoynted of Samuel. And whan Samuel came not vnto Gilgal, the people were scatered abroad from him. Then sayde Saul: Brynge me hither a burnt offeringe and deed offeringes. And he offred a burnt offeringe. But whan he had made an ende of the burnt offeringe behelde, Samuel came. Then wente Saul forth to meete him, that he might salute him.

But Samuel sayde: What hast thou done? Saul answered: I sawe that the people was scatered abroad from me, and thou camest not in due season: and the philistynes were gathered together at Michmas. Then sayde I. Now shall the philistynes come downe to me vnto Gilgal, and I haue not besough

For (yf thou haddest not done this) he had prospered thy kyngdome vpon Israel for ever: but now shall not thy kyngdome coneyne. The LORDE hath soughte him out a man after his owne hert: him hath the LORDE commaunded to be pryncce ouer his people, for thou hast not kepte the LORDE commaunded. And Samuel arose, and wente vp from Gilgal vnto Gibea Ben Jamin.

And Saul nombred the people that was founde with him, vpon a sixe hundred men. Saul & his sonne Jonathas, and 3 people that was with them, taried at Gibea Ben Jamin: but 3 Philistynes had pitched their tentes at Michmas. And out of the hoest of the Philistynes there wente thre bondes of men to destroye: one turned the waye toward Ephraim in to the londe of Sual: another turned towarde the waye of Bethoron: the thirde turned towarde the waye, that reacheth to the valley of Zeboim vnto the wyldernes.

But there was not a syneth founde in all the lode of Israel: for 3 Philistynes thoughte: The Hebrues mighte happily make swerdes and speares. And all Israel were fayne to go downe to the Philistynes, whan eny man had a plowshare, a mattock, an axe, or a synthe to sharpe: and the edges of the plowshares, and mattocks, & forkes, and axes, were laboured, and the poyntes blont. Now whan the daye of the battayll came, there was nether swerde ner speare founde in the hande of all the people, that was with Saul and Jonathas: but for Saul and Jonathas his sonne there was somwhat founde. And 3 Philistynes watch wete out ouer by Michmas.

The XIII. Chapter.

And it fortuned at 3 same tyme, 3 Jonathas sayde vnto his lad which was his wapen bearer: Come, let vs go oner to the Philistynes watch 3 lyeth aboue, & he tolde not his father. Saul dwelt at yende of Gibea vnder a pomgranate tre, which was in the suburbe. And the people 3 were by him, were vpon a sixe hundred men. And Abia the sonne of Achitob the brother of Isabod, the sonne of Phineas 3 sonne of Eli 3 prest of the LORDE at Silo, waye the overbody cote. But the people knewe not that Jonathas was gone.

Betwene the passages where Jonathas soughte to go ouer vnto the Philistynes watch, there were two hye rockes, the one on the one syde, the other on the other: the one was called Bozez, the other Senne. And 3 one laye on the north syde toward Michmas, and the other on the south syde toward Gaba. And Jonathas sayde vnto his wapen bearer: Come, let vs go ouer to 3 watch of these vncircumcised, peradventure the LORDE shall worke with vs, * For it is no harde matter for the LORDE to helpe by many or by fewe. Then answered him his wapen bearer: Do all that is in thine hert, go on thy waie, beholde, I am with thee, euen as thine hert wyll.

Jonathas sayde: Well than, Whan we are gone ouer to the men, and come within the sighte of them, yf they saye: stonde styll, tyll we come to you, then wyll we stonde styll in oure place, and not go vp to them. But yf they saye: Come vnto vs, we wyll go vp to them, the hath the LORDE delyuered them in to oure hande, and this shalbe a token for vs. Now whan they came both in the sighte of the Philistynes watch, the Philistynes sayde: Se, 3 Hebrues are gone out of their holes, that they were crepte in to. And the men in the watch answered Jonathas and his wapen bearer, and sayde: Come vp to vs, and we wyll teach you what the matter is. Then sayde Jonathas to his wapen bearer: Come vp after me, the LORDE hath delyuered them in to Israels hande. And Jonathas clamme vp with handes and fete, and his wapen bearer after him. And Jonathas smote them downe before him, and his wapen bearer slew behynde him, so that the first slaughter that Jonathas and his wapen bearer dyd, was vpon a twentye men, with in the length of halue an aker of londe, which a pare of open maye tyll in one daye.

* And there came a fearfulness and flight in the hoost vpon the felde, and amonge all the people of the watch: and vpon the * destroyers there came a fearfulness also and flight, so that the londe was in a rumoure, and * there came a flight thorow God. And Sauls watchme at Gibea Ben Jamin sawe, that 3 multitude gat them awaye, and ranne to and fro.

Saul sayde vnto the people that was with him: Tell and se which of vs is gone awaye. And whan they nombred, beholde, Jonathas & his wapen bearer was not there.

Then saide Saul vnto Ahia: Brynge hither the Arke of God (for at that tyme was the Arke of God with the children of Israel.) And whyle Saul was yet speakyng to the priest, the multitude in the Philistynes hoost gat vp, raine, and was greete. And Saul sayde vnto the priest: With drawe thine hande. And Saul cried, and all the people that was with him, and came to the battayll. And beholde, * euery mans swerde was agaynst another, and there was a very greater moure.

The Jebites also that were with 3 Philistynes afore, and had gone vp with them in the hoost on enery syde, ioyned them selues vnto Israel which were with Saul and Jonathas. And all the men of Israel which * had hyd the selues vpon mount Ephraim, whan they herde that the Philistynes fled, folowed after them in the battayll. Thus 4 LORDE helped Israel at that tyme, and 5 battayll lasted vnto Bethauen.

1 Re. 11. b

¶ And whan the men of Israel came forth, Saul charged all the people the same daye, and sayde: Cursed be enery man, which eateth bred vntyll euen, that I maye auenge me on myne enemies. Then all the people tasted no bred. And all the people of the londe came in to the wodde. But there laye hony vpon the felde: and whan the people came in to the wodde, beholde, the hony flowed, but no man put of it to his mouth with his hande: for the people were afraied because of the ooth. As for Jonathas he had not herde, that his father had charged the people, and he put forth his staff that he had in his hande, and dypped the ende of it in 3 hony combe, and turned his hande to his mouth, and his eyes were lighted.

Then answered one of the people, and sayde: Thy father hath charged the people, and sayde: Cursed be enery man that eateth ought this daye. Nevertheless the people were faynte. Then sayde Jonathas: My father hath troubled the londe: Se how lighte myne eyes are become, because I haue tasted a litle of this hony. If the people this daie had eate of the spoyle of their enemies that they founde, the slaughter shulde haue bene greater agaynst the Philistynes. Yet smote they the Philistynes the same daye from Michmas vnto Aialon, and the people were very weery.

¶ And 3 people turned to the spoiles, and toke shepe and oxen, and calues, and slew them vpon the earth, * and ate them with the bloude. Then was it tolde Saul: Behol de, the people synne agaynst the LORDE, in that they ate bloude. He sayde: Ye haue done euell: roll vnto me now a greete stone. And Saul sayde moroner: Go abrode amonge the people, and saye vnto them, that euery one brynge me his ore and his shepe, and slaye them here, that ye maye eate, and not to synne agaynst the LORDE with eatyng of bloude. Then broughte all the people euery one his ore with his hande the same nyght, and slew them there. And Saul buylded an altare vnto 3 LORDE. This is the first altare that he buylded vnto the LORDE.

And Saul sayde: Let vs go downe after the Philistynes, by nyght, and spoyle them tyll it be cleare mornynge, that we let none escape. They answered: Do what so ever pleaseth the. But the priest sayde: Let vs go nye here vnto God. And Saul axed at God. Shal I go downe here after 4 Philistines? 5 and wilt thou deliuer the in to Israels hande? Nevertheless he answered him not at that tyme.

Then sayde Saul: Let all the armyes of 6 the people come hither, and make search and se, in whom is this synne at this tyme. For as truly as God the Saviour of Israel lyueth, 7 and though it be in my sonne Jonathas, he shal dye. And no man answered him of all the people. And he sayde vnto all Israel: Be ye on the one syde, I 8 and my sonne Jonathas wyl be on this syde. The people sayde vnto Saul: Do as it pleaseth the. And Saul sayde vnto the LORDE the God of Israel: Do thou that right is. The was Jonathas and Saul taken: but the people wente forth fre. Saul sayde: Cast the lot ouer me and my sonne Jonathas. So Jonathas was take. And Saul sayde vnto Jonathas: Tell me, what hast thou done? Jonathas tolde him, and sayde: I tasted a litle hony with the staff that I had in my hande, and beholde, must I dye therefore? The sayde Saul: God do this and that vnto me, Jonathas thou must dye the death.

But the people sayde vnto Saul: Shulde Jonathas dye, that hath done so greete health in Israel this nyght? God forbid. * As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shal 1. Then wente Saul vp from the Philistynes: and the Philistynes wente vnto their place.

But whan Saul had conquered the kyng dome ouer Israel, he foughte agaynst all his enemies rounde aboute, against the Moabites, against the childre of Ammon, against the Edomites, against the kynge of Zoba, against the Philistynes: and whiche so ever he turned him, he gat the victory. Saul had these sonnes: Jonathas, Isai, and Malchisua. And these were the names of his two daughters: the first borne Merob, and the yongest Michol. And Sauls wife was called Abinoam, the daughter of Ahimaas. And his chiefe captaynes name was Abner, the sonne of Ner, Sauls uncle. Ner was the father of Saul. But Ner the father of Abner was the sonne of Abiel.

There was a mightie forewarre against the Philistynes, as longe as Saul liued. And where Saul sawe a man that was stronge and mete for warre, he toke him to him.

Deut. 25. 4
Saul sayde vnto Saul: The LORD sent me to anoynte the for to be kynge ouer his people of Israel: heare now therefore the voyce of the wordes of the LORD. Thus sayeth the LORD Zebaoth: I have remembred what Amalek dyd vnto Israel, and how he layed wayte for him in the waye, whan he wente out of Egypte: Go thou waye now therefore, and smyte the Amalechites, and damne them with all that they haue, and spare him not: but slaye boch man and woman, children and suckylinges, oxen and shepe, Camels and asses. Saul commaunded the people the same, and nombred them at Telaim, two hundred thowsande foremen, and ten thowsande men of Juda.

Jud. 1. 2
And whan Saul came to the cite of the Amalechites, he set an hynder waech by the ryuer, and sayde vnto the Benites: See you hence, departe, and go downe from the Amalechites, for I smyte you not with them, for ye shewed mercy vnto all the children of Israel, whan they departed out of Egypte. So the Benites gat them awaye from amonge the Amalechites.

Then smote Saul the Amalechites from Zevila vnto Sur (which lyeth ouer against Egypte) and toke Agag the kynge of the Amalechites alyue, and dammed all the people with the edge of the swerde. Nevertheless Saul and the people spared Agag, and the shepe and oxen were good and fat, and the lambes, and all that was good, and wolde not damne them: but loke what was foule and nothinge worth, that they dammed.

The xv. Chap. Ho. xxxij.

Then came the worde of the LORD vnto Samuel, and sayde: It repenteth me that I made Saul kynge, for he hath turned himselfe backe fro me, and not confirmed my wordes. Therefore was Samuel angrie, and cried vnto the LORD all that night. And Samuel gat him vp early, that he might mete Saul in the mornynge. And it was tolde him, that Saul was come vnto Carmel, and had set him vp a piler, and was gone aboute, and come downe to Gilgall.

Now whan Samuel came to Saul, Saul sayde vnto him: Blessed be thou vnto the LORD, I haue performed the worde of the LORD. Samuel answered: What crye is this then of shepe in myne eares, and the crye of oxen which I heare?

Saul sayde: They haue broughte them from the Amalechites: for the people spared the best shepe and oxen for the offerynge of the LORD thy God, the other haue we dammed. Nevertheless Samuel answered Saul: Let me tell the what the LORD hath sayde vnto me this night. He sayde: Saye on. Samuel sayde: Whan thou wast but small in thine awne eyes, wast thou not yf heade amonge the trybes of Israel? and the LORD anoynted the to be kynge ouer Israel? and the LORD sent thee in to the waye, and sayde: Go thou waie and damne the synners the Amalechites, and fighte against them, tyll thou haue utterly destroyed them. Wherefore hast thou not hearkened vnto the voyce of the LORD, but hast turned thy selfe to the spoyle, and done euell in the sighte of the LORD?

Saul answered Samuel: Yes I haue hearkened vnto the voyce of the LORD, and haue gone the waye that the LORD sent me, and broughte Agag the kynge of the Amalechites, and dammed the Amalechites: but the people haue takē of the spoyle, shepe and oxen, and the best amonge the dammed, to offer vnto the LORD thy God in Gilgall. Samuel saide: Hath the LORD pleasure in sacrifices and burnt offerynges, as in obeynge the voyce of the LORD? Beholde, obedience is better then offerynge, and to hearken is better then the fat of rammes. For disobedience is as the synne of witchcraft, and rebellion is as the blasphemy of Idolatrye. In so moche now as thou hast refused the worde of the LORD, he hath refused the also, that thou shalt not be kynge.

Then sayde Saul vnto Samuel: I haue synned, for I haue transgressed the commaundement of the LORD and thy worde: for I was afrayed of the people, and hearkened unto their voyce. And now forgene me my synne, & retorne with me, that I maye wor- shippe y^e LORDE. Samuel saide vnto Saul: I wil not turne backe with y^e, for thou hast refused the worde of the LORDE, and the LORDE hath refused the also, y^e thou shuldest not be kyng in Israel. And whan Samuel turned him backe to go his waye, he gat him by y^e edge of his garment, & rete it. Then sayde Samuel vnto him: The LORDE hath rente the kyngdome of Israel from y^e this daye, & geuen it vnto y^e neghbo^r, which is better then thou. The ouerwynner in Israel also shal not lye, nether shal he repent: for he is no man, that he shulde repent.

G He sayde: I haue synned, yet honoure me now before the Elders of my people and before Israel, and turne backe with me, that I maye worshippe the LORDE thy God. So Samuel turned agayne after Saul, that Saul mighte worshippe the LORDE. But Samuel sayde: Bring me hither Agag the kyng of the Amalechites. And Agag went vnto him rederly. And Agag saide: Thus departeth the bytternesse of death. Samuel sayde: * Like as thy swerde hath made women childlesse, so shal y^e mother also be without children amonge women. So Samuel hewed Agag in peces before y^e LORDE in Gilgal.

And Samuel departed vnto Ramath. But Saul wente vp to his house at Gibea. And Samuel sawe Saul nomore vnto the daye of his death. Neuertheles Samuel mourned for Saul, because he repented the LORDE, that he had made Saul kyng ouer Israel. The XVI. Chapter.

AND y^e LORDE sayde vnto Samuel: How longe mournest thou for Saul, whom I haue refused, that he shulde not be kyng ouer Israel? Gyll thine home with oyle, go thy waye, I wyll sende the to Isai the Bethleemite: for amonge his sonnes haue I prouyded me a kyng. But Samuel sayde: How shal I go? Saul shal perceaue it, and shal slaye me. The LORDE sayde: Take the a calfe from the drone, & saye: I am come to do sacrifice vnto y^e LORDE. And thou shalt call Isai to y^e sacrifice, so shall I tell the what thou shalt do, that thou mayest anoynte me him, whom I shall shewe the. Samuel dyd as the LORDE sayde, and came to Bethleem. Then were the Elders of the cite astonnyed, and wente forth to mete him, and sayde: * Is thy comynge peaceable? He sayde: Yee. I am come to do sacrifice vnto the LORDE. Sanctifie youre selues, & come with me to the sacrifice. And he sanctified Isai and his sonnes, and called them to the sacrifice.

Now whā they came in, he behelde Eliab, & thoughte, whether he shulde be his anoynted before the LORDE. But y^e LORDE sayde vnto Samuel: loke not vpon his countenance, ner vpon the tallnesse of his person, for I iudge not after the sighte of man. A man hath respects vnto the thinge that is before his eyes, but the LORDE loketh vpon the hert. Then Isai called Abinadab, & broughte him before Samuel. And he sayde: This hath not the LORDE chosen. Then Isai broughte Samma. But he sayde: This also hath not the LORDE chosen. Then broughte Isai his seven sonnes before Samuel. Neuertheles Samuel saide vnto Isai: The LORDE hath chosen none of these.

And Samuel sayde vnto Isai: Are here all the childre? He sayde: There is yet one y^e leest of all, and beholde, he kepeth the shepe. The sayde Samuel vnto Isai: Sende & cause him to be fetcht, for we will not syt downe at the table, vntyll he come. Then sent he, & caused him be broughte. And he was well coloured wth fayre eyes & of a bentysfull countenance. And the LORDE saide: Aryse, and anoynte him, that is he.

The roke Samuel his oyle home, & anoynted him amonge his brethre. And the sprete of the LORDE came vpo Dauid fro y^e daye forth. As for Samuel, he gat him vp, & went vnto Ramath.

But the sprete of the LORDE departed from Saul, and an euell sprete from y^e LORDE vexed him. Then sayde Sauls seruantes vnto him: Beholde, an euell sprete from God vereth the. Let our lord saye vnto his seruantes which stonde before him, y^e they seke a man which can playe vpon the harpe, and instrumente, that whan the euell sprete of God cometh vpon the, he maye playe wth his hande, to ease the withall. Then sayde Saul vnto his seruantes: Prouyde me a mā, that can playe well vpon the instrumente, ⁊ brynge him vnto me.

D Then answered one of the children, ⁊ sayde: Beholde, I sawe a sonne of Isai of Bethleemite, which can playe vpon the instrumente, an honest ⁊ valeant man, and one ⁊ hath vnderstoddinge in matters, ⁊ is wel fauoured. The Saul sente messengers vnto Isai, sayenge: Sende me David ⁊ sonne, which is with the shepe. Then toke Isai an asse wth bred, ⁊ a bettell wth wyne, and a kyd, and sent it vnto Saul by David his sonne. So David came to Saul, ⁊ stode before him, ⁊ he loued him well, and he became his wapen bearer. And Saul sente vnto Isai, sayenge: Let David remaine before me, for he hath founde fauor in my sighte. Now whan the spiete of God came vpon Saul, David toke ⁊ harpe. ⁊ played wth his hande: so was Saul refreshed, ⁊ eased, ⁊ the euell spiete departed from him.

The xvii. Chapter.

A The philistynes gathered their hoost to ⁊ battayll, and came together to Socho in Iuda, ⁊ pitched their tentes betwene Socho ⁊ Asoka, at the ende of Damun. But Saul ⁊ the meⁿ of Israel came together, ⁊ pitched in the Oke valley, ⁊ prepared them selues to the battayll agaynst the philistynes. And the philistynes stode vpon a hyll on the one syde, and the Israelites vpon a hyll on the other syde, so that there was a valley betwene them.

Iud. ii d Then stept there forth from amonge the philistynes a stoute bolde man, named Goliath of Gath, sixe cubites and an hande breth hie, and had an helmet of stele on his heade, and a fast habergion vpon him, and the weight of his habergion was fyue thousande Sicles of stele, and harnessse of stele had he vpon his legges, and a shylde of stele vpon his shulders: and the shaft of his speare was like a weuers lonie, and the yron of his speare had sixe hundred Sicles of yron, and his wapen bearer wente before him.

B And he stode and called vnto the hoost of Israel, and sayde vnto them: Wherfore are ye come forth to prepare youre selues to the battayll? Am not I a philistyne, and ye the seruantes of Saul? Chose one amonge you to come downe vnto me: yf he can fight agaynst me and slaye me, then wil we be your seruantes: but yf I can overcome him and slaye him, then shal ye be oure seruantes, to do vs seruyce. And the philistyne sayde: I haue spokē disdainedly vnto the hoost of Israel this daye. Geue me one, and let vs fighte together. Whan Saul and all Israel herde these wordes of ⁊ philistyne, they were astonnyed, and sore afraied.

But David was the sonne of a man of Ephrata of Bethleem Iuda, whose name was Isai, which had eight sonnes, and was an olde man in Sauls tyme, and was well strycken in age amonge men. And the thre eldest sonnes of Isai were gone with Saul to the battayll. And there names were these: Eliab the first borne, Abinadab the seconde, and Samma the thirde. But David was the yongest of all. So whan the thre eldest were gone with Saul to the battayll, David wente agayne from Saul, to kepe his fathers shepe at Bethleem. But the philistyne stept forth early in the mornynge and at euen, and stode there fortye dayes.

E Isai sayde vnto David his sonne: Take this epha of simentye for thy brethien, and these ten loaves of bred (and runne to the hoost vnto thy brethien) ⁊ these ten new cheses, and brynge them to ⁊ caprayne, and loke how thy brethien do, whether it go well with them or no, and take what they byd the. But Saul and they, and all the men of Israel were in the Oke valley, and foughte agaynst the philistynes.

Then David gat him vp early in the mornynge, and commytted the shepe to ⁊ keper, and toke his burthen, wente his waye, as Isai commaunded him, and came to the cēt. And the hoost was gone forth, and had prepared them selues, and cried in the battayll: For Israel had set them selues in aray, and the philistynes were agaynst their hoost in their aray also.

Then lefte David the vessell that he bare, with the keper of the stuffe, and ranne to the hoost, and wente in, and saluted his brethien. And whyle he was yettalking with them, beholde, then came vp the stoute bolde man, whose name was Goliath, the philistine of Gath, out of the philistynes hoost, and spakelike as afore, and David herde it. But euery man of Israel, whan he sawe the man, fled from him, and was sore afraied of him.

And euery man in Israel sayde: Haue ye sene the man commynge vphither? For he is come vphither, to speake disdainedly vnto Israel. And who so ever smyteth him, him wyll the kynge make ryche, and geue him his daughter, and make his fathers house fre in Israel.

D Then sayde David vnto the men that stode by him: What shalbe done to the man, that smyterch this philistyne, and turneth this shame away from Israel: For what is he this philistyne this vncircūcysed, that defyeth the hoost of ꝑ lyuynge God: Then the people tolde him as afore. Thus shali it be done vnto ꝑ man that smyterch him. And Eliab his greater brother herde him talke with the men, and was very wroth agaynst David, and sayde: Wherfore art thou come downe: and why hast thou left a fewe shepe in the wyldernesse: I knowe thy presumptuousnesse well ynough, and the wickednesse of thine hert: for thou art come downe to se the battayll. David answered: What haue I downe now: Is there not an occasion: And he turned him selfe from him vnto another, and spake a cordinge as he had sayde before. Then the people answered him like as afore.

And whan they herde the wordes which David sayde, they tolde them in the presence of Saul, and he caused him be fetched. And David sayde vnto Saul: Let no mans hert be discouraged because of him. Thy seruante shall go, and fighre with the philistyne. Neuertheles Saul sayde vnto David: Thou art not able to go agaynst this philistyne to fighre with him, for thou art but a childe: but this is a man of warre from his youth vp.

E David sayde vnto Saul: Thy seruante kepte his fathers shepe, and there came a lyon and a Bere, and caried awaye a shepe from the flocke, then wente I forth after him, and smote him, and delynered it out of his mouth. And whan he wolde haue bene vpon me: I toke him by his beerde, and smote him, and slewe him. So thy seruante smote both the Lyon and ꝑ Bere. Therefore shall this philistyne this vncircūcysed be euen as one of them: for he hath defyed the hoost of the lyuynge God. And David sayde: The LORDE that delynered me from ꝑ Lyon and Beer, shall delyuer me also from this philistyne.

And Saul sayde vnto David: Go thy waye, the LORDE be with the. And Saul clothed David with his clothes, and set an helmet of stele vpon his heade, and put an habergion vpon him. And David girded his swerde aboue his clothes, and beganne to go, for he had neuer bene used to it afore. Then sayde David vnto Saul: I can not go thus, for I haue not bene used to it, and so he laied it from him, and toke his staff in his hande, and chose fyue sighte stones out of the ryuer, and put them in the shepardes bagge which he had by him, and toke a slynge in his hande, and made him to the philistyne. And the philistyne wente forth, and made him to David, and his wapen beater before him.

Now whan the philistyne loked & sawe David, he thoughte scorne of him: for he was but a childe, well coloured, and beutyfull to loke vpon. And the philistyne sayde vnto David: Am I a dogg then, that thou comcest vnto me with a staffe: And he cursed David by his God, and sayde vnto David: Come hither to me, I wil geue thy flesh to the foules vnder the heauen, and to the bestes in the felde. Neuertheles David sayde vnto the philistyne: Thou comcest vnto me with swerde, speare and shyld. But I come vnto the in the name of the LORDE Zebaoth the God of the hoost of Israel, whom thou hast despyed. This daye shall the LORDE delyuer the in to my hāde, that I maye smyte the, and take thy heade from the, and geue the bodies of the hoost of the philistynes this daye vnto the foules vnder the heauen, and to the wyld beasts vpon the earth, that all the londe maye knowe ꝑ Israel hath a God. And all this congregacion shal knowe, that the LORDE sauech ne ther thorow swerde ner speare: for the battayll is the LORDES, & he shal delyuer you in to oure handes.

Now whan the philistyne gat him vp, and wente forth and diuenye vnto David, David made haiste, and ranne from ꝑ hoost vnto the philistyne. And David put his hāde in his bagg, and toke out a stone, & threwe it with the slynge, and hytt the philistyne euen in the fore heade, so that the stone stacke in his fore heade, and he fell downe to the grounde vpon his face.

So David overcame ꝑ philistyne with the slynge and wch ꝑ stone, and smote him, and slewe him. And for so moche as David had no swerde in his hande, he ranne and stode ouer ꝑ philistyne, and toke his swer

And the men of Israel and Juda gat the up, and cryed and folowed upon the Philistynes, tyll they came vnto the valley, and to the poyntes of Ekron. And the Philistynes fell downe slayne vnto Gath and to Ekron. And the children of Israel turned agayne from chasyng of the Philistynes, and spoyled their tentes. But Dauid toke the heade of the Philistyne, and broughte it vnto Jerusalem, as for his armour, he layed it in his tente.

Whan Saul sawe Dauid go forth agaynst the Philistyne, he saide vnto Abner his chiefe captayne: Abner, whose sonne is this childe? Abner sayde: As truly as thy soule lyueth O kyng, I wote not. The kyng sayde: Art he whose sonne the yongema is. Now whan Dauid came agayne from the slaughter of the Philistyne, Abner toke him, and broughte him before Saul, and he had the Philistynes heade in his hande. And Saul sayde vnto him: Whose sonne art thou, thou yonge man? Dauid sayde: I am a sonne of thy seruaunt Isai the Bethleemite.

The XVIII. Chapter.

When he had made an ende of talkyng with Saul, the soule of Jonathas was bounde with the soule of Dauid, and Jonathas loued him as his owne sonne. And Saul toke him the same daye, and let him not go agayne to his fathers house. And Jonathas and Dauid made a couenaunt together, for he loued him as his owne soule. And Jonathas put of his owne cote that he had vpon him, and gaue it vnto Dauid: yee and his cloke, his swerde, his bowe, and his girdell. And Dauid wente forth whither so euer Saul sent him, and behaued himselfe wysely. And Saul set him ouer the men of warre, and he pleased all the people well, and all the seruantes of Saul.

It fortuneth, that whan Dauid was come agayne from the slaughter of the Philistyne, the women wente out of all the cities of Israel with songes & daunces, to meete kyng Saul, with tymbrels, with myth, and with fyddels. And the women sange one to another, and played & sayde: Saul hath smytten his thousande: but Dauid his ten thousande.

Then was Saul very wroth, and he wrode displeased him sore, and he sayde: They ha ue ascribed ten thousande vnto Dauid, and but one thousande vnto me: what shal he haue more but the kyngdome? And from that daye forth, Saul loked sowerly vpon Dauid.

The nexte daye after came the euell spere of God vpon Saul, and prophcyed in hymyddes of the house. But Dauid played on the instrumente with his hande, as he was wonte daylie. And Saul had a iauelynge in his hande, and cast it, and thoughte: I wyll stycke Dauid fast to the wall. Neuerthelesse Dauid turned himselfe twyse awaye from him. And Saul was afrayed of Dauid: for the LORDE was with him, and was departed from Saul. Then Saul put him from him, and set him to be pryncce ouer a thousande men, and he went out and in before the people. And Dauid behaued himselfe wysely in all his doynges, and the LORDE was with him.

Now whan Saul sawe that he was so exceedyng wysely, he stode in feare of him. But all Israel and Juda loued Dauid, for he wente out and in before them. And Saul sayde vnto Dauid: Beholde, my greatest doughter Merob: wyl I geue the to wyfe: be stronge now, & gouerne the warres of the LORDE. For Saul thought: my harte shal ne be vpon him, but the hande of the Philistynes. Neuertheles Dauid answered Saul: Whom am I? & what is my life & the kynred of my father in Israel, that I shulde mary the kynges doughter?

But whan the tyme came, that Merob the doughter of Saul shulde haue bene geue vnto Dauid, she was geuen vnto Adriel the Bethleemite to wyfe. Neuerthelesse Michol Sauls doughter loued Dauid. Whan this was tolde Saul, if matter pleased him well, & he sayde: I wyl geue him her, if she maye be a share vnto him, & that the handes of the Philistynes maye come vpon him. And he sayde vnto Dauid: This daye shalt thou be my doughters husbnde & secōde tyme. And Saul spake vnto his seruantes: Take to Dauid secretly & saye: Beholde, the kyng hath pleasured in the, and all his seruantes loue the, mary thou therfore the kynges doughter.

And Sauls seruantes spake these wordes in the eares of Dauid. But Dauid saide: Thynte ye it but a small matter, to mary the kynges doughter? As for me, I am but a poore symple man. And Sauls seruantes tolde him agayne, and sayde: Sech wordes hath Dauid spoken. Saul sayde: Then saye ye vnto Dauid: The kyng desyreth no dowry, but onely an hundred foreskynnes of the philistynes, that vengeance maye be taken of the kynges enemies. Howbeit Saul thought to cause David be slayne by the handes of the philistynes. Then his seruantes tolde David these wordes, and David was contente with the matter, to mary the kynges doughter.

G And after a fewe dayes David gatt him vp, and wente with his men, and smote two hundred men amonge the philistynes. And David broughte their forekynges, and made their nombre sufficient vnto the kyng, & he mighte mary the kynges doughter. The Saul gaue him his doughter Michol to wyfe. And Saul saue and perceaued, that the LORDE was wth David. And Michol Sauls doughter loued him. Then was Saul the more afrayed, and became his enemye as longe as he lyued. And whan the prynces of the philistynes were forth, David behaued himselfe more wysely then all the seruantes of Saul in their outgoynge: so that his name was in greate reputacion.

The XIX. Chapter.

A Saul spake to Jonathas his sonne, and to all his seruantes, that they shulde kyll David. 1 Re. 18. 8 Neuerthelesse Jonathas the sonne of Saul loued David exceedingly, and tolde him, and sayde: Saul my father goeth aboute to slaye the. Kepe the therfore (I praye the) in the mornynge and abyde in secreete, and hyde the. But I wyll go forth, and stande besyde my father in the felde where thou art, and wyll speake of the vnto my father: and what soeuer I se I shal brynge the worde.

1 Sam. 18. 6 And Jonathas reported & best of David vnto Saul his father; and sayde vnto him: Oh let not the kyng synne agaynst his seruante, for he hath not synned agaynst the, and his doynge is very necessary for the, he put his lyfe in his hande also, and smote the philistyne, & the LORDE dyd a greate health vnto all Israel: this hast thou sene, and reioysed therof. Wherfore wylt thou then offende agaynst innocent bloude, that thou woldest kyll David without a cause? Then bertened Saul vnto the voice of Jonathas and sware: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, he shal not dye. Then Jonathas called David, and tolde him all these wordes, and brought him to Saul, so that he was in presence like as afore tyme.

But there arose a battayll agayne, and David wente forth, and fought agaynst the philistynes, and smote a greate slaughter, so that they fled before him. Neuertheles &

And Saul thoughte with the ianelynge to sticke David fast to the wall. Howbeit, he wente asyde fro Saul and the ianelynge smote in the wall. And David fled, and escaped that night.

C Notwithstandinge Saul sent his messengers to Davids house, that they shulde laye wayte for him, and kyll him in the mornynge. Michol Davids wyfe tolde him this, and sayde: If thou saue not thy soule this night, thou shalt dye to morow. Then Michol let him downe thorow the wyndow, so that he wente his waye, fled, and escaped. And Michol toke an ymage, and layed it in the bed, and laied a goates skynne at the heade of it, and couered it with clothes. Then Saul sent messengers, to fetch David. But she sayde: He is sicke. Neuerthelesse Saul sent messengers to se David, & sayde: Bynge him vp to me with the bed, that he maye be slayne.

Now whan the messengers came, beholde, the ymage laye in the bed, and a goates skynne at the heade of it. Then sayde Saul vnto Michol: Why hast thou begyled me, and let myne enemye go, that he might escape? Michol sayde vnto Saul: He sayde vnto me: Let me go, or I wyll kyll the. As for David, he fled, and escaped, and came to Samuel vnto Ramath, and tolde him all & Saul had done vnto him. And he wente wth Samuel, and they abode at Maioth.

D And it was tolde Saul: Beholde, David is at Maioth in Ramath. Then Saul sente messengers to fetch David. And they sawe a company of prophetes propheciengre, and Samuel had the oversight of them. Then came the spiete of God vpon the messengers of Saul, so that they prophecyed also.

Whan this was tolde Saul, he sent other messengers, which prophecied likewise. Then sente he messengers the thyrde tyme, and they in like maner prophecyed. Then wente he himselfe also vnto Ramath, and whan he came to the greate well which is at Secho, he aied and sayde: Where is Samuel and David? Then was it tolde him: beholde, at Maioth in Ramath. And he wente thither, euen vnto Maioth in Ramath. And & spiete of God came vpon him also, and he wote & prophecied till he came vnto Maioth in Ramath. The xx. Chap. Ho. xxxv.

And the LORDE be with the, as he hath David hid himself in the felde. And when the new Mone came, the kyng sat him downe set him downe in his place as he was wonte

The per ceaued Jonathas, that his father was vtterly determed to kyll David, and he rose vp from þy table in a wrothfull displeasure, and ate no bred þy same seconde daye of the new Moone: for he was vexed because of David, that his father had done him soch dishonour.

S On the morow wente Jonathas forth in to the felde, at the tyme appoynted of David, and a litle boy with him, and sayde vnto y boy: Runne and seke me the arrowes which I shote. Whan the boy ranne, he shot an arrowe ouer him. And whan the boy came to the place whither Jonathas had shot þy arrowe, Jonathas cryed after him, and sayde: The arrowe lyeth yonderwarde before the. And he cryed after him agayne: haist the, and stonde not styll. Then the boy gathered vp Jonathas arrowes, and brought them to his lord. And the boy knewe nothinge, eue ly Jonathas and David knewe of þy matter.

Then Jonathas gaue his boy his wapens and sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, and cary them in to the cite. And whan the boy was gone, David arose from the place towarde the south, and fell vpon his face to the ground, and worshipped thre tymes, and they kysed one another, and wepte together. But David most specially. And Jonathas saide vnto David: Go thy waye in peace. And the LORDE answered him, and sayde: Up, get the downe to Cegila, for I wil deliuer the Philistynes in to thy hande.

So Dauid wente with his men vnto Cegila, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes, & brone awaye their catell, and smote them w a greate slaughter. Thus Dauid deliuered them of Cegila. For whan Abiathar the sonne of Ahimelech fled vnto Dauid at Cegila, he bare downe the ouerbody cote with him.

And Saul caused for to call all the people downe to y^e battail vnto Cegila, y^e they might besege David and his men. But whan David perceaued y^e Saul intēded euell against him, he saide vnto Abiathar y^e prest: Brynge me hither the ouerboddy core. And David sayde: O LORDE God of Israel, thy seruau^t hath herde, that Saul goeth aboute to come for to destroye the cite of Cegila for my sake. Shal the citysens of Cegila deliuer me ouer in to his handes? And shal Saul come downe, as thy seruau^t hath herde? Tell thy seruau^t this, O LORDE God of Israel. And the LORDE saide: He shal come downe.

C David sayde: Shall the citysens of Cegila deliuer me and my men in to Sauls handes? The LORDE sayde: Yea. Thē David gat him vp with his mē, of whom there were vpon a fixe hundred, and walked whither they cou^{ld}. Now whan it was tolde Saul that David was escaped from Cegila, he let his iourney stonde. As for David, he remayned in the wildernes in the castell, and abode vpon the mount in the wildernes of Siph. But Saul soughte him as longe as he lyped. Nevertheless God gaue him not in to his handes. And David sawe, that Saul was gone forth to seke after his life. But David was in the wildernes of Siph, in the wodd.

Then Jonathas the sonne of Saul gat him vp, and wēt vnto David in to the wode, and strengthened his hande in God, and sayde vnto him: Feare not, my father Sauls hande shal not finde y^e: and thou shalt be kyng ouer Israel, so will I be the nexte vnto the. And y^e my father knoweth right well. And they made a couenaunt both together before the LORDE. And David remayned in the wodd. As for Jonathas, he wente heme agayne.

But the Siphites wente vp to Saul vnto Gibeath, and sayde: Is not David hyd with vs in the castell in y^e wodd, vpon mount Hachila, which lyeth on the righte hande of the wildernes? Let the kyng come downe now therfore acordinge to all the desyre of his hert, and we wyll deliuer him in to the kynges hande. Then sayde Saul: Blessed be ye of the LORDE, that ye haue had pytie vpon me: Go youre waye now therfore, and be sure, that ye maye knowe and se in what place his fete haue bene, and who hath sene him there: for it is tolde me, that he is full of subtiltye. Loke well and spye out all the places, where he hydeth him, and come agayne to me, whan ye are sure, and I will go with you. If he be in the londe, I wyll enquire after him amonge all the thousandes in Iuda.

Then gat they them vp, and wence their waye vnto Siph before Saul. But David and his men were in the wyldernes of Maō, even in the felde on the righte hande of the wildernes. Now whan Saul wente thither with his men to seke him, it was tolde David and he gat him downe to the rocke, and abode in the wildernes of Mahon. Whan Saul herde that, he folowed after David in the wildernes of Mahon. And Saul with his men wente on the one syde of the hyll: David wth his men on y^e other syde of y^e hill. But whan David made haist to escape from Saul, Saul with his men compased aboute David and his men, that he might take the. Nevertheless there came a messaūger vnto Saul, and sayde: Make haist and come, for the philistynes are fallē in to the londe. Thē Saul turned him from chacyng of David, and wente agaynst the philistynes. Therefore is y^e place called * Sela Mahelkoth. And David wente vp from thence, and abode in the castell at Engaddi.

The XXIII. Chapter.

Now whan Saul came agayne from the philistines, it was tolde him: Beholde, David is in the wyldernes of Engaddi. And Saul toke thre thousande chosen men out of all Israel, and wente to seke David with his men vpon the stony rockes of the wylde goates. And whan he came to the shepe foldes by y^e waye, there was a cave, and Saul wente in to cover his fete. But David and his men sat behinde within the cave.

Then sayde Davids men vnto him: Lo, this is the daye, wherof the LORDE thy God hath sayde vnto the: Beholde, I wyll deliuer thyne enemye in to thy hande, that thou mayest do wth him what it pleaseth the. And David stode vp, and cut of the tye of Sauls garment quyetly. Nevertheless it smote him afterwarde in his hert, because he had cut of the tye of Sauls garment, and sayde vnto his men: The LORDE let that be farre from me, that I shulde do it, and laye my hande vpon my lorde the LORDES anoynted: for he is y^e anoynted of the LORDE. And David withheld his seruantes with wordes, and suffred the not to ryse vp agaynst Saul.

But whan Saul gat him vp out of the

And Dauid bowed downe his face to the earth, and worshipped, and sayde vnto Saul: Why herkenest thou vnto the wordes of men, that saye: Dauid seeketh thy myffortune? Beholde, thine eyes se this daye that the LORD hath gaue the into my hande in the cause, and I was counceiled to slaye the: Unto theles thou wast fauoured, for I sayde: I wil not laye my hande vpon my lord, for he is the LORD'S anoynted. Beholde, my father the tyype of thy garment in my hande, that I wolde not slaye the, whan I cut of the tyype of thy garment. Nowe and se, & there is no euill ner trespasse in my hande: nether haue I offended the, and thou followest after my soule, to take it awaye. The LORD shall be iudge betwene me and the, and auengeme on the, but my hande shall not be vpon the, acordinge as it is sayde after the olde proverbe: Vngodlynes commeth of the vngodly: but my hande shall not be vpon the. Whom persecutest thou O kyng of Israel, whom persecutest thou? a deed dogg? a flee? The LORD be iudge, and geue sentence betwene me and the, and cōsidie it, and defende my cause, and delyuer me from thy hande.

D Now whan Dauid had spoken out these wordes vnto Saul, Saul saide: Is not this thy voyce my sonne Dauid? And Saul lifte vp his voyce, and wepte, and saide vnto Dauid: Thou art more righteous then I: for thou hast recompensed me good, but I haue rewarded the euill. And this daye hast thou shewed me how thou hast done me good, for so moch as & LORD hath delyuered me into thy hande, and thou neuertheless hast not slaine me. What is he, which ys he synde his enemye, wyllet him go in a good waye? The LORD reward the good for & thou hast done vnto me this daye? Beholde now, I knowe that thou shalt be kyng, & the kyngdome of Israel stondeth in thy hande: sweare now therfore vnto me by the LORD, & thou shalt not rote out my seide after me, nether destroye my name out of my fathers house. And Dauid sware vnto Saul. Then wente Saul home, but Dauid gat him vp with his men vnto the castell.

Ramath. As for Dauid, he rose, and wente downe into the wyldernes of paran. And there was a man at Maon, and his possession at Carmel, and the man was of greates power, and had thre thousande shepe, and a thousande goates. And it fortuneth that he clypped his shepe at Carmel, and his name was Nabal, but his wyues name was Abigail, and she was a woman of good understandinge, & bewtyfull of face. But the man was harde, and wicked in his doynge, and was one of Caleb.

Now whan Dauid herde in the wyldernes & Nabal clypped his shepe, he sent out ten yonge men, & saide vnto them: Go vp vnto Carmel, & whan ye come to Nabal, salute him frendly on my behalfe, & saye: Good lucke, peace be to the & thine house, & with all & thou hast. I haue herde saye that thou hast shepe clyppers. Now & shepherdes whom thou hast, haue bene with vs, we haue done them no dishonoure, and they wanted nothinge of their nombre, as longe as they were at Carmel: Are thy yonge men, they shall tell the, and let thy yonge men synde fauoure in & sighte: for we are come in a good daye, geue thy seruantes & thy sonne Dauid what thy hande synde.

And whan Dauids yonge men came, and spake all these wordes on Dauids behalfe vnto Nabal, they lefte of. But Nabal answered Dauids seruantes, & sayde: What is he & Dauid? & who is the sonne of Isai? There are many seruantes now & runne awaye from their masters. Shulde I take my bieb, water and flesh, that I haue slayne for my clyppers, & geue it vnto me whom I knowe not whence they are?

The Dauids yonge men turned their waye agayne. And whan they came agayne vnto him, they tolde him all these wordes. The sayde Dauid vnto his men: Every man gyrd his swerde aboute him. And every one gyrd his swerde aboute him. And Dauid gyrd his swerde aboute him also, and there wente vp after him vpon a foure hundred men, but two hundred remayned to the stuffe.

Neuetheless Abigail Nabals wife tolde one of hir yonge men, and sayde: Beholde, Dauid sent messaungers out of the wyldernes to blesse oure lord, & notwithstandinge he was scarce vpon them, and yet haue they bene very profitable men vnto vs, and haue done vs no dishonoure, and we wanted none of the nombre as longe as we walked with them, whan we were in the felde: but they haue bene oure wall daye and nyghte, as lon ge as we kepe the shepe by them. Take he-de now therfore, and loke well what thou doest, for there is surely a myffortune at han-de agaynst oure lorde, & agaynst all his house. And he is a man of Belial, to whom no man darre saye eny thinge. Then Abigail made haist, and toke two hundred loaves of bied, and two botels of wyne, and fyne she-pe ready dighte, and fyne measures of firmentye, and an hundredth prayles of rasens, and two hundredth prayles of fygges, & layed them vpon asses, and sayde to hir yonge men:

Go ye youre waye before me, beholde, I wyl come after. And she tolde Nabal hir houshāde nothinge therof. And as she rode vpon the asse, and wente downe in the shadowe of ȝ hill, beholde, David & his mē met hir dow-ne, so that she came vpon them.

D But David sayde: Wel, all that this man had in ȝ wyldernes, haue I kepte for naughte, so that there wanted nothinge of all that he had, and he rewardeth me euell for good.
God do this and yet more vnto the enemies of David, yf vntyll tomorew in the mornyn-ge I leaue this man (of all that he hath) so moch as one that maketh water agaynst ȝ wall. Now whan Abigail sawe David, she lighte downe from the asse in all the haist, and fell vpon hir face before David, and worshipped him to the grounde, and fell at his fete, and sayde: Oh my lorde, let this trespass be myne, and let thy handmayde speake before thine eares, and heare the wordes of thy handmayden: Let not my lorde see his hert agaynst this Nabal the man of Belial, for he is a foole, acordinge as his name is called: his name is foole, and foolishnes is with him. As for me thy handmayde, I sawe not my lordes yonge men, whom thou dyddest sende.

But now my lorde, as truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, the LORDE hath kepte the backe, ȝ thou shuldest not come agaynst bloude, and he hath deliuered thine hande.

E Thine enemyes be now as Nabal, and so be they that wolde my lorde euell. Here is ȝ blessynge, ȝ thy handmayde hath brought my lorde, take it, and geue it vnto the yonge men, that walke vnder my lorde. For a sure house shal ȝ LORDE make my lorde, which fighth the fighthe of the LORDE, and no euell shal be founde in the all thy life longe.
And yf eny man ryse vp to persecute ȝ, and to laye wayte for thy soule, then shal the soule of my lorde be bounde in the bundell of ȝ lynynge, euen with the LORDE thy God.

The xxv. Chap.

But ȝ soule of thine enemyes shalbe turned backe to the slynge. Whan the LORDE therfore doth all this good for my lorde (which he hath promysed the) and commaundeth ȝ to be his Duke ouer ȝ Israel, then shal it be no stomblinge blocke ner occasioun of fallynge vnto my lordes hert, that thou hast not shed bloude without a cause, and auenged thy selfe, then shal ȝ LORDE do good vnto my lorde, and thou shalt thynke vpon thy hand-mayden.

Then saide David vnto Abigail: Blessed g be the LORDE God of ȝ Israel, which hath sent the to mete me this daye: and blessed be thy speach, and blessed be thou, which hast kept me backe this daye, that I am not come agaynst bloude, to auenge me with my-ne awne hande. Verely (as truly as the LOR-DE the God of ȝ Israel lyueth, which hath hyndred me that I shulde do the no euell.)
If thou haddest not met me in all the haist, Nabal shulde not haue had leste him vntyll ȝ lighte mornynge, so moch as one that ma-keth water agaynst the wall. So David to-ke of hir hāde what she had broughte him, and sayde vnto her: Go vp in peace vnto ȝ house: beholde, I haue hertened vnto ȝ voyce, and accepted thy persome.

But whan Abigail came to Nabal, be-holde, he had prepared a feast in his house like a kynges feast, and his hert was mery, for he was very dronken. And she tolde him no-thinge, nether small ner greete vntyll ȝ clea-re mornynge. But whan it was daye, & the wyne was come from Nabal, his wife tolde him these thinges.

Then was his hert deed in his body, so E that he became euen as a stone: and ouer ten dayes the LORDE smote him, so ȝ he dyed.
Whan David herde that Nabal was deed, he sayde: Blessed be ȝ LORDE which hath auenged my rebuke on Nabal, and preserued his seruaut from euell. And the LORDE hath rewarded Nabal that euell vpon his heade.

And David sent, and caused to talke with Abigail, ȝ he mighte take her to wife. And whan Davids seruantes came to Abigail vnto Carmel, they spake vnto her, and saide:
David hath sent vs vnto the, that he maye take ȝ to wife. She rose vp, and worshipped vpon hir face vnto the earth, and sayde: be-holde, here is thy handmayde, that she maie do seruyce vnto the seruantes of my lorde, and to washe their fete. And Abigail made haist, and gat her vp, and rode vpon an asse, and fyne maydens that were vnder her, and wente after Dauids messengers, and became his wife. David toke Abinoam of Iſrael also, and they both became his wyues. But Saul gaue Michol his doughter the wife of David vnto Phalti y^e ſonne of Laish of Gallim.

The XXVI. Chapter.

Ihey of Siph came to Saul vnto Gibeath, and sayde: "Is not David hyd vpon the hill of Hachila, which lyeth ouer agaynst the wyldernes?" Then Saul gat him vp, and wente downe to the wyldernes of Siph, and thre thousande chosen men of Iſrael with him, to ſeke David in the wyldernes of Siph, and pitched vpon the hill of Hachila, which lyeth by the waye before the wyldernes. But David remayned in the wyldernes, and when he ſawe that Saul came after him in to the wyldernes, he ſent out ſpyes, and knewe of a ſuertie, that he was come in deſce.

And David gat him vp, and came to the place where Saul had pitched his tent, and ſawe the place where Saul laye with his cheſe capayne. Abner y^e ſonne of Ner: for Saul laye in the tent, and the hoost aboute him. Then answered David, and ſayde vnto Ahimelech the Gethite, and to Abiſai the ſonne of Ner: Ja y^e brother of Joab: Who wil go downe with me to Saul in to the hoost? Abiſai ſayde: I wil go downe with the.

So David and Abiſai came to the people in the night ſeaſon, and beholde, Saul laye and ſlepte in the tent, and his ſpeare ſtacke in y^e grounde at his heade. But Abner and the people laye rounde aboute him. Then ſayde Abiſai vnto David: God hath cloſed thine enemye in thine hande this daye. Therfore will I now thruſt him thorow once with the ſpeare euen in to the grounde, y^e he ſhall haue ynough of it. Neuertheles David ſayde vnto Abiſai: Destroye him not, for who wil laye hande vpon the anoynted of y^e LORD, and remayne vngiltye? David ſayde moreover: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, yf y^e LORDE him ſelfe ſmyte him not, or excepte his tyme come that he dye, or that he go in to the battayll and periſhe, the LORDE let it be farre from me, that I ſhulde laye my hande on the LORDES anoynted. Take y^e ſpeare now therfore at his heade, and the cuppe of water, and let vs go. So David toke y^e ſpeare and the cuppe of water at Sauls heade, and they wente their waye. And there was no man y^e ſawe it, ner perceaued it, nether awaked, but they ſlepte every one, for there was a deepe ſlepe fallen vpon them from the LORDE.

The xxvi. Chap. Ho. xxxviii.

Now when David was come ouer on y^e other ſyde, he ſtoode vpon the toppe of the mount a ſarre of (ſo that there was a wyde ſpace betwene them) and cried vpon y^e people, and vpon Abner the ſonne of Ner, and ſayde: Hearest thou not Abner? And Abner answered and ſayde: Who art thou that cryeſt ſo, and diſeaſeſt the kyng? And David ſayde vnto Abner: Art thou not a man? And where is there ſuch one as thou in Iſrael? Why haſt thou not then kepte thy lord y^e kyng? for there is one of y^e people come in to deſtroie thy lord y^e kyng. It is not well that thou haſt done. As truly as the LORDE lyueth, ye are the children of death, becauſe ye haue not kepte youre lord the LORDES anoynted. Beholde now, where is y^e kynges ſpeare, and the cuppe of water that was at his heade.

Then knewe Saul the voyce of David, and ſaide: "Is not that thy voyce my ſonne David?" David ſayde: It is my voyce my lord the kyng. And he ſayde moreover: Why doth my lord ſo perſecute his ſervant? What haue I done? and what euell is there in my hande? Yet let my lord the kyng heare but the wordes of his ſervant: If y^e LORDE prouoke the agaynſt me, let there be ſmelled a meat offering: but yf the childre of men do it, curſed be they before the LORD, becauſe they haue thruſt me out this daye (that I ſhulde not dwell in the LORDES inheritance) and ſay: Go y^e waye, and ſerue other goddes. So fall not now my bloude vpon the earth from the face of the LORD. For the kyng of Iſrael is gone forth to ſeke a ſiege, as a partridge is ſolowed on vpon the mountaynes.

And Saul ſayde: I haue ſynned: Come agayne David my ſonne, I wil do the no more hurte, becauſe my ſoule hath bene deare in y^e ſighte this daye. Beholde, I haue done fooliſhly and very vnwiſely. David answered and ſayde: Beholde, here is the kynges ſpeare, let one of the yongemen come ouer here and fetch it. But the LORDE ſhal rewarde every one accordinge to his righteouſnes and faith, for y^e LORDE deliuered y^e this daye in to my hande: neuertheles I wolde not laie my hande vpon the LORDES anoynted. And as y^e ſoule hath bene greatly reputed in my ſighte this daye, ſo let y^e LORDE repaite my ſoule in his ſighte, and deliuer me from all trouble. Saul ſaide vnto David: Blessed be thou David my ſonne, thou ſhalt do it, and be able. But David wente his waye, and Saul turned agayne vnto his place.

And thoughte in his hert: One of these dayes shal I fall in to the handes of Saul: It is better that I get me my waye in to y^e londe of y^e philistynes, that Saul maye leave of from sekynge me in all the coastes of Israel, so shal I escape his handes. And he gat him vp, and wente ouer (with the sixe hundred men that were with him) vnto Achis the sonne of Maach kyng of Gath. So David remayned by Achis at Gath, with his me, every one with his hensholde, and David with his two wyues, Abinoam the Iesraelitisse, and Abigail Nabals wife of Carmel. And whan worde came to Saul that David was fled vnto Gath, he soughte him nomore.

And David sayde vnto Achis: If I haue founde grace in thy sighte, then let there be geuen me a place in one of the cities of the londe, that I maye dwell therein. Wherfore shulde thy seruant dwell in the kynges cite with the? Then Achis gaue him Siclag the same daye. Therfore belongeth. Siclag to the kynges of Iuda vnto this daye. The tyme that David dwelt in the londe of the philistynes, is foure monethes.

David wente vp with his men, and fell in to the londe of the Gessurites and Girsites, and Amalechites: for these were the inhabi-

But whā David smote y^e londe, he let nether man ner woman lyue, and toke the shepe, oxen, asses, Camels and rayment, and returned and came to Achis. So whan Achis spake: Whither fell ye in to daye? David sayde: Towarde the south parte of Iuda, towarde y^e south parte of the Jerahmuelites, z towarde the south parte of the Benites. But David let nether man ner woman come lyuynge vnto Geth, and thoughte: They mighte peradventure speake z reporte agaynst vs: thus dyd David, and this was his maner as longe as he dwelt in y^e londe of the philistynes. Therfore Achis gaue credence vnto David, and thoughte: he hath made him selfe stynte before his people of Israel, therfore shal he be my seruant for ever.

Achis saide vnto David: Therfore wyll I ordenethe to be the keper of my heade as longe as I lyue. * As for Samuel, he was deed, and all y^e people had mourned for him, z buried him in his cite Ramath. * So Saul had dryuen the soychsayers and expounders of tokens out of y^e londe. Now whan the philistynes gathered them selues together, and came and pitched their tentes at Sunem, Saul gathered all the people together, z they pitched at Gilboa. But whan Saul sawe the hoost of the philistynes, he was a frayd, and his hert was discouraged, and he axed counsell at the LORDE. But y^e LORDE gaue him no answer, nether by dreames, ner by the * lighte, ner by prophetes.

The sayde Saul vnto his seruantes: Seke me a womā which hath a spiete of soychsayēge, that I maye go vnto her, and axe at her. His seruantes sayde vnto him: Beholde, at Endor is there a woman, which hath a spiete of soychsayenge. And Saul chaunged his clothes, and put on other, and wente his waye and two men with him, and came by nighte vnto the woman, and sayde: Prophecye vnto me (I pray the) xhorow the spiete of soychsayenge, and brynge me him vp whom I shal name vnto the. The womā saide vnto him: Beholde, thou knowest what Saul hath done, how he hath roced out the soychsayers z witches from the londe, wherfore wilt thou brynge my soule then in to y^e nett, that I maye be slayne? Now whan y^e woman sawe Samuel, she cryed loude, and sayde vnto Saul: Wherfore hast thou begyled me? Thou art Saul. And the kyng sayde vnto her: Feare not, what seist thou? The woman sayde vnto Saul: I se goddes comynge vp out of y^e earth. He sayde: How is he shapened? She sayde: There cometh vp an olde man, and is clothed with a longe garment. Then perceaued Saul that it was Samuel, z bowed him selfe downe to his face to the grounde, and worshiped him.

Samuel saide vnto Saul: Why hast thou disquyed me, to cause me be broughte vp? Saul sayde: I am sore troubled, the philistynes fighte agaynst me, z God is departed from me, z geueth me no answer, nether by prophetes ner by dreames: therfore haue I called the, y^e thou mightest shewe me, what I

And the hoost of Israel shal the LORDE deliuer in to the handes of the Philistynes. Then fell Saul immediatly vnto the earth, for he coude not stonde, and was sore afayed at these wordes of Samuel, so that there was nomore strength in him: for he had eaten no bried all that daye and all that night.

E And the woman wente into Saul, & sawe that he was sore vexed, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, thy handmayde hath herkened vnto thy voyce, and I haue put my soule in my hande, so that I haue herkened vnto y wordes which thou spakest vnto me. Therfore folowe thou also the voyce of thy handmayde. I wil see a morsell of bried before the to eate, that thou mayest come to thy strength, & go y waye. But he refused, and sayde, I wil not eate. Then his seruantes & the woman compelled him, so that he herkened vnto their voyce.

And he rose vp from y grounde, and sat vpon the bed. The woman had a fat calfe at home, so she made haist, and kylled it, and toke meell and dyd kneete it, and baked sweete cakes, & broughte them forth before Saul, & before his seruantes. And whan they had eaten, they stode vp, and wente their waye y nighte.

The XXIX. Chapter.

A The Philistynes gathered all their armies together at Aphet. But Israel pitched at Ain in Iesrael. And the prynces of the Philistynes were forth with hundreds and with thousandes, but Dauid and his men were behynde with Achis. The sayde the prynces of the Philistynes: What shal these hebrues do? Achis saide vnto the: Is not this Dauid y seruant of Saul kynge of Israel, which hath bene with me now yeaeres and dayes, & I haue founde no euell in him sence the tyme that he fell to me vnto this daye? For wherin coude he better do his lorde a pleasure, the in the heades of these men? Is not this Dauid, of whom they sunge in the daunce: Saul hath smytte his thousande, but Dauid his ten thousande? Then Achis called Dauid, and sayde vnto him: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, I take the for an honest man, and thy outgoynge and ingoynge with me in y hoost please me well, and no euell haue I marked in the, sence y tyme that thou camest to me vnto this daye. But thou pleasest not the prynces. Returne now therfore, and go y waye in peace, that thou do no euell in the sighte of the prynces of y Philistynes.

Dauid sayde: What haue I done, & what ^B hast thou marked in thy seruant, sence y tyme that I haue bene in y presence vnto this daye, that I shulde not come and fighte agaynst the enemies of my lord the kynge? Achis answered and sayde vnto Dauid: I knowe well that thou pleasest myne eyes euē as an angell of God. But the prynces of y Philistynes haue sayde: Let him not go vp with vs vnto the batayll. Get the vtherfore tomorrow by tymes, and y lordes seruantes which are come with the. And whan ye haue gotten you vp early in the mornynge, whan it is lighte, go yo waye. So Dauid & his men gat them vp early, to go their waye in the mornynge, and to come agayne in to the londe of the Philistynes. But the Philistynes wente vp towarde Iesrael.

The XXX. Chapter.

Now whan Dauid came to Siclag ^A on the thirde daie with his men, the Amalechites had falle in on y south parte and at Siclag, and had smytten Siclag, and burned it with fyre, and had caried awaye the wemen out of it, both small & greete. Nevertheless they had slayne no man, but dryuen the thence, and were goynge on their waye. Now whan Dauid with his men came to the cite, and sawe that it was brent wth fyre, and that their wyues, sonnes & daughters were led awaye captiue, Dauid and the people that was with him leste vp their voyce, and wepte so longe tyll they coude wepe nomore. For Dauids two wyues also were caried awaye captiue, Abinoam y Iesraelitisse, and Abigail Labals wife of Carmel. And Dauid was very sorowfull, for the people wolde haue stoned him: for y soule of all the people was in greute heynnes, euery one ouer his sonnes and daughters.

B ^{1 Re. 21. b} Neuertheles David strengthened him selfe in the LORDE his God, & sayde vnto Abiathar & prest the sonne of Ahimelech: Bringe me hither the overbody cote. And whan Abiathar had broughte the overbody cote vnto David, David ayled at the LORDE, and sayde: Shal I folowe vpon the men of warre, and shal I ouertake them? He sayde: Yee, folowe vpon them, thou shalt ouertake them, and shalt rescue the pray. Then wente David his waye, and the sixe hundred men that were with him. And whan they came to the ryuer of Besor, some stode styll. But David and the foure hundred men folowed after: As for the two hundred men that stode styll, they had bene slowe to go ouer the ryuer of Besor.

Prou. 23. d And they founde a man of Egipte vpon the felde, him they broughte vnto David, & gaue him bread to eate, and water to drynke, and gaue him a quantite of fygges, & two quantities of raisyns. And whan he had eaten, his spere came to him againe: for in thre dayes and thre nightes he had eate no bread, and dronke no water.

C David sayde vnto him: Whose art thou? & whence art thou? He sayde: I am a childe of Egipte, an Amalechites seruaunt, & my master hath forsaken me, because I was sicke thre dayes ago. We sell her in towarde & south syde of Chirchus, and vpon Juda, and towarde & south parte of Caleb, & haue burned Sidlag with fyre.

David sayde vnto him: Wilt thou bringe me downe to these men of warre? He sayde: Swear e vnto me by God, & thou shalt not slaye me, ner deliuer me in to my masters hande, and I wil bringe the downe to these men of warre. And he broughte the downe, and beholde, they were scatred vpon all y ground, eatinge and drynkynge, and keepynge holy daye, and were makinge mery there, because of all the greute spoyle that they had taken out of the londe of the philistynes and of Juda.

D And David smote them from & morow tyll the euen, agaynst the nexte daye, so that there escaped none, excepte foure hundred yonge men, which rode vpon camels, & fled. So David rescued all that the Amalechites had taken, and his two wyues, & there mysfled nothinge, nether small ner greute, nether sonnes ner daughters, ner spoyle: and what so euer they had taken, David broughte all agayne. And David toke the shepe and oxen, and drewe & catell before him. And they sayde: This is Dauids spoyle.

And whan David came to the two hundred men, which had bene slowe to folowe after David, and abode at the ryuer of Besor, they wente forth to meete David, and the people & was with him. And David came to the people, and saluted them frendly.

Then answered soch men as were euell & Belials men (amonge them that had gone with David) and sayde: Seynge they wente not w vs, they shal haue none of the spoyle that we haue rescued: but let euery man take his wife & his children and be goynge.

Then sayde David: Ye shall not do so (my brethren) with that which & LORDE hath genen vs, and hath preserued vs, and deliuered these men of warre (which) were come agaynst vs in to oure handes. Who shoulde consente vnto you herin? like as the porcion is of them that wente downe to the battayll, so shal & porcion be of them also that abode w the stuffe, & shalbe denyded a lyke.

S From that tyme forth hath this bene an ordinaunce & lawe in Israel vnto this daye. And whan David came to Sidlag, he sent of the spoyle vnto the Elders in Juda his neyheurs, and sayde: Behelde, there haue ye the blessinge out of the spoyle of the enemies of the LORDE, namely vnto them of Bethel, vnto them at Ramath in the south, vnto them at Jathir, vnto them at Aroer, vnto them at Siphmoth, vnto them at Eschemoa, vnto them at Rachal, vnto them in the cities of the Jerahmuelites, vnto them in the cities of the Kenites, vnto them at Horonaim, vnto the at Bozasan, vnto the at Arady, vnto them at Hebron, and vnto all the places where David had walked w his men.

The XXXI. Chapter.

B ^{2. Par. 24} He & philistynes foughte agaynst Israel, and the men of Israel fled before the philistynes, and fell downe smytten vpon the mount Gilboa. And the philistynes pressed vpon Saul and his sonnes, and slewe Jonathas, & Abinadab and Malchisua the sonnes of Saul. And the battayll was sore agaynst Saul, & the archers fell vpon him with bowes, and he was sore wounded of the archers.

Then sayde Saul vnto his wapenbearers: Drawe out thy swerde, and thrust it thorow me, that these vncircumcised come not and slaye me, and make a laughing stocke of me. Neuertheles his wapenbearer wolde not, for he was sore afayed. Then toke Saul & swerde, and fell hym. Then whan his wa-

Whan y men of Israel which were beyon de the valley, and beyonde Jordane, sawe, & the men of Israel were fled, and that Saul and his sonnes were deed, they leste y cities, and fled also. Then came the Philistynes, & dwelt therin.

1 Par. ii. b

* On the nexte daye came the Philistynes to spoyle & slayne, and founde Saul and his thre sonnes lyenge vpon monnt Gilboa, and smote of his heade, and toke of his harness, and sent it in to the lande of the Philistynes rounde aboute, to shewe it in the house of their Idols, and amonge the people, & layed his harness in y house of Astaroth: but his body hanged they vp vpo the wall of Bethsan.

Whan they of Jabes in Gilead herde, what the Philistynes had done vnto Saul, they gat them vp, as many as were men of armes, and wente all the nighte, and toke y body of Saul, and the bodies of his sonnes from y wall of Bethsan, broughte the now and faithfulness upon you. And because ye have done this, I also will do you good. Let your hearts now therefore be comforted, and be ye stronger: for though Saul your lord be dead, yet hath the house of Juda chosen me to be kyng over them.

B But Abner the sonne of Ner, which was Sauls chiefe captayne, took Iſboseth the sonne of Saul, and brought him thorow the hoost, and made him kyng over Gilead, Assuri, Iſrael, Ephraim, Ben Jamin and over all Iſrael. And Iſboseth the sonne of Saul was fourtye yeare olde, when he was made kyng of Iſrael, & he reigned two yeares. But the house of Juda helde with David: The tyme þ David was kyng at Hebron over the house of Juda, was seven yeare and sixe monethes longe.

a. R. 5 a

And Abner the sonne of Ner wote forth with the seruantes of Iſboseth the sonne of Saul, out of þ hoost vnto Gibeon. And Joab the sonne of Zeru Ja wote forth with Davids seruantes, and they met together by the pole at Gibeon, and cheselays on the one syde of the pole, the other on the other syde. And Abner sayde vnto Joab: Let the yonge men get them vp, and playe before vs. Joab sayde: Let them aryse. Then gat they them vp, & wente in nombre twelue of Ben Jamin on Iſboseth Sauls sonnes syde, and twelue of Davids seruantes. And every one gat another by the heade, and thrust his swerde in his syde, and fell together: therefore is the place called Helkath hazurim (that is, the felde of the Worthies) which is at Gibeon.

C And there arose a sore harde battayll the same daye. But Abner and the men of Iſrael were put to flight of Davids seruantes. Thre sonnes of Zeru Ja were there, Joab, Abisai & Asahel. As for Asahel, he was lighte of fete as a Roob in þ felde, & folowed after Abner, and turned not asyde nether to the righte hande ner to þ lefte from Abner. Then Abner turned him aboute, and sayde: Art thou Asahel? He sayde: Yee. Abner sayde vnto him: So thy waye ether to the righte hande or to the lefte, and get the one of þ yonge men, and take his harness from him. Neuertheles he wolde not leaue of fro him. Then sayde Abner agayne to Asahel: Get thee awaye from me, why wilt thou that I smyte thee to the grounde? and how darre I lift vp my face before þ brother Joab? Howbeit he wolde not go his waye.

Then Abner thrust him in with a speare into his bely, so that the speare wote out behynde him. And there he fell and dyed before him: and who so came to the place where Asahel laye dead, stode styll there. But Joab and Abisai folowed vpon Abner, till the sonne wente downe. And when they came to þ hyll of Amma, which lieth before Giah, by þ waye to the wilderness of Gibeon, the children of Ben Jamin gathered them selues together behynde Abner, and grewe to a multitude, and stode vpon the toppe of an hyll.

And Abner called vnto Joab, and sayde: Shal the swerde the deuoure without end? Knowest thou not, that it will be bytter at the last: How longe wil it be or thou saie vnto the people, that they leaue of from their brether? Joab sayde: As truly as God lyueth yf thou haddest sayde thus daye in the morninge, the people had ceased every one from his brother. And Joab blew the trompet, & all the people stode still, and folowed none more vpon Iſrael, nether foughte they enymore.

Abner and his men wente all that same night over the playne felde, and passed over Iordane, & walked thorow all Bithron, and came to the tentes. Joab turned him from Abner, and gathered all þ people together. And of Davids seruantes there myssed nyntene men, and Asahel. But Davids seruantes had smytten so amonge Ben Jamin and the men of Abner, that thre hundred and threescore men were dead. And they toke vp Asahel, and buried him in his fathers graue at Bethleem. And Joab with his men wote all that nyght: and at the breake of the daie they came vnto Hebron.

The III. Chapter.

And there was a longe battayll betwene the house of Saul and the house of David. But David wente and increased, and the house of Saul wente and diminished. And vnto David were children borne at Hebron. His firstborne sonne Ammon of Ahinoam the Iſraelitisse: the seconde Chisleab of Abigail the wyfe of Nabal of Carmel: the thirde Absalon the sonne of Maachah the daughter of Thalmay kyng of Gessur: the fourth Adonia the sonne of Hagitha the fift Saphatia the sonne of Abital: þ sixte Jerhream of Eglah Davids wife. These were borne vnto David at Hebron.

Now when it was warre betwene the house of Saul & the house of David, Abner strengthened Sauls house. And Saul had had a concubine, whose name was Rissa the daughter of Nia. And Iſboseth sayde vnto Abner: Wherefore liest thou with my fathers concubine?

Then was Abner very wroth at these wordes of Iſbobaſeth, and ſayde: Am I a dogges heade then, that I agaynſt Juda do mercy vnto the houſe of Saul thy father, and vnto his brethren and kynſfolkes? and haue not delyuered the into thy hande of David, and thou layeſt a treſpace to my charge this daye for a womans ſake? God do Abner this and that, yf I do not: as the LORDE hath ſworne vnto David, that the kyngdome maye be taken fro the houſe of Saul, and thy ſeate of David ſet vp ouer Iſrael and Juda, from Dan vnto Berſeba. Then coulde he not anſwere him one worde agayne, he feared him ſo.

And Abner ſent meſſaungers vnto David, ſayenge: Whoſe is the londe? And ſayde: Make thy conenant with me. Beholde, my hande ſhall be with the, to turne all Iſrael vnto the.

He ſayde: Wel, I wyll make a conenant with the, but one thyng I deſyre of the, that thou ſe not my face, excepte thou brynge me firſt Michol Sauls doughter, whan thou commeſt to ſee my face. David ſent meſſaungers alſo vnto Iſbobaſeth the ſonne of Saul, ſayenge: Give me my wyfe Michol, whom I married with an hundred foreſkynes of the Philistynes. Iſbobaſeth ſent, and cauſed for to take her from the man: Paltiſai the ſonne of Laïſ. And his huſbande wente with her, and wepte behynde her vnto Bahurim. Then ſayde Abner vnto him: Turne backe agayne, and go thy waye. And he turned backe agayne.

And Abner talked with the Elbers in Iſrael, and ſayde: Your myndes haue bene ſet afore tyme and longe agoon vpon David, that he mighte be kynge ouer you, do it now therfore, for the LORDE hath ſayde of David: I wil delyner my people of Iſrael by the hande of David my ſervant, from the hande of the Philistynes, and from the hande of all their enemies.

Abner ſpake alſo before the eares of Ben Jamin, and wente to ſpeake before the eares of David at Hebron all that Iſrael and the whole houſe of Ben Jamin was content withall. Now whan Abner came to Hebron vnto David, and twenty men with him, David made them a feaſt. And Abner ſayde vnto David: I wyll get me vp, and go gather all Iſrael together to my lord the kynge, and that they maye make a conenant with the, that thou mayeſt be kynge, at thy ſoules deſyre.

ce. And beholde, David ſeruautes and Joab came from the men of warre, and broughte a greate ſpoyle with them. And Abner was not now with David at Hebron, for he had ſent him from him, ſo that he was gone his waye in peace.

But whan Joab and all the hoſt with him was come, it was tolde him that Abner the ſonne of Ner came to the kynge, and how he had ſent him fro him, ſo that he was gone his waye in peace. Then wente Joab into the kynge, and ſayde: What haſt thou done? Beholde, Abner came to the, why haſt thou ſent him from the, that he is gone his waye? Knoweſt thou not Abner the ſonne of Ner? For he came to the to diſceuer the, that he mighte knowe thy outgoynge, and ingoynge, and to ſpie out all that thou doeſt. And whan Joab wente out from David, he ſent meſſaungers after Abner, to ſerch him agayne from Bethanſira, and David knewe notheroſ. Now whan Abner came agayne vnto Hebron, Joab brought him in to the middes vnder the gate, to talke wth him ſecretly, and thruſt him there in to the hely that he dyed, becauſe of his brother Aſahels bloude.

Whan David knewe of it therafter, he ſayde: I am vngiltye, and ſo is my kyngdome for ever before the LORDE concernynge the bloude of Abner the ſonne of Ner: but vpon the heade of Joab fall it, and vpon all his fathers houſe, and in the houſe of Joab there ceaſſe not one to haue a remynge yſſue and a leproſy, and to go vpon a ſtaffe, and fall thorow the ſwerde, and to haue ſcarneſſe of bred. Thus Joab and his brother Abiſai ſlew Abner, becauſe he had ſlayne their brother Aſahel in the battaill at Gibeon.

1. Re. 14

David ſayde vnto Joab and to all the people that was with him: Kente youre clothes, and gyrd ſack cloth aboute you, and make lamentacion for Abner. And the kynge wente after the Bere. And whan they buried Abner at Hebron, the kynge liſte vp his voyce, and wepte beſyde Abners grave, and all the people wepte alſo.

And the kynge mourned for Abner, and ſayde: Abner is not deed as a foole dyeth. Thy handes were not bounde, thy fete were not vered with fetters, thou art fallen as a man falleth before wicked vnchyuſtes. Then all the people bewayled him yet more.

Now whan all the people came in to eate with David, whyle it was yet hye daye, David ſware, and ſayde: God do this and that vnto me, yf I tauſt ether bred or oughte els afore the Sonne go downe. And all the people knewe it, and it pleased them well all that yf kyng dyd in the sighte of all the people. And all the people and all Israel perceaued the same daye, that it came not of the kyng, that Abner the sonne of Ner was slayne. And the kyng sayde vnto his seruantes: Knowe ye not that this daye a prynce and a greate man is fallen in Israel? As for me, I am yet but tender and annoynted kyng. But the men the children of Zeruia are to harde for me. The LORDE recompence him that doth euill, accordinge to his wickednes.

The iii. Chapter.

Ahan Sauls sonne herde yf Abner was deed at Hebron, his handes were feble, and all Israel was sory. But there were two men captaynes ouer the souldyers vnder the sonne of Saul, the one was called Baena, the other Rehob, sonnes of Rimmon yf Berothite, of the childre of Ben Jamin: for Beroth was coūnted also in Ben Jamin. And the Berothites were fled vnto Gethaim, and were straungers there vnto this daye. Jonathan also the sonne of Saul had a sonne which was lame on his fete, and was fyue yeare olde whan the rumoure of Saul and Jonathan came from Israel. And his noyse toke him, and fled. And whye she made haist and fled, he fell, and was lame: And his name was Mephibosheth.

Then wente the sonnes of Rimmon yf Berothite, Rehob and Baena, and came to the house of Mephibosheth, in the heate of the daye, and he laye vpon his bed at the noone daie. And they came into the house to fetch wheate, and thrust him in the bely, and gat them awaye. For whā they came into yf house, he laye vpon his bed in his chamber, and they stucke him to death, and smote of his heade, and toke his heade, and departed by the waye of the playne felde all that nighte, and broughte the heade of Mephibosheth to David vnto Hebron, and sayde vnto the kyng: Beholde, there is the heade of Mephibosheth the sonne of Saul thine enemye, which layed wayte for thy soule. This daye hath the LORDE auenged my lord the kyng of Saul and his seide.

E Then answered David vnto Rehob and Baena his brother, yf sonnes of Rimmon yf Berothite, and sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, which hath deliuered my soule out of all trouble, I toke him yf broughte me worde and sayde: Saul is deed, and he thoughte he had bene a good messaunger, and at Sichlag I put him to death, vnto whom I shulde haue geuen a rewarde for his message.

The v. Chap. Fo. xliij.

And these vngodly personnes haue slayne a righteous man in his owne house vpon his bed. Xee shulde not I requyre his bloude of youre handes, and take you awaye from yf earth: And David commaunded his yongemen, which slew them, and smote of their handes and fete, and hanged them vp by yf pole at Hebron. But the heade of Mephibosheth toke they, and buried it in Abners graue at Hebron.

The V. Chapter.

All the trybes of Israel came to David vnto Hebron, and sayde: Beholde, we are thy bone and thy flesh. And afore tyme whā Saul was kyng ouer vs, thou leddest Israel out and in. So the LORDE hath sayde: Thou shalt kepe my people of Israel, and shalt be the duke ouer Israel. And all the Elders in Israel came to yf kyng vnto Hebron. And kyng David made a covenante with them at Hebron before yf LORDE. And they annoynted David to be kyng ouer Israel. Thyrtye yeare olde was David whan he was made kyng, and reigned fortye yeares. At Hebron reigned he seuen yeares and sixe monethes ouer Iuda: but at Jerusalem he reigned thre and thirtie yeares ouer all Israel and Iuda.

And the kyng wente with his men to Jerusalem, agaynst the Jebusites, which dwelt in the londe. Neuertheles they sayde vnto David: Thou shalt not come hither but the blynde and lame shal dryue yf awaye. (They thoughte planely, that David shulde not come in.) Howbeit David wanne the castell of Sion, which is the cite of David. Then sayde David the same daye: Who so euer smyteth the Jebusites, and openeth the perquellies, the lame and the blynde, which (Jebusites) Davids soule hateth. Herof cometh the prouerbe: Let no blynde ner lame come in to the house. So David dwelt in yf castell, and called it the cite of David. And David builded roude aboute fro Millo and within. And David grewe, and the LORDE the God Zebaoth was with him.

And Hiram the kyng of Tyre sent messengers vnto David, and Cedar trees for walles, and Carpenters, and Masons, to build David an house. And David knewe, that the LORDE had confyrmed him kyng ouer Israel, and exalted his kingdome for his people of Israels sake. And David toke yet mo wyues and concubynes at Jerusalem, after he was come from Hebron, and there were yet mo sonnes and doughters borne vnto him. And these are the names of them that were borne vnto him at Jerusalem: Samma Sobab, Nathan, Salomon, Jebegar, Elisua, Nepheg, Japhia, Elisama, Eliada, Eliphalet.

And whan the Philistines herde that David was anoynted kinge ouer Israel, they were vp all to seke David. Whan David perceaued that, he wrote downe in to a castell. But the Philistynes came and scattered them selues beneth in the valley of Rephaim. And David cried at the LORDE, and sayde: Shal I go vp agaynst the philistynes? and wyle thou deliuer them in to my hande? The LORDE sayde vnto David: Go vp, I wyl deliuer the philistynes in to thy hande.

And David came vnto Baal prazim, and smote the there, and sayde: The LORDE hath denydd myne enemies, euen as the waters parte asunder: therfore is the same place called Baal prazim. And they lefte their ymagges there, but David and his men caried the awaye.

Nevertheless the philistynes wente vp agayne, and scattered them selues beneth in the valley of Rephaim. And David cried at the LORDE. The LORDE sayde: Thou shalt go vp, but compasse them behinde, that thou mayest be vpon them euer agaynst the peertrees: and whan thou hearest vpon the toppe of the peertrees, the sounde of the goinge be bolde, for then is the LORDE gone forth before the, to smyte the hoost of the philistines. David dyd as the LORDE commaunded him and smote the philistynes from Geba, tyll thou comest vnto Gaser.

The VI. Chapter.

And David gathered agayne all the yonge chosen men in Israel, euen thre thousande, and gat him vp, and wente with all the people that was with him of the ciuesins of Juda, to fetch vp the Arke of God from thence: whose name is: The name of the LORDE Zebaoth dwelleth theron betwene the Cherubins. And they caused the arke of God to be caried vps a new cart, which dwelt at Gibeon. Usa and Ahio the sonnes of Abinadab drewe y new cart. And whan they broughte it with the Arke from the house of Abinadab which dwelt at Gibeon, Ahio wente before the Arke: and David and all the house of Israel played before the LORDE, with all maner of instrumentes of pine tre, with harpes, and psalteries, and tabrettes, and belles, and Cymbals.

And whan they came to the barnesfloore of Nacon, Usa stretched out his hande, and helde the Arke of God, for the oxen were out asyde. Then waxed the wrath of the LORDE scarce agaynst Usa, and God smote him there because of his presumptiō, so that he dyed there besyde the Arke of God. Then was David sorry, because the LORDE had made soch a rente vpon Usa, and he called the same place Perez Usa vnto this daye. And David feared the LORDE the same daie, and sayde: How shall the Arke of the LORDE come vnto me? And he wolde not let it be broughte to him in to the cite of David, but caused it be brought in to y house of Obed Edom the Gathite. And whan the Arke of the LORDE had contynued thre monethes in the house of Obed Edom the Gathite, the LORDE blessed him and all his house.

And it was tolde kynge David, that the LORDE had blessed the house of Obed Edom and all that he had because of the Arke of God. Then wente he, and fetched vp the Arke of God out of y house of Obed Edom in to the cite of David with ioye. And whā they were gone sixe steppes in with the Arke of the LORDE, they offered an ox and a fat shepe. And David daunced w all his might before the LORDE, and was girded with an ouerboddy cote of lynnē. And David with all Israel brought vp y Arke of the LORDE with tabrettes and trompettes.

And whan the Arke of the LORDE came in to the cite of David, Michol the daughter of Saul looked out at a window, and sawe kynge David leapyng, sprynginge and dauncyng before the LORDE, and despyed him in hir hert. But whan they brought in y Arke of the LORDE, they set it in hir place in the myddes of the Tabernacle, which David had pitched for it. And David offered burnt offerynges and deedofferynges before y LORDE. And whan David had made an ende of offerynges the burnt offerynges and deedofferynges, he blessed the people in the name of the LORDE Zebaoth, and dealte out vnto all the people, and to the multitude of Israel, both to man & womā, vnto every one a cake of bried, and a peece of flesh, and a meece of pottage. Then wente all the people their waye, every one vnto his house.

Whan David came agayne to blesse his house, Michol the daughter of Saul wente forth to mete him, and sayde: How glorious hath the kynge of Israel bene to daye, which hath vncouered himselfe before the maydes of his seruantes, like as the rascall people discover them selues. But David saide vnto Michol: I wil playe before y LORDE, which Now whan the kyng sat in his house, and the LORDE had geuen him rest from all his enemies on every syde, he sayde vnto the prophet Nathan: Beholde, I dwell in a house of Cedar, and the Arke of God dwelleth amonge the curtaynes. Nathan sayde vnto the kyng: Go thy waye, what so ever thou hast in thine hert, y^e do: for the LORDE is wth the. But the same night came y^e worde of the LORDE vnto Nathan, and sayde: Go and speake to my seruaunt David: Thus sayeth y^e LORDE: Shalt thou buylde me an house to dwell in? I haue dwelt in no house sence the daye that I broughte the children of Israel vnto this daye, but haue walked in the Tabernacle and Habitation, whiche so ever I wente with the children of Israel. AND it fortuneth after this, & David smote & philistynes, and discomfited them, and toke the brydell of bondage out of the philistynes hande. * He smote the Moabites also to the grounde, so that he broughte two partes of them to death, and let one parte lyue. Thus the Moabites were subdued vnto David, so & they broughte him giftes.

David smote Hadad Esir also the sonne of Rehob kynge of Zoba, whan he wete to fetch his power agayne at & water Euphrates. And of them toke David a thousande & seuen hundred hoisemen, and twenty thousande fete men, and lamed all the charettes, saue an hundred which he kepte behynde. But the Siryans came from Damascon to helpe Hadad Esir kynge of Zoba. And David smote two and twenty thousande men of the Syrians, and layed people vnto Damascus in Syria.

Thus was Syria subdued vnto David, so that they broughte him giftes: for & LORDE helped David whither so euer he wente. And David toke & shylde of golde, which Hadad Esir's seruantes had, and broughte them to Jerusalem. But from Bethah & Berothai & cities of Hadad Esir toke David very moch brasse.

Whan Thoi the kynge of Zemarai herde, that David had smytten all the power of Hadad Esir, he sent his sonne Joram vnto David to salute him frendly, & to blesse him, because he had foughten with Adad Esir and smytten him (for Thoi had warre with Hadad Esir) and had Jewels with him of syluer, of golde, and of brasse: which kynge David halowed also vnto & LORDE, with the syluer and golde which he sanctified vnto the LORDE from all the Zeythē, whom he subdued, from Siria, fro Moab, from the childre of Ammon, from the philistynes, fro Amalek, from the spoyle of Hadad Esir & sonne of Rehob kynge of Zoba.

David gat him selfe a name also whan he came, * and smote eightene thousande of & Sirians in & Salt valley. And he layed people in all Edomea, * and all Edom was subdued vnto David: for the LORDE helped David, whither so euer he wente. Thus was David kynge ouer all Israell. And he executed iudgemente and righteousnes vnto all & people. * Joab & sonne of Zeruia was captayne ouer the hoost. Josaphat the sonne of

AND David sayde: Remayneth there yet eny man of Sauls house, that I maye do mercy vpon him for Jonathas sake? There was a seruant of Sauls house, named * Siba, whom they called vnto David, & the kynge sayde vnto him: Art thou Siba? He sayde: Yee thy seruant. The kynge sayde: Is there yet eny man of Sauls house, & I maye do the mercy of God vpon him? Siba sayde vnto the kynge: * There is yet a sonne of Jonathas, lame on his fete. The kynge sayde vnto him: Where is he? Siba sayde vnto & kynge: Beholde, he is at Lodober in & house of * Machir & sonne of Ammuel. The kynge sent David thither, & caused for to fetch him from Lodober out of & house of Machir the sonne of Ammuel.

Now whan Mephiboseth the sonne of Jonathas the sonne of Saul came vnto David, he fell vpon his face, & worshiped him. David sayde: Mephiboseth. He sayde: Here am I thy seruant. David sayde vnto him: Feare not, for I wyll do mercy vpon the for thy father Jonathas sake, and wil restore vnto the all the londe of thy father Saul: but thou shalt eate bred daylie at my table. He worshiped and sayde: Who am I thy seruant, that thou turnest the to a deed dogg as I am?

Then the kynge called Siba & seruant of Saul, and sayde vnto him: All & hath belonged vnto Saul & to all his house, haue I geuen to thy lordes sonne. And let Mephiboseth (saide David) eate at my table, as one of the kynges owne children. And Mephiboseth had a yōge sonne, whose name was Micha. The X. Chapter.

Ald it fortunèd after this, that þe kynge of the children of Ammon dyed, & his sonne Hanun was kynge in his steade. Then sayde Dauid: I wyll do mercy vpon Hanun the sonne of Nahas, as his father dyd mercy vpon me. And so he sent, and comforted him by his seruantes ouer his fathers death. Now whan Dauids seruantes came into the londe of the children of Ammon, the mightie men of the children of Ammon sayde vnto Hanun their lorde: Thynkest thou it is for the hono^r of þy father in þy fighte, þy Dauid hath sent comforters vnto the? Hath he not sent his seruantes vnto y (thynkest thou) to spye and search out the cite and to ouerthrowe it?

B Then toke Hanun the seruantes of Dauid, and shoue of the one halve of their beerdes, and cut of the halfe of their garmetes euen by the girdell, and so let them go. Whā this was tolde Dauid, he sent to mete them: for the men were put to greate shame. And the kynge caused to saye vnto them: Abide at Jericho, tyll your beerdes be growne, & then come agayne.

Whan the childre of Ammon sawe that they stynted in the sighte of Dauid, they sent and hyred the Syrians of the house of Rehob, and the Syrians at Soba enen twentye thousande foote men, and from the kynge of Maacha a thousande men, and from Istob twolue thousande men. Whan Dauid herde that, he sent Joab with all the hoost of þe men of warre. And the children of Ammon wente forth, and prepared them selues to þe battayll before the entraunce of the gate. But the Syrians of Soba, of Rehob, of Istob and of Maacha were alone in the felde.

C Now whan Joab sawe that the battayll was set vpoⁿ him before and behynde, he chose of all the best yonge men in Israel, & prepared him selfe agaynst the Syrians. And the resydue of the people put he vnder the hande of his brother Abisai, that he mighte prepare him agaynst the childre of Ammon. And sayde: If y Syrians be to mightie for me, helpe thou me: but yf the children of Ammon be to mightie for the, I shal helpe the. Take a good corage vnto the, and let vs be stronge for oure people, and for þe cite of oure God: neuertheles the LORDE do what pleaseth him.

And Joab made him forth with the people that was with him, to fighte agaynst the Syrians: and they fled before him. And whan the childre of Ammon sawe that the Syrians fled, they fled also before Abisai, & wente in to the cite. So Joab turned agayne from the children of Ammon, & came to Jerusalem. And whan the Syrians sawe þe they were smytten before Israel, they came together.

And Hadad Eser sent & broughte out þe Syrians beyonde the water, and conueyed their power in, & Sobath the chefe captayne of Hadad Eser wente before the. Whan this was tolde Dauid, he gathered all Israel together, & wente ouer Jordane, and came to Helam, & the Syrians prepared them selues agaynst Dauid to fighte with him, howbeit the Syrians fled before Israel. And Dauid slewe of the Syrians seue hundred charettes, & fortie thousande horsmen, & Sobath the chefe captayne smote he also, so that he dyed there. Whan the kynges which were vnder Hadad Eser, sawe, that they were smytten before Israel, they made peace with Israel, and were subdued vnto them. And the Syrians were afrayed to helpe the childre of Ammon enymore.

The XI. Chapter.

Ald whan y yeare came aboute what tyme as þe kynges vse to go forth, Dauid sent Joab and his seruantes with him, and all Israel, to destroye the children of Ammon, and to laye sege vnto Rabba: but Dauid abode at Jerusalem.

And aboute the euētyde it fortunèd that Dauid arose from his restinge place, & wente vnto þe toppe of the kynges palace, and from þe toppe he sawe a woman^e wasshinge hir selfe, and the woman was of a very fayre bewtye. And Dauid sent, and caused to aske what woman it was, and sayde: Is not that Bethseba the doughter of Eliam the wife of Urias the Hethite? And Dauid sent messengers, and caused for to fetch her. And whā she was come in vnto him, he laye with her. Neuertheles she halowed hir selfe from hir vnclemmes, and turned agayne vnto hir house. And the womā was with childe, and sent, and caused to tell David and to saye: I am with childe. David sent vnto Joab (saye ge:) Send me Uias & Hethite. And Joab sent Uias vnto David. And whan Uias came to him, David axed him yf it stode well with Joab, and with the people and with the battayll.

W And David sayde to Uias: Go downe in to thy house, and wash thy fete. And whan Uias wente out of the kynges palace, the kynges giste folowed him. And Uias layed him downe to slepe before the kynges palace gate, where all his lordes seruauntes laye, & wente not downe in to his house. Whan worde came to David: Uias is not gone downe in to his house, David sayde vnto him: Camest thou not ouer the felde? Why wentest thou not downe in to thy house? Uias sayde vnto David: The Arke and Israel & Iuda abyde in the tentes: And Joab my lord and my lordes seruauntes lye in y^e felde, and shal I go in to my house to eate and drynke, and to lye with my wyfe? As truly as thou lynest, and as truly as thy soule lyneth, I wyll not do this thinge. David sayde vnto Uias: Abyde here then to daye, to morow wil I let the go. So Uias abode at Jerusalem the same daye, and the nexte also. And David called him to eate & drynke before him, & made him drunken. And at euen he wente to lye him downe for to slepe vpon his couche with his lordes seruauntes, and wente not downe in to his house.

C On the morow wrote David a letter vnto Joab, & sent it by Uias. After this maner wrote he in the letter: Set Uias in y^e forest parte of y^e batayll, & turne yon behynde him, & he maye be slayne. Now whā Joab layed sege to the cite, he set Uias in y^e place, & he re he knewe y^e the mightiest men of Aimes were. And whan the men of the cite fell out and foughte agaynst Joab, there fell certayne of y^e people of Davids seruauntes. And Uias the Hethite dyed also.

Iud. 9. h Then sent Joab, and caused to tell y^e kynge all the matter concernynge the battayll, and comaunded the messaunger, and sayde: Whan thou hast tolde y^e kynge all the matter concernynge the batayll, and seist that he is wroth, and yf the kynge saye vnto the: Wherfore came ye so nye the cite with the batayll? The messaunger wente his waye, and came and tolde David all together, wherfore Joab had sent him. And the messaunger sayde vnto David: The men preuayled agaynst vs, and fell out vnto vs in to y^e felde: and we were open them harde at the dore of y^e porte. And the archers shot from the wall vpon thy seruauntes, and slewe certayne of the kynges seruauntes: and thy seruaunt Uias the Hethite is deed also.

David sayde vnto the messaunger: Thus shalt thou saye vnto Joab: Let not y^e venge the, for the swerde consumeth now one now another. Go forth with the battayll agaynst the cite, that thou mayest destroye it, and confite themen. And whan Uias wife herde that Uias was deed, she mourned for hir husbände. But whā she had made an ende of mournynge, David sent, and caused her be fetchd vnto his palace, and she became his wyfe, and bare him a sonne. The vertheles this dede y^e David dyd, displeased the LORDE.

The XII. Chapter.

W HED the LORDE sent Nathan vnto David. Whan he came to him, he tolde him: There were two men in one cite, the one riche, the other poore. The riche man had very many shepe and oxen: but the poore man had nothinge save one litle shepe, which he had boughte, and nourished it, so that it grewe vp with him and his children together. It ate of his bred, and drank of his cuppe, and slepte in his lappe, and he helde it as a daughter. But whan there came a straunger vnto the riche man, he spared to take of his awne shepe & oxen (to prepare oughte for the straunger that was come vnto him) and toke the poore mans shepe, and prepared it for the man that was come vnto him.

Exo. 31. 8 The was David wroth with greate displeasure agaynst that man, and sayde vnto Nathan: As truly as the LORDE lyneth, the man that hath done this, is the childe of death. The shepe also shal he make good foure folde, because he hath done soch a thinge, and not spared it.

1. Re. 15. 6 Then sayde Nathan vnto David: Thou art euen the man. Thus sayeth the LORDE the God of Israel: I have anoynted the to be kynge ouer Israel, and deliuered the out of the hande of Saul, and haue giren the y^e lordes house, and his wyues into thy

E Now therfore shal not þe swerde departe from thy house for ever, because thou hast despysed me, and taken the wife of Vias the Hethite, to be thy wyfe. Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I wyl rayse vp euell of thyne awne house, and wyl take thy wyues before thyne eyes, and wyl geue them vnto thy neighbour, so that he shall lye with thy wyues by Sonnelighte. For thou hast done it secretly, but I wyl do this in the sighte of all Israel, and by Sonnelighte.

Ecc. 47. e
Psal. 90. a

Then sayde Dauid vnto Nathan: I haue synned vnto the LORDE. Nathan sayde vnto Dauid: So hath the LORDE also taken awaye thy synne, thou shalt not dye. But for somoch as thou thorow this dede hast caused the enemies of the LORDE to blaspheme, þe sonne that is borne vnto the, shall dye the death. And Nathan wente home. As for the childe which Vias wife bare vnto Dauid, the LORDE smote it, so that it was deead sicke.

D And Dauid besoughte God for the childe, and fasted, and wente in, and laie all nyghte vpon the earch. Then rose the Elders of his house, and wolde haue taken him vp fro the ground: neuertheles he wolde not, neither ate he wth them. Vpon the seuenth daye þe childe dyed. And Dauids seruantes durst not tell him that the childe was deead. For they thoughte: Beholde, whan the childe was yet a lyue, we spake vnto him, and he hearkened not vnto oure voyce, how moch more shall it greue him, yf we saye: The childe is deead? And Dauid sawe that his seruantes made a whisperinge together, and perceaued that the childe was deead, and sayde vnto his seruantes: Is the childe deead? They sayde: Yee. Then rose Dauid vp from the earch, and washed him selfe, and anoynted him, and put on other garmentes, and wente in to the house of the LORDE, and worshipped.

E And whan he came agayne, he commaunded to set bried before him, and ate. Then sayde his seruantes vnto him: What maner of thinge is this that thou doest? Whan the childe was a lyue, thou fastedst and wepest:

but now that it is deead, thou stodest vp and eatest? He sayde: I fasted and wepte for the childe whan it was yet a lyue, for I thoughte: Who knoweth, peradventure the LORDE maye be gracious vnto me, that the childe maye lyue. But now that it is deead, wherfore shulde I fast? Can I fetch it agayne? I shal go vnto it, but it shall not come agayne vnto me. And whan Dauid had comforted Bethseba his wife, he wente in vnto her, and laye with her. And she bare a sonne, whom he called Salomon. And the LORDE loved him. And he put him vnder the haide of Nathan þe prophet, which called him Jedidia because of the LORDE.

1. Par. 3. a
Matt. 1. a

So Joab foughte agaynst Rabba of the children of Ammon, and wanne the kynge cite, and sent messagers vnto Dauid, and caused to saye vnto him: I haue foughte agaynst Rabba, and haue wonne the water cite also. Gather thou therfore the residue of the people together, and laye segeto þe cite, and wynne it, that I wynne it not, and haue the name therof. So Dauid gathered all þe people together, and wente, and foughte agaynst Rabba, and wanne it, and toke their kynge crowne fro his heade (which in weighe had a talente of golde, and precious stones) and was set vpon Dauids heade, and very moch spoyle caried he out of the cite. As for the people that was therein, he broughte them forth, and layed them vnder yron sawes and hokes and wedges of yron, and burned them in tyle ovens. Thus dyd he vnto all the cities of the children of Ammon. Then returned Dauid and all the people vnto Jerusalem agayne.

The XIII. Chapter.

Was it fortunèd after this, that Absalom þe sonne of Dauid had a fayre sister, whose name was Thamar, and Ammon the sonne of Dauid loved her. And Ammon was in greete cembraunce, in so moch that he was euensicke, because of Thamar his sister. For she was a virgin, and Ammon thoughte it shulde beharde for him to do eny thinge vnto her. But Ammon had a frende, whose name was Jonadab the sonne of Simea Dauids brother, and the same Jonadab was a very wyse man, which sayde vnto him: Why art thou so leane (thou kynge sonne) from daye to daye? Mayest thou not tell me? Then sayde Ammon vnto him: I loue Thamar my brother Absaloms sister exceedingly.

Jonadab sayde vnto him: laye the downe vpon thy bedde, and make the sicke. And whan thy father cometh to lōke how thou doest, saye vnto him: Oh let my sister Thamar come, that she maye fede me, and make a meece of meate before me, that I maye se it, & eate it of hir hande. So Ammon layed him downe, and made him selfe. Now whā the kyng came in to lōke how he dyd, Ammon sayde vnto the kyng: Oh let my sister Thamar come, and make me a syppynge or two, and that I maye eate it of hir hande. Then sent David for Thamar into the house, and sayde vnto her: Go thy waye to thy brother Ammons house, & make him a meece of meate. Thamar wente vnto hir brother Ammons house, but he laye in his bed. And she toke flour, and mixte it, and bighete it before his eyes, and made him a syppynge. And she toke the meece of meate, and poured it out before him: but he wolde not eate.

C And Ammon saide: Put forth every man from me. And every man wete forth from him. Then sayde Ammon vnto Thamar: Brynge me that meece of meate in to the chamber, that I maye eate it of thy hande. Then toke Thamar ʒ syppynge that she had made, and broughte it vnto Ammon hir brother in to the chamber.

And whan she broughte it vnto him ʒ he mighte eate, he toke holde of her, & sayde vnto her: Come my sister, lye with me. Neuertheles she saide: Oh no my brother, force me not: for so do they not in Israel, done thou soch foly. Whither shal I go with my shame? And thou shalt be as one of the vnwyse in Israel. But speake vnto the kyng, he shal not withholde me from the.

Leui. 18. 8 Howbeit he wolde not herken vnto her, and ouercame her, & forced her, and laye with her. And Ammon hated her exceedingly, so that the hate was greater then the loue was before. And Ammon sayde vnto her: Up, and get the hence.

She saide vnto him: This euell that thou thrustest me out, is greater then the other, that thou hast done vnto me. Neuertheles he herkened not vnto her, but called his boye that serued him, and sayde: Put awaye this woman from me, and locke the dore after her. And she had a partye garment on: for soch garments waye ʒ kynges doughcers whyle they were virgins.

And whā his seruante had put hir forth, & lockt the dore after her, Thamar strowed asshes vpon hir heade, and rente the partye garment which she had vpon her, and layed hir hande vpon hir heade, and wente on, and cryed. And hir brother Absalom sayde vnto her: Hach thy brother Ammon bene with the? Now holde thy peace my sister, it is thy brother, and take not the matter so to hert.

So Thamar remayned a wyddowe in hir brother Absaloms house. And whan kyng David herde of all this, he was very sory. As for Absalom, he spake nether euell ner good to Ammon: but Absalom hated Ammon, because he had forced his sister Thamar.

After two yeares had Absalom shepe clyppers at Baal Hazor, which lyeth by Ephraim. And Absalom called all the kynges children, and came to the kyng, and sayde: Beholde, thy seruante hath shepe clyppers, let it please ʒ kyng with his seruantes to go with his seruante. But the kyng sayde vnto Absalom: To my sonne, let vs not all go, lest we be to chargeable vnto the.

And he wolde nedes haue had him to go, howbeit he wolde not, but blessed him. Absalom sayde: Shall my brother Ammon go with vs then? The kyng sayde vnto him: Wherfore shall he go with the? Then was Absalom so importune vpon him, that he let Ammon and all the kynges childre go with him.

But Absalom commaunded his yonge men, and sayde: Take hede whan Ammon is mery with wyne (and I saye vnto you: Smyte Ammon, and slaye him) that ye be not afrayed: for I haue commaunded you, be strenge, and playe the men. So Absaloms yonge men dyd vnto Ammon, as Absalom had commaunded them. Then stode all the kynges children vp, and every one gat him vp vpo his Mule, and fled. And whyle they were yet on thair waye, the rumoure came to kyng David, that Absalom had slayne all the kynges children, so that not one of them was lefte.

Then stode the kyng vp, and rente his clothes, & layed him downe vpon the earth, and all his seruantes that stode aboute him, rente their clothes. Then answered Jonadab ʒ sonne of Simea Davids brother, and sayde: Let not my lorde thynke that all the yonge men the kynges children are deed, but ʒ Ammon is deed onely: for Absalom hath kepte it in him selfe sence the daie that he forced his sister Thamar. Therfore let not my lorde the kyng take it so to hert, that all the kynges children shulde be deed, but that Ammon is deed onely.

G As for Absalom, he fled. And the yonge man that kepte the watch, lifte vp his eyes, and loked, and behelde, A greace people came in the waye one after another by the hill syde. Then sayde Jonadab vnto the kyng: Beholde, the kynges children come. (Euen as thy seruante sayde, so is it happened. And whan he had ended his talkyng, the kynges children came, and lifte vp their voyce, and wepte.

The kyng and all his seruantes wepte also very sore. But Absalom fled, and wente vnto Thalmay the sonne of Ammihud kyng of Gesur. As for Dauid, he mourned for his sonne every daye. Whan Absalom was fled and gone vnto Gesur, he was there thre yere. And kyng Dauid ceassed from goynge out agaynst Absalom, for he had comforted him selfe ouer Ammon that he was deed.

The XIII. Chapter.

A Dab the sonne of Jeru Ja percecued & the kynges hert was agaynst Absalom, and sent vnto Thecoa, and caused to fetch from thence a prudent woman and saide vnto her: Make lamentacion, and weete mournynge garmentes, & anoynte the not with oyle: but sayne thy selfe as a woman which hath mourned longe ouer a deed, and thou shalt go in to the kyng, and speake so & so vnto him. And Joab tolde her what she shulde saye.

And whan the woman of Thecoa wolde speake with the kyng, she fell vpon hir face to the grounde, and worshipped, and sayde: Helpe me O kyng. The kyng sayde vnto her: What ayleth the? She sayde: I am a wedowe, a woman that mourneth, and my husbāde is deed. And thy handmayde had two sonnes, which strove together in the felde: and whyle there was noman to parte the a sunder, the one smote the other, and slewe him.

Deu. 19. c And beholde, all the whole kynted ryseth vp agaynst thy handmayden, and saye: We lyue him which hath smytten his brother, that we maye kyll him, for the soule of his brother whom he hath slayne, and that we maye destroye the heyre also. And thus are they mynded to put out my sparke, which yet is lefte, that there shulde no name ner eny thinge els remayne ouer vnto my husbāde vpon earth.

kyng: The trespase be vpon me (my lorde & kyng) and vpon my fathers house: but the kyng and his seate be vngiltye. The kyng sayde: He that speaketh agaynst the, brynge him vnto me, so shall he touch the nomore. She sayde: Let the kyng thynke vpon the LORDE his God, that there be not to many auengers of bloude to destroye, and that they brynge not my sonne to naught. He sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, there shall not one heer of thy sonne fall vpon the earth. And the woman sayde: Let thy handmayde speake somewhat to my lorde the kyng. He sayde: speake on. The woman sayde: Wherfore hast thou deuised soch a thinge agaynst the people of God? And how happeneth it that the kyng speaketh soch, to make himselfe giltye, and causeth not his owne lawe to be broughte agayne? For we all dye the death, and as the water that sinketh in to the earth, which is not taken vp. And God will not take awaye the lyfe, but vnbethynketh himselfe, & euen the very euellawes be not cleane thrust out from him.

Thus am I come also to speake this to my lorde the kyng in the prsence of the people, for thy handmayden thought: I wyll speake to the kyng, peraduenture he shall do that his handmayden sayeth, for he shall heare his handmayden, to deliuer me from the hande of all them, that wolde destroye me with my sonne from the inheritaunce of God. And thy handmayden thought, & wordes of my lorde the kyng shall be as a meat offeryng, for my lorde the kyng is as an angell of God, so that he can heare good and euell, therfore shall the LORDE thy God be with the.

The kyng answered and sayde vnto the woman: Kepe nothyng from me that I aye the. The woman sayde: Let my lorde the kyng speake on. The kyng sayde: Is not the hande of Joab with the in all this? The woman answered and sayde: As truly as thy soule lyueth (my lorde O kyng,) there is no noman nether at the righte hande ner at & lefte, but euen as my LORDE the kyng hath sayde, for thy seruante Joab hath commaunded me, and he himselfe hath taughte thy handmayden all these wordes, that I shulde turne this matter of this fasshio, this hath Joab thy seruante done. But my lorde is wyse, as the wyssdome of an angell of God, so that he knoweth all thynges vpon earth.

Then sayde the kyng vnto Joab: Beholde, I haue done this: go thy waye therfore and brynge the childe Absalom agayne.

Then fell Joab vpon his face vnto the grounde, and worshipped, and thanked the kyng, and sayde: This daye doth thy seruauit perceaue, that I haue founde grace in thy syghte my lorde the kyng, in that the kyng doth as his seruauit hath sayde. So Joab gat him vp, and wente vnto Gesur, and broughte Absalom to Jerusalem. But the kyng sayde: Let him go agayne in to his house, and not se my face. Thus Absalom came agayne to his house, and sawe not the kynges face.

But in all Israel there was not so fayre, and so marvelous goodly a man, as Absalom. From the sole of his fete vnto the toppe of his heade there was not one blemish in him. And whan his heade was rounded (that was comonly euery yere, for it was so heuy for him, so that it must nedes haue bene rounded) the heere of his heade weyed two hundred Sicles after the kynges weight. And vnto Absalom there were borne thre sonnes and one daughter, whose name was Thamar, and she was a woman of a fayre bewtye: So Absalom abode two yere at Jerusalem, and sawe not the kynges face.

¶ And Absalom sent for Joab, that he mighte sende him to the kyng. And he wolde not come to him. But he sent the seconde tyme, yet wolde he not come. Then sayde he vnto his seruantes: Ye knowe Joabs peece of londe that lyeth by myne, and he hath barlye thereon: go youre waye therfore and set fyre vpon it. So Absaloms seruantes set fyre vpon Joabs peece of londe.

Then Joab gat him vp, and came to Absalom in to the house, and sayde vnto him: Wherfore haue thy seruantes set fyre vpon my peece of londe? Absalom sayde vnto Joab: Beholde, I sent for the, and caused to saye vnto the: Come hither, that I maye sende the to the kyng, and to saye: Wherfore came I from Gesur? It were better for me that I were there yet. Let me therfore se the kynges face. But yf there be eny trespasse in me, then put me to death. And Joab wente in to the kyng, and tolde him. And he called Absalom, to come in to the kyng, and he worshipped vpon his face to the grounde before the kyng. And the kyng kysed Absalom.

tes and hoises, and fyftee men, which were his foremen. And Absalom gat him vp allwaye early in the mornynge, and stode in the waye by the porte: and whan eny man had a matter which shulde come to the kyng for indgment, Absalom called vnto him and sayde: Of what cite art thou? If he sayde then: thy seruauit is of one of the trybes of Israel, then sayde Absalom vnto him: Beholde, thy matter is righte and plaine: but there is noman appoynted of the kyng to heare the.

And Absalom sayde: O who setteth me to be iudge in y londe, that euery man which hath a plee or matter to do in y lawe, might come to me, that I might helpe him to right? And whan eny man came to him to do worshippe & to do him obeisance, he put forth his hande, and helde him & kysed him. After this maner dyd Absalom vnto all Israel whan they came to the lawe vnto the kyng, and so dyd he steale awaye the hert of y men of Israel.

After fortye yeres sayde Absalom vnto the kyng: I wil go and persourne my vowe at Hebron, which I made vnto the LORDE. For thy seruauit made a vowe, *whan I dwelt at Gesur in Siria, and sayde: Whan the LORDE bryngeth me agayne to Jerusalem, I shal do a Gods seruyce vnto the LORDE. The kyng sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace. And he gat him vp, and wente vnto Hebron.

But Absalom had sent out spyes in all the trybes of Israel, sayenge: Whan ye heare the noyse of the trompe, saye: Absalom is made kyng at Hebron. There wente with Absalom two hundred men called from Jerusalem, but they wente on symply, and knewe not of the matter. Absalom sent also for Achitophel (the Gilonite) Dauids counceiler, out of his cite Gilo. Now whan he did the sacrifice, the conspiracion was mightie and the people ranne together, and multiplied with Absalom.

Then came one which tolde Dauid, and sayde, that the hert of euery man in Israel folowed Absalom. Dauid sayde vnto all his seruantes that were with him at Jerusalem: Up, let vs fle, for here shal be no escapyng for vs before Absalom.

Make haist that we maye be goynge, lest he ouertake vs and catch vs, and dryue some myssfortune vpon vs, and smyte the cyte with the edge of the swerde. Then sayde the kynges seruantes vnto him: Loke what my LORDE y kyng doth, beholde, here are

And whan the kyng and all the people came forth on fote, they w^{er}e farre from home, and all his seruantes wente by him, and all the Chiechians and Plerhians, and all the Gethites (even sixe hundred men) which were come on fote from Gath, wente before the kyng.

And the kyng sayde vnto * Jehai & Gethite: Why goest thou also with vs? Turne backe, and hyde with the kyng, for thou art a straunger: get the hence agayne vnto thy place. Thou canest yesterdays, and to daye thou iurdest to go with vs: As for me, I wyl go whither I can: turne thou backe agayne, and mercy and faithfulness happen vnto thy brethern with the. Jehai answered, and sayde: * As truly as the L O R D E lyueth, and as truly as my lord the kyng lyueth, loke in what place my lord the kyng shalbe, (whether it chaunce to life or death) there shal thy seruant be also.

Dauid sayde vnto Jehai: Then come, and go with vs. So wente Jehai the Gethite and all his men, and the whole multitude of the children that were with him. And all the lande wepte with loude voyce, and all the people with them. And the kyng w^{er}e ouer the broke Cedron, and all the people wente ouer by the waye that goeth to the wyldernes.

And beholde, Sadoc was there also, and all the Leuites that were with them, & they bare y^e Arke of the coven^{an}t of God, and set it there. And Abiathar wente vp, tyll all the people came out of the cite. But the kyng sayde vnto Sadoc: Brynge the Arke of God into the cite agayne. If I shal fynde grace before the L O R D E, he shal seeke me agayne, and shal let me see it, and the house of it. But yf he saye thus: I haue no pleasure to y^e, beholde, here am I, let him do with me as it pleaseth him.

So Sadoc and Abiathar broughte the Arke of God agayne to Jerusalem, and remayned there.

But Dauid wente vp to mount Olyuete and wepte, & his heade was covered. And all the people that was with him, had eue-

And whan Dauid came vp to the toppe of the mount, a here the vse was to worshippe God, Chusai the Aradite met him with his cote rent, and earth vpon his heade. And Dauid sayde vnto him: If thou go with me, thou shalt be chargeable vnto me: but yf thou goest agayne in to the cite, and sayest vnto Absalom: I am thy seruant & the kyng even as I was thy fathers seruant, so wyl I now be thy seruant. * Then shalt thou brynge Achitophels counsell to naughte. So is Sadoc and Abiathar y^e prestes with the, and all that thou hearest out of the kynges house, tell it vnto Sadoc and Abiathar the prestes. Beholde, their two sonnes are with the: Ahimaas the sonne of Sadoc, and Jonathas the sonne of Abiathar, by them mayest thou sende me worde what thou hearest. So Chusai Dauids frende came in to the cite. And Absalom came to Jerusalem.

Siba sayde: The asses shalbe for the kynges h^{ou}sholde to ryde vpon, and the loaves and fygges for the yonge men to eate, and the wyne shalbe for them to drynke whan they are weery in the wyldernes. men were at his righte hande and at his left. Thus sayde Semei whan he cursed: Get the forth, get the forth thou bloody hounde, thou man of Belial. The LORDE hath rewarded the for all the bloude of the house of Saul, & thou becamest kyng in his steade. Now hath the LORDE geuen the kyngdome into y^e hande of Absalom thy sonne, and beholde, now stickest thou in thine owne myfthese, for thou art a bloody hounde.

But Abisai the sonne of Ner Ja sayde vnto the kyng: Shall this deed dogg curse my lord the kyng? I wyl go and take the head awaye from him. The kyng saide: Let children of Ner Ja, what haue I to do wth you? Let him curse on, for the LORDE hath commaunded him: Curse David. Who can saye now: Why dost thou so?

C And David sayde vnto Abisai and to all his sernauntes: Beholde, my sonne which came of my body, seeketh after my lyfe, how moch more now the sonne of Jemini? Let him curse on, for the LORDE hath commaunded him: peradventure the LORDE shall consydre my aduersyte, and recompence me good for his cursynge this daye. So David wente on his waye with his men. But Semei wente on by the mount besyde him, and cursed, and cast stones at him, & thierve clottes of earth.

And the kyng came in and all the people that was with him, weery, and refreshed himselfe there. But Absalom and all the people of the men of Israel came to Jerusalem and Achitophel with him. Whan Chusai the Arachite Dauids frende came into Absalom, he sayde vnto Absalom: God saue the kyng. God saue the kyng.

D Absalom sayde vnto Chusai: Is this thy mercy vnto thy frende? Why art thou not gone with thy frende? Chusai sayde vnto Absalom: Not so, but loke whom the LORDE choseth, and this people, and all the men in Israel, his wyl I be, and byde with him. Secondly, whom shulde I serue? Shulde I not do seruyce before his sonne? Like as I haue serued in the presence of thy father, so wyl I do seruyce before the also.

And Absalom sayde vnto Achitophel: Geue vs youre counsell what we shal do? Achitophel sayde vnto Absalom: Go lye with thy fathers concubynes, whom he hath left to kepe the house, so shall all Israel heare that thou hast made thy father to stynte, and the hande of all them that are with y^e, shal be the bolder. So whan every man is brought vnto the as thou desyrest, then shal all the people be in peace. Absalom thought that good, and so dyd all the Elders in Israel. But Absalom sayde: I praye you call Chusai the Arachite also, and let vs heare what he sayeth thereto. And whan Chusai came into Absalom, Absalom saide vnto him: Thus hath Achitophel spoken, Saye thou now, shal we do it or not?

Then sayde Chusai vnto Absalom: It is no good counsell & Achitophel hath geuen at this tyme. And Chusai sayde morouer: Thou knowest thy father well and his men, that they are stronge and of a wrothfull stomack, enen as a Beer that is robbed of hir yonge ones in the felde, Thy father also is a man of warre, and wyl not be negligēt with the people. If it came to passe then that it chaunced euell at the first, & there shulde come a rumō and saye: There is a slaughter done in the people that folowed Absalom: the shulde every man be discouraged, which els is valeaunt, & hath a hert like a lyō: for all Israel knoweth that thy father is stronge, and that all they which be with him, are mightie men. Prou. 17. 1.

But this is my counsell, that thou gather together all Israel from Dan vnto Bersaba in nombre as the sonde of the See, and go thou thine owne person amonge them, then wil we fall vpon him in what place we finde him, and wyl ouerwhelme him euen as the dew falleth vpon the earth, so that we shal not leave one of him and of all his men. But yf he resorte in to a cite, then shal all Israel cast roapes aboute the same cite, and drawe it in to the river, so that there shal not one stone of it be founde.

Then sayde Absalom and every man in Israel: The counsell of Chusai the Arachite is

* And Chusai sayde vnto Sadoc & Abiathar the prestes: Thus and thus hath Achitophel counceled Absalom and the Elders in Israel: but so and so haue I counceled. Sende now therfore in all the haist, and tell Dauid, and saye: Abyde not all night in the playne felde of the wyldernes, but get the ouer, that the kyng be not swallowed vp, and all the people that is with him. As for Jonathas and Ahimaaz, they stode by the well of Rogel, and a damsell wente thither and tolde them. They wente on their waye, and tolde kyng Dauid, for they durst not be sene to come into the cite.

But a lad sawe them, and tolde Absalom. Wherecheles they wente on their waye, and came to a mans house at Bahurim, which had a well in his courte, and they wete downe into it. And the woman toke and spred a conerynge ouer the welles mouth, & strowed firmentye corne thereon, that it was not perceaued. Now whan Absaloms seruantes came to the woman into the house, they sayde: where is Ahimaaz and Jonathas? The woman sayde vnto them: They are gone ouer the litle water.

D And whā they soughte and founde them not, they wente agayne to Jerusalem. And whan they were gone, they clymmed vp out of the well, and wente their waye, and tolde Dauid 3 kynges, and sayde vnto Dauid: Get you vp, and go soone ouer 3 water, for thus and thus hath Achitophel geuen counsell agaynst you.

Then Dauid gat him vp, and all the people that was with him, and passed ouer Jordane tyll it was cleare mornynge. And there was not one, but he wente ouer Jordane.

Whan Achitophel sawe that his counsell wente not forth, he sadled his asse, gat him vp, and wete home into his cite and put his house to poynte, and hanged him selfe, and dyed, and was buried in his fathers grane.

E And Dauid came to Mahanaim, and Absalom wente ouer Jordane, & all the men of Israel wth him. And Absalom had set Amasa ouer the hoost in Joabs steade. Amasa was the sonne of a man, whose name was Jethra a Iesraelite, which laye with Abigail the doughter of Nabal the sister of Zerai Joabs mother. But Israel and Absalom pitched in Gilead.

¶ When Dauid mistred the people 3 was with him, and set captaynes ouer the, ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes. And sent out of the people one thirde parte vnder Abisai the sonne of Zeruia Joabs brother, and one thirde parte vnder Ithai the Gethite. And the kyng sayde vnto the people: I wyll go forth with you also. Wherecheles the people sayde: Thou shalt not go forth, for though we sle, or die halfe of vs they shal not regarde vs. For thou art as ten thousande of vs. Therfore is this better that thou mayest helpe vs out of the cite. The kyngesayde: Loke what ye are contene withall, that wyl I do. And the kyng stode in the gate, and all the people wente forth by hundredes and by thousandes. And 3 kyng commaunded Joab and Abisai, and Ithai, and sayde: Intreate me the yonge man Absalom gently. And all the people herde it, whā the kyng commaunded all the captaynes concerninge Absalom. And whan the people were come forth into the felde agaynst Israel, the battayll beganne in the wod of Ephraim. And the people of Israel were smitten there before Dauids seruantes, so that there was a greate slaughter the same daye, of twentye thousande men. And the battaill was scattede abroad there in the londe. And the wod consumed much more people the same daye, then the swerde consumed.

And Absalom met Dauids seruantes, and rode vpon a Mule. And whan the Mule came vnder a greate thicke Oke tre, his heade toke holde on the Oke, and so hanged he betwene heauen and earth, but the Mule ranne awaye from vnder him. Whan a certayne man sawe that, he tolde Joab, and sayde: Beholde, I sawe Absalom hange vpon an Oke tre. And Joab saide vnto the mā 3 tolde it him: Beholde, sawest thou that, why smotest thou him not there to the grounde? so wolde I haue geuen the of myne awne behalfe ten syluerlynges and a gyrdell.

The ij. boke of the kynge.

C The man sayde vnto Joab: If thou haddest weyed me a thousande syluerlynges in my handes, yet wolde I not haue layed my handes on the kyngees sonne. For the kynge commaunded the and Abisai and Jehai before oure eares, and sayde: Kepe me the yonge man Absalom. Or yf I had bysssembled vpon the ioperdy of myne owne soule (for so moch as nothynge shulde be hyd from y^e kynge) thou thy selfe shuldest haue stode agaynst me. Joab sayde: Not so, I wil vpon him be fore thy face.

Then toke Joab thre speares in his hande, and thrust Absalom therow y^e hert, while he was yet alyue vpon the Oke. And thre yonge men Joabs weapenbearers, came abowte him, and smote him to deatch. Then blew Joab the trompe, and broughte the people agayne, that they shulde folowe nomaⁿ vpon Irael. For Joab wolde fauoure the people. And they toke Absalom, and cast hym in the wod in to a greate pytt, and layed a greete heape of stenes vpon him. And all Irael fled, every one vnto his tence.

D Absalom had set hym vp a piler whyle he was yet alyue, in hich stode in the kyngees valley, for he sayde: I haue no sonne, therefore shall this be a remembraunce of my name: and he called the piler after his owne name. And vnto this daie it is yet called Absaloms place.

Abimaas the sonne of Sadoc sayde: Let me runne now, and brynge the kynge worde, that the LORDE hath gotten him righte fro the hande of his enemies. But Joab sayde: Thou shalt brynge no good tidinges to daie another daie shalt thou brynge him worde, and not to daie, for the kyngees sonne is deed. But vnto Chusi sayde Joab: Go thou thy waye, and tell the kynge what thou hast seene. And Chusi did his obeysaunce vnto Joab, and ranne. Abimaas the sonne of Sadoc saide agayne vnto Joab: What and I ranne also? Joab sayde: What wilt thou runne my sonne? Come hither, thou shalt brynge no good tydinges. (He answered:) What and I ranne yet. He saide vnto him: Runne on y^e waye then. So Abimaas ranne the straighthe waye, and came before Chusi.

As for Dauid, he sat betwene the two gates. And the watchman wente vp to y^e toppe of the porte vpon the wall, and lifte vp his eyes, and sawe a man renninge alene, and cryed, and tolde the kynge. The kynge sayde: If he be alone, then is there good tydinges in his mouth. And as the same wente and came forth, the watchman sawe another man rennyng, and cryed in the porte and sayde: Beholde, there renneth a man alone. The kynge sayde: The same is a good messaunger also. The watchman sayde: I se the rennyng of the first as it were the rennyng of Abimaas the sonne of Sadoc. And the kynge sayde: He is a good man, and bryngeth good tidinges. Abimaas cryed, and sayde vnto y^e kynge: Peace, and worshipped before the kynge vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: Praised be the LORDE thy God, which hath geuen ouer y^e men that lifte vp their handes agaynst my LORDE the kynge.

The kynge sayde: Goeth it well with the yonge man Absalom? Abimaas sayde: I sawe a greate vpioure, whan Joab the kyngees seruaunt sent me thy seruaunt, and I wote not what it was. The kynge sayde: Go aboute, and stonde here. And he wente aboute and stode there. Beholde, then came Chusi and sayde: I brynge good tydinges my lord the kynge: The LORDE hath executed righte for the this daie, from the hande of all them that rose vp agaynst the. But the kynge sayde vnto Chusi: Goeth it well with the yonge man Absalom? Chusi sayde: Euen so go it with all the enemies of my lord the kynge, and with all them that ryse vp agaynst the to do euell, as it goeth with the yonge man. Then was the kynge sorowfull, and wente vp in to the perlet vpon the gate, and wepte, and as he wente, he sayde thus: O my sonne Absalom, my sonne, my sonne Absalom, wolde God y^e I shulde dye for the. O Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

The XIX. Chapter.

And it was tolde Joab: beholde, y^e kynge wepeth & mourneth for Absalom. And so out of y^e victory of y^e daie there came a mourninge amonge all the people. For the people had herde the same daie, y^e the kynge toke on heneley because of his sonne. And y^e people stode awaye the same daie, so that they came not in to the cite: as a people that is put to shame, pyceth them selnes awaye, whan they are fled in a battayll. As for the kyng, he had couered his face, and cryed loude, and sayde: Oh my sonne Absalom, Absalom my sonne, my sonne.

But Joab came to the kyng in to the house, and sayde: This daye hast thou shamed all thy seruantes (which haue deliuered thy soule this daye, and the soules of thy sonnes, of thy daughters, of thy wyues, and of thy concubynes) in that thou lonest them that hate the, and hatest those that loue y. For to daye thou shewest thyselfe, that thou carest not for the captaynes and seruantes: for I perceave this daye, that yf Absalom onely were alyue, and we all deed this daye, thou woldest thynke it were well.

B Get the vp now therfore, and go forth, and speake louyngly vnto thy seruantes. For I sweare vnto the by y LORD, yf thou go not forth, there shall not be leste the one man this night: this shalbe worse vnto y, then all the euell that happened the sence y youth vp hither to. The kyng gat him vp, and sat in the gate. And it was sayde vnto the people: beholde, the kyng sitteth in the gate. Then came all the people before y kyng. But Israel was fled every one vnto his rent.

And all the people strone in all the trybes of Israel, and sayde: The kyng ryd vs from the hande of oure enemies, and deliuered vs from the hande of the Philistynes, and was fayne to fle out of the lode for Absalom. So Absalom whom we had anoynted ouer vs, is deed in the battayll. Why are ye so styll now, that ye fetch not the kyng agayne?

C The kyng sent vnto Sadoc z Abiathar the prestes, z caused to saye vnto the: Speake to the Elders of Juda, z saye: Why wyl ye be the last to fetch the kyng agayne vnto his house? (for y sayenge of all Israel was come before the kyng in to his house) ye are my brechren, my bone, and my flesh. Wherfore wyl ye then be the last to brynge the kyng agayne? And saye vnto Amasa: Art not thou my bone and my flesh? God do this z that vnto me, yf thou shalt not be the chiefe captayne before me in Joabs steade, as longe as thou lyvest.

And he bowed the hert of all the men of Juda as of one man. And they sent vnto y kyng: Come agayne, thou and all thy seruantes: So the kyng came agayne. And whan he came vnto Jordane, y men of Juda were come to Gilgal, for to go downe to mete the kyng, that they mighte brynge y kyng ouer Jordane. And Semei the sonne

But Semei the sonne of Gera fell downe before the kyng, whan he passed ouer Jordane, and sayde vnto the kyng: O my lord, laye not the trespass vnto my charge, z thynke not vpon it that thy seruaut vexed the, * in the daye whan my lord the kyng wente out of Jerusalem: and let not y kyng take it to hert, for thy seruaut kneweth that he hath synned. And beholde, this daye am I come the first amonge all the house of Joseph, for to go downe to mete my lord the kyng.

Nevertheless Abisai the sonne of Ner answered and sayde: And shulde not Semei dye therfore, seynge he hath cursyd y anoynted of y LORD? But David sayde: What have I to do with you ye children of Jeru-Ja, that ye wyl become Sathan vnto me this daye? Shulde eny man dye this daye in Israel? Thynkest then that I knowe not, y I am become kyng ouer Israel this daye? And y kyng sayde vnto Semei: Thou shalt not dye. And the kyng swore vnto him.

Mephiboseth the sonne of Saul came downe also to mete the kyng. And he had not made cleane his fete ner combed his beard, nether had he wasshed his clothes from the daye that the kyng was gone awaye, vntyll the daye that he came agayne in peace. Now whan he came to Jerusalem for to mete the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto him: Mephiboseth, wherfore wentest thou not with me? And he sayde: My lord O kyng, my seruaut hath dealede vnrightheously with me: for thy seruaut thoughte: I wil saddell an asse and ryde thereon, and go vnto the kyng: for thy seruaut is lame, and he hath accused thy seruaut before my lord y kyng. * But my lord y kyng is an angell of God, and thou mayest do what pleaseth the. For all my fathers house was nothyng, but people of beath before my lord y kyng. * And yet hast thou set thy seruaut amonge them that eate at y table. What other rightheousnes haue I, that I shulde crye eny more vnto the kyng? The kyng sayde vnto him: What speakest thou yet more of thy mat-

S And Barsillai the Gileadite came downe from Roglim, and broughte the kyng ouer Jordane, that he mighte coueye him in Jordane. And Barsillai was very olde, so good as foure score yere olde, & the same had prouyded y^e kyng of fode whyle he was at Mahanaim, for he was a very noble man. And the kyng sayde vnto Barsillai: Thou shalt go ouer with me, I wyll take care for the & myne a wne selfe at Jerusalem. But Barsillai sayde vnto the kyng: What haue I yet to lyue, that I shulde go vp to Jerusalem wth the kyng? This daye am I foure score yere olde. How shulde I knowe what is good or euell, or taist what I eate or drynke, or heare what the Musicians do synge? Why shulde thy seruaunt be chargeable first vnto my lord the kyng? thy seruaunt shall go a litle with the kyng ouer Jordane. Why wil the kyng recompence me after this maner? Let thy seruaunt turne backe agayne, that I maye dye in my cite besyde my father and my mothers graue. Beholde, there is thy seruaunt Chimeam, let him go ouer with my lord the kyng, and do vnto him what pleaseth the.

W The kyng sayde: Chimeam shal go ouer with me, and I wyll do for him what liketh the: and what so ener thou desyrest of me, that wyll I do for the also. And when all y^e people was gone ouer Jordane and the kyng likewise, the kyng kysed Barsillai and blessed him, and he turned vnto his place. And y^e kyng passed ouer vnto Gilgal, and Chimeam wente with him. And all the people of Juda broughte the kyng ouer, howbeit there was but halfe of the people of Israel there.

And beholde, the came all the men of Israel vnto the kyng, & sayde vnto him: Why haue oure brethren the men of Juda stollen the awaye, and haue conueyed y^e kyng and his housholde ouer Jordane, and all Davids men with him? Then answered they of Juda vnto them of Israel: The kyng is of oure nye kynred, why are ye angry therfore? Thynke ye that we haue receaued eny fode or giftes of the kyng? Then answered they of Israel vnto them of Juda, & sayde: We haue ten tymes more with the kyng and with David, the thou, why hast thou regarded me then so lightly, that oures were not the first to fetch oure kyng agayne? But they of Juda spake harder then they of Israel.

The XX. Chapter.

There was a famous man of Belial there, whose name was Seba y^e sonne of Bichri, a mā of Jemini, which blew the trompe, and sayde: * We haue no porcion in David, ner inheritance in y^e sonne of Isai: let every get him to his tent, O Israel. Then fell euery man in Israel from David, and folowed Seba the sonne of Bichri. But the men of Juda cleued vnto their kyng from Jordane vnto Jerusalem. When David came home to Jerusalem, he toke the ten concubynes (* whom he had lefte to kepe the house) and put them in a holde to be kept, and made prouysion for them: but he laye not with them, and so were they shut vp vnto their death, and lyncd wedowes.

And y^e kyng sayde vnto Amasa: Call me all the men of Juda together agaynst the thirde daye, & be thou here present also. And Amasa wrote to call Juda together. And he was slacke to come at y^e tyme which he had appoynted him. And David sayde vnto Abisai: Now shall Seba the sonne of Bichri do vs more harme then Absalom. Take thou y^e lordes seruantes, and folowe vpon him, y^e he fynde not some stronge cities for him, and so escape out of oure sight. Then wente Joab wth him forth after him, and the Cherethians and Plethians, and all the mightie mē: and they wrote out of Jerusalem to folowe vpon Seba the sonne of Bichri.

But when they were by the greete stone at Gibeon, Amasa came before them. As for Joab, he was gyrded aboue his garment which he had on, and vpon it he had a swerde gyrded, which hanged by his thye in the sheeth, and wente casely out and in, and fell fro him. And Joab sayde vnto Amasa: Peace be with the my brother. And Joab toke Amasa by the beerde with his righte hande, to kysse him. And Amasa toke no hede vnto y^e swerde in Joabs hande, and he thrust him therewith in to the bely, y^e his bowels ranne out vpon the earth, and he thrust at him no more. And so he dyed.

Joab & his brother Abisai folowed vpon Seba y^e sonne of Bichri. And ene of Joabs seruantes stode by him, and sayde: What is he this y^e wolde be agaynst Joab to please David, and to be with David in Joabs steade? As for Amasa, he laye rolled in the bloude in y^e myddes of the strete. But whā one sawe that all the people stode there still, he remoued Amasa from the strete vnto the felde, and cast a clothe vpon him, for so moch as he sawe, that whoso euer came by him, stoode styll. Now whan he was put out of the waye, everyman wote after Joab, to folowe vpon Seba the sonne of Bichri.

And he wente thorow all þe trybes of Israel vnto Abel Beth Maacha, and all the best chosen men gathered them selues together, & folowed after him, and came and beseged him at Abel Beth Maacha, and made a banke aboute to crite harde on þe wall. And all the people that was with Joab, layed to their ordynance, and wolde haue cast downe the wall.

Then cried there a wyse womā out of þe cite: Heare, heare, saye vnto Joab that he come hither, I wyl speake with him. And whā he came to her, the woman sayde: Art thou Joab? He sayde: Yee. She sayde vnto him: Heare the wordes of thy handmayden. He sayde: I heare. She sayde: The comon sayenge was somtyme: Whoso wyll are, let him are at Abel, and so came it to a good ende.

D This is þe noble and faithfull cite in Israel, and wilt thou destroye the cite and the mother in Israel? Why wilt thou swallowe vp the inheritaunce of the LORDE?

Joab answered and sayde: That be farre, that be farre frome, that I shulde swallowe vp and destroye. The matter is not so, but a certayne man of mount Ephraim named Seba the sonne of Bichri, hath lifte vp himselfe agaynst kynge Dauid, deliuer him onely, and I wyl departe from the cite. The woman sayde vnto Joab: Beholde, his heade shal be cast vnto the ouer the wall. And the woman came in to all the people with hir wyssdome. And they smote of the heade of Seba the sonne of Bichri, and cast it vnto Joab. Then blew he the trompe, and they departed from the cite, every one vnto his tent. But Joab came agayne to Jerusalem vnto the kynge.

1. Re. 8. c * Joab was capayne ouer all the hoost of Israel: Benaiā þe sonne of Joiada was ouer the Chieftians and Plethians: Adoram was rent gatherer: Josaphat the sonne of Ahilud was Chaunceler: Seia was the scribe: Sadoc and Abiathar were the prestes: Ira also þe Jairite was Dauids prest.

1. Re. 22. d A Here was a verth also in Dauids tyme thre yeaeres together. And Dauid soughte the face of þe LORDE. And the LORDE sayde: Because of Saul and because of that bloudy housholde, þe he slewe the Gibeonites. Then the kynge caused for to call the Gibeonites, and spake vnto them. (As for the Gibeonites, they were not of þe children of Israel, but a remnant of the Amontes: howbeit the children of Israel had sworne vnto the, and Saul soughte for to smyte them in his gelousy, for the childre of Israel and Iuda.) Then sayde Dauid to the Gibeonites: What shal I do vnto you? And where withall shal I make the attonement, that ye maye blesse þe inheritaunce of þe LORDE? The Gibeonites sayde vnto him: It is not for golde and syluer that we haue to do wth Saul and his house, nether haue we oughte to do for to slaye eny mā in Israel.

He sayde: What saye ye then, that I shal do vnto you? They sayde vnto þe kynge: The man that hath destroyed vs and broughte vs to naughte, shulde we destroye, that nothinge be lefte him in all the coastes of Israel. Let there be geuen vs seven men of his sonnes, that we maye hange them vp vnto the LORDE at Gibeon of Saul the chesen of the LORDE. The kynge sayde: I wyl geue them. Howbeit the kynge spared Mephiboseth þe sonne of Ionathas þe sonne of Saul, because of the ooth of the LORDE þe was betwene them: namely, betwene Dauid & Ionathas the sonne of Saul. But the two sonnes of Kispa y^e doughter of Aia, whom she had borne vnto Saul, Armoni & Mephiboseth, And the fyue sonnes of Michol the doughter of Saul, whom she bare vnto Adriel the sonne of Barzillai the Mahalothite, dyd the kynge take, and gaue them in to the handes of þe Gibeonites, which hanged the vp vpo^s the mount before the LORDE.

C So these seven fell at one tyme, and dyed in the tyme of the first harvest, whan þe barley harvest begynneth. Then toke Kispa the doughter of Aia a sack cloth, & spred it vpon the rock in the begynnyng of the harvest, tyll the water from the heauen dropped vpo^s them, and suffred not the soules of the heauen to rest on them on the daye tyme, nether the wyld beasts of the felde on the nyghte season. And it was tolde Dauid what Kispa the doughter of Aia Sauls concubine had done.

And Dauid wente and toke the bones of Saul and the bones of Ionathas his sonne from þe ciresens at Jabes in Gilead (which they had stollen from þe strete at Bethsan, where þe Philistynes had hanged the, what tyme as the Philistynes had smytten Saul vpon mount Gilboa) and broughte them vp from thence, and gathered them together wth the bones of them that were hanged. the bones of Saul and of his sonne Jonathas buried they in y^e londe of Ben Jamin, besyde y^e graue of his father Cis. So after this was God at one with the londe.

But there arose warre agayne of y^e Philistynes agaynst Israel. And David wente downe z his seruantes with him, z foughte agaynst the Philistynes. And David was weery, z Jesbi of Nob (which was one of the children of Rapha, and the weight of his speare was thre C. weight of brasse, and had a new harnessse vpon him) thoughte to smyte David. Neutcheles Abisai the sonne of Jeru Ja helped him, z smote the Philistyne to death. Then swaie Davids men vnto him, z sayde: 'Thou shalt nomore go forth with vs vnto the warre, that the lanterne in Israel be not put out.

'Afterwarde there arose yet warre at Nob with the Philistynes. Then Sibechai the Gushathite smote Gaph, which also was one of the childre of Rapha.

And there arose yet warre at Gob with the Philistynes. Then Elhanan the sonne of Jaere Virgin a Bethleemite smote Goliath the Gethite, which had a speare, whose shaft was like a weeners lome.

And there arose yet warre at Gath, where there was a cōtencious man, which had sixe fyngers on his handes, and sixe toes on his fete, that is foure and twety in the nombre, and he was boine also of Rapha. And whan he spake despicefully vnto Israel, Jonathas y^e sonne of Simea Davids brother smote him. These foure were boine vnto Rapha at Gath, and fell thorow the hande of David and of his seruantes.

When I was in treuble, I called vpo the LORDE, yee euen my God called I vpon, z

so he herde my voyce fro his holy temple, z my cōplaynte (came) in to his eares.

The earth trembled and quated, the foundations of the heauen shoke and moued, because he was wroth.

Smoke wente vp from his nose, and consuminge fyre out of his mouth, coles were kyndled therof.

He bowed the heauens and came downe, and it was darke vnder his fete.

He sat vpon Cherub and dyd flye, and appeared vpon the fethers of the wynde.

He made darknes his payllion rounde aboute him, thicke water in the cloudes of y^e ayre.

At the brightnesse of him were the fyre coles kyndled.

The LORDE thondered from heauē, and the hyest put forth his voyce.

He shot his arrowes, and scattered them: he lightened, and discomfited them.

The pourynges out of the See were sent, and the foundations of the earth were discovered at the chydunge of the LORDE, z at the breth of the spere of his wiath.

He sent downe from aboue, and receaued me, and dide me out of many waters.

He deliuered me fro my stronge enemye, from them that hated me, for they were to mightie forme.

They overtok me in the tyme of my tronble, but the LORDE was my succoure.

He brought me forth in to liberty: he deliuered me, because he had a fauoure vnto me.

The LORDE shal rewarde me after my righteousnes, and accordinge to the clenness of my handes shal he recompence me.

For I haue kepte y^e waye of the LORDE, z haue not bene vn godly agaynst my God.

For I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, and haue not put his ordinances fro me.

Therefore wil I be perfecte vnto him, and wyl shue myne awne wickednes.

So shal y^e LORDE rewarde me after my righteousnes, accordinge to the clenness of my handes in his eye sight.

With the holy shalt thou be holy, and with the perfecte thou shalt be perfecte.

With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou shalt be frowarde.

For thou shalt saue the poore oppressed people, and shalt set thine eyes agaynst the proude to brynge them downe.

For thou O LORDE art my lanterne. The LORDE shal lighie my darknesse.

For in y^e I shal discōfite an host of men, z in my God I shal leape ouer the wall.

The ij. boke of the kyniges.

E The waye of God is perfecte: & wordes of the LORDE are tryed in the fyre: he is a shyld for all the that put their trust in him.

For where is there a God, excepte & LORDE? Or who hath eny strength without oure God?

God hath strenghted me with power, and made playne a perfecte waye for me.

He hath made my fete like hartes fete, & hath set me vp an hie.

He teacheth my handes to fighte, and beneth the stele bowe with myne armes.

And thou hast geuen me the shyld of & health, and with & lounge correccion shalt thou multiplie me.

Thou hast enlarged my goinge vnder me, and myne ankles haue not slyded.

I wyl folowe vpon myne enemies, and destroye the: and wyl not turne backe agayne, tyll I haue broughte them to naught.

I wil consume them and thrust them thorow, that they come not vp: they shal fall vnder my fete.

Thou hast girded me with strength to & battayll, and hast subdued them vnder me & rose vp agaynst me.

Thou hast made myne enemies to turne their backs vnder me, that I might destroye them that hate me.

They shal crye, but there shalbe no Sauioure: yee euen vnto the LORDE, but he answereth them not.

I wil beate them as small as the dust of the earth: euen as & claye of the stretes wil I make them thynne, and spiede them out abroad.

But me shalt thou deliuer from the strynges of the people, and shalt kepe me to be y heade of the heythen: A people whom I haue not knowne, shal serue me.

G The straunge children haue denyed me: at the hearynge of the eare shal they herkẽ vnto me.

The straunge children are waken olde, & are shut vp in their prisons.

The LORDE lyueth, and blessed be my God, and magnified be the strength of my health.

God seyth that I be auenged, and subdueth the people vnto me.

He bryngeth me out fro myne enemies: & from them & ryse vp agaynst me, shalt thou exalte me, and from & cruell man shalt thou deliuer me.

Rom. 15. 8 * For this cause wyl I geue thankes vnto the amonge the heythen, and synge prayses vnto thy name.

David the sonne of Isai sayde. The man, that was set vp to be & anoynted of the God of Jacob, & a pleasaunt dyter of songes of Israel, sayde: The spere of the LORDE hath spoken by me, and the vterance therof is done thorow my tunge. He sayde: The God of Israel hath spokẽ vnto me, the strength of Israel, the gouernoure amonge men, the righteous gouernoure in the feare of God. As the lighte is in & mornynge whan the Sonne aryseth, so that for the brightnesse therof no cloude remayneth: and as the grasse loketh vpon the earth thorow the rayne, euen so shal my house be with God. * For he hath made an euertlasting co-

The brake the thre Worthies into the hoost of the philistynes, and drue of the water out of the well at Bethleem vnder & gate, & carried it & broughte it vnto Dauid: neuertheles he wolde not drynke it, but offered it vnto the LORDE, & sayde: The LORDE let this be farre from me, that I shulde do it. Is it not the bloude of the men that ioperded their lyues, and wente thither? And he wolde not drynke it. This dyd the thre Worthies.

D * Abisai & brother of Joab the sonne of Jeru Ja was one also chese amōge thre. He lifte vp his speare & smote thre hundreth, & was an awncient man amōge thre, & the noblest amōge thre, & was their ruler. He smote also a fyre goodly man of. Egipte, which had a speare in his hande. But he wete downe to him with a staffe, and toke the speare out of the Egiptians hande by violence, and slewe him with his owne speare. This dyd Benaia the sonne of Joiada, and was a famous man amōge thre Worthies, and more honorable then the thirtie, but he came not vnto the thre. And Dauid made him of his secreete counsell.

Asahel the brother of Joab is amōge & thirtie: Elham his vnckles sonne at Bethleem. The XXIII. Chapter.

The xxiii. Chap.

Wid the LORDE was wrothfully displeased of & new agaynst Israel, and moved Dauid amōge them, because he saide: Go, nombre Israel and Juda. And the kyng sayde vnto Joab & chese captaene of his hoost: Go aboute in all the trybes of Israel, from Dan vnto Bersēba, and nombre the people, that I maye knowe how many they be. Joab sayde vnto the kyng: The LORDE thy God adde vnto this people an hundreth tymes as moch as it is now, that my lord the kyng maye se his eyes lust theron. But why hath my lord the kyng a desyre to this thinge? Neuertheles the kynges worde preuayled agaynst Joab and the captaenes of the hoost.

So Joab and & captaenes of the hoost wente forth from the kyng, to nombre the people of Israel, and passed ouer Jordane, and pitched at Arzer, at the righte hande of the cite which lyeth in & ryuer of Gad, and at Jaser, & came to Gilead, and in the lowe countre of Hadsi, and came vnto Dan Jaan, and aboute Sidon, and came to the stronge cite of Tyrus, and all the cities of the Hewites and Cananites, and came forth to the south parte of Juda vnto Bersēba, and wete rounde aboute that countre, and after nyne monethes and twenty daies they came to Jerusalem. And Joab delynered vnto & kyng the summe of the people that was nombred. And in Israel there were eight C. the thousande stronge men, that drue out the swerde: and in Juda fyue hundreth thousande men. And after that the people was nombred, Dauid hert smere him selfe. And Dauid sayde vnto & LORDE: I haue synned sore, that I haue done this. And now LORDE take awaie the trespase of thy seruaunt. For I haue done very vnwysely.

And whan Dauid rose vp in the mornynge, the worde of the LORDE came vnto the prophet Gad, Dauids Seer, & sayde: Go & speake vnto Dauid. Thus sayeth the LORDE: I bringe the thre thinges, chose the one of them, that I maye do it vnto the. Gad came vnto Dauid, and tolde him, and sayde vnto him: Wilt thou that seven yere derth shall come in to thy londe? Or that thou be fayne to fflye before thine aduersaries thre monethes, and they to persecute the? Or that there be pestilence thre dayes in the londe? Take aduysment therfore and se. what answer I shal bringe agayne vnto him & sentme.

Dauid sayde vnto Gad: I am in extrenie trouble. * Neuertheles (yf it maye be) let me rather fall in to & handes of the LORDE (for

D So the LORDE sent pestilence into Israel from the morow vnto the tyme appoynted, so that there dyed of the people from Dan vnto Berseba, thre score and ten thousande men. And whan the angel stretched his hande ouer Jerusalem to destroye it, the LORDE repented ouer the euell, and sayde vnto the angell: It is ynough, holde now thy hande. The angell of the LORDE was besyde the barne of Arafa the Jebusite. But whan Dauid sawe the angell that smote the people, he sayde vnto the LORDE: beholde, It is I that haue synned, I haue done the trespasse: As for these shepe, what haue they done? Oh let thy hande be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house.

And Gad came to Dauid at the same tyme, and saide vnto him: Go vp, and set vp an altare vnto the LORDE in y^e barne of Arafa the Jebusite. So Dauid wote vp as Gad sayde, and as the LORDE had commaunded.

E And whā Arafa loked aboute him, he sawe the kynge with his sernautes goinge vnto him, and he worshipped vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: Wherfore commaundeth my lord y^e kynge vnto his sernaunt? Dauid sayde: To bye the barne of the, and to buylde an altare vnto the LORDE, that the plage maye cease from the people.

But Arafa sayde vnto Dauid: Let my lord the kynge take it, and offre what pleasech him. Beholde, there is an oxe for a burnt offerynge, and sleddes, and vessels of oren to the wodd. All this gaue Arafa vnto the kynge. And Arafa sayde vnto y^e kynge: The LORDE thy God make the accepted vnto him. Neuertheles y^e kynge sayde vnto Arafa: Not so, but I wyll bye it of the for as moch as it is worth. For I wyl not offre burnt offerynges vnto y^e LORDE, of y^e which I haue for naughte. So Dauid boughte the barne and the oxe for fiftye Sicles of syluer, and buylde an altare there vnto the LORDE, and offred burnt offerynges & dede offerynges. And the LORDE was mercifull vnto y^e lande, and y^e plage ceased from the people of Israel.

And whā Kinge David was olde & well strycke in age, he coulde not be warme, though he was couered with clothes. Then sayde his seruantes vnto him: Let vs seke a yonge damsell a virgin for oure lorde the kynge, to stonde before the kynge, and to nourish him, & to slepe in his armes, and to warme oure lorde the kynge. And they sought a fayre dāsell in all the coastes of Israel, and founde Abisag of Sunem, and brought her vnto the kynge. And she was a very fayre damsell, and nourished the kynge, and serued him. Howbeit the kynge knewe her not.

Adonias the sonne of Hagith lifte vp himselfe, and sayde: I wyl be kynge. And he prepared him charettes and horsmen, and systie men to be renners on fote before him. And his father reprimed him not therfore, so much as to saye: Wherfore dost thou so? And he was a man of a very fayre bewtye, and he had begotten him nexte after Absalō. And his matter stode by Joab the sonne of Zeruija and by Abiathar the prest, which helped Adonias. But Sadoc the prest, and Benaia the sonne of Joiada, and Nathan the prest and Semei and Rei, and Davids Worthies were not with Adonias.

And whā Adonias offred shepe and oxē, and fat catell besyde the stone of Sobeelech, which lyeth by the well of Rogel, he called all his brethren the kynges sonnes, and all the men of Juda the kynges seruantes. But the prophet Nathan and Benaia, and the Worthies, and his brother Salomon called he not. Then sayde Nathan vnto Bethseba Salomons mother: Hast thou not herde that Adonias is kynge, and oure lorde David knoweth not therof? Come now therfore, I wyl geue the counsell, that thou mayest deliuer thy soule and the soule of thy sonne Salomon. Come now and go in to Kinge David and saye vnto him: Hast not thou my lorde the kynge sworne and sayde vnto thy handmayden: Salomon thy sonne shall be kynge after me, and he shall sytt vpon my seate? Why is then Adonias made kynge? Beholde, while thou art yet there, and talkest with the kynge, I wyl come in after the, and tell forth thy tale. And Bethseba wente in to the kynge to the chamber. And the kynge was very olde. And Abisag of Sunem serued the kynge. And Bethseba bowed herselfe, and worshipped the kynge.

The kynge sayde: What wilt thou? She sayde vnto him: My lorde, Thou hast sworne vnto thy handmayde by the LORDE thy God: Thy sonne Salomon shall be kynge after me and syt vpon my seate. But now lo, Adonias is kynge, and my lorde the kynge knoweth it not. He hath offred oren and fat catell, and many shepe, and hath called all the kynges sonnes, and Abiathar the prest, and Joab the chiefe captayne. But thy seruant Salomon hath he not bydden. Neuertheles thou my lorde art kynge, the eyes of all Israel loke vnto the, that thou shuldest shewe them who shall syt vpon the seate of my lorde the kynge after the. And whā my lorde the kynge slepeth with his fathers then shal I and my sonne Salomon be sayne to be synners.

But whyle she yet spake to the kynge, the prophet Nathan came, and she tolde the kynge: beholde, there is the prophet Nathan. And whan he came in before the kynge, he worshipped the kynge vpon his face to the grounde, and sayde: My lorde the kynge, hast thou saide: Adonias shal be kynge after me, & syt vpon my seate? For he is gone downe this daye, and hath offred oren, and fat catell, & hath called all the kynges sonnes, and the captaynes, and the prest Abiathar. And beholde, they eate and drynke before him, and saye: God save the kynge Adonias. But me thy seruant, and Sadoc the prest, and Benaia the sonne of Joiada, and thy seruant Salomon hath he not called. Hath my lorde the kynge commaunded this, and not certified his seruantes who shall syt vpon the seate of my lorde the kynge after him?

The kynge answered and saide: Call Bethseba vnto me. And she came in before the kynge. And whan she stode before the kynge, the kynge swore and sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth (which hath deliuered my soule out of trouble,) I wyl do vnto the this daye, even as I swore vnto the by the LORDE the God of Israel, so that Salomon thy sonne shalbe kynge after me, and he shal sit vpon my seate in my steade.

Then Bethseba bowed hir selfe with hir face to the grounde, and thanked the kynge and sayde: God save my lorde kynge David for evermore. And the kynge sayde: Call me the prest Sadoc & the prophet Nathan, and Benaia the sonne of Joiada.

And whan they came in before the kyn-

Then answered Benaiia the sonne of Joiada vnto the kynge, & sayde: Amen. The LORDE God of my lord the kynge saye thus also. As the LORDE hath bene with my lord the kynge, so be he with Salomon also, that his seate maye be greater then the seate of my lord kynge Dauid.

Then wente they downe, the priest Sadoc and the prophet Nathan, and Benaiia the sonne of Joiada, and the Chierchians, & plethians, & set Salomon vpon kynge Dauids Mule, & broughe him to Gihon. And Sadoc the priest toke the oyle home out of the Tabernacle, and anoynted Salomon. And they blew the trompe: And all y people sayde: God saue kynge Salomon.

I And all the people wente vp after him, and the people pyped with pypes, and was very ioyfull, so that the earth range at the noyse of them. And Adonias herde it, and all they whom he had called, which were wth him, and they had new eaten. And whan Joab herde the noyse of the trompe, he sayde: What meaneth this noyse of the cite and this busynes? But whyle he yet spake, beholde, Jonathas the sonne of Abiathar y priest came.

And Adonias sayde: Come in, for thou art a valeaunt man, and bryngeest good eydinges. Jonathas answered and sayde vnto Adonias: Alas, o lord kynge Dauid hath made Salomon kynge, and hath sent with him Sadoc the priest, and the prophet Nathan, and Benaiia the sonne of Joiada, and the Chierchians and Plethians, and they haue set him vpon the kynges Mule: and Sadoc y priest with the prophet Nathan hath anoynted him kynge at Gihon, and from thence are they gone vp with ioye, that the cite range with all: that is the noyse that ye haue herde.

S Salomon also syttech vpon the kynges seate, and the kynges seruauntes are gone in to wyssh good lucke vnto ouer lord kynge Dauid, and haue sayde: Thy God make Salo-

Then were they afrayed, and gate them vp all that were called by Adonias, and so they departed euery man his waye. But Adonias was afrayed of Salomon, and gat him vp, and wote his waye, & toke holde of y homes of y altare. And it was tolde Salomon: beholde, Adonias feareth kynge Salomon, & beholde, he taketh holde of the hornes of y altare, & sayeth: Let kige Salomon sweare vnto me this daye, that he shall not slaye his seruaunt with the swerde. Salomon sayde: If he wil be an honest man, there shall not one heer fall from him vpon the earth: but yf there be euell founde in him, he shall dye. And kynge Salomon sent, and caused him to be fetched from the altare. And whan he came, he fell downe before kynge Salomon. But Salomon sayde vnto him: Go y waye in to thy house.

And to the children of Barsyllai the Gileadite, thou shalt shewe mercy, that they maye eat at thy table. For so ioued they the selues vnto me, when I fled before thy brother Absalom. * So Dauid slepte with his fathers, and was buried in the cite of Dauid. The tyme that Dauid was kynge ouer Israel, is fortie yeare. Seven yeares was he kynge at Hebron and thre and thirtie yeare at Jerusalem. And Salomon sat vpon the seate of Dauid his father, and his kyngdome was made verie sure.

But Adonias the sonne of Hagith came in to Bethseba Salomons mother. And she sayde: Is thy commynge peaceable? He spake: Yee, and sayde: I haue somewhat to saye to the. She sayde: Saye on. He sayde: Thou knowest that the kyngdome was myne, and that all Israel had sette them selues vpon me, that I shulde be kynge, but now is the kyngdome turned, and become my brothers: for he hath it of the LORDE.

Now desyre I one peticion of the, Make not my face ashamed. She sayde vnto him: Saye on. He sayde: Speake vnto kynge Salomon (for he shall not shame thy face) that he maye geue me Abisag to wyfe. Bethseba sayde: Wel, I wil speake to the kynge for the.

And Bethseba came in to kynge Salomon to speake with him. And the kynge stode vp, and wente to meete her, and worshipped her, and sat him downe vpon his seate. And there was a chayre set for the kynges mother, so that she sat at his righte hande. And she sayde: One peticion desyre I of the make not my face ashamed. The kynge sayde: Aye O my mother, I wyl not shame thy face. She saide: Let Abisag of Sunem be geuen thy brother Adonias to wyfe.

Then answered kynge Salomon, and saide vnto his mother: Why desyrest thou Abisag of Sunem for Adonias? Aye the kyng-

And the kynge swaie by the LORDE, and sayde: God do this and that vnto me, Adonias shall haue spoken this agaynst his lyfe. And now as truly as the LORDE lyuerh which hath ordeyned me, and made me to sit vpon the seate of my father Dauid, and hath made me a house (* acordynge as he sayde) this daye shal Adonias dye.

And kynge Salomon sent thither by Benaiathe sonne of Joiada, which smote him that he dyed. And to the prest Abiathar sayde y kynge: Go thy waye vnto Anathoth to thy londe, for thou art a man of deeth. Neuerthelesse I wyl not slaye the this daye for thou hast borne the Arke of the LORDE God before my father Dauid, and hast suffered also where my father suffered.

Thus Salomon put forth Abiathar, that he must nomore be the prest of the LORDE, that the worde of the LORDE mighte be fulfilled, * which he spake ouer the house of Eli at Silo.

And this rumoure came before Joab: for Joab cleued vnto Adonias, and not vnto Salomon. Then fled Joab into the Tabernacle of the LORDE, and toke holde of the hornes of the altare. And it was tolde kynge Salomon, that Joab was fled into the Tabernacle of the LORDE, and beholde, he stondeth at the altare.

Then sent Salomon Benaiathe sonne of Joiada, and sayde: Go slaye him. And when Benaiathe came to the Tabernacle of the LORDE, he sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the kynge: Come forth. He sayde: No, I wyl dye here. And Benaiathe tolde this vnto the kynge agayne, and sayde: Thus hath Joab spoken, and thus hath he answered me.

The kynge saide vnto him: Do as he hath spoken, and slaye him, and bury him, that thou mayest put frome me and my fathers house the bloude which Joab hath shed with out a cause, and that the LORDE maye recompence him his bloude vpon his heade, because he smote two men, which were more righteous and better then he, and slewe them with y swerde that my father Dauid knewe not of: namely, * Abner y sonne of Ner the chiefe captaine ouer Israel, & Amasa the sonne of Jether y chiefe captaine ouer Iuda y their bloude maye be recompensed vpo y heade of Joab and of his seide for euer: but Dauid and his seide, his house and his seate

And the kyng sent, and caused for to call Semei, and sayde vnto him: Buylde the an house at Jerusalem, and dwell there, and departe not from thence, nether hither ner thither. In what daye so ever thou departest forth, and goest ouer ⁊ broke Cedron, be thou sure, that thou shalt dye the deeth: thy bloude be vpon thy heade. Semei sayde vnto the kyng: This is a good meanynge, as my lord the kyng hath sayde, so shal thy seruant do. So Semei dwelt at Jerusalem a longe season. But after thre yeare it fortuneth that two seruantes ranne awaye from Semei vnto Achis the sonne of Maacha kyng of Gath.

And it was tolde Semei: beholde, thy seruantes are at Gath. Then Semei gat him vp, and sadled his asse, and wete vnto Gath to Achis, for to seeke his seruantes. And whā he came thither, he broughte his seruantes from Gath.

E And it was tolde Salomon, that Semei wente from Jerusalem vnto Gath, and was come agayne. Then sent the kyng, and caused for to call Semei, and sayde vnto him: Sware not I to the by the LORDE, and assured the, and sayde: Loke what daye so ever thou departest out and goest hither or thither, be sure that thou shalt dye the deeth. And thou saydest vnto me: I hane herde a good meanynge. Why hast thou not kepte the then acordyng to the ooth of the LORDE, and commaundement that I commaunded the?

And the kyng sayde vnto Semei: Thou remembreth all ⁊ wickednes, which thy here knoweth: that thou dyddest vnto my father Dauid. The LORDE hath recompenced ⁊ thy wickednes vpon thy heade. And kyng Salomon is blessed, and the seate of Dauid shalbe stablshed before ⁊ LORDE for ever. And the kyng commaunded Benaia ⁊ sonne of Joiada, which wente forth, and smote him that he dyed. And the kyngdome was stablshed by Salomons hande.

But Salomon loued the LORDE, and walked after the ordinaunces of Dauid his father: excepte onely that he offred and brent incense vpon the hye places.

And the kyng wente vnto Gibeon, to do sacrifice there: for that was a goodly hye place. And Salomon offred a thousande burnt offerynges vpon the same altare. And the LORDE appeared vnto Salomon at Gibeon in a dreame of the nighte, and God sayde: Ake what I shal geue ⁊. Salomon saide: Thou hast done greate mercy vnto my father Dauid thy seruant. Like as he walked before the in faithfulness and righteoufnes, and in a true hert with the, ⁊ this greate mercy hast thou layed vp for him, and geuen him a sonne to syt vpon his seate, as it is now come to passe.

This pleased the LORDE well, that Salomon axed soch a petition. At the same tyme camethere two harlottes vnto y^e kyng, and stode before him. And the one woman sayde: Oh my lord, I and this woman dwelt in one house, and I was deliuered of a childe in the house with her: & on the thirde daye after that I was deliuered, she was deliuered of a childe also. And we were together, so y^e there was no straunger in y^e house, but we two: & this womans sonne died in the nighte (for she smoozed him in the slepe) and she rose vp in the nighte, and toke my sonne fro my syde (where thy handmayde slepte,) and layed it in hir arme, and hir deed sonne layed she in myne arme. And whan I rose vp in the mornynge to geue my sonne sucke, beholde, he was deed. But in the mornynge I looked well, and beholde, it was not my sonne, whom I had borne.

D The other woman sayde: Not so, my sonne lyueth, and thy sonne is deed. But she sayde: Not so, thy sonne is deed, and my sonne liueth. And thus spake they before the kyng. And the kyng sayde: This womā saith: my sonne lyueth and thy sonne is deed: Yonder woman sayeth: Not so, thy sonne is deed, & my sonne lyueth. And the kyng saide: Gett me a swerde. And whan the swerde was brought before the kyng, the kyng sayde: Parte the lyuyng childe in two partes, and geue this woman the one halfe, and yonder woman the other halfe.

Then sayde the woman whose sonne lyued, vnto y^e kyng: (for hir motherly hert was kyndled with pite ouer hir sonne) Oh my lord, geue hir the childe alyue, and kyll it not. But the other sayde: Let it nether be myne ner thine, but let it be parted. Then answered the kyng, and sayde: Geue this woman the lyuyng childe, and slaye it not, for she is his mother. And all Israel herde of this iudgment that the kyng had geuen: and they feared the kyng, for they sawe that y^e wysdome of God was in him to kepe iudgment.

And Salomon had twelue offycers ouer all Israel, which made prouysion of fode for the kyng and his house: One had a moneth longe in y^e yere to make prouysion: The sonne of Hur vpon mount Ephraim. The sonne of Deber at Macaz and at Saalbaim, & at Bethsames, and at Elon, and Beth Hanā. The sonne of Hased at Aruboth, and had therto Socho and all the londe of Shepher. The sonne of Abinadab all y^e lordshippe at Dor: & had Taphat Salomons daughter to wife. Baena y^e sonne of Ahilud at Thaanach & at Magiddo, & ouer all Beth Sean, which lyeth besyde Zarthana vnder Israel from Beth Sean vnto the playne of Meheloth, tyll the other syde of Jatmeam. The sonne of Geber at Ramoth in Gilead: he had the townes of Jair the sonne of Manasse in Gilead, and had y^e coastes of Argob which lyeth in Basan, euen thre score greate walled cities, and with brasen barres. Abinadab y^e sonne of Jddo at Mahanaim. Ahimaas in Nephtali: and he also toke Basmath Salomons daughter to wife. Baena the sonne of Husai in Asser and at Alorh. Josaphat the sonne of Paruha in Iachar. Semei the sonne of Ela in Ben Jamin. Geber the sonne of Ou in the londe of Gilead, in the londe of Sihon kyng of the Amontes, and of Og the kyng in Basan. One officer was in the same londe. As for Juda and Israel, they were in nombre as the sonde of the see, and ate and dronke, and were mery. Thus was Salomō lord ouer all the kyngdomes (from the water of the londe of the Philistynes, vnto the border of Egypte) which broughte him giffes, and serued him as longe as he lyued.

And Salomon had daylie to his vytayles thirtie quarters of fyne meel, thre score quarters of other meel, ten fat oxen, and twēty small catell, and an hundred shepe, beside hartes and Does, and wilde goates, and fat capons, and foules. For he had the lordshippe of all the londe on this syde the water, fro Tiphsa vnto Gasa, and ouer all y^e kynges on this syde y^e water: & had peace of all his subiectes rounde aboute, so that Juda and Israel dwelt safe, euery one vnder his vyne, and vnder his figge tre, from Dan vnto Berseba, as longe as Salomon lyued.

And Salomō had fortye thousande cart horses, and twelue thousande horsmen. And the officers prouyded the kyng Salomon with vytayles: and what soeuer belonged to the kynges table, that brought euery man in

And he was wyser then all men, yee wyser then Ethan the Elrahite, Heman, Chalcal, and Darda, the sonnes of Mahol: and had a greate name amonge all the they- the on every syde. And he spake thre thousande ⁊ prouers, ⁊ his songes were a thousande ⁊ fyue. And he spake of trees, from ⁊ Cedar of Libanus vnto the Iosep ⁊ groweth out of ⁊ wall: he talked also of catell, of foules, of wormes, of fishes. And there came of all nacions to heare ⁊ wysdome of Salomon, and there came of all the kynges of ⁊ earth, which had herde of his wysdome.

And Salomon sent vnto Hiram, sayenge: Thou knowest that my father mighte not buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE his God, because of the warre that was aboute him, vntyll the LORDE delynered them vnder the soles of his fete: But now hath the LORDE my God geuen me rest on every syde, so that there is no aduersary ner enell hynderaunce: Beholde, I am therefore aduysed to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, acordinge as the LORDE spake vnto David my father, and sayde: Thy sonne, whom I shal set vpon thy seate in thy steade, shal buylde an house vnto my name. Commaunde therfore that they hewe me downe Ceders out of Libanus, and that thy seruauntes be with my seruauntes, ⁊ the rewarde of thy seruauntes wyll I geue the, what so ever thou shalt are: for thou knowest, ⁊ with vs there is no mā which can hewe tymber as the Sidonians.

And Salomon had thre score thousande ⁊ ten that bare burthens, ⁊ foure score thousande that hewed tymber vpon the mount, besyde Salomons chiefe officers, which were ordeyned ouer the worke: namely thre thousande and thre hundred, which ruled ⁊ people that laboured there in the worke. In the foure hundred and foure score yeare after the departinge of the children of Israel out of the londe of Egypte, in the fourth yeare of the raigne of Salomon ouer Israel, in the moneth Siff (⁊ is the seconde moneth) was the house buylde vnto the LORDE. This house that kyng Salomon buylde vnto ⁊ LORDE, was thre score cubytes longe, twenty cubytes brode, ⁊ thirtie cubytes hye. so he buylded a compase, so þ it wente both aboute the temple and the quere, and made his outwarde wall rounde aboute. The nether most stacion was fyue cubytes wyde, and þ myddest sixe cubytes wyde, and the thirde seuen cubytes wyde. For he layed balkes rounde aboute the house, that they touched not þ wall of the house.

B And whan þ house was buylded, it was buylded of whole and outbroken stones, so þ there was herde nether hammer ner axe, ner eny other instrument of yron, whan the house was a buyldinge.

But on the righte syde of the myddes of the house there was a doore, so þ they might go vp to the myddest stacion by a turne grese, & from the myddest stacion vnto þ thirde. Thus buylded he the house, & fynished it, & syled þ house both aboue & by the walles wth Cedar wodd. He buylded a gallery also aboue vpon the whole house fyue cubytes hye, and couered the house with Cedar tymber.

And the worde of the LORDE came vnto Salomon, & sayde: Let this be the house þ thou buyldest. If thou shalt walke in myne ordinaunces, & do acordinge to my lawes, & kepe all my comaundementes, to walke therein, then wyl I stablyshe my worde with y, (as I sayde vnto Dauid thy facher) & wyl dwell amongethe childre of Israel, and wil not forsake my people of Israel.

1. Re. 7. b

C Thus Salomon buylded the house, & fynished it, & buylded the walles on the insyde with Cedar tymber, from the grounde of þ house vnto the rose, and syled it with tymber on the insyde, and overlayed the floore of þ house with bordes of pyne tre.

And behynde in the house he buylded a wall of Cedar tymber twentye cubytes longe, from the floore vnto the rose. And there on the insyde buylded he the quere for the most holy. But the house of the temple before the quere was fortye cubytes longe: on the insyde was the whole house of Cedar with throwne knoppes and floures, so that there was no stone sene. As for the quere, he prepared it on the insyde of the house, that the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE might be set therein. And before the quere (which was twentye cubytes longe, twentye cubytes brode, and twentye cubytes hye, and overlayed with pure golde) he syled the altare with Cedar.

D And Salomon overlayed the house on þ insyde wth pure golde, & shot barres of golde before the quere, which he had overlayed wth golde, so that þ whole house was layed ouer with golde. And all the altare also before þ quere overlayed he with golde.

He made also in the quere two Cherubins ten cubites hye of Olyue tre. One wyng of ether of the Cherubs had fyue cubytes, so that from the edge of his one wyng to the edge of his other wyng there were ten cubytes. Euen so had the other Cherub ten cubites also, and both the Cherubs were of one measure and of one quantitie so þ ether Cherub was ten cubites hye. And he put the Cherubins within in the house. And the Cherubins spred forth their wynges, so that the wyng of the one touched the one wall, and the other Cherubs wyng touched the other wall. But in the myddes of þ house the one wyng touched another. And he overlayed the Cherubins with golde.

Exo. 25. b

And on all the walles of the house rounde aboute, he caused to make carued worke, with carued Cherubins, palme trees, and floures. And the pavement of the house overlayed he also with golde plates. And at the entraunce of the quere he made two doores of olyue tre with fyue squared postes, and caused carued worke to be made therof with Cherubins, palme trees and floures, & overlayed them with plates of golde. So made he also at the entraunce of the temple, four squared postes of Olyue tre, and two doores of pyne tre (so that ether doore had two syde doores one hāginge to another) and made carued worke therof, palme trees and floures, right as it was appoynted.

And he buylded a court also within the rowes of fre stone, and with one rowe of playne Cedar tymber.

In the fourth yeare in the moneth Sif, was the foundation of the LORDES house layed: and in the eleuenth yeare in the moneth Bul (that is the eght moneth) was the house fynished as it shulde be, so that they were seven yeare a buyldinge of it.

The VII. Chapter.

When Salomon was a buyldinge his awne house thirtene yeare, & fynished it, namely, he buylded an house of the wodd of Libanus, an hundred cubytes longe, fiftye cubytes wyde, & thirtie cubytes hye, four squared with rowes of pilers, and wth carued Ceders. And the rose aboue syled he also with Cedar wodd vpon the fyue & fortie pilers, for one rowe had systene pilers, so þ there stode ever thre pilers one right over agaynst another: so that euery space betwixte the pilers was one over agaynst another four squared with the pilers.

And he made a porche with pilers which was fiftye cubites longe, and thirtie cubites brode, ⁊ yet a porche before it with pilers ⁊ a greate poste. He made a porche also vnto ⁊ fynge's seate (wherin ⁊ iudgment was kepte) and made it to be the porche of iudgment, and syled it with Cedar from the panement vnto the panement agayne, and his owne house wherein he dwelt, in y^e backe courte made betwene ⁊ house and the porche like the other. And like vnto the porche made he a house for Pharaos daughter, ⁊ whom Salomon had taken to wife.

All these were costly stone hewen after ⁊ measure, cut with sawes on every syde, from the grounde vnto the rose: and without the greate courte also. As for the foundations, they were costly and greate stones, ten and eghtre cubites greate: and costly fre stones theron a cordinge to ⁊ measure, and Ceders. But the greate courte rounde aboute had thre rowes of fre stone, ⁊ one rowe of playne Ceders: Even so also the courte by ⁊ house of the LORDE within, and the porch by the house.

And kynge Salomon sent to fetch one * Hiram of Tyre a wedowes sonne, of the crybe of Nephtali, and his father had bene a man of Tyre, ⁊ which was a connyng man in metall, full of wysdome, vnderstandinge and knowlege to worke all maner of metall worke. Whan he came to kynge Salomon, he made all his worke, ⁊ and made two brasen pilers, echer of them eghtene cubites hye: and a threde of xij. cubites was the measure aboute both ⁊ pilers: and he made two Knoppes of brasen molten, to set aboue vpon the pilers: and every knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and on every knoppe aboue vpon ⁊ pilers seue wythen ropes like cheynes. And vpon every knoppe he made two rowes of pomgranates rounde aboute on one rope, wherewith ⁊ knoppe was couered. And the knoppes were like roses before ⁊ porche foure cubites greate. And the pomgranates in the rowes rounde aboute were two hundreth aboue and beneth vpon the rope, which were rounde aboute the thicnes of the knoppe, on every knoppe vpon both the pilers. And set vp the pilers before the porche of the temple. And that which he set on the right hande, called he Jachin: and that which he set on the lefte hande, called he Boos. And so stode it aboue vpon the pilers euen like roses. Thus was the worke of ⁊ pilers fynished.

And he made a molten lauer ten cubytes wyde from the one syde to the other rounde aboute, and fyue cubites hye, and a threde of thirtie cubites lōge was ⁊ measure rounde aboute: and aboute the same lauer that was then cubites wyde, there wente knoppes on the edge therof rounde aboute the lauer. Two rowes were there of the knoppes molten with the lauer.

And it stode vpon twolue bullockes, wher of thre were turned towarde the north, thre towarde the west, thre towarde the south, and thre towarde the east, and the lauer aboue theron, so that all their hynder partes were within vnder the lauer: wherof the thicnesse was an handbreth: and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a floured rose, and it conteyned two thousande ⁊ Batres.

And he made ten brasen seates, every one foure cubites longe and brode, and thre cubites hye. The seate was made so, that it had sydes betwene the ledges. And on the sydes betwene the ledges there were lyons, bullockes and Cherubins. And on ⁊ ledges which were aboue and beneth the lyons and bullockes, were the sydes made so, that they were set downwardes. And every stole had foure brasen wheles with brasen axeltrees. And vpon the foure corners there were proppes molten, every one over agaynst another, vnder set vnto the kettell.

And the socket vpon the stole was a cubyte hye and rounde, a cubyte and an halfe wyde: and on the socket there were knoppes in foldes, which were foure squared ⁊ not rounde. The foure wheles stode beneth by the sydes, ⁊ the axeltrees of the wheles were harde on y^e seate. Every whele was a cubite and a halfe hye, and they were wheles like cart wheles. And their axeltrees, spokes, nales, ⁊ shaftes were all molten. And the foure proppes vpon the foure corners of every seate were harde on the seate.

And on the socket aboue vpon the seate a cubyte and an halfe rounde aboute, there were ledges and sydes harde on the seate. And on the plat of the same sydes and ledges, he caused to carue Cherubins, lyons and palme trees, one by another rounde aboute theron. After this maner made he ten molten seates, one maner of measure ⁊ widenes was in all.

And he made ten copper kettels, so that one kettell cōteyned fortye Batres, and was foure cubites greate, and vpon every seate was a kettell. And fyue seates set he on the righte syde of the house, and the other fyue on the lefte syde. But the lauer set he before on the righte hande towarde the south.

And Hiram made pottes also and shou-vels and basens, ⁊ so fynished he all the worke, that kynge Salomon caused to be made in the house of the LORDE: namely ⁊ two pillers, and the rounde knoppes aboue vpon the two pillers, and the two wythen ropes to couer the two rounde knoppes vpon the pillers. And the foure hūdrēth pomgranates on the two wythen ropes, euer two rowes of pomgranates vnto every rope, to couer
the two rounde knoppes vpon the pillers.
And the ten seates, and ten kettels theron, and the lauer, and twelue bullockes vnder y laue. And the pottes, shouels and basens.
And all the ornamentes which Hiram made vnto kynge Salomon for the house of the LORDE, were of pure metall. In the coun-tre by Jordane, caused the kynge them to be molten in thicke earth, betwene Succoth and Zarthan. And Salomon let all the ap-parell be vntweyed, because the metall was so moch.

Morouer Salomon made all the apperell that belonged vnto the house of the LORDE:
namely a golden altare, a golden table that the shewbred laye on, fyue candelstickes on the righte hande, and fyue candelstickes on the lefte (before the quere) of pure golde, w floures, lampes and snoffers of golde, therto flat peces, charges, basens, spones and cen-sours of pure golde. And the hookes of y dores on the insyde of the house in the most holy, and in the doores of the house of the temple of the LORDE were of golde.

Thus all the worke that kynge Salomon made in y house of the LORDE, was fynished. And Salomon brought in that his father Dauid had sanctified, of syluer and golde and ornamentes, and layed it amonge the treasures of the house of the LORDE.

The VIII. Chapter.

A Then gathered kynge Salomon all y Elders in Israel together, all the rulers of the trybes and prynces of the fathers amonge the childien of Israel, vnto Jerusalem, to brynge vp the Arke of the couenant of the LORDE, out of the cite of Dauid, that is Sion. And there resorted vnto kynge Salomon all the men in Israel, at the feast in the moneth Ethanim, that is y seuenth moneth. And whan all y Elders of Israel came, the prestes toke the Arke of the LORDE, and broughte it vp, and the Tabernacle of witnessse, and all the ornamentes of the Sanctuary that were in the Tabernacle. This dyd the prestes and the Leuites.

The viij. Chap.

And kynge Salomon and all the congrega-cion of Israel y were gathered vnto him, wente with him before the Arke, and offred shepe and bullockes, so many, that they coulde not be nombred ner tolde.

So the prestes broughte the Arke of the LORDES conenant vnto hir place, euen into y Quere of the house in the most holy vnder y wynges of the Cherubins. For y Che-rubins spred out their wynges in the place where the Arke stode, and conered the Arke and the staves therof from aboue. And the staves were so lōge, that y knoppes of them were sene from the Sanctuary before y que-re, but on the outsyde werethey not sene, and they were there vnto this daye.

And in the Arke there was nothinge, but onely the two tables of stone, which Moses had layed therein at Horeb, whan y LOR-DE made a conenant with the childien of Israel, what tyme as they were departed out of the lande of Egipte.

But whan the prestes wente out of the Sanctuary, a cloude fylled the house of the LORDE, so y the prestes coulde not stonde ⁊ executethe office for the cloude: for the glory of the LORDE fylled the LORDES house.

Then sayde Salomon: The LORDE sayde, that he wolde dwell in a darke cloude. I haue buylded an house, to be an habitation vnto the: a seate, y thou mayest dwell there for euer. And y kynge turned his face, ⁊ blessed all the congregacion of Israel. And all the cōgregacion of Israel stode, ⁊ he sayde:

Praysed be the LORDE God of Israel, which promised by his mouth vnto my father Dauid, and by his hāde hath fulfilled it, and sayde: Sence the daye y I broughte my people of Israel out of Egipte, haue I chosen no cite amōge all the trybes of Israel, to buylde me an house, that my name might be there. But Dauid haue I chosen, to be ouer my people of Israel.

And in dede my father Dauid was mynded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel: neuertheles the LOR-DE sayde vnto my father Dauid: Where as thou wast mynded to buylde an house vnto my name, thou hast done well, that thou art so aduysed. Howbeit thou shalt not buyl-de the house, but thy sonne which shal come out of thy loynes, he shal buylde an house vnto my name. And the LORDE hath perfourmed his worde that he spake: For I am come vp in my father Dauids steade, and syt vpon the seate of Israel, as the LORDE sayde: and haue buylded an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel: and there haue I ordeyned a place for the Arke, wherein is the LORDES couenaunt, which he made with oure fathers, whan he broughte them out of y^e londe of Egypte.

And Salomon stode before the altare of the LORDE in the presence of the whole congregacion of Israel, and helde out his handes towarde heauen, and sayde: * O LORDE God of Israel, there is no god like the, necher aboue in heauen, ner beneth vpon earth, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for all thy seruauntes that walke before y^e with all their hert, thou that hast kepte promes with my father Dauid thy seruant: With thy mouth thou saydest it, and with thy hande hast thou fulfilled it, as it is come to passe this daye. Now LORDE God of Israel make good vnto my father Dauid y^e seruant, that which thou hast promysed him, and sayde: * Thou shalt not wante a man before me to sit vpon the seate of Israel, yf thy childre kepe their waye, so y^e they walke before me like as thou hast walked before me. Now thou God of Israel, let y^e worde be verified, which thou hast promysed vnto my father Dauid thy seruant.

For thyntest thou y^e God dwelleth vpon earth? * Beholde, the heauens and the heauens of all heauens maye not contayne the: how shulde then this house do it, that I haue buylded? But turne the vnto the prayer of thy seruant, and to his supplicacion (O LORDE my God) that thou mayest heare the thankesgeuyng and prayer, which thy seruant maketh before the this daye, so that thine eyes be open ouer this house night and daye, euen ouer this place (wherof thou saydest: * My name shall dwell there.) That thou mayest heare the prayer which thy seruait maketh in this place, and heare the intercession of y^e seruant and of thy people of Israel, which they shall make here in this place of thy habitacion in heauen: and whan thou hearest it, be gracious.

¶ Whan eny man synneth agaynst his neghboure, and taketh vpon him an ooth wherewith he byndeth himselfe, and y^e ooth cometh before thine altare in this house, then heare thou in heauen, and se that thy seruauntes haue righte, to condemne the vngodly, and to bryng his waye vpon his owne head, and to iustifie the righteous, to geue him acordinge to his righteousnes.

* Whan the heauen is shut vp, so y^e it rayneth not (for so moch, as they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they make their prayer in this place, and knowlege thy name, and turne from their synnes whan thou troublest them, heare thou them then in heauen, and be mercifull vnto the synnes of thy seruauntes, and of thy people of Israel, that thou mayest shewe them the good waye, wherin they shulde walke, and let it rayne vpon the londe that thou hast geuen thy people to inheritaunce.

¶ Whan a derch, or pestilence, or drought, or burnyng, or gresshopper or caterpillar, is in their londe, or whan his enemye layeth lege to his portes in the londe, or whan eny other plague or disease happeneth, who so ever then maketh his prayer and petition, * whether it be eny ocher men or thy people of Israel (which the are aware of their plague) every one in his hert, and spredeth out his handes vnto this house: heare thou then in heauen in the seate where thou dwellest, and be mercifull, and se that thou geue every one acordinge as he hath walked, like as thou knowest his hert (for thou onely knowest the hert of all the children of men) that they maye allwaye feare the, as long as they lyue in the lande, which thou hast geuen vnto oure fathers.

* And whan eny straunger, that is not of thy people of Israel, cometh out of a farre countre for thy names sake (for they shall heare of thy greates name, and of thy mightie hande, and of thy outstretched arme) and cometh to make his prayer in this house, heare thou him then in heauen, euen in the seate of thy dwellinge, and do all for the which that straunger calleth vpon the, that all the nacions vpon earth maye knowe thy name, and that they maye feare the, as thy people of Israel do: and that they maye knowe, how that this house which I haue buylded, is named after thy name.

¶ Whan thy people go forth to the battayll agaynst their enemyes, the waye that thou shalt sende them * and shall praye vnto the LORDE toward the waye of the cite which thou hast chosen, and toward the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name, heare thou then their prayer and petition

⁊ And whā Salomon had ended all this prayer and petition before the LORDE, he rose vp from the altare of the LORDE, and leste of from the kynge and holdynge out of handes towarde heauen, and stode and blessed all the congregacion of Israel with loude voyce, and sayde: Praise be the LORDE which hath geuen rest vnto his people, acordinge as he sayde. There hath not one fayled of all his good wordes, which he spake by his seruaunt Moses. The LORDE oure God be with vs, as he hath bene with oure fathers, and forsake vs not, nether withdrawe his hande from vs, but bowe oure hertes vnto him, that we maye walke in all his wayes, and kepe his commaundementes, ordinaunces and lawes, which he comman-

And these wordes wherewith I haue made my petition before the LORDE, come nye vnto the LORDE oure God daye and nighte, that he maye execute iudgment for his seruaunt and for his people of Israel, every one at his tyme: that all nations vpon earth maye knowe, that the LORDE is God, ⁊ that there is none other. And let youre hert be perfecte with the LORDE oure God, to walke in his statutes, and to kepe his commaundementes, as it is this daye.

And the kynge with all Israel his people offred sacrifice before the LORDE. And Salomon offred deed offerynges (which he offred vnto the LORDE) two and twenty thousand oxen, and an hundred ⁊ twenty thousand shepe. So the kynge and all the children of Israel dedicated the house of the LORDE. The same daye dyd the kynge dedicate the myddelmost court, which was before the house of the LORDE: that he mighte there perfourme the burnt offerynges, meat offerynges, and the fat of the deed offerynges: for the brasen altare that stode before the LORDE, was to litle for the burnt offerynges, meat offerynges, and for the fat of the deed offerynges.

And at the same tyme made Salomon a solempne feast, and all Israel a greate congregacion with him, from the border of the mach vnto the ryuer of Egipte, before the LORDE oure God, seven dayes, and yet seven dayes, that were fourtene daies. And on the eight daye he let the people go. And they blessed the kynge, and wente vnto their tentes reioysinge and with a mery hert, because of all the good that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid his seruaunt, ⁊ to his people of Israel.

The IX. Chapter.

And whan Salomon had fynished ⁊ buyldinge of the house of the LORDE, and the kynges house, and all that his besyre and pleasure was to make, ⁊ LORDE appeared vnto him the seconde tyme, ⁊ even as he appeared vnto him at Gibeon. And the LORDE sayde vnto him: I haue herd thy prayer and petition, that thou hast made before me, and haue sanctified this house which thou hast buylded, that I maye see my name there for ever: and myne eyes and my hert shalbe there allwaye. And yf thou walke before me (as thy father Dauid walked) with a perfecte and a true hert, so that thou do all that I haue commaunded the, and kepe myne ordinaunces and lawes, then

B But yf ye turne back fro me, ye and youre childre, and kepe not my commaundmentes and ordinances which I have layed before you, but go and serue other goddes, and worshippe them, then wyll I rote Israel out of the londe that I have geuen them. * And the house that I have halowed vnto my name, wyll I put awaye fro my face. And Israel shall be come a byworde and sabell amonge all nacions, and so shal this hye house: so that every one that goeth by, shall be astonyed, and make an hyssynge, and saye: * Wherefore hath the LORDE done thus vnto this londe and to this house? Then shal it be answered: Because they forsoke the LORDE their God, (which brought their fathers out of the londe of Egypte) and haue receaved other goddes, and worshipped them, and serued them. Therefore hath the LORDE brought all this euill vpon them.

C Now whan the twentye yeares were ended, wherein Salomon buylded the two houses, the LORDES house and the kynges house, * where vnto Hiram the kyng of Tyre brought Salomons Cedar trees & Pynetrees, and golde after all his desyre, then gaue kyng Salomon vnto Hiram twentye cities in the countre of Galile. And Hiram departed from Tyre to vyset the cities which Salomon had geuen him, & they pleased him not, and he sayde: What maner of cities are these (my brother) that thou hast geue me? And he called them the londe of Cabul vnto this daye. And Hiram sent vnto the kyng, sixe score hundred weight of Golde. And the same is the summe of the taxe, that kyng Salomon raysed to the buyldinge of the house of the LORDE, and his awne house, & Millo, and the walles of Jerusalem, and Hasor, and Megiddo, and Gaser.

D For Pharaos kyng of Egypte came vp, and wane Gaser, & brent it with fyre, & slew the Cananites that dwelt in the cite, & gaue it for a gifte vnto his daughter Salomons wyfe. So Salomon buylded Gaser, & the lower Bethoron, and Baclath and Thamar, in the wyldernes, in the londe, & all the cities of the come houses that Salomon had, and all the cities of the charettes, & all the cities of the horsmen, and what it pleased him to buylde at Jerusalem, in Libanus, & in every countre of his domynion.

The x. Chap. Ho. lviij.

And all the remnaunt of the people of the Amorytes, Hethites, Pherejites, Hewites and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, their children which they lefte behynde them in the londe (whom the children of Israel coulde not utterly destroye) those dyd Salomon make tributaries vnto this daye.

* But of the children of Israel he made no bondmen, but let them be men of warre, and his seruauntes, and prynces, and knyghtes, and ouer his charettes and horsmen. And the officers which were ouer Salomons busynesse, were fyue hundred and fystye, which ruled the people, and perfourmed the worke.

And Pharaos daughter wente vp from the cite of David, in to hir house * which he had buylded for her. * Then buylded he Millo likewise. And thre tymes in the yeare dyd Salomon offre burnt offerynges and deed offerynges vpon the altare * that he had buylded vnto the LORDE, and burnt incense vpon it before the LORDE, and so was the house ended and fynished.

* And Salomon made shippes also at Ezion Geber, which lyeth by Eloth besyde the Red See shore in the londe of the Edomites. And Hiram sent his seruauntes by shippe, which were shipmen, and had experience of the See, with Salomons seruauntes, and they came vnto Ophir, and fetched from thence one & twenty score hundred weight of golde, and brought it vnto Salomon.

The X. Chapter.

When kyng Salomons fame of the name of the LORDE came to the eares of the Quene of riche Arabia, she came to proue him with darke sentences. And she came to Jerusalem with a marvellous greate trayne, with camels which bare spyces, and much golde, and precious stones. And whan she came in to kyng Salomon, she spake vnto him all that was in hir hert. And Salomon tolde her every thinge, and the kyng had nothinge in secrete, but he tolde it her. But whan the Quene of riche Arabia sawe all the wysdome of Salomon, and the house that he had buylded, and the meates of his table, and the dwellinges of his seruauntes, & the offyces of his misters, and their garmentes, and his butlers and the burnt offerynges which he offered in the house of the LORDE, she wondred exceedingly, and coulde no longer refrayne, but sayde vnto the kyng: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behauiour and of thy wysdome. And I wolde not beleue it, tyll I came and sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe hath not bene tolde me.

Thou hast more wysdome and good, then the same is that I haue herde. Happye are thy people and thy seruauntes, that allwaie stonde before the, and heare thy wysdome. Praise be the LORDE thy God, which had soch a pleasure vnto the, that he set the vpon the seate of Israel: because he hath allwaie loued Israel, and hath set the to be kyng, that thou shuldest mantayne iustyce and equitye.

And she gaue the kyng syre score hundred weighte of golde, and very moch spyce, and precious stones. There came neuer so moch spyce thither, as the Quene of riche Arabia gaue vnto kyng Salomon. And 3. Re. 5. 2. Hiram's shippes, which caried golde out of Ophir, broughte maruelous moch costely tymbre and precious stones from Ophir. And of that costely tymbre the kyng caused to make pilers in the house of the LORDE, and in the kynges house, and harpes and psalteries for the Musicians. There came nomore soch costely tymbre, neether was it sene vnto this daye. And kyng Salomon gaue the quene of riche Arabia, all that she desired and asked, besydes that which he gaue her of a frey hande. And she returned, and departed in to hir lande with hir seruauntes.

The golde that came to Salomon in one yeare, was nyne and thyrty score hundred weighte, besydes that which came of chapmen, marchauntes and Apotecaries, and of the nexte kynges, and of the mightie men in the londe. And kyng Salomon caused to make two hundred speares of beaten golde, sixe hundred peces of golde put he to euery speare: and thre hundred shyldes of the best golde, even thre pounce of golde vpon euery shyld. And the kyng put them in the house of the wod of Libanus.

1. Re. 7. 2

And the kyng made a greateseate of iuery, and ouerlayed it with the most precious golde. And the seate had sixe steppes, and the heade of the seate was rounde behynde. And there were two postes to leane vpon both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode vpon the leanyng postes, and twelue lyons stode vpon the sixe steppes on both the sydes. the house of the wod of Libanus were of pure golde also: for syluer was not regarded in Salomons tyme. For the kynges Seeshippe which sayled vpon the See with the shippe of Hiram, came once in thre yeare, and broughte golde, syluer, iuery, Apes, and peacockes.

Thus was kyng Salomon greater in riches and wysdome, then all the kynges vpon earth: And all the worlde desired to see Salomon, that they might heare the wysdome which God gaue him in his hert. And they broughte him yearly euery man his present, vessels of syluer and golde, rayment and harness, spices, horses and Mules. And Salomon broughte charettes and horsmen together, so that he had a thousande and foure hundred charettes, and twelue thousande horsmen: and those he put in the charet cities, and with the kyng at Jerusalem.

And the kyng broughte it to passe, that there was as moch syluer at Jerusalem as stones: and as many Ceders as there were wyld figge trees in the valleys. And Salomons horses were broughte out of Egypte, and from Bena: for the kynges marchauntes fetched them from Bena for money. And a charet came vpon out of Egypte for sixe hundred Syckles of Syluer, and an horse for an hundred and fiftie. Thus were they brought also vnto all the kynges of the heethenes and to the kynges of Siria by their handes.

The XI. Chapter.

When kyng Salomon loued many outlandish women, Pharaos daughter, and women of Moab, of Ammon, of Edom, of Sidon, and of the heethenes, even of those nations, that the LORDE spake of vnto the children of Israel: Go not ye vnto them, and let not them come vnto you: they shal surely bowe youre hertes after their goddes: Vnto these dyd Salomon encline with affection. And he had seven hundred women to wyues, and thre hundred concubynes, and his wyues turned his hert asyde. And when he was now olde, his wyues bowed his hert after straunge goddes, so that his hert was not whole with the LORDE his God, as was the hert of Dauid his father.

So Salomon walked after Astaroth the god of the Sidonians, and after Moloch the abhominacion of the Ammonites. And Salomon dyd that which displeased the LORDE, and folowed not the LORDE to the vttemost as dyd his father Dauid. The buylded Salomon an hie place vnto Chamos the abhominacion of the Moabites (vpon the mount that lyeth before Jerusalem) and vnto Moloch the

Thus dyd Salomon for all his outlādish wyues, which brent incense, and offred vnto their goddes. But the LORDE was wroth at Salomon, because his hert was turned asyde from y^e LORDE God of Israel, which had two tymes appeared vnto him, and commaunded him, that he shulde not walke after other goddes: and yet kepte he not that the LORDE commaunded him. Therfore sayde the LORDE vnto Salomon: For so moch as this is done with the, and hast not kepte my couenant and myne ordinaunces, which I commaunded the, therfore wyll I also plucke thy kyngdome from the, and geue it vnto thy seruaunt: Neuertheles in y^e tyme will I not do it, for thy father Dauids sake, but from the hande of thy sonne wyll I plucke it. Howbeit I wyll not plucke y^e kyngdome cleane awaye. One trybe wyll I geue vnto thy sonne, for Dauid my seruantes sake, and for Ierusalms sake which I haue chosen.

Chosen.

And the LORDE raysed vp an aduersary vnto Salomon, even Hadad the Edomite of the kynges sede, which was in Edom. For whan Dauid was in Edom, and Joab the chiefe captayne wente vp to bury the slayne, he smote all the males in Edom. (For Joab remayned there sixe monethes and all Israel, by the had reed out all y^e males that were in Edom.) Then fled Hadad, and certayne men of y^e Moabites with him, of his fathers seruantes. As for Hadad, he was a yonge man.

And they gat them vp fro Madian, and came vnto Paran, and toke men with them out of Paran, and came in to Egypte vnto Pharaos the kyng of Egypte: which gaue him an house and certayne vytales appoynted, and gaue him a countre. And Adad founde greate fauoure in the sighte of Pharaos, so that he gaue him to wife even the sister of his owne wife Thaphenes the Quene. And Thaphenes sister bare him Sennubath his sonne, and Thaphenes nourished him vp in Pharaos house, in so moch that Sennubath was in Pharaos house amonge Pharaos children.

Now whā Hadad herde in Egypte, that Dauid was falle on slepte with his fathers, and y^e Joab the chiefe captayne was deed, he sayde vnto Pharaos: Let me go in to my countre. Pharaos sayde vnto him: What lackest thou with me, that thou wilt go in to thy countre? He sayde: Nothyng, but yet let me go.

The xi. Chap. 30. lix.

God raysed him vp another aduersary also, one Rezon the sennē of El Jada, which fled from his lordē Hadad Esir kyng of Zeba, and gathered men agaynst him, and was a captayne of the men of warre whan Dauid slewe them: and they wente vnto Damascus and dwelt there, and reigned at Damascus, and he was Israels aduersary as longe as Salomon lyued. This is the harme y^e Hadad suffred: therfore had he euell will agaynst Israel, and was kyng ouer Israel. 2. vii.

Moreover Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat an Ephraite Salomons seruaunt (and his mothers name was Zeruga, a wedowe, lifte vp his hande also agaynst the kyng. And this is the cause wherfore he lifte vp his hande agaynst the kyng: Whan Salomon buylded Millo, he shut vp a gappe in the cite of Dauid his father. And Jeroboam was a mā of armes. And whan Salomon sawe that he was a mete yonge man, he set him ouer all the burthens of the house of Joseph.

But at the same tyme it fortunēd, that Jeroboam wente out from Ierusalem, and the prophet Ahias of Silo founde hym by the waye, and he had a new clothe vpon him, and they two were alone in the felde. And Ahias toke holde of the new clothe y^e he had on, and rente the same in to twolue peces, and sayde vnto Jeroboam: Take thou ten peces vnto the.

For thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Beholde, even thus wyll I rente the kyngdome from the hande of Salomō, and wyll geue the ten trybes. One trybe shall he haue for my seruaunt Dauids sake, and because of the cyte of Ierusalem, which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel: for they haue forsaken me, and worshipped Astaroth the god of the Sidonians, Chamos the god of the Moabites, and Males the god of the children of Ammon, and haue not walked in my wayes, to fulfill my pleasure, myne ordinaunces, and lawes, as dyd Dauid his father.

Notwithstandynge I wyll not take the whole kyngdome from out of his hande, but wil make him a prynce as longe as he lyueth for my seruaunt Dauids sake, whom I dyd chose, which kepte my commaundementes and ordinaunces. From out of the hande of his sonne wyll I take the kyngdome, and wyll geue ten trybes vnto the, and one vnto his sonne, that Dauid my seruante maye allwaye haue a lanterne before me in the cite of Ierusalem, which I haue chosen, that I maye see my name there. Therfore wyll I take the now, to raygne ouer all that thine hert desyreth, and thou shalt be kyng over Israel.

E If thou folowe now all that I shall commaunde the, and walke in my wayes, and fulfill my pleasure to kepe myne ordinaunces and commaundementes, as dyd my seruaut Dauid, then wyll I be with the, and buylde the a sure house, as I buylde vnto Dauid, and wyl gene Israel vnto the and therewith wyll I subdue the seide of Dauid, but not foreuermore. But Salomon soughte to kyll Jeroboam. Then Jeroboam gat him vp, and fled in to Egypte to Sisak the kyng of Eg-ypte, and remayned in Egypte, tyll Salomon dyed.

What more there is to saye of Salomon, and all that he dyd, and his wysdome, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of Salomon.
The tyme that Salomon was kyng at Jerusalem ouer all Israel, is fortye years. And Salomon fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buryed in the cite of Dauid his father, and Roboam his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The XII. Chapter.

AND Roboam wene vnto Sichem, for all Israel was come to Sichem to make him kyng. And whan Jeroboam y sonne of Nebat herde that, while he was yet in Egypte, (whither he was fled for Salonion) he came agayne out of Egypte. And they sent for him, and called him. And Jeroboam with all the congregacion of Israel came and spake to Roboam, and sayde:
Thy father made oure yock to harde: therfore make thou now the harde bondage and the sore yock lighter, and we wyll submytte oure selues vnto the. He sayde vnto them: Go youre waye vnto the thirde daye, and then come to me agayne. And the people we-te their waye.

And Roboam the kyng helde a counsell with the Elders that stode before Salomons his father whyle he lyued, & he sayde: What is youre counsell, that we maye gene this people an answer? They sayde vnto him:
If thou do this people a pleasure to daye, and folowe their mynde, and heare them, and gene them good wordes, then shal they be obedient vnto the as longe as thou liuest.
Nevertheless he forsoke the counsell that y Elders had geuen him, and axed counsell at the yonge men which were growne vp with him, and stode before him.

And he sayde vnto them: What is youre counsell that we maye answer this people which haue sayde vnto me: Make the yock lighter, that thy father hath layed vpon vs.

And the yonge men that were growne vp with him, sayde vnto him: Where as the people haue sayde vnto the: Thy father hath made oure yock to sore, make thou it easier for vs, Thus shalt thou saye vnto them:
My litle synger shall be thicker then my fathers loynes. Now, my father layed a sore yock vpon you, but I wyl yet laye more theron: My father correcte you with scourges, but I wyl nourture you with scorpions.

So vpon the thirde daye came Jeroboam with all the people vnto Roboam, as y kyng had appoynted and saide, come to me agayne on the thirde daye. And the kyng gaue the people an harde rough answer, and forsoke the counsell that the Elders had geuen him, and talked with them after the counsell of the yonge men, and sayde: My father made youre yock sore, but I wyl make it yet sorer vpon you. My father correcte you with scourges, but I wyl nourture you with scorpions. Thus the kyng folowed not the peoples mynde, for he was turned so fro the WORDE, that he mighte stablish his worde: which he spake by Abias of Silo vnto Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat.

But whan all Israel sawe that the kynge wolde not heare them, the people gaue y kyng an answer and sayde: What por-cion haue we then in Dauid or inheritance in the sonne of Isai? Get the to thy tentes
O Israel. Loke thou now to thy house thou Dauid. So Israel wente vnto their tentes.
As for Roboam, he raigned but ouer y children of Israel, which dwelt in the cities of Juda. And whan kyng Roboam sent thither Adoram the rentgatherer, all Israel stoned him to deatch. But kyng Roboam strengthened himselfe, and gat him vp in to a charet, to fle vnto Jerusalem. Thus departed Israel from the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

Now whan all Israel herde, that Jeroboam was come agayne, they sent for to call him to the whole congregacion, and made him kyng ouer all Israel. And no man folowed the house of Dauid, save onely the tribe of Juda. And whan Roboam came to Jerusalem, all the house of Juda and the try-be of Ben Jamin (euen an hundred and few-re score thousande chosen men of armes) gathered themselves together to fight against y house of Israel, & to brynge the kyngdome agayne vnto Roboam y sonne of Salomon.

But the worde of God came to Semeia the man of God, and sayde: Speake thou to Roboam the sonne of Salomon kynge of Juda, and to all þe house of Juda and Ben Jamun, and to the other people, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shall not go vp and fighte agaynst youre brethern the children of Israel. Let every man go home agayne, for this is my dede. And they herte ned vnto the worde of the LORDE, and turned back, to go their waye, as the LORDE sayde. But Roboam buylded Sichem vpon mount Ephraim, and dwelt therein, and departed thence, and buylded Peniel.

Jeroboam thoughte in his hert: The king dome shall fall agayne now vnto the house of Dauid, yf this people go vp to offere in the LORDE S house at Jerusalem, and so shall the hert of this people turne to their loide Roboam kynge of Juda, and the shall they slaye me, and fall agayne to Roboam kynge of Juda. And the kynge helde a counsell, and made two golden calves, and sayde vnto them: It is to moch for yon to go to Jerusalem: beholde, there is chy God (O Israel) which broughete þe out of Egypte. And the one set he at Bethel, and the other in Dan. And this dede turned to synne, for the people wente before the one vnto Dan.

He made an house also in the hye places, and made prestes of the smallest in the people, which were not of the childre of Levi. And vpon the fiftene daye of the eight moneth he made an holy daye, like as the solempne feast in Juda, and offered vpon the altare. Thus dyd he at Bethel, in doyng sacrifice vnto the calves which he had made, and at Bethel he ordeyned the prestes of the hye places that he had made: and offred vpon the altare (which he had made) at Bethel, the fiftene daye of the eight moneth, which he inuented of his owne hert. And he made the children of Israel an holy daye, and wente vnto the altare to burne incense.

The XIII. Chapter.

¶ And beholde, there came a mā of God from Juda (thorow the worde of the LORDE) vnto Bethel, and Jeroboam stode by the altare to burne incense. And he cried agaynst the altare thorow the worde of the LORDE, and sayde: O altare, altar, thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, there shall be borne vnto þe house of Dauid a sonne, Josias by name: which on the shall offer the prestes of the hye places, that burne incense vpon the, and mens bones shall he burne on the. And he gaue a wonder token the same daye, and sayde: This is the token, that the LORDE hath spoken it, beholde, the altare shall ryue, and the asshes, that are thereon, shall be poured out.

But when the kynge herde the worde of the man of God, that cried agaynst the altare at Bethel, he stretched out his hande by f altare, and sayde: Laye hondes on him. And his hande that he stretched out, withered, and he coulde not drawe it vnto him agayne. And þe altare reue, and the asshes were poured out from the altare, accordinge to the wonder token that the man of God had geuen by the worde of the LORDE.

And the kynge answered, and sayde vnto the man of God: O praye the face of the LORDE chy God, and make intercession for me, that my hande maie be restored vnto me agayne. Then prayed the man of God vnto the face of the LORDE. And the kynges hande was restored him agayne, and became as it was afore. And the kynge sayde vnto the man of God: Come home with me, and dyne, and I wil geue the a rewarde.

But the man of God sayde vnto the kynge: If thou geuest me halfe thy house, I wil not come with the: for in this place wyll I necher eate bred, ner drynke water. For thus am I commaunded, and thus is it sayde vnto me by the worde of the LORDE: Thou shalt eate no bred, and drynke no water, necher retorne the waye that thou wentest.

And he departed another waye, and returned not agayne the waye that he came to Bethel. But at Bethel there dwelt an olde prophet vnto whō his sonnes came, and tolde him all the workes þe the mā of God had done that daye at Bethel, and the wordes that he had spoken vnto the kynge. And their father sayde vnto them: Which waye is he gone? And his sonnes shewed him the waye that the man of God was gone: which came from Juda. He sayde vnto his sonnes: Saddle me the asse. And whā they had saddled him the asse, he rode thereon, and wente after the man of God, and founde him sittynge vnder an Oke tre, and sayde vnto him: Art thou the man of God that came from Juda? He sayde: Yee.

He sayde vnto him: Come home with me, and eate bred. He sayde: I maye not turne backe with the, and come with the. Necher wyll I eate bred, ner drynke water with the in this place: for it is spoken vnto me by the worde of the LORDE: Thou shalt necher eate bred there, ner yet drynke water, necher shalt thou go agayne by the waye which thou wentest. He sayde vnto him: I myselfe am a prophet as well as thou, and an angell hath spoken with me by y worde of the LORDE, and saide: Bynge him agayne with the, that he maye eat bred, and drynte water. But he lyed vnto him, and broughce him agayne, so that he ate bred, and drante water in his house.

And whan they sat at the table, the worde of the LORDE came to the prophet that had broughce him agayne, and cryed vnto the man which was come fro Juda, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because thou hast bene dishobedient vnto the mouth of y LORDE, and hast not kept the commaundement that the LORDE thy God commaunded the, but hast turned backe, and hast eaten bred, and drante water in y place, wher of he saide vnto the: Thou shalt nether eat bred ner drynte water, therfore shall not thy body come in to thy fathers graue.

And whan he had eaten bred and drante the asse was sadled vnto the prophet whom he had brought agayne. And whā he was gone, a lyon founde him by the waye, & slewe him, and his body was cast in y waye. And the asse stode by him, and the lyon stode by the body. And whā men wente by, they sawe the body cast in the waye, and the lyon stondynge besyde the body, and came and tolde it in the cite, where the olde prophet dwelt.

Whan the prophet which had broughce him agayne, herde that, he sayde: It is the man of God, that hath bene dishobediēt vnto the mouth of the LORDE, therfore hath y LORDE deliuered him vnto the Lyon, which hath rente him, and slayne him, acordynge to the worde that the LORDE spake vnto him. And he sayde vnto his sonnes: Saddle me the asse. And whan they had sadled it, he wente, and founde his body cast in the waie and the asse and the lyon stondynge beside y body. The lyon had eatē nothynge of the body, nether had he come the asse. Then toke the prophet the deed coarfe of the man of God, and layed it vpo the asse, and broughce it agayne into the cite of the olde prophet, to mourne, and to burye him.

And he layed the coarfe in his awne graue, and they mourned for him: Alas my brother. And whan they had buryed him, he saide vnto his sonnes: Whan I dye, burye me in the graue where the mā of God is buried, and laye my bones besyde his bones. For it shal come to passe, that he cried (thow the worde of the LORDE) against Bethel, and agaynst all y houses of the hye places, which are in the cities of Samaria.

Howbeit after this acte dyd not Jeroboā turne from his euell waye, but was peruerced, and made prestes of the hye places, euē of the smallest of the people: Loke whom it pleased him, his handes he fylled, & he was prest of the hye places. And this turned to synne vnto the house of Jeroboā, to destroye him and to brynge him to naughte.

The XIII. Chapter.

At the same tyme was Abia the sonne of Jeroboam sicke, and Jeroboam saide vnto his wyfe: Get the vp, and disguise the, so that noman perceaue that thou art Jeroboams wyfe, and go vnto Silo: behold, there is the prophet Abias, which premysed me y I shulde be kynge ouer this people: and take with the ten loanes of bred and cates, and a cuppe with hony, & go to him, that he maye tell the how it shal go to the childe. And Jeroboams wyfe did so, and gat hir vp, and wente vnto Silo, and came in to the house of Abias. But Abias coulde not se, for his eyes were dymme for age. Nevertheless the LORDE sayde vnto Abias: Beholde, Jeroboams wyfe cometh, to aske a matter at the for hir senn, for he is sicke. Speake thou therfore vnto her thus & thus. Now whan she came in, shewid hir selfe straunge. But whan Abias herde the noyse of hir fete goynge in at the doore, he saide: Come in thou wyfe of Jeroboā. Why shewest thou thy selfe so straunge? I am sent vnto y an harde messaunger.

Go thy waye and tell Jeroboam: Thus sayeth y LORDE God of Israel: I haue exalted the from amonge the people, and set the to be prynce ouer my people of Israel, and haue rente the kyngdome from the house of David, and geuen it the. But thou hast not bene as my seruaunt David, which kepte my commaundementes, and walked after me with all his hert, so that he did onely y thinge that was righte in my sighte: and thou hast done worse then all they that haue bene before the: thou hast gone thy waye and made the other goddes, and molten ymages, to prouoke me vnto wrath, and hast cast me behynde thy backe.

Beholde therfore, I wil brynge my fortune vpon the house of Jeroboam, and wyl rote out from Jeroboam euē him that maketh water agaynst the wall, the prisoner and for saken in Israel: and the posterite of y house of Jeroboam wyl I swepe out, as donge is swepte out, tyll he be cleane broughce to naught. He that dieth (of Jeroboam) in the cite, the dogges shal eat him vp. But him y dyeth in the felde, shall the foules of the aire eat up, for the LORDE hath spoken it.

C Get the vp therfore, and go home, z whan thy fete enter in to y cite, the childe shal dye.
And all Israel shal bewayle him, and burye him. For he onely of Jeroboam shal come to the grave, because there is some good founde in him before the LORDE God of Israel, in Jeroboams house. * But the LORDE shall rayse him vp a kynge, which shal rote out y house of Jeroboam in that daue. And what is it, y is now in hande all ready? And the LORDE shal smyte Israel, like as a rede is mo ued in the water: z shal rote out Israel from this good londe, that he gaue vnto their fa thers, z shal scatter them beyonde the water, because they haue made their groues to pro uoke the LORDE vnto wiaich. And Israel shall be genen ouer because of the synne of Jeroboam, which hath synned him selfe, z made Israel to synne.

And Jeroboams wife gat her vp, wente hir waye, & came vnto Thirza. And whan she came vpo the thresholde of the house, þ childe dyed, & they buried him, & all Israel made lamentacion for him, * aordinge to þ worde of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruaunt Ahia þ prophet. * What more the re is to saye of Jeroboam, how he fought & raigned, beholde, it is wrytten in the Croni-cles of the kynges of Israel. The tyme that Jeroboam raigned, was two & twenty yea-re. And he slepte with his fathers. And Nadab his sonne was kyng in his steade.

Roboam & sonne of Salomon was kynge in Iuda. One and fortye yere olde was Roboam whā he was made kynge, & seven tene yere reigned he at Ierusalem, in the cite & the LORDE had chosen out of all & trybes of Israel, to see his name there. His mothers name was Naemaan Ammonitisse. And Iuda dyd & which displeased the LORDE, & prouoked him to indignacion more thē all & their fathers had done wth their synnes which they dyd: for they likewise buylded them hys places, pilers, and groues vpon eue ry hys hill, and amonge all grene trees. There were whoremōgers also, & they dyd all & abhominacions of & heythē, whom & LORDE drewe out before the children of Israel.

¶ But in þe fyfth yere of kynge Roboam wrote Sisack þe kynge of Egypte vp agaynst Jerusalem, & toke the treasure out of þe house of the LORDE, & out of the kynges house, & all that myghte be gotten, & toke all the shyldes of golde, * which Salemon caused to be made. In steade wherof þe kynge Rothese foremen, which kepte the doore of the Kynge's house. And as oft as the Kynge went into his house of the LORDE, the foremen bare them, and brought them agayne in to the foremens chamber.

What more there is to saye of Roboam, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the Kynges of Iuda. But betwene Roboam ⁊ Jeroboam there was warre as longe as they lyued. And Roboam slepte with his fathers, ⁊ was buried wth his fathers in the cite of Dauid. And his mothers name was Naema an Ammonitisse. And his sonne Abia was Kyng in his steade.

The XV. Chapter.

In the eighteenth yeare of kynge Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat, was Abia kynge in Iuda, and reigned thre yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was. Maecha, the doughter of Abisalem, and he walked in all the synnes of his father, which he had done before him, and his hert was not perfecte with the LORDE his God, as was the hert of Dauid his father. For because of Dauids sake dyd the LORDE his God geue him a lanterne at Ierusalem, so he raysed his sonne after him, & manceyr ed him at Ierusalem, because Dauid dyd the thynge he was righte in his sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all that he commanded him as long as he lyued (sawynge in the matter with Uias & Hethite). But there was warre betwene Roboam and Jeroboam, as long as he lyued.

What more there is to saye of Abia, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wyrtten in the Cronicles of the Kynges of Iuda. There was warre also betwene Abia and Jeroboam. And Abia slepte with his fathers, and they buried him in the cite of David. And Asa his sonne was kynge in his steade. In thē twentieth yere of kynge Jeroboam ouer Israel, was Asa kynge in Iuda, and reigned one & fortye yere at Ierusalem. His graund mothers name was Maecha the doughter of Abisalom. And Asa dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as dyd his father David. And he remoued y^e who remongers out of the londe, and put downe all the Idols that his fathers had made.
He put his mother from the mynistracion, that she had made vnto Miplezech in y^e gro-ue. And Asa roted out hir Miplezech, and brent it in the broke Cedron: but the hye places put he not downe. Yet was the hert of Asa perfecte with the LORDE as long as he lyued. And the syluer and golde, and vessels that his father had halowed, & soch as was sanctified vnto y^e house of the LORDE, that brought he in. And there was warre betwene Asa & Baesa the kyng of Israel, as longe as they lyued.

Baesa the kyng of Israel wente vp agaynst Iuda, and buylded Rama, that no man shulde go out and in of Asas syde the kyng of Iuda. Then toke Asa all the syluer and golde that was lefte in the treasure of the house of the LORDE, and in the treasure of the kynges house, and delyuered it in to his seruantes handes, & sent it vnto Benadab the sonne of Tabrimon the sonne of Hesion kyng of Siria, which dwelt at Damascus, and let saye vnto him: There is a couenanc betwene me and the, and betwene my father and thy father: therfore sende I the a present of syluer and golde, that thou shuldest breake the couenanc which thou hast with Baesa the kyng of Israel, that he maye departe fro me.

Benadab agreed vnto kyng Asa, and sent his capaynes agaynst the cities of Israel, and smote Iion and Dan, & Abel Beth Maecha, and all Cineroth with the whole londe of Nephtali. Whā Baesa herde that, he lefte of from buyldinge Rama, and wente agayne vnto Thirza.

Kyng Asa caused it be proclaimed in all Iuda: here be no man excepte. And they toke awaye the stones and tymber from Rama, wherewith Baesa had buylded. And kyng Asa buylded Geba Ben Jamun & Mispa therewith.

What more there is to saye of Asa, and of all his power, and all that he dyd, and of y^e cities which he buylded, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda: saynge that in his olde age he was diseased in his fete. And Asa slepte with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the cite of David his father. And Josaphat his sonne was kyng in his steade.

But Nadab the sonne of Jeroboam was kyng ouer Israel in the secōde yeare of Asa kyng of Iuda, & raigned ouer Israel two yeare, and dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the waye of his father, and in his synnes, wherewith he made Israel to synne. Howbeit Baesa the sonne of Abia of the house of Isachar conspired agaynst him, & smote him at Gibbethon, which was the philistynes: for Nadab and all Israel layed sege to Gibbethon. So Baesa slewe him in the thirde yeare of Asa kyng of Juda, & was kyng in his steade. Now whan he was kyng, he smote all the house of Jeroboam, and let nothinge of Jeroboam remayne that had breth, tyll he had destroyed it, acordyng to y^e worde of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruant Abia of Silo, because of Jeroboams synnes which he dyd, & made Israel synne withall: even with y^e prouokynge wherewith he displeased the LORDE God of Israel.

What more there is to saye of Nadab, & all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel, and there was warre betwene Asa & Baesa the kyng of Israel, as longe as they lyued.

In the thirde yeare of Asa kyng of Iuda was Baesa y^e sonne of Abia kyng ouer all Israel at Thirza foure and twentye yeare, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the waye of Jeroboam, and in his synnes, wherewith he made Israel to synne.

Nevertheless the worde of the LORDE came vnto Jehu the sonne of Hanani agaynst Baesa, and sayde: For so moch as I lifted the out of the dust, and made the pryncce ouer my people of Israel, and thou walkest in the waye of Jeroboam, and makest my people ouer Israel for to synne, to prouoke me vnto wrath thow their synnes, beholde, therfore wyll I take awaye the posterite of Baesa, and the posterite of his house, and wyll set thine house enen as the house of Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat. He that of Baesa dyeth in the cite, the dogges shal deuoure him: and who so beyng of him dyeth in the felde, the foules of the ayre shal eat him vp.

What more there is to saye of Baesa, & what he dyd, & of his power, beholde, it is wrytten in y^e Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Baesa slepte with his fathers, & was buried at Thirza: & his sonne Elia was kyng in his steade. And the worde of y^e LORDE came by the prophet Jehu the sonne of Hanani, ouer Baesa, and ouer his house, and agaynst all the euell that he dyd in the sighte of y^e LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath thow the workes of his handes: so that he became as the house of Jeroboam, and because he slewe this man.

The XVI. Chapter.

charctes cōspired against him. As for Elia, he was at Thirza, drante & was drontē in þ house of Arza the ruler of Thirza. And Simri came in, and slewe him in the seven & twentieth yeare of Asa kyng of Juda, and was kyng in his steade. And whan he was kyng, and sat vpon his seate, he smote all the house of Baesa, & lefte not so moch as one to make water agaynst þ wall: his bloud & uengens also & his frendes. Thus dyd Simri destroye all the house of Baesa, acordinge to the worde of the LORDE, which he spake ouer Baesa by the prophet Jehu, because of all the synnes of Baesa and of Elia his sonne, which they dyd, and made Israel for to synne, to prouoke the LORDE God of Israel vnto wrath thorow their vanities. What more there is to saye of Elia, and all that he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

B In the seven and twentieth yeare of Asa kyng of Juda, was Simri kyng viij. dayes at Thirza, and the people laye before Gibbethon of the Philistynes. But whan the people in the hoost herde saye þ Simri had conspired and slayne the kyng, then all Israel the same daye made Amri the chiefe capayne kyng ouer all in the hoost. And Amri wente vp and all Israel with him from Gibbethon, and layed sege vnto Thirza. But whan Simri sawe þ the cite shulde be wonne, he wente in to the palace in the kynges house, & brent it with þ kynges house, & dyed because of his synnes which he had committed, in that he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the waye of Jeroboam, and in his synnes which he dyd, wherewith he made Israel to synne.

C What more there is to saye of Simri, and how he conspired, beholde, it is wrytten in y Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. At the same tyme were þ people denyded in two partes: the one parte helde with Thibni the sonne of Ginath, that they might make him kyng: the other halfe helde with Amri. But the people that helde with Amri, were mightier then the people which helde with Thibni y sonne of Ginath. And Thibni dyed, and Amri was kyng.

In þ one and thirtieth yeare of Asa kyng of Juda, was Amri kyng ouer Israel twelue yeares, & reigned at Thirza sixe yeares. He boughte the mount of Samaria of Semer for two hundred weight of syluer, & buylded vpon the mount, and called the cite which he buylded, after þ name of Semer þ owner of þ mount of Samaria. And Amri dyd that which was euell in þ sighte of the LORDE, and was worse then all they that were before him, and walked in all þ wayes of Jeroboam þ sonne of Nebat, and in his synnes, wherewith he made Israel to synne, so that they prouoked the LORDE God of Israel vnto wrath in their vanities. What more there is to saye of Amri, & all that he dyd, and his power that he exercised, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Amri slepte with his fathers, & was buried in Samaria, and Achab his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the eight & thirtieth yeare of Asa kyng of Juda, was Achab the sonne of Amri kyng ouer Israel, & reigned ouer Israel at Samaria two & twentieth yeare, & dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, more the all they þ were before him. And he thoughte it but a small matter to walke in the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat: and toke Jesabel the daughter of Ech Baal kyng of Sidon to wife, and wente and serued Baal, and worshiped him. And vnto Baal he set vp an altare in Baals house, which he buylded him in Samaria, and made a groue: so that Achab dyd more to prouoke the God of Israel vnto wrath, then all the kynges þ were before him in Israel.

B And he gat him vp, and wente vnto Sarepta. And whan he came to the gate of y cite, beholde, the wedowe was there, and gathered stickes. And he called her, and sayde: Getch me a litle water in a vessill, y I maye drinke. And as she was geinge to fetch it, he cried vnto her, z sayde: Brynge me a moysell of bried also in thine hande. She sayde: As truly as the LORDE y God lyueth, I haue no bried, but an handfull of floure in a pitcher, z a curtesy oyle in a cruse: and beholde, I haue gathered vp one or two stickes, z wyll go and prepare it for me and my sonne, that we maye eate and dye.

Elias sayde vnto her: Feare not, go thy waye, z do as thou hast sayde: yet make me first a moysell of bried therof, z brynge it me forth: z afterward shalt thou make it for y z thy sonne. For thus sayeth y LORDE God of Israel: The meell in the pitcher shall not be spent, z the oyle in y cruse shall not fayll, vnto the daye y the LORDE shal cause it for to rayne vpo earth. She wente z dyd as Elias sayde. And he ate, z she also, and hir house a certayne season. The meell in the pitcher was not mynished, and the oyle in the cruse fayled not, acordinge to the worde of y LORDE which he spake by Elias.

C And after these actes the sonne of the wise of y house was sicke: and his sicknes was so excedinge sore, that there remayned no brech in him. And she sayde vnto Elias: What haue I to do with the, thou man of God? Art thou come in vnto me, y my synne shulde be kepte in remembraunce, z that my sonne shulde be slayne? He sayde vnto her: Geue me thy sonne. And he toke him fro hir lappe, z caried him vp into y chamber where he him selfe dwelt, and layed him vpo his bed, z called vpon the LORDE, and sayde: O LORDE my God, hast thou dealt so euell w the wedow with whom I dwell, y thou woldest slaye hir sonne? And he stretched out him selfe ouer the childe thre tymes, z called vpon the LORDE, and saide: O LORDE my God, let the soule of this childe come agayne in to him. And the LORDE herde the voyce of Elias. And the soule of the childe came agayne vnto him, z he reuyued. The XVIII. Chapter.

After a longe season came y worde of the LORDE vnto Elias in the thirde years, z sayde: * Go thy waye, z shewe y selfe vnto Achab, y I maye cause it for to rayne vpon earth. And Elias wente to shewe him selfe vnto Achab. But there was a greate dertth i Samaria. And Achab called Abdia his chiefe officer: (As for Abdia, he feared y LORDE greatly: for wha Jesabel roced out y prophetes of y LORDE, Abdia toke an C. prophetes, and hyd them in caues, here fiftye, z there fiftye, z prouyded for them w bried and water.) Achab now sayde vnto Abdia: Go thorow the londe vnto all the welles of water z ryuers, yf happly we maye finde hay, z to saue y horses z mules, y all the catell per. she not. And they parted the selues into the londe, to go thorow it. Achab departed the one waye alone, and Abdia y other waye alone.

Now whan Abdia was on y waye, Elias as met him. And whan he knewe him, he fell downe vpon his face, z sayde: Art not thou my lord Elias? He sayde: yee, go thy waye, and tell y lorde: beholde, Elias is here. But he sayde: What haue I offended, that thou wilt delynen thy seruante in to the handes of Achab, that he maye slaye me? As truly as the LORDE thy God lyueth, there is no people ner king dome, but my lorde hath sent thither to see the. And whan they sayde: He is not here, he toke an ooth of the same kyng dome and nation, that they had not founde the. And now thou sayest: Go tell y LORDE: beholde, Elias is here. Now whan I were gone from the, the spere of the LORDE shulde take y awaye, I cannot tell whither: and yf I then came and telde Achab, and founde the not, he shulde slaye me: But thy seruante feareth the LORDE from his youth vp. Hath it not bene tolde my lorde what I dyd, whan Jesabel slewe the prophetes of the LORDE, how that I hyd an hundred of the LORDES prophetes, here fiftye, and there fiftye in the caues, and prouyded for them with bried and water? And then sayest now: Go thy waye, tell thy lorde: Elias is here, that he maye slaye me. Elias saide: As truly as y LORDE y haue lyueth, before whom I stode, I wil shewe my selfe vnto the in this daye. Then wete Abdia to mete Achab, z tolde hym. And Achab wete for to mete Elias.

C And whan Achab sawe Elias, Achab sayde vnto him: Art thou he that troublest Israel? he sayde: I trouble not Israel, * but it is thou and thy fathers house, because ye haue forsaken the commandementes of the LORDE, and walke after Baal. Go to, sende forth now, and gather me all Israel together vnto mount Carmell, and the foure hundredeth and fiftye prophetes of Baal, and the foure hundredeth prophetes of y^e grone, which eate of Iesabels table. So Achab sent vnto all the children of Israel, z gathered the prophetes together vnto mount Carmell.

Then stepte Elias vnto all the people, z sayde: How longe halte ye on both y^e sydes? If the LORDE be God, the walke after him: but yf Baal be he, the folowe him. And the people gaue him no answer. The sayde Elias vnto the people: I onely am lesce a prophet of y^e LORDE: but Baals prophetes are foure C. and fiftie mē. Geue vs now two bullockes, z let them chose one bullocke, z hewe him in peces, z laye him vpon the wod, z put no fyre thereon: so wil I take y^e other bullocke, z laye him vpon the wod, z put no fyre thereon also: call ye then vpon the name of y^e god, z I wil call vpon the name of the LORDE: to the which God now answereth with fyre, let the same be God. And all the people answered z sayde: That is righte. And Elias sayde vnto Baals prophetes: Chose ye one bullocke, and do ye it first (for ye are many) and call ye vpon the name of youre god, z laye no fyre thereon.

And they toke the bullocke which he gaue them, z prepared it, z called vpon the name of Baal from the mornynge vntyll the noone daye, and sayde: O Baal heare vs. But there was nether voyce ner answer. And they hopped aboute the altare, as their vse was to do. Now whan it was noone daye, Elias mocked them, and sayde: Crye loude. For he is a god, peradventure he is musynge, or hath somwhat to do, or is gone some iourneye, or haplye he slepeth, so that he wolde be waked vp. And they cried loude, and prouoked the selues with knyues z botkens, (as their maner was) tyll y^e bloude folowed. But whan y^e noone daye was past, they prophesied vntyll the tyme that the meat offerynge shulde be offered, z there was nether voyce ner answer, ner one to regarde them.

Then sayde Elias vnto all the people: Come hither all ye people vnto me. And whan all y^e people came to him, he repayed y^e altare of the LORDE y^e was broken, * z toke twelue stones acordinge to the nombre of y^e

And he sayde: Do it yet once. And they dyd it once agayne. And he sayde: Do it y^e thirde tyme. And they dyd it the thirde tyme. And y^e water ranne aboute the altare, and y^e pytt was full of water also.

And whan the tyme was to offer y^e meat offerynge, Elias stepte forth, and sayde: O LORDE God of Abraham, of Isaac and of Israel, let it be knowne this daye, that thou art God in Israel, and I thy seruant, and that I haue done all this acordinge vnto y^e worde. Heare me O LORDE, O heare me, y^e this people maye knowe, how that thou art the LORDE God, that thou mayest afterwarde turne their hertes. * Then fell downe the fyre of the LORDE, and consumed the burnt offerynge, the wod, the stones and the earth, and lifted vp the water that was in the pytt. Whan all the people sawe that, they fell vpon their faces, and sayde: The LORDE is God, y^e LORDE is God. Elias sayde vnto them: * Laye handes vpon Baals prophetes, y^e none of them escape. And they toke them. And Elias broughte them downe vnto y^e brooke Sydon, z slewe the there.

AND Achab tolde Iesabel all y Elias had done, z how he had slayne all Baals prophetes w the swerde. The sent Iesabel a messaunger vnto Elias, sayenge: The goddes do this z that vnto me, yf I come morow aboute this tyme, make not thy soule as one of these. Then was he afrayed, z gat him vp, z wente where he wolde, z came vnto Bersēba in Iuda, and leste his lad there. But he him selfe wente a daies iourney in to y wyldernes, z came in, z sat him downe vnder a Juniper tre, z wysshed vnto his soule y he mighte dye, z sayde: It is now ynough LORDE, take my soule, for I am no better then my fathers. He sayde: I have bene zelous for the LORDE God Zebaoth: for the children of Iisrael haue forsaken thy conenant, and broken downe thine altares, and slayne thy prophetes with the swerde, and I am leste onely, z they seke to take awaye my life. He sayde: Go forth, and stonde vpon the mount before the LORDE. And beholde, the LORDE wete ouer: and a greete mightie wynde, which rouethe mountaynes, and brake the harde stones, came before the LORDE, but the LORDE was not in the wynde. So the kyng of Israel called all the Elders of the lode, & sayde: Mark well & se, what my selfe this ma sekerh: he sent vnto me for my wyues & children, for syluer & golde, & I haue not sayde him naye. Then sayde all the Elders and all the people vnto him: Thou shalt not cōsente ner agree vnto him. And he spake vnto Benadabs messaungers, Saye vnto my lord & kyng: All the thynges wherfore thou dydest sende vnto me & seruauant at first, wil I do, but this can I not do. And the messaungers wete, and tolde this agayne. The sent Benadab vnto him sayenge: The goddes do this and I vnto me, yf the dust of Samaria shalbe ynough, for every one of my people to brynge me an handfull therof. But the kyng of Israel answered, & sayde: Tell him, Let not him putterh on yf harnes, make his boast like him & hath put it of. And beholde, there came a prophēt vnto Achab the kyng of Israel, & saide: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Hast thou sene all this greate multitude? Beholde, this daie wil I deliuer the in to yf hande, so & thou shalt knowe, how I am the LORDE. Achab sayde: By whom? he sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Euen by the yonge men of the rulers of the lode. he sayde: Who shal order the battayl? he sayde: Thou. As for Benadab, he drank and was dronken in the panylion with the two & thirtie kynges which were come to helpe him. And the yonge men of the rulers of the lode wente forth first.

Benadab sent forth, & they brought him worde, & sayde: There come men out of Samaria. he sayde: Take them alyue, whether they be come forth for peace, or for warre. But whan the lode rulers yonge men were gone forth, and the hoost behynde them, euer y one smote him & came in his waye. And the Sirians fled, and Israel folowed after them. And Benadab the kyng of Syria escaped with horses and horsmē. And the kyng of Israel wente forth, and smote horses and charettes, and dyd a greate slaughter on the Syrians.

Then came there a prophēt vnto the kyng of Israel, and sayde vnto him: Wo thy waye and strength the, and take hede, and loke well what thou doest: for whan the yeare is aboute, the kyng of Syria shall come agaynst the of the new. For the kyng of Syria's seruantes sayde vnto him: Their goddes are goddes of the mountaynes, therefore haue they gotten the victory.

But let vs fyghte with them on the playne, and thou shalt se that we shal overcome them. Do thus, put awaye the kynges every one from his place, and set dukes in their steades, and appoynte the an hoost as was that which thou hast lost, & horses & charettes as the other were, and let vs fyghte agaynst the in the plaine, and thou shalt se that we shal haue the victory. he cōsented vnto their voyce, and dyd so.

Now whan the yeare was gone aboute, Benadab appoynted the Sirians, and wente vp towarde Aphet, to fyghte agaynst Israel, and the childre of Israel mustured, and prouyded them selues with veylaies, and wete to mete them, and pitched their tentes ouer agaynst them, like two litle flockes of goates but the lode was full of the Syrians.

And there came a man of God, and sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because the Syrians haue sayde, that the LORDE is a God of the mountaynes and not a God of the valleys, therefore haue I geuen all this greate heape in to thy handes, that ye maye knowe how that I am the LORDE. And they pitched their tentes right ouer agaynst them seven dayes. But vpon yf seuenth daye they wente together in to the battayll: and the children of Israel smote of the Sirians an hundred thousande fore men in one daye, and the remnaunt fled to Aphet in to the cite, and the wall fell vpon the other seven and twenty thousande men. And Benadab fled also vnto the cite in to a litle chamber.

Then sayde his seruantes vnto him: Beholde, we haue herde that the kynges of the house of Israel are mercifull kynges, let vs therefore put sack cloth aboute oure loynes, and halters aboute oure neckes, & go forth to the kyng of Israel, peradventure ye shal let yf soule lyue.

nes, and halters aboute their neckes, and came to the kynge of Israel, and sayde: Benadab thy seruaunt sayeth vnto the: O let my soule lyue. He sayde: yf he be yet alyue, he is my brother. And the men toke him shortly at his worde, and expounded it for them selues and sayde: See Benadab is thy brother. He sayde: Come and brynge him. The wente Benadab forth vnto him, and he caused him to sit vpon the charet, and sayde vnto him: The cities that my father toke from thy father, wyl I geue the agayne. And make thou strees for thyselfe at Damascō, as my father did at Samaria, so wyl I let the go with a bonde of peace. And he made a couenaunt with him, and let him go.

Then spake there a man amonge the children of the prophetes vnto his neighbour by the worde of the LORDE: I praye the smite me. But he refused to smite him. Then said he vnto him, because thou hast not hearkened vnto the voyce of the LORDE, beholde, therefore shall there a lyon smyte the, whan thou goest fro me. And whan he wente fro him, a lyon founde him, and slewe him.

And he founde another man, and sayde: I praye the smyte me. And the man smote him, and wounded him. Then wente the prophet, and stepte vnto the kynge by the way syde, and altered his face with asches. And whan the kynge wente by, he cried vpon yf kynge, and sayde: Thy seruaunt wente forth in to the battayll, and beholde, there wente one asyde, and broughte a man vnto me, and sayde: Kepe this man: yf he be myssed, thy soule shall be in steade of his soule, or els thou shalt weye downe an hundred weighte of syluer. And whyle thy seruaunt had here & there to do, he was awaye. The kynge of Israel sayde vnto him: It is thine owne indgment, thou hast geuen it thyselfe.

Then put he the asches from his face in all the haist. And the kynge of Israel knewe him, that he was one of the prophetes. And he sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Because thou hast let the damned man go, therefore shall thy soule be for his soule, and thy people for his people. And the kynge of Israel departed vnto his house, beinge troubled in his mynde and full indignacion, and came to Samaria.

The XXI. Chapter.

After these actes it fortuneth, that Naboth the Iesraelite had a vynyarde at Iesreel besyde the palace of Achab kynge of Samaria. And Achab spake to Naboth, and sayde: Geue me thy vynyarde,

The xxi. Chap.

I wyl make me an herbgarden therof, because it is so nye my house: I wyl geue the a better vynyarde for it: or yf it please the, I wyl geue the syluer for it, as moch as it is worth. But Naboth sayde vnto Achab: The LORDE let that be farre fro me, that I shulde geue yf my fathers heretage. Then came Achab home, beinge moued and full of indignacion, because of the worde that Naboth the Iesraelite had spoken vnto him, & sayde: I wyl not geue the my fathers inheritance. And he laied him downe vpon his bed, and turned his face asyde, and ate no bried. Then Iesabel his wyfe came in to him and sayde vnto him: What is yf matter, that thy spere is so cōbried, and that thou eatest no bried? He sayde vnto her: I haue spokē vnto Naboth the Iesraelite, and sayde: Geue me thy vynyarde for money: or yf it please yf, I wyl geue the another for it. But he sayde: I wyl not geue the my vynyarde.

Then sayde Iesabel his wyfe vnto him: What kingdome were in Israel, yf thou diddest it? Stonde vp, and ate bried, I wyl get the the vynyarde of Naboth the Iesraelite. And she wrote a letter vnder Achabs name, and sealed it with his signet, and sent it vnto yf Elders and rulers in his cite, which dwelt aboute Naboth, and wrote thus in yf letter: Proclame a fast, and set Naboth aboue in the people, and set two men of Belial before him, to testifie and saye: Thou hast blasphemed God and the kynge. And brynge him forth, and stone him to death.

And the Elders and rulers of his cyte, which dwelt in his cite, dyd as Iesabel had commaunded them, acordynge as she had wrytten in the letter that she sent vnto them and they proclaimed a fast, and caused Naboth to sit aboue amonge the people. Then came the two men of Belial, and stode before him, and testified agaynst Naboth in yf presence of the people, and sayde: Naboth hath blasphemed God and the kynge.

Then broughte they him out of the cite, and stoned him to death. And they sent Iesabel worde, sayenge: Naboth is stoned & put to death. Whā Iesabel herde that Naboth was stoned and deed, she sayde vnto Achab: Up, and take possession of the vynyarde of Naboth the Iesraelite, which he denyed to geue the for money: for Naboth lyueth no more but is deed. And whan Achab herde yf Naboth was deed, he rose to go downe vnto the vynyarde of Naboth the Iesraelite, and to take possession of it.

But the worde of the LORDE came to Elias the Thesbite, and sayde: Get the vp, and go downe to mere Achab the kyng of Israel, which is at Samaria: beholde, he is in Naboths vnyarde, into the which he is gone downe to take possession of it, and talke thou with him, and speake: Thus sayeth the LORD: Thou hast slayne, and taken in possession. And thou shalt talke morouer vnto him, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORD: Euen in the place where the dogges licked vp Naboths bloude, shall the dogges lick thy bloude also. And Achab sayde vnto Elias: Hast thou euer founde me thine enemye? He saide: Yee, I haue founde the, because thou art euen solde to do euell in the sighte of the LORD. Beholde, I wyll brynge myssfortune vpon the, and take awayethy posterite, and wil rote out from Achab, euen him that maketh water agaynst the wall, and him that is shut vp and lesse behynde in Israel: and thy house wyll I make as the house of Jeroboam & sonne of Nebat, and as the house of Baesa the sonne of Ahia, because of & prouocation wherewith thou hast prouoked me vnto wrath, and made Israel to synne.

And ouer Jesabel spake the LORD also and sayde: The dogges shal deuoure Jesabel in yf felde of Israel. Who so of Achab dyeth in & cite, him shal the dogges eate vp: and who so dyeth in the felde, the foules vnder the heauen shal eate him vp. So cleane & solde to do myschese in & sighte of the LORD hath no man bene, as Achab: for his Jesabel hath so disceaued him, and he maketh him selfe a greates abhominacion, that he goeth after Idols, acordige vnto all as dyd the Amouites, whom the LORD expelled before the children of Israel.

But whan Achab herde these wordes, he rote his clothes, & put a sack cloth on his body, & fasted, and slepte in sack cloth, and wente aboute hanginge downe his heade. And the worde of the LORD came to Elias the Thesbite, & sayde: Hast thou not sene how Achab humbleth him selfe before me? For so moch now as he humbleth him selfe in my sighte, I wil not brynge that plage whyle he lyueth; but by his sonnes life wil I brynge myssfortune vpon his house.

The XXII. Chapter.

Ald there passed ouer thre yeares, that there was no warre betwene the Syrians & Israel. But in the thirde yeare wente Josaphat the kyng of Iuda downe to the kyng of Israel. And the kyng of Israel sayde vnto his seruantes: Knowe ye not & Ramoth in Gilead is oures? and we syt styll, and take it not out of the hande of the kyng of Syria. And he sayde vnto Josaphat: Wilt thou go with me to the battail vnto Ramoth in Gilead? Josaphat sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: I wyll be as thou my people as thy people, and my hoises as thy hoises. And Josaphat sayde vnto & kyng of Israel: Are this daye at the worde of the LORD. Then the kyng of Israel gathered the prophetes aboute a foure hundred men, and sayde vnto them: Shal I go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to fighte, or shal I let it alone? They sayde: Go vp, & the LORD shal deliuer it in to yf kynges hande. But Josaphat sayde: Is there not one prophet here more of & LORD, that we maye aske at him?

The kyng of Israel saide vnto Josaphat: Here is yet a man, one Micheas the sonne of Jemla, at whom we maye aske of the LORD: but I hate him, for he prophecieth me no good, but euell. Josaphat sayde: Let not the kyng saye so. Then called the kyng of Israel a chamberlayne, and sayde: Brynge hither soone Micheas the sonne of Jemla. As for the kyng of Israel and Josaphat & kyng of Iuda, they sat ether of them vpon his seate, arayed in their garmentes in the place at & dore of the porte of Samaria, and all yf prophetes prophecieth before the. And Sedechias the sonne of Enaana had made him hornes of yron, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORD: With these shalt thou pusshe at & Syrians, tyll thou brynge them to naughte. And all the prophetes prophecieth likewyse, and sayde: Go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead, thou shalt prospere right well, & the LORD shal deliuer it in to the kynges hande. And the messaunger that wente to call Micheas sayde vnto him: Beholde, The wordes of & prophetes are with one atorde good before the kyng, let thy worde therfore be as their worde, and speake thou good also.

Micheas sayde: As truly as the LORD liueth, I loke what the LORD sayeth vnto me, & I wil I speake. And whan he came to the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto him: Micheas, shal we go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to fighte, or shall we let it alone? He sayde vnto him: Yee, go vp, thou shalt prospere right well, the LORD shal geue it in to the kynges hande. But the kyng sayde vnto him agayne: I charge & that thou saye no other thinge vnto me but the trouth, in the name of & LORD. He sayde: I sawe all Israel scattered abroad vpon the mountaynes, as the shepethat haue no shepherde. And the LORD saide: Have these no lordes: Let every one turne home agayne in peace. Then sayde y^e kynge of Israel vnto Josaphat: Toldst thou not y^e that he wolde prophesye me no good, but euell?

D

He sayde: Heare now therfore the worde of the LORDE: * I sawe the LORDE syt vpon his seate, and all the hoost of heauen stondinge by him at his righte hande & at his lefte. And the LORDE saide: Who wil disceave Achab to go vp, & fall at Ramoth in Gilead. And one sayde this, another that. Then wete there forth a spere, & stode before the LORDE, and sayde: I wyl disceave him. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherwith? He sayde vnto him: I wyl go forth, and be a false spere in the mouth of all his prophetes. He saide: Thou shalt disceave him, and shalt be able: go forth and do so. Beholde now, * the LORDE hath geue a false spere in y^e mouth of all these y^e prophetes, and the LORDE hath spoken euell ouer the. Then stepte forth Sedechias the sonne of Cnaena, and smote Micheas vpon the cheke, and sayde: What, is the spere of the LORDE departed from me, to speake with the? Micheas sayde: Beholde, thou shalt se it in y^e daye, whan thou shalt go fro one chamber to another to hyde the.

The kynge of Israel sayde: Take Micheas, and let him remayne with Amnon the ruler of the cite, and with Joas the kynge's sonne, and saye: Thus sayeth the kynge: Put this man in prison, and fede him with bread and water of trouble, tyll I come agayne in peace. Micheas sayde: If thou comest agayne in peace, then hath not the LORDE spoken thorow me. And he sayde: hearken to all ye people.

So the kynge of Israel and Josaphat y^e kynge of Iuda wente vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And the kynge of Israel sayde vnto Josaphat: Chaunge thy clothes, and come in to y^e battayll in thine arae. The kynge of Israel chaunged his clothes also, and wete in to the battayll. But the kynge of Siria commaunded the rulers of his charettes (of whom there were two and thirtie) and saide: We shal fight nether agaynst small ner greater, but onely agaynst the kynge of Israel. And whan the rulers of the charettes sawe Josaphat, they thought it had bene the kynge of Israel, and fell vpon him with fightinge. But Josaphat cried. So whan the rulers of the charettes sawe that it was not y^e kynge of Israel, they turned backe fro him.

maue and y^e longes. And he sayde vnto his charetman: Turne thine harte, and cary me out of the hoost, for I am wounded. And y^e battayll was sore the same daie. And the kynge stode vpo his charet, agaynst the Syrians and dyed in the eueninge, and the bloude ranne from the wounde in to the myddes of the charet. And whan the Sonne wente downe there was a proclamation made in the hoost, and sayde: Every one gett him in to his cite, and to his countre. Thus the kynge dyed, and was broughte vnto Samaria, and they buryed him in Samaria. And whan they washed the charett in the pole of Samaria, * y^e dogges licked his bloude (but the harlettes washed him) accordinge to the worde of y^e LORDE which he spake.

What more there is to saye of Achab, & all y^e he dyd, and of the Query house which he buylded, beholde, it is wyrtten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. So Achab slepte with his fathers, and his sonne Ahasia was kynge in his steade.

* And Josaphat the sonne of Asa was kynge ouer Iuda in the fourth yere of Achab kynge of Israel, and was fyue and thirtie yere olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned fyue and twentye yere at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Asuba y^e daughter of Sibi, and he walked in all the waye of his father Asa, & departed not there from. And he dyd that which was right in y^e sighte of the LORDE, yet put he not awaye y^e hie places, and y^e people offered and burnt incense yet vpon the hie places, and he had peace with the kynge of Israel.

What more there is to saye of Josaphat and the mighte that he exercised, and how he fought, beholde, it is wyrtten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. * He put out of the londe also the whoremongers that yet were lefte, which remayned ouer in the tyme of his father Asa. And at that tyme there were no kynges in Edom. And Josaphat had caused to make shippes vpon the See, which shulde go to fetch golde in Ophir, but they wente not: for they were broken at Ezion Gaber. At that tyme sayde Ahasia the sonne of Achab vnto Josaphat: Let my seruantes passe with thy seruantes in the shippes. But Josaphat wolde not. And Josaphat slepte with his fathers, and was buryed in y^e cite of David. And Joram his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The first Chapter.

Ahasia the sonne of Achab was kyng ouer Israel at Samaria in y seuententh yeare of Josaphat king of Juda, & reigned ouer Israel two yeares, & dyd

þ which was euell in þ sight of the LORDE, and walked in the waye of his father and of his mother, & in the waie of Jeroboam y sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to syn-ne. And serued Baal, and worshipped him, and displeased the LORDE God of Israel, euell as his father dyd. The Moabites also fell awaye from Israel, whan Achab was deede.

And Ochosias fell thorow y grate in his chamber at Samaria, and was deede sicke, and sent messaungers, and sayde vnto them: Go youre waye, and are counsell at Beelzebub the god of Ekron, whether I shall recover

DE sayde vnto Elias the Thesbite: Up, & go in Israel, that ye go to are counsell at þ god of Ekron? Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE:

Thou shalt not come from the bed wheron thou lvest, but shalt dye the death.

And Elias wente his waye. And whā þ messaunges came to Ochosias agayne, he sayde vnto the: Why come ye agayne? They sayde vnto him: There came vp a man in ou-him: he had a tough heer vpon him, and a letheren gyrdell aboute his loynes. he sayde: It is Elias the Thesbite.

C And he sent vnto him a captaine ouer fiftye, with the same fystye. And whan he came vnto him, beholde, he sat above vpon the mount. he sayde vnto him: Thou mā of God, the kyng sayeth: Thou shalt come downe. Elias answered the captaine ouer fiftye, and sayde vnto him: If I be a man of God, the fyre fall downe then from heauen, and consume the and thy fystie. Then fell there fyre from heauen, and consumed him and his fystie. And agayne he sent another captaine ouer fiftye vnto him, with his fystie, which answered, and sayde vnto him: Thou man of God, thus sayeth the kyng: Come downe in all the haist. Elias answered, and saide: If I be a mā of God, yf fyre fall downe from heauen, and consume the and thy fystie. Then fell the fyre of God from heauen, and consumed him, and his fystie. Agayne, he sent vnto him the thirde captaine ouer fiftye, with his fystie.

D Now whan he came to him, he kneled to Elias, and besoughte him, and sayde vnto him: Thou man of God, let my soule and yf soules of thy seruantes these fiftye, be somewhat worth in thy syghte. Beholde, the fyre fell downe from heauen, and hath consumed the fyrst two captaines ouer fiftye wth their fysties. But now let my soule be somewhat worth in thy syghte. Then saide the angel of the LORDE vnto Elias: Go downe with him, and feare him not. And he gat him vp, and wente downe with him vnto yf kyng.

And he sayde vnto him: Thus saith the LORDE: Because thou hast sent forth messengers, and caused to are counsell at Beelzebub the god of Ekron, as though there were no God in Israel to are counsell at his worde, therfore shalt thou not come from the bed wheron thou hast layed the, but shalt dye yf death. So he dyed, acorbynge to the worde of the LORDE which Elias sayde. And Joram (his brother) was kyng in his steade in the seconde yeare of Joram the sonne of Josaphat kyng of Juda: for he had no sonne.

What more there is to saye of Ochosias, what he dyd, beholde, it is wyrtte in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel.

The II. Chapter.

21 Whan the LORDE was mynded to take vp Elias in the tempest, Elias and Eliseus wente from Gilgall. And Elias sayde to Eliseus: Tary thou here I praye the, for the LORDE hath sent me vnto Bethel. But Eliseus sayde: As truly as the LORDE liueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyll not forsake the. And whan they came downe vnto Bethel, the prophetes children that were at Bethel, wete forth to Eliseus, and sayde vnto him: Knowest thou not, that the LORDE wyl take thy lord awaye from thy heade this daye? he saide: I knowe it well, holde ye youre peace.

And Elias sayde vnto him: Eliseus, tary thou here I praye the, for the LORDE hath sent me vnto Jericho. Neuerthelesse he sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wyl not forsake the.

And whan they came vnto Jericho, the prophetes children which were at Jericho, strepte forth to Eliseus and sayde vnto him: Knowest thou not that the LORDE wyl take yf lord awaye from thy heade this daye? he sayde: I knowe it well, holde ye yo^r peace. And Elias sayde vnto him: I praie the tary here, for yf LORDE hath sent me vnto Jordane. But he sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as thy soule lyueth, I wil not forsake the. And they wente both together. But fiftye men of yf prophetes children wete forth, and stode ouer agaynst the a farre of: but they both stode by Jordane. Then toke Elias his cloke, and wrapped it together, and smote the water, which deuyned it selfe on both the sydes, so that they wete dry shod thorow it. And whan they were come ouer, Elias sayde vnto Eliseus: Are what I shall do for the, afore I be taken awaye from the. Eliseus saide: That thy spiret maye be vpo me to speake twyse as moch.

he sayde: Thou hast desired an harde thinge: neuertheles yf thou shalt se me whā I am taken awaye from the, it shal be so: If no, the shal it not be. And as they were goinge together, and he talked, there came a fyrie charet with horses of fyre, and parted the both asunder. And so wente Elias vp to heauen in the storme. But Eliseus sawe it, and cryed: My father, my father, the charetman of Israel and his horsmē. And he sawe him nomore.

And he toke holde of his clothes, and rente them in two peces, and toke vp Elias cloke that was fallen from him, and turned backe, and stode by the shore of Jordane, and toke the same cloke of Elias which was fallen from him, and smote it in the water, and saide: Where is now the LORDE God of Elias? And he smote it in to the water, and then parted it asunder on both the sydes, and E-Eliseus went e thorow.

D And whan the prophetes children which were at Jericho ouer agynst him, sawe him, they sayde: The spere of Elias resteth vpon Eliseus, and so they wete forth to mete him, and worshipped him to the grounde, and sayde vnto him: Beholde, there are fiftye valiant men amonge thy seruantes, let them go and seke thy lord, peradventure the spere of the LORD hath taken him, and cast him vpon some mountaine or in some valley. But he saide: Sende them not. Nevertheless they constrayned him, tyll he was ashamed, and sayde: Let them go. And they sent fiftye men, which soughte him thre dayes: but they founde him not, and came agayne vnto him. And he abode at Jericho, and sayde vnto them: Toldenot I you, that ye shulde not go? And the men of the cite sayde vnto Eliseus: Beholde, there is good dwellinge in this cite, as my lord seyth, but the water is euell, and the londe vnfructfull.

E He sayde: Bynge me hither a new vessell, and put salt in it. And they broughte it him. Then wete he forth vnto the well of water, and cast the salt therin, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORD: I haue healed this water: from hence forth shal there no deed ner vnfructfulness come of it. So the water was healed vnto this daye, acordinge to the worde of Eliseus which he spake.

And he wete vp towarde Bethel. And as he was goynge vp by the waye, there came litle boyes out of the cite, and mocked him, and sayde: Come vp here thou balde heade, come vp here thou balde heade. And he turned him abouce. And whā he sawe them, he cursed them in the name of the LORD. Then came there two Beeres out of the wod, and rente two and fortye of the children. From thence wete he vp vnto mount Carmel, and from it turned he backe to Samaria.

The III. Chapter.

A Dram the sonne of Achab was kynge ouer Israel at Samaria in y eighth tenth yeare of Josaphat kynge of Iuda, and reigned xij. yeares, and dyd y which was euell in y sighte of y LORD, but not as his father and his mother: for he put awaye y pilers of Baal, which his father caused to make. Nevertheless he cleued vnto y synnes of Jeroboam y sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne, and departed not there fro.

Mesa y kynge of the Moabites had many shepe, and payed tribute vnto the kynge of Israel w the wolle of an hundred thousande labes, and of an hundred thousande rāmes.

But whan Achab was deed, the kynge of y Moabites fell awaye fro the kynge of Israel. At y same tyme wete kynge Joram fro Samaria, and mustered all Israel, and sent vnto Josaphat kynge of Iuda, sayenge: The kynge of the Moabites is fallen awaye from me, come thou w me to fighte agaynst y Moabites. He sayde: I wil come vp, I am euent as thou, and my people as y people, and my hoises as thy hoises. And sayde moicner: Which waye wil we go vp? He sayde: by the waye in the wyldernesse of Edom.

So the kynge of Israel, the kynge of Iuda, and the kynge of Edom wente forth. And whan they had gone aboute seuē dayes iourney, y hoost and the catell y were amonge the had no water. Then sayde the kynge of Israel: Alas, the LORD hath called these thre kynges, to deliuer the in to the hande of the Moabites. But Josaphat sayde: Is here no prophet of y LORD, y we maye are coucell at y LORD by him? Then answered one of y kynge of Israels seruantes, and saide: Here is Eliseus y sonne of Saphat, which poured water vpon Elias handes. Josaphat sayde: The worde of y LORD is with him. So the kynge of Israel and Josaphat, and y kynge of Edom wente downe vnto him.

But Eliseus sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: What hast thou to do w me? go to the prophetes of thy father and to y mothers prophetes. The kynge of Israel saide vnto him: No, for y LORD hath called these thre kynges, to deliuer them in to the handes of the Moabites. Eliseus sayde: As truly as the LORD Zebaoth lyueth, before whom I stōde, yf I regarded not Josaphat the kynge of Iuda, I wolde not regarde the, ner set oughte by y. So brynge me now a mynstrell. And whan the mynstrell played vpon the instrument, the hande of the LORD came vpon him. And he sayde: Thus sayeth the LORD: Make pittes by this broke. For thus sayeth the LORD: Ye shal se nether wynde ner rayne, yet shal the broke be full of water, that ye and youre householdes and youre catell maye drynke. See and that is but a small thinge in the sighte of the LORD. And the Moabites shal he deliuer in to youre handes, so y ye shal smyte all the stronge cities, and all y chosen cities, and shal fell downe all the good trees, and stoppe all the welles of water, and all the good felde shal ye make waiste with stones.

On the morow, whan the meat offeringe is offered, beholde, there came water y waye from Edom, and fylled y londe with water.

The iij. boke of the kynges.

But whan the Moabites herde, þ̄ the kynges came vp to fight agaynst the, they called all þ̄ harnesssed men, ⁊ their rulers, ⁊ stode on þ̄ border. And whan they rose early in þ̄ mornynge, ⁊ the Sonne wete vp vpon þ̄ water, the Moabites thoughte the water ouer agaynst the to be euē as reed as bloude, ⁊ they sayde: It is bloude, þ̄ kynges haue destroyed them selues w̄ the swerde, ⁊ one hath smytten another. Now Moab gette vp to the spoyle. But whan they came to the tentes of Israel, the Israelites gat vp, ⁊ smote the Moabites, ⁊ they fled before them.

Euertheles they came in, ⁊ smote Moab, ⁊ brake downe the cities, ⁊ every one cast his stone vpon all the good felde, and made them full, and stopped all þ̄ welles of water, and felled downe all the good trees, tyll there remayned but the stoues in the brick-wall, and they compased them aboute with slynges, and smote them.

But whā the kyng of þ̄ Moabites sawe þ̄ the battayll was to strōge for him, he toke to him seuen C. men, which dree þ̄ swerde, to fall vpon the kyng of Edom: neuertheles they were not able. Then toke he his first sonne, which shulde haue bene kyng in his steade, and offered him for a burnt offryng vpon the wall. Then came there a greete wrath ouer Israel, that they departed from him, and turned agayne in to their londe.

The iiii. Chapter.

And there cried a woman amōge the wyues of the prophetes children vnto Eliseus, and sayde: Thy seruante my husbāde is ded, and thou knowest that thy seruante feared the LORD. Now com meth the man that he was better vnto, and wyll take awaye both my children to be bond seruantes. El. seus sayde vnto her: What shal I do for the? Tell me, what hast thou in the house? She sayde: Thy handmayden hath nothynge in the house but a pitcher w̄ oyle. He sayde: Go þ̄ waye, borrowe without of all thy neighboures emptye vessels, ⁊ that not a fewe, and go in, and shut þ̄ dore behynde the with thy sonnes, and poure of it in to all þ̄ vessels: ⁊ whan thou hast fylled them, deliuer them forth.

She wente, and shut the dore vnto her with hir sonnes, which broughte her the vessels, and so she poured in. And whan the vessels were full, she sayde vnto hir sonne: Brynge me yet one vessell. He sayde vnto her: There is not ene vessell more here. Then stode þ̄ oyle styll. And she sent, and tolde the man of God. He sayde: Go thy waye, sell the oyle, and

And it fortunēd at þ̄ same tyme, that El. seus wente vnto Sunem. And there was a riche woman, which helde him to eate with her: ⁊ as he passed of the thow waye, he wete in vnto her: ⁊ ate w̄ her. And she sayde vnto hir husbāde: Beholde, I perceauethat this is an holy man of God, which goeth euer thow this waye, let vs make hi a litle chamber of boordes, ⁊ set a bed, a table, a stole ⁊ a candelsticke therein, that whan he com meth vnto vs, he maye resorte thither.

And it fortunēd vpon a tyme, that he came in, ⁊ layed him downe in the chamber, ⁊ slepte therein. And he saide vnto Gehasi his childe: Call this womā of Sunem. And whā he had called her, she stode before him. He sayde vnto him: Speake thou vnto her, beholde, thou hast mynistrēd vnto vs in all the se chinges, what shal I do for the? Hast thou eny matter to be spoken for to the kyng, or to the chiefe captaigne of the hoost? She sayde: Idwell amonge my people. He sayde: What hast thou then to do? Gehasi sayde: Alas, she hath no sonne, and hir husbāde is olde. He sayde: Call her. And whā he had called her, she stode at the dore. And he sayde: Aboute this tyme yf þ̄ frute can lyue, thou shalt embrace a sonne. She sayde: Alas, no my lord, thou man of God, lye not vnto thy handmayden. And the woman conceaued, and bare a sonne aboute the same tyme, whā the frute coulde lyue, accordynge as El. seus had sayde vnto her.

But whan þ̄ childe was growne, it fortunēd, þ̄ he wente forth to his father vnto the reapers, ⁊ sayde vnto his father: Oh my head, my head. He saide vnto his seruante: Bynge him to his mother. And he toke him, and broughte him to his mother: and she set him vpon hir lappe vntyll þ̄ noone daye, ⁊ the he dyed. And she wente vp, and layed him vpon the bed of the man of God, ⁊ shut the dore, and wete forth, ⁊ called hir husbāde, ⁊ sayde vnto him: Send me one of the seruantes, and an Ass, I wyl go quychly vnto the man of God, and come agayne. He sayde: Why wilt thou go vnto him? To daye is it nether new moone ner Sabbath. She sayde: Well. And she sadled the asse, ⁊ sayde to the yengman: dryue forth, and kepe me not bak with rydinge, and do as I byd the.

So she wente, and came to the man of God vnto mount Carmell. Whā the man of God sawe her euer agaynst him, he sayde vnto his childe Gehasi: Beholde, the Sunami-tisse is there, runne now & mete her, and axe her yf it go well with her, and hir husbande & hir sonne. She sayde: Well. But whan she came to the man of God vpon y^e mount, she helde him by his fete. And Gehasi stepte to her, to put her awaye. But y^e man of God sayde: Let her alone, for hir soule is in heuynes, and the LORDE hath hyd it frome, and not shewed it me. She sayde: Whan desyred I a sonne of my lord? Sayde I not, y^e thou shuldest not mocke me?

LUC. 10. 2 He sayde vnto Gehasi: Girde vp thy loynes, and take my staffe in thy hande, and go thy waye. * Yf eny man mete the, salute him not: and yf eny man salute the, thanke him not, and laye thou my staffe vpon y^e childe's face. But the childe's mother sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, and as truly as y^e soule lyueth, I wyll not leaue the. Then gat he vp, and wente after her. As for Gehasi, he wente before them, and layed the staffe vpon the childe's face, but there was nether voyce ner felynge. And he wente agayne to mete him, and shewed him, and sayde: The childe is not rysen vp.

And whan Eliseus came into the house, beholde, y^e childe laye deed vpon his bed. And he wote in, & shute the dore on the boche, & made his prayer vnto the LORDE, & wente vp, & layed him selfe vpon the childe, & layed his mouth vpon the childe's mouth, and his eyes vpon his eyes, and his handes vpon his handes, & so stretched him selfe forth vpon him, so y^e the childe's body was warme. And he rose vp, & wente into the house once hyther and thither, & wente vp, & layed him selfe a longe vpon him. Then neded the childe seuen tymes, and afterwarde the childe opened his eyes. And he cried vpon Gehasi, and sayde: Call the Sunamitisse. And whan he had called her, she came in vnto him. He sayde: Take there thy sonne. Then came she, and fell at his fete, and worshipped vnto the grounde, and toke hir sonne, and wente forth.

E But whā Eliseus came againe vnto Gilgal, there was a verth in the londe, & the prophetes children dwelt before him, & he sayde vnto his seruante: Set on a greete pot, and make potage for the children of the prophetes. Then wente there one into the felde, to gather herbes, and founde a Cucumbers stalke, & gathered wylde Cucumbers therof his cote full. And whan he came, he chopped it small for potage to the pott, for they knewe it not. And whā they poured it forth for the mē to eat, & they ate of y^e potage, they cried and sayde: O thou man of God, death is in

There came a man from Baal Salisa, & broughte the man of God bred of the first frutes, namely twentye barlye loaves, & new come in his garment. But he sayde: Geue it vnto y^e people, that they maye eat. His myster sayde: * How shall I geue an hundred men of this? He sayde: Geue it vnto the people, that they maye eat. So thus sayeth the LORDE: They shal eat, and there shall be lefte ouer. And he set it before them, so that they ate, and there lefte ouer, acordinge to y^e worde of the LORDE.

The V. Chapter.

A Aman the chiefe captayne of the Kyng of Syria, was an excellent mā in the sighte of his lord, and meche set by (for thorow him the LORDE gaue health vnto Syria) and he was a mighty man, but a leper. And there had men of warre fallen out of Syria, and caried awaye a litle damsel out of the londe of Israel: the same was in seruyce with Naaman's wife, and sayde vnto hir mastresse: O that my master wote with the prophet at Samaria, he wolde heale him from his leprosy.

Then wente he in to his lord, and tolde him, and sayde: Thus and thus hath the damsel of the londe of Israel spoken. The Kyng of Syria sayde: Go thy waye then, & I wyll wrytte a letter vnto the Kyng of Israel.

And he wente, and toke with him ten hundred weighte of syluer, and sixe thousande goldens, & ten chaunge of rayment, & broughte the letter vnto the Kyng of Israel, with these wordes:

Whan this letter commeth vnto the, beholde, thou shalt vnderstonde y^e I haue sent my seruante Naaman vnto the, that thou mayest heale him of his leprosy.

And whan the Kyng of Israel red the letter, he rente his clothes, & sayde: Am I God then, that I can kyll and quicke agayne, y^e he sendeth vnto me, to heale the man fro his leprosy? Considre and se, how he seeketh an occasion vnto me.

Whan Eliseus the man of God herde, y^e the Kyng of Israel had rente his clothes, he sent vnto him, sayenge: Why hast thou rente thy clothes? Let him come to me, that he maye knowe, y^e there is a prophet in Israel.

So Naaman came with horses and charrettes, and helde still at the dore of Eliseus house. Then sent Eliseus a messenger vnto him, sayenge: Go thy waye, and washe the seven tymes in Iordane, so shal thy flesh be restored the agayne, & be clensed. Then was Naaman wroth, & wente his waye, & sayde: I thoughte he shulde haue come forth vnto me, & to haue stode here & to haue called vpon the name of the LORD his God, & to haue touched the place with his hande, & so to haue put awaye the leprosy. Are not y waters of Amara and Pharphar at Damascon better then all the waters in Israel, & I might washe me therein & be clensed? and he turned hym, and wote his waye in displeasure. Then his seruantes gat hym to him, and sayde: Father, yf the prophet had commaunded the eny greuous thinge, shuldest thou not haue done it? moche more the yf he saye vnto the: Washe the, & thou shalt be cleane. Then wote he do: & he washed himselfe in Iordane seven tymes (as the man of God sayde) & his flesh was restored him agayne, euen as the flesh of a yonge childe: and he was clensed.

Luc 4 c
D And he turned agayne to y man of God with all his armye. And whan he came in, he stode before him, and sayde: Beholde, I knowe that in all londes there is no God, but in Israel. Take now therfore this blesynge I praye the of thy seruant. Wenecheles he sayde: As truly as the LORD elyuech, before whom I stonde, I wil not take it. And he wolde nedes haue him to take it, but he wolde not. Then sayde Naaman: Alighte there not a burthen of this carth be geue vnto y seruant, as moch as two Mules myc beare? For thy seruant wyll nemo re do sacrifice and offer burnesfferynges vnto other goddes, but vnto the LORD. That the LORD maye be gracious vnto thy seruant, yf I worshippe in the house of Rimmon, whan my lord goeth there in to y house to worshippe, & leaneth vpon my hande. He sayde vnto him: Go thy waye in peace.

And as he was gone from him a felde bredth in the londe, Gehasi the seruant of Eliseus y man of God thoughte: beholde, my lord hath spared Naaman this Syrian, so that he hath not taken from him y which he broughte: As truly as y LORD elyuech, I wil rane a fter him, & take somthinge of him.

E So Gehasi folowed Naaman. And whan Naaman sawe y he ranne a fter him, he lichte donne from the charet to mete him, & sayde: Are all thinges well? He sayde: Yee. But my lord hath sent me, & caused to saye vnto the: Beholde, there are now cometo me from mount Ephraim two yonge men of the pro

And he compelled him, & bande two talentes in two bagges, and two chaunge of rayment, and deliuered it vnto two of his seruantes, which bare it before him. And whan he came in y dardce, he toke it from their handes, & layde it a syde in the house, & let the men go.

And whan they were gone their waye, he stode before his lord. And Eliseus sayde vnto him: Whence comest thou Gehasi? He sayde: Thy seruant wente nether hither ner thither. But he sayde vnto him: Wente not my hert w the, whan the man turned backe from his charet to mete the? Now thou hast take the syluer & the rayment, olyue trees, vynyardes, shepe, oxen, seruantes & maydens. But the leprosy of Naaman shal cleue vnto the & to thy seide for ever. Then wote he forth from him leprous as snowe. 1. Par. 10 d

The VI. Chapter.

The children of y prophetes sayde vnto Eliseus: Beholde, the place where we dwell before y, is to narrow for vs, let vs go vnto Iordane, & every one fetch tymber there, & we maye there buyde vs a place to dwell in. He saide: Go yow waye. And one sayde: Go to then, & come w thy seruantes. He sayde: I wil go with you. And he wote with them. And whan they came to Iordane, they hewed downe tymber. And as one was fellynge downe a tre, the yron fell in to the water, and he cried and sayde: Alas my lord, & it is burowed. But the man of God sayde: Where fell it in? And whan he had shewed him the place, he cut downe a stick, and thrust it in there. Then swame the yron. And he sayde: Take it vp. So he put forth his hande, and toke it.

And the kynge of Syria warred agaynst Israel, and toke counsell at his seruantes, and sayde: There & there will we lye. But the man of God sent to y kynge of Israel, sayenge: Bewarre y thou go not vnto that place, for the Syrians rest there. So the kynge of Israel sent vnto y place wherof y man of God tolde him, & kepte it, & helde watch there, & dyd that not once or twyse onely.

Ther was y kynge of Syrias herte vexed therfore, and called his seruantes, and sayde vnto them: Wyll ye not tell me, which of our men is fled vnto the kynge of Israel? Then sayde one of his seruantes: Nor so my lord O kynge, but Eliseus the prophet in Israel telleth the kynge of Israel all that thou speakest in thy chamber where thou lyest. He sayde: Go youre waye the and loke where he is, that I maye sende, and cause him be fetched. And they shewed him and sayde: Beholde, he is at Dothan. The sent he thither horses & charettes, & a greate power. And whā they came thither by nighte, they compassed the cite aboute. And the mynister of the mā of God arose early to get him vp. And as he wēt forth, beholde, there laye an hoost of men aboute y^e cite with horses and charettes.

D Then saide his childe vnto him: Alas syr, how wyll we now do? He sayde: Feare not, for there are mo of them y^e are with vs, then of those that are with them. And Eliseus prayed & sayde: LORDE open his eyes, y^e he maye se. Then the LORDE opened y^e childes eyes, y^e he sawe, & beholde, y^e mount was full of fyue houses & charettes rounde aboute Eliseus. And whā they came downe vnto him, Eliseus made his prayer, & sayde: LORDE smyte this people wth blyndnes. And he smote the wth blyndnes acordinge to the worde of Eliseus. And Eliseus saide vnto them: This is not y^e waye nor the cite, folowe me, I wil brynge you to the man whom ye see. And he broughte them vnto Samaria.

E And whan they came to Samaria, Eliseus sayde: LORDE open these mens eyes, y^e they maye se. And the LORDE opened their eyes, y^e they sawe, & beholde, they were in the myddes of Samaria. And whan the kynge of Israel sawe them, he saide vnto Eliseus: My father, shal I smyte the? He saide: Thou shalt not smyte the: loke whom thou takest with thy swerde and bowe, smyte these. Set bried and water before them, that they maye eat and drynke, and let them departe vnto their lord. The was there a greate dyner prepared. And whan they had eaten and dynten, he let them go to departe vnto their lord. From that tyme forth came the men of warre of the Syrians nomore into the lande of Israel.

S After this it fortuneth, that Benadab the kynge of Syria gathered all his hoost, and wēt vp, & layed sege vnto Samaria: & there was a greate verth at Samaria. But they layed sege to the cite so longe, tyll an Asses heade was worth foure score syluer pēs, and the fourth parte of a Cab of doves donge worth fyue syluer pens. And whan the kynge of Israel wente vnto the wall, a woman cried vnto him and sayde: Helpe me my lord. O kynge. He sayde: Yf the LORDE helpe the not, wherwith shal I helpe the: with y^e barne or with the wyne presse? And the kyn ge sayde vnto her: What ayleth y^e? She sayde: This woman sayde vnto me: Geue vs y^e sonne, that we maye eat him, tomorrow wyll we eat my sonne. So we sod my sonne, & haue eaten him, and I sayde vnto her on y^e thirde daye: Geue vs thy sonne and let vs eat him, but she hath hyd him awaye.

Whan the kynge herde the womans wordes, he rente his clothes, whyle he was goynge to the wall. The sawe all the people, that he had a sackcloth vnder vpon his body. And he sayde: God do this and that vnto me, yf the heade of Eliseus the sonne of Saphat shal this daye stonde vpon him. As for Eliseus, he sat in his house, & the Elders sat by him. And he sent a man before him, but ouer the messaunge came to him, he sayde vnto y^e Elders: Haue ye not sene how this childe of mutchure hath sent hither, to take awaye my heade? Take hede, whan the messanger cōmeth, y^e ye holde him at the doire. Beholde, y^e noyse of his lordes fete foloweth him. Whyle he was thus talkynge wth them, beholde, y^e messanger came to him, & sayde: Beholde, this euell cōmeth of y^e LORDE, and what more shal I loke for of the LORDE?

The VII. Chapter.

E Eliseus sayde: Heare the worde of the LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE: Tomorrow aboute this tyme shal a busshel of fyne merl be solde for one Sycke, and two busshels of barley for one Sycke vnder the poire of Samaria. Then a knyghte (vpon whose hande the kynge leane) answered the mā of God, and sayde: And though the LORDE made wyndowes in heauē, how coulde soch a thinge come to passe? He saide: Beholde, thou shalt se it with thine eyes, & shalt not eat thereof.

And there were foure leprous men at y^e doire before the poire, and one sayde vnto another: Why tary we here whyle we dye? Though we thoughte to come in to the cite, yet is there verth in y^e cite, and there shulde we be fayne to dye. And yf we tary here, we must dye also. Let vs go now, and flye vnto the hoost of the Syrians. Yf they let vs lyue, we shall lyue: yf they slaye vs, then are we deed. And so they gat them vp early, to come vnto the hoost of the Syrians. And whan they came to the vttemost ende of y^e tentes, beholde, there was no body.

For the LORDE had made the Syrians to heare a noyse of hoises, charettes, and of a mightie greate hoost, so that they sayde one to another amonge the selues: Beholde, the kynge of Israel hath hyred the kynge of the Hethites, and the kynge of the Egyptians agaynst vs, to come vpon vs. And they gat them vp, and fled early in the troyght, and lefte their bothes, and hoises and Asses in the tentes as they stode, & fled every man where hemighte saue his life.

C Now whan the lepers came to the place of the tentes, they wente in to the tentes, ate and dronke, and toke syluer, golde and rayment, and wente and hyd it: & came agayne & entred in to another tent, and toke therout, and wente and hyd it. But one of them saide vnto another: Let vs not do thus, this daye is a daye of good tidynge. If we kepe this secrete and hyde tyll the lighte mornynge, oure trespass wyl be founde out. Let vs go now therfore, that we maye come, & tell the kynges house.

And whan they came, they cried at the porte of the cite, and tolde them, and sayde: We came to the tentes of the Syrians, and beholde, there is no mā there, neher yet any mans voyce, but hoises and asses bounde, and the bothes as they stonde. Then cried þe porters and tolde it within in þe kynges house. And the kynge arose in the night, & sayde vnto his seruantes: I will tell you how þe Syrians deale with vs: they knowe þe we suffer hunger, and are gone out of the cētes, to hyde them selues in the felde, and thynke thus: whan they go out of the cite, we wyl take them alyue, & come in to the cite. Then answered one of his seruantes, and sayde: Let vs take the fyue hoises that remayne, which yet are lefte in the cite (beholde, these are lefte therin for all þe mulciende in Israel, which is destroyed) let vs sende these and se. The toke they two charettes with þe hoises. And the kyngs sent them vnto the tentes of the Syrians, and sayde: Go youre waye and se.

D And whan they wente after the vnto Jordan, beholde, the waye laye full of garments and vessels, which the Syrians had cast from the, whyle they made haist. And whan the messangers came agayne, and tolde the kynge, the people wente forth, and spoyled the tentes of the Syrians. And a busshel of fyne meell was solde for a Sycke, and two busshels of barlye for a Sycke also, * according to the worde of the LORD. But the kynge appoynted the knyghte (vpon whose hande he leened) to be at the gate, & the people trode vpon him, so that he dyed, even as the man of God sayde, whan the kynge came downe vnto him. And it came to passe euen as y man of God tolde the kynge, whā he sayde: Tomorrow aboute this tyme shall two busshels of barlye be solde for one Sycke, and a busshel of fyne meel for one Sycke vnder the gate at Samaria. And the knyghte answered the man of God, and sayde: Beholde, though þe LORD made wyndowes in heaven, how coulde soch a thinge come to passe? Nevertheless he sayde: Beholde, with thine eyes shalt thou se it, and shalt not eate therof. And euen so fortuneth it vnto him, for the people trode vpon him in the gate, & he dyed.

The viij. Chapter.

Eliseus spake vnto the womā, * whose sonne he had restored vnto life agayne, and sayde: Get the vp, & go with thine household, and be a straunger where thou canst: for the LORD shall call for a verch, which shal come in to the londe seven yeare lōge. The woman gat her vp, and dyd as the man of God sayde, & wente with hir household, and was a straunger in the londe of the philistynes seven yeare. But whan the seven yeares were ended, the woman came agayne out of the philistynes lōde, and wente forth to crye vpon the kynge for his house and londe. The kynge spake vnto Gehasi the seruant of the man of God, & sayde: Tell me all the greates that Eliseus hath done. And whyle he was tellynge the kynge how he had made one that was deed, to lyue agayne, beholde, the woman whose sonne he had caused to reuyue, came euen in the meane season, and cried vnto the kynge for hir house and londe. Then sayde Gehasi: My lord the kynge, this same is the womā, and this is hir sonne, whom Eliseus restored vnto life agayne. And the kynge axed þe woman, and she tolde him. Then the kynge deliuered her a chamberlayne, & saide: Restore her agayne all that is hirs, and all the increase of the londe, sence the tyme that she lefte the londe vntyll now.

* And Eliseus came to Damascon, & Benadab the kynge of Syria laye sicke. And it was tolde him, and sayde: The man of God is come hither. Then sayde the kynge vnto Hasael: Take giftes with the, & go mete the man of God, and axe counsell at þe LORD by him, and saye: Maye I recover from this sicknesse? Hasael wente for to mete him, and toke rewardes with him, and of all the goodes at Damascon, as moch as fortye Camels mighte beare. And whan he came, he stode before him, and sayde: Thy sonne Benadab the kynge of Syria hath sent me vnto the, sayenge: Maye I recover from this sicknesse?

Eliseus sayde vnto him: Go y waye and tell him: Thou shalt recover. But the LORDE hath shewed me, y he shal dye y death. And the man of God loved earnestly, z made a troublous countenance, z wept. The sayde Hasael: Wherfore wepeth my lord? He sayde: I knowe what euell thou shalt do vnto the children of Israel. Thou shalt burne their stronge cities with fyre, and slaye their yonge men with the swerde, and kyll their yonge children, and rypppe vp their women with childe.

E Hasael sayde: How so, is thy seruante a dogg, that he shulde do soch a greete thynge? Eliseus saide: The LORDE hath shewed me, y thou shalt be kyng of Syria. And he wote his waye from Eliseus, z came to his lord, which saide vnto him: What saierth Eliseus vnto the? He sayde: He tolde me, Thou shalt recover. But on the nexte daye he toke y bed couerynge, and dypte it in water, and spred it ouer him, and he dyed, z Hasael was kyng in his steade.

In the fyfth yere of Joram the sonne of Achab kyng of Israel, was Joram y sonne of Josaphat kyng of Juda. Two z thirtie yere olde was he whā he was made kyng, z reigned eght yere at Jerusalem, z walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, as the house of Achab dyd (for Achabs doughter was his wife) z he dyd y which was euell in y sighte of the LORDE. Tenethales the LORDE wolde not destroye Juda for his seruante Dauids sake, as he promysed him, to geue him euer a lanterne amōge his childre.

At y same tyme fell y Edomites awaye from Juda, z made a kyng ouer them selues: y cause was this, Joram had gone thow Seira, and all the charrettes with him, z had gotten him vp by nighte, and smytten the Edomites that were aboute him, and y rulers ouer the charrettes, so that the people fled vnto their tentes: therfore fell the Edomites awaye from Juda vnto this daye. At the same tyme fell Libna awaye also.

What more there is to saye of Joram, z all y he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Juda. And Joram fell on slepe with his fathers, z was buried w his fathers in y cite of David, z Ochosias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

In the twolue yere of Joram the sonne of Achab kyng of Israel, was Ochosias y sonne of Joram kyng in Juda. Two and twenty yere olde was Ochosias whan he was made kyng, and reigned one yere at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Atalia the doughter of Amri kyng of Israel, z he walked in the waye of the house of Achab, z dyd that which was euell in the sighte of y LORDE, euen as dyd the house of Achab: for he was sonne in lawe in the house of Achab. And he wente with Joram the sonne of Achab into the battayll agaynst Hasael y kyng of Syria vnto Ramoth in Gilead, but y Syrians smote Joram. Then Joram the kyng turned backe, to be healed at Jesreel of y woundes, wherewith the Syrians had wounded him at Ramoth, whā he foughte with Hasael kyng of Syria. And Ochosias y sonne of Joram kyng of Juda, came downe to viset Joram the sonne of Achab at Jesreel, for he laye sicke. The IX. Chapter.

Eliseus the prophet called one of the prophetes childre, z sayde vnto him: Garde vp y loynes, and take this cruise of oyle with the, and go vnto Ramoth in Gilead: and whā thou comest thither, thou shalt se there one Jehu, y sonne of Josaphat the sonne of Timsi, and go in, and byd him stonde vp amonge his brechren, and brynge him in to the ynnmost chamber, z take thou y cruise of oyle, and poure it vpon his heade, z saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue anointed the to be kyng ouer Israel: z thou shalt open the dore, and flye, and not tary. And the prophetes yonge man, the childe wente his waye vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And whan he came in, beholde, the capteynes of the hoost sat there, and he sayde: I haue som what to saye vnto the O captaine. Jehu saide: Vnto whom amonge vs all? He sayde: Euen vnto the O captaine.

Then stode he vp, and wente in. So he poured the oyle vpon his heade, and sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: I haue anoynted y to be kyng ouer the LORDES people of Israel, and thou shalt smyte thy lord Achabs house, that I maye auenge the bloude of my seruantes the prophetes, and the bloude of all the LORDES seruantes, from the hande of Jesabel, that all the house of Achab maye perishe. And J wyl rote out from Achab, euen him that maketh water agaynst the wall, and the closed vp and the desolate in Israel: and the house of Achab wyl I make euen as the house of Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat, and as the house of Baesa the sonne of Ahia, and y dogges shall eate vp Jesabel vpon the selbe at Jesreel, and noman shal burye her. And he opened the dore, and fled.

And whā Jehu came forth to his lordes seruantes, they saide vnto him: Are all thin ges well? Wherfore came this madd felowe vnto the? He saide vnto them: Ye knowe the man well, & what he hath spoken. They sayde: That is not true, but tell thou vs. He sayde: Thus and thus hath he spoken vnto me, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: I haue anoynted the to be kynge ouer Israel. Then made they haist, and every one toke his garment and laied them vnder him in maner of a iudges seate, and blew the trumpet, and sayde: Jehu is made kynge. So Jehu the sonne of Josaphat the sonne of Nimsi, made a confederacion agaynst Joram. As for Joram he laye before Ramoth in Gilead with all Israel agaynst Hasael the kynge of Syria. 4. Reg. 8. d But Joram the kynge was turned backe, & he might be healed of the woundes wherewith the Syrians had wounded him, whā he foughte with Hasael the kynge of the Syrians.

D And Jehu sayde: If it be youre mynde, there shall noman escape out of the cite, to go and tell it at Jesreel. And he rode, and departed vnto Jesreel: for Joram laye there, and Ochosias the kynge of Juda was come downe to vyset Joram. But the watchman that stode vpon the cower at Jesreel, sawe the company of Jehu commynge, and sayde: I se a company. Then sayde Joram: Take a charet, and sende to mete the, and saye: Is it peace? And the charetman rode to meete them, and sayde: Thus sayeth the kynge: Is it peace? Jehu sayde: What hast thou to do with peace? Turne the behynde me. The watchman tolde it, and sayde: The messenger is come vnto them, and cometh not agayne. Then sent he another charetman, which whan he came to them, saide: Thus sayeth the kynge: Is it peace? Jehu sayde: What hast thou to do with peace? Turne y behynde me.

E And the watchman tolde it, and sayde: He is come to them: and cometh not agayne, and the goynge is as it were the goynge of Jehu the sonne of Nimsi: for he dryueth on as he were mad. Then sayde Joram: Bind the charet fast. And they bounde the charet, and so they wente forth, Joram the kynge of Israel, and Ochosias the kynge of Juda, every one vpon his charet, to mete Jehu. And they founde him vpon the felde of Naboth the Iesraelite. And whan Joram sawe Jehu, he sayde: Jehu, is it peace? But he sayde: What peace? The whordome and witchcraft of thy mother Jesabel is not yet come to an ende.

Then turned Joram his hande and fled, and sayde vnto Ochosias: There is treason Ochosias. But Jehu toke his bowe, & shot Joram betwene the armes, that the arrowe wente thorow his hert, and he fell downe in his charet. And Jehu sayde vnto Bidkar the knyghte: Take and cast him in the peece of londe of Naboth the Iesraelite: for I remember sence thou rodest with me in a charet after Achab his father, that the LORDE wolde laye this heuy burchen vpon him. S I holde (sayde the LORDE) I wyl recompence the y bloude of Naboth and of his childre, even in this peece of londe. Take him now and cast him in to that peece of londe, & acorde ynge to the worde of the LORDE. 1. Reg. 21. e

Whan Ochosias the kynge of Juda sawe this, he fled by the waie vnto y garden house. But Jehu folowed after him, and commaunded to smyte him also vpon his charet in the goynge vp towarde Gur, which lieth by Jebelaam: and he fled vnto Megiddo, and dyed there. And his seruantes caused him to be caried vnto Jerusalem, and there they buryed him in his owne graue with his fathers in the cite of David. Ochosias reigned ouer Juda in y eleventh yeare of Joram y sonne of Achab. And whan Jehu came to Jesreel, and Jesabel herde therof, she coloured hir face, and decked hir heade, and looked out at the wyndowe. And whan Jehu came vnder the gate, she sayde: y prospered Symri 1. Reg. 16. b well that slewe his lord?

And he lifte vp his face to the wyndow, and sayde: Who is with me? Then resorted there two or thre chamberlaynes vnto him. He sayde: Cast her downe headlinges. And they cast her downe headlynges, so that y wall and the hoises were sprentled with hir bloude, and she was troddē vnder fete. And whan he came in, and had eaten and drunken, he sayde: Loke vpon yonder cursed woman, & burye her, & for she is a kynges donghter. Nevertheless whan they wente in to burye her, they founde nothinge of her, but the skull and the fete, and the palmes of her handes. And they came agayne and broughte him worde. He saide: This is even it that the LORDE spake by his seruant Elias the Thesbite, and sayde: In the felde of Iesrael shal the dogges eate Jesabels flesh. So the deed carcase of Jesabel became even as donge in the felde of Iesrael, so y a man coulde not saye: This is Jesabel. 1. Reg. 21. d rulers of the cite Iesrael, euen vnto the Elders, & to Achabs tutors, sayenge these wordes: Whan this letter commeth vnto you to whom are youre lordes sonnes, charetes, horses, stronge cities, & ordynaunce, like which is the best and most righteous amonge youre lordes sonnes, & set him vpon his fathers seate, and fighte for youre lordes heuse.

Nevertheless they were sore afrayed, and sayde: Beholde, two kynges were not able to stonde before him, how wyl we then endure? And they that were ouer the house and ouer the cite, and the Elders and tutors sent vnto Jehu, sayenge: We are thy seruantes, we wyl do all that thou sayest vnto vs: We wil make no man kyng, do thou what pleaseth the. Then wrote he the seconde letter vnto them with these wordes: If ye be myne, and herken vnto my voyce, then take the heades of the men youre lordes sonnes, and brynge me them tomorow by this tyme vnto Iesrael.

B The kynges sonnes were thre score men and ten, and 3 chesemen of the cite broughte the vp. Now whan this letter came they toke the kynges sonnes, and slewe them euen thre score men and ten, and layed their heades in basckettes, and sent them to him vnto Iesrael. And whan the messaunger came, & tolde him, and sayde: They haue broughte the heades of the kynges children. he sayde: Laye them vpon two heapes at the dore of the porte tyll tomorow.

E And on the morow whan he wente forth, he stode, and sayde vnto all the people: Are ye righteous? Beholde, I haue made an appoyntment against my lorde, and slayne him, who hath slayne all these then? Understonde ye nowtherfore, that there is not fallen vpon the earth one worde of the LORDE, which he spake agaynst the house of Achab: and the LORDE hath done, euen as he sayde by his seruant Elias. So Jehu smote all the remnant of the house of Achab at Iesrael, all his greaue men, his kynssolkes, and his prestes, tyll there was not one lefte over. And he gat him vp, wente his waye, and came to Samaria.

C By the waye there was a shepherdes house, where Jehu founde the brethien of Ochosias kyng of Iuda, and sayde: Whence are ye? They sayde: We are Ochosias brethien, and are goynge downe to salute the kynges children, and the quenes children. He sayde: Take them alyue. And they toke them alyue, and slewe them by the welles syde at the shepherdes house, euen two and forty men,

And let not one of them remayne.

And whan he wente from thence, he founde Jonadab y sonne of Rechab, which met him, & saluted him. And he sayde vnto him: Is thyne hert righte, as myne hert is with thyne hert? Jonadab sayde: Yee. If it be so (sayde he) then geue me thy hande. And he gaue him his hande. And so he caused him to sit besyde him in the charet, and saide: Come with me, and se my zeale for the LORDE. And they caryed him with him vpon his charet. And whan he came to Samaria, he smote all that remayned of Achab at Samaria, tyll he had destroyed him, accordynge to the worde of the LORDE, which he spake vnto Elias.

And Jehu gathered all the people together, and saide vnto them: Achab did Baal but litle seruyce, Jehu wyl serue him better. Call vnto me nowtherfore all Baals propheetes, all his seruantes and all his prestes, that there be none wantynge, for I haue a greaue sacrifice to do vnto Baal. Who so euer is myssed, shal not lyue. But Jehu dyd it craftely, that he mighte destroye all the mynisters of Baal. And Jehu sayde: Sanctifie y feast vnto Baal, and proclame it. And Jehu sent in to all Irael, and caused all Baals ministers to come, so that there was nomā lefte behynde, which came not. And they came into Baals house, so that the house of Baal was full from one corner to another.

Then sayde he vnto him that had the rulle of the vestrye. Brynge forth rayment for all Baals mynisters. And he broughte forth the rayment. And Jehu wente in to Baals house with Jonadab the sonne of Rechab, and sayde vnto Baals mynisters: Search and se that there be not here amonge you euery mynister of the LORDE, but onely Baals mynisters.

And whan they came in to offer sacrifices and burnt offerynges, Jehu appoynted him foure score men without, & sayde: If any of these men escape whom I deliuer vnder your handes, then shal the same mans soule be for his soule. Now whā he had made an ende of the burnt offerynge, Jehu sayde vnto the foremen and knyghtes: Go in, & smyte every man, let no man go forth. And they smote thē with the edge of the swerde. And the foremen and knyghtes threw thē awaie and wēte vnto the cite of Baals house, and brought forth the piler in y^e house of Baal, and brent it, and brake downe Baals pyler with the house of Baal, and made a priuy house therof vnto this daie. Thus Jehu destroyed Baal out of Israel. But Jehu lefte not of from the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat (which caused Israel to synne) namely, from the golden calves at Bethel and at Dan. And the LORDE sayde vnto Jehu: Because thou hast bene wyllinge to do that which was righte in my sighte, & hast done vnto Achabs house all that was in my hert, therefore shall thy children syt vpon y^e seate of Israel vnto the fourth generacion.

4. Re. 1. 11

Neuerthelesse Jehu was not diligent to walke in the lawe of the LORDE God of Israel with all his hert: for he lefte not of fro the synnes of Jeroboam which made Israel to synne. At the same tyme beganne the LORDE to be greued at Israel. For Hasael smote them in all the borders of Israel from Jez dane Eastwarde, and all the londe Gilead of the Gaddites, Rubenites and Manassites, from Arzer that lyeth on the ryuer by Arnon, and Gilead and Basan.

What more there is to saye of Jehu, and all that he dyd, and all his power, beholde, it is wyrtē in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Jehu fell on slepe with his fathers, & they buried him in Samaria. And Joahas his sonne was kyng in his steade. The tyme that Jehu reigned ouer Israel, is eight and twentye yeaeres at Samaria.

Athalia the mother of Ochosias, whā she sawe that hir sonne was deed, gat her vp, and destroyed all the kynges seide. But Josaba kyngs Jorams daughter the syster of Ochosias, toke Joas the sonne of Ochosias and stole him awaye with his nurse in the chamber from amonge the kynges children which were slayne, and she hyd him from Athalia, so that he was not slayne. And he was hyd with her in the house of the LORDE sixe yeaeres. But Athalia was quene in the londe.

But two partes of you all that go of on the Sabbath, shal kepe the watch in the house of the LORDE aboute the kyng and ye shall get you rounde aboute y^e kyng and every one with his weapon in his hande: and who so ever cometh within y^e wall, let him die, so that ye be with the kyng, whā he goeth out and in.

And the rulers ouer the hūdreds dyd all as Joiada the priest had commaunded them, and toke vnto them their men which entred vpon the Sabbath, with those that wente of on the Sabbath, and came to Joiada y^e priest. And the priest gaue the captaines speares and shyldes which had bene kyngs Dauds, and were in the house of the LORDE. And the fote men stode aboute the kyng, every one with his weapon in his hande, fro the corner on the righte syde of the house vnto the corner of the lefte syde, euen vnto the altare and to the house. And he broughte forth the kynges sonne, and set a crowne vpon his heade, and toke the * wities, and made him kyng, and they were glad, and clapped their handes together, and sayde: God saue the kyng.

* And whan Athalia herde the noyse of the people that ranne together, she came to the people in to the house of the LORDE, and looked, and beholde, the kyng stode by the piler, as the vse was, and the syngers and trompettes by the kyng: and all the people of y^e lōde were glad, and blew with trompettes. But Athalia rent hir clothes, & sayde: Vproure, vproure. Neuertheles Joiada y^e priest commaunded y^e rulers ouer hūdreds, which were appointed ouer the hoost, and saide vnto them: Brynge her without the wall, and whosoener foloweth hir, let him dye of the swerde (for the priest had sayde, that she shulde not dye in the house of the LORDE.) And they layde handes vpo her, and she wente in by the waye wher the horses go in to y^e kynges house, and there was she slayne.

Then wente all the people of the londe into the house of Baal, and brake downe his altares, and destroyed his ymages right well. And Mathan the prest of Baal slewe they before the altare: And the prest appoynted the officers in the house of the LORDE, and toke the rulers ouer hundreds, and the captaines, and the fore men, and all & people of the londe, & broughte the kyng downe from the house of the LORDE, and came the waye from the poire of the fore men vnto the kynges house, and he sat vpon the kynges seate. And all the people of the lode were glad, and the cite was at rest. As for Athalia, they slewe her with the swerde in & kynges house. And Joas was seven yeare olde, whan he was made kyng.

The XII. Chapter.

In the seventh yeare of Jehu, was Joas made kyng, and reigned fortye yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Zibea of Bersaba. And Joas dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as long as Joiada & prest caught him. But they put not downe & hye places: for the people offred & brent incense yet vpon the hye places.

And Joas sayde vnto the prestes: All the money that is sanctified to be bestowed vpon & house of the LORDE, namely the money & euery man geueth vnto the treasury, and & money that euery man geueth for his soule, and all the money that euery man geueth of a fre hert, to be bestowed on the house of the LORDE, let the prestes take it vnto them, euery one his porcion: with that shall they repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE, where they fynde that there is eny decaye.

But whan & prestes repayed not the decaye in the house vnto the thre and twetieth yeare of kyng Joas, Joas the kyng called Joiada the prest with the other prestes, and sayde vnto them: Wherfore do ye not repayre the decaye in the house?

B Therefore shall ye not take the money vnto you now euery one his porcion, but shall geue it to the decaye of the house. And the prestes agreed to take no moncy of the people, and to repayre the decaye of the house.

Then Joiada the prest toke a chest, and bored an hole aboue therin, and set it on the righte hande besyde the altare, at the entrynge in to the house of the LORDE. And the prestes that kepte the threshold, put all the money therin that was broughte vnto the house of the LORDE. Whan they sawe then that there was moch money in the chest, & kynges scribe came vp with the hye prest, and bounde the money together, and tolde it as moch as was founde in the house of the LORDE. And so the ready money was geuen vnto them that wrought and were appoynted to the house of the LORDE, and they gaue it forth to the carpenters and to the that buylded and wroughte in the house of the LORDE, namely, to the dawbers and masons, and to them that boughte tymbre and fre stone, to repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE and all that they founde to haue nede of repayunge in the house.

Howbeit there were no syluer chargers, flat peces, balens, trompettes, ner eny other vessell of golde and syluer made on the house of the LORDE, of the money that was brought vnto the LORDES house: but it was geuen vnto the workmen to repayre the decaye in the house of the LORDE therewith. The men also that the money was deliuered vnto, for to geue the workmen, neded not to make eny accomptes, but did their busynes vpon credence. But the money of trespass offerynges and synne offerynges was not broughte vnto the house of the LORDE: for it was the prestes.

At the same tyme wente Hasael the kyn of Syria vp, and foughte agaynst Bach, and wanne it. And whan Hasael set his face to go vp to Jerusalem, kyng Joas toke all that was sanctified, which his fathers Josaphat, Joram and Ochosis the kynges of Juda had halowed, and what he himselfe had sanctified, and all the golde that was founde in the treasures of the house of the LORDE, and in the kynges house, and sent it vnto Hasael the kyng of Syria. And so he departed from Jerusalem.

What more there is to saye of Joas, and all that he dyd, it is writen in the Cronicles of the kynges of Juda. And his seruantes made insurreccion and conspyred, and smote him in the house of Millo, at the goynge downe vnto Sila. For Josabar the sonne of Simeath, and Josabad the sonne of Somer his seruantes smote him to deatch: and he was buried with his fathers in the cite of Danid. And Amasias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

Israel at Samaria, seuentene yeare: ⁊ dyd ⁊ which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked after the synnes of Jeroboam ⁊ sonne of Nebat (which caused Israel to synne) and lesce not of from them. And ⁊ wraeth of the LORDE waxed whote vpon Israel, ⁊ he deliuered them ouer vnder the hande of Hasael kyng of Syria, and vnder the hande of Benadad the sonne of Hasael, as longe as they lyued.

And Joahas besoughte the face of the LORDE. And the LORDE herde him, for he consydered the myserie of Israel, how the kyng of Syria oppressed them. And ⁊ LORDE gaue Israel a sauoure, which broughte them out of the power of the Syrians, so ⁊ the children of Israel dwelt in their tentes, like as afore tyme.

B Yet lesce they not from the synnes of the house of Jeroboam, which caused Israel to synne, but walked in them. The groue at Samaria stode styll also. For of the people of Joahas there were no mo lesce, but fyste hoisemen, ten charrettes, and ten theusande fote men: for the kyng of Syria had destroyed them, and made them as the dust in the barne.

What more there is to saye of Joahas, and all that he dyd, and his power, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Joahas fell on slepe with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria, ⁊ Joas his sonne was kyng in his steade.

C In the seuen and thirtieth yeare of Joas kyng of Juda, was Joas the sonne of Joahas kyng ouer Israel at Samaria sixtene yeare. And he dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, and departed not from all the synnes of Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat, which made Israel for to synne, but walked in them. What more there is to saye of Joas, and what he dyd, ⁊ his power, how he foughte with Amasias kyng of Juda, beholde, it is wrytten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Israel. And Joas fell on slepe with his fathers, and Jeroboam sat vpo his seate. And Joas was buried in Samaria w the kynges of Israel.

D As for Eliseus, he fell in to a sicknes, wher of he dyed. And Joas the kyng of Israel came downe vnto him, and wepte for him, and saide: My father, my father, the charet man of Israel, and his hoisemen. Eliseus sayde vnto him: Take the bowe and the arrowes. And whan he had taken the bowe and the arrowes, he sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: Bende the bowe with thine hande. And he bent it with his hāde. And Eliseus layed his hande vpon the kynges hande, and sayde: Open that wyndowe towarde the East. And he opened it. And Eliseus saide: Shute. And he shot. He sayde: one arrowe of the saluacion of the LORDE, one arrowe of saluacio agaynst the Syrians: and thou shalt smyte the Syrians at Aphek, tyll they be broughte to naughte.

And he sayde: Take ⁊ arrowes. And n hā he had taken them, he sayde vnto the kyng of Israel: Smyte the earth. And he smote thre tymes and stode still. Then was the mā of God wroth at him, and sayde: If thou haddest smytten fyue or sixe tymes, thou shuldest haue smytten ⁊ Syrians, tyll thou haddest vterly brought them to naughte. But now shalt thou smyte them thre tymes.

Whan Eliseus was deed and buried, the men of warre of the Moabites fell in to the londe the same yeare. And it fortunied ⁊ they buried a certaine man. But whā they sawe the men of warre, they cast the man in to Eliseus graue. And whan he was therin, and touched Eliseus bones, he reuiued, and stode vpon his fete.

So Hasael the kyng of Syria oppressed Israel, as longe as Joahas lyued. But the LORDE was gracious vnto them, and had mercy vpon them, and turned him to them for his couenauntes sake, with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and wolde not destroye the: nether dyd he cast them out from his presence vnto this houre.

And Hasael the kyng of Syria dyed, and Benadad his sonne was kyng in his steade. But Joas turned backe, and toke out of the hande of Benadad the sonne of Hasael the cyties which he had takē in battaill out of the hande of his father Joahas: Thre tymes dyd Joas smyte him, and broughte the cities of Israel agayne.

The XIII. Chapter.

In the seconde yeare of Joas ⁊ sonne of Joahas kyng of Israel, was Amasias the sonne of Joas kyng of Juda made kyng: fyue and twenty yeare olde was he, whan he was made kyng, ⁊ reigned nyne and twenty yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Joadan of Ierusalem. The XVI. Chapter.

In the senententh yeare of pecah y^e sonne of Romelia, was Ahas the sonne of Joatham kyng of Juda. Twetye yeare olde was Ahas whā he was made kyng, z reigned sixtene yeare at Jerusalem, z dyd not y^e which was righte in the sighte of y^e LORDE his God, as dyd David his father: for he walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, * yee and caused his sonne to go thorow the fyre, after the maner of the abhominacions of the heythen, whom the LORDE dyne awaye before the childre of Israel. And he dyd sacrifice, and brient incense vpon the hye places, z vpon all hilles, and amonge all grene trees. * Then wente Rezin the kyng of Syria, and pecah the sonne of Romelia kyng of Israel vp to Jerusalem to fighte agaynst it, and layed sege to Ahas: but they coulde not wyne it. At the sametyme dyd Rezin the kyng of Syria, brynge * Eloth agayne vnto Syria, and thurst y^e Jewes out of Eloth. But the Syrians came z dwelt therin vnto this daye.

Neuertheles Ahas sent messaungers vnto Teglatphalasser y^e kyng of Assiria, saye ge: I am thy seruant z thy sonne, come vp z help me out of y^e hande of the kyng of Syria, z of the kyng of Israel, which are risen vp agaynst me. And Ahas toke the syluer z golde y^e was founde in y^e house of y^e LORDE, z in the treasures of y^e kynges house, z sent a present to y^e kyng of Assiria. * And y^e kyng of Assiria cosented vnto him, z wente vp to Damascon, z wanne it, z caried them awaye vnto Cira, z slewe Rezin. And kyng Ahas wote to Damascon for to mete Teglatphalasser y^e kyng of Assiria. And whā he sawe an altare y^e was at Damascon, kyng Ahas sent a patrone z similitude of y^e same altare vnto the prest Urias, even as it was made. And Urias the prest buylded an altare, and made it a cordinge as kyng Ahas had sent vnto him from Damascon, tyll Ahas y^e kyng came from Damascon.

And whan y^e kyng came from Damascon, and sawe the altare, he offred theron, z kyndled his burntofferynes and meatofferynes vpon it, and poured his drynkofferin ges theron, z caused the bloude of y^e deedofferynes which he offred, to be sprentled vpon the altare. But the brasen altare that stode before the LORDE, put he awaye, so that it stode not betwene the altare and the house of the LORDE, but set it in the corner on the north syde of the altare.

And Ahas the kyng comaunded Urias y^e prest, z sayde: Vpō the greate altare shalt thou kyndle y^e burntofferynge in the mornynge, z the meatofferynge in the euenynge, z the kynges burntofferynge z his meatofferynge, z the burntofferynge of all the people in the londe, wth their meatofferynge z drynkofferynge. And all the bloude of the burntofferyn ges, z all the bloude of the other offeryn ges shalt thou sprentle theron: but with the brasen altare wyll I deuise what I can. Urias the prest dyd all a cordinge as Ahas the kyng comaunded him.

And kyng Ahas brake downe the seates, and put awaye the * ketell from aboue, and toke the laner from the brasen bullockes that were there vnder, and set it vpon y^e pavement of stone. And the pulpit for the Sabbath which they had buylded in the house, and y^e entrie of the kynges house turned he vnto the house of the LORDE, for the kyng of Assrias sake.

What more there is to saye of Ahas, what he dyd, beholde, it is wrytten in y^e Cronicles of the kynges of Juda. And Ahas fell on slepe with his fathers, z was buried wth his fathers in the cite of David. And Ezechias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The XVII. Chapter.

In the twoluerth yeare of Ahas the kyng of Juda, begane Oseas y^e sonne of Ela to reigne ouer Israel at Samaria nyne yeare, and dyd y^e which was euell in y^e sighte of the LORDE, but not as y^e kynges of Israel y^e were before him. Agaynst him dyd Salmanasar y^e kyng of Assiria come vp. And Oseas was subiecte vnto him, z gaue him trybutes. But whā y^e kyng of Assria perceaued y^e Oseas had conspyred z sent messaungers to Sna y^e kyng of Egypte, z payed not trybute yearly to y^e kyng of Assrians, he beseged him z put him in prison. * And the kyng of Assiria wente vp in to all the londe and to Samaria, and layed sege vnto it thre yeare. * And in the nyenthye yeare of Oseas dyd y^e kyng of Assria wyne Samaria, * and caried Israel awaye in to Assiria, and set them at Halah and at Habor by the water Gosan, and in the cities of the Medes.

For whan the childre of Israel synned agaynst y^e LORDE their God (y^e broughte the out of y^e londe of Egypte, from the hande of Pharaos kyng of Egypte) and serued other goddes: and walked after the customes of

¶ And whan the LORDE testified in Israel and Iuda by all the prophetes and Seers, sayenge: Turne agayne from youre euell wayes, and kepe my commaundementes and ordynaunces, acordinge to all þe lawe which I gaue vnto youre fathers, and that I sent vnto you by my seruantes the prophetes: they wolde not herken, but hardened their neckes, acordinge to the hardnes of their fathers, which beleued not on the LORDE their God. Yee they despyled his ordynaunces and his couenaunt which he made with their fathers, and his testimonies which he witnesed amonge them, and walked in their awne vanities, and became vayne felowinge the heythen, which dwelt rounde aboute them, concernynge whom the LORDE had commaunded them, that they shulde not do as they dyd. Neuertheles they forsoke all the commaundementes of the LORDE their God, and made them two molten calves and groves, and worshipped all the host of heauen, and serued Baal, and caused their sonnes and daughters to go thore to the fyre, and medled wth soothsayers and witches, and gaue them selues ouer to do that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE, to prouoke him vnto wrath.

¶ Then was the LORDE very wroth at Israel, and put them away fro his presence, so þe there remayned nomo^r but onely þe trybe of Iuda. The kyng of Assiria caused men to come fro Babilon, from Cutha, fro Ana, from Semath and Sepharuaim, and caused the to inhabite þe cities in Samaria in steade of the children of Israel. And they toke possession of Samaria, and dwelt in þe same cities. But whā they begane to dwell there, and feared not þe LORDE, the LORDE sent Lyons amonge the, which slewe them. And they caused it be sayde vnto þe kyng of Assiria: The heythe whom thou hast broughte hither, and caused them to inhabite the cities of Samaria, knowe not the lawe of þe God of the londe. Therefore hath he sent Lyons amonge them, and beholde, they slaye the, because they knowe not the ordinaunce of the God of the londe.

The kyng of Assiria comaunded and saide: Bynge thither one of þe prestes þe were caried awaye fro thence, and let him go thither, and dwell there, and teach the the ordinaunce of the God of þe londe. Then came one of þe prestes which were caried awaye from Samaria, and dwelt at Bethel, and taughte them how they shulde feare þe LORDE. But every people made the goddes, and put the in the houses vpon þe hye places, which the Samaritanes had made, every people in their cities wherin they dwelt. They of Babilon made Sochoth Benoth. They of Chut made Nergel. They of Semath made Asima. They of Ana made Libhas and Tharthak. They of Sepharuaim burnt their somes vnto Adramelech and Anamelech þe goddes of the of Sepharuaim.

¶ And whyle they feared þe LORDE, they made prestes in þe hye places of þe lowest amonge them, and put them in þe houses of þe hye places: thus they feared þe LORDE, and serued þe goddes also, acordinge to þe custome of every nacion, from whence they were broughte. And vnto this daye do they after þe olde fashon, so þe they nether feare þe LORDE, ner yet kepe their awne ordynaunces and lawes, after the lawe and commaundement that the LORDE comaunded the childre of Jacob, vnto whom he gaue þe name of Israel, and made a couenaunt with them, and commaunded them, and sayde: Feare none other goddes, and worshipe them not, and serue them not, and offer not vnto them:

but the LORD which broughte you out of the lode of Egypte, with greare power and outstretched arme, him feare, him worshippe, & vnto him do sacrifice: and the statutes, ordinances, lawe & comendement which he hath caused to be wrytten vnto you, those se that ye kepe, that ye allwaye do therafter, and feare none other goddes. And forget not the couenaunt which he hath made with you, lest ye feare other goddes. But feare ye LORD youre God, he shall deliuer you from all youre enemies. Neuertheles they wolde not herken, but dyd after their olde custome.

Thus these heythen feared the LORD, and serued their Idols also, and so dyd their children and childers childre likewise. Eue as their fathers haue done before them, so do they vnto this daye.

The XVIII. Chapter.

In the thirde yeare of Oseas y sonne of Ela kynge of Israel, reigned Ezechias y sonne of Achaz kynge of Iuda. And he was fyue and twentie yeare olde whan he was made kynge, & reigned nyne & twentye yeare at Ierusalem. His mothers name was Abi the daughter of Zachary. And he dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORD, acordinge vnto all as dyd David his father. He put awaye the hye places, and brake downe the pilers, & roted out the grones, and brake the brasen serpente which Moses had made. For vnto that tyme had the children of Israel brent incense vnto it. And it was called Nehusthan. He put his trust in the LORD God of Israel, so that after him there was not his like amonge all the kynges of Iuda neher had bene before him. He cleued vnto the LORD, and departed not backe from him, and kepe his commaundementes, which the LORD had commaunded Moses. And the LORD was with him. And whither so euer he wete forth, he behaued him selfe wysely. He resisted the kynge of Assyria, and was not subdued vnto him. He smote the philistynes also vnto Gasa, and their borders, from the castles vnto the stronge cities.

In the fourth yeare of Ezechias kynge of Iuda (y was the seventh yeare of Oseas the sonne of Ela kynge of Israel) came Salmanasar the kynge of Assyria vp agaynst Samaria, and layed sege vnto it, and wanne it after thre yeares in the sixte yeare of Ezechias, that is in the nyenth yeare of Oseas kynge of Israel, the was Samaria wonne. And the kynge of Assyria caried Israel awaye vnto Assyria, and set them at Halah and Habor by the water Gosan, and in the cities of the Meedes. And all because they herkened not vnto the voyce of the LORD their God, and had transgressed his conuauent: And as for all that Moses the seruauit of the LORD had commaunded the, they had nether herkened vnto eny of those, ner done them.

In the fourteth yeare of kynge Ezechias dyd Sennacherib y kynge of Assyria come vp agaynst all the stronge cities of Iuda, & coquered the. Then sent Ezechias the kynge of Iuda to y kynge of Assyria vnto Lachis, sayenge: I haue offended, turne backe from me: loke what thou layest vnto me, I wil beare it. The kynge of Assyria layed vnto Ezechias the kynge of Iuda, thie hundred talentes of syluer, & thirtie talentes of golde. So Ezechias gave all y syluer y was foude in y house of the LORD, & in the treasures of y kynges house. At y same tyme brake Ezechias the kynge of Iuda the doores of the temple of y LORD, & the places of golde which he him selfe had caused to laye ouer the, & gaue the vnto the kynge of Assyria.

And the kynge of Assyria sent Thartan, and the chiefe chamberlayne, & the chiefe butler from Lachis to kynge Ezechias with a greate power vnto Ierusalem. And they wete vp: and whan they came there, they stode styll at the condyte by the ouer pole, which lyeth in the waye vnto the fullers londe, and called vnto the kynge. The came there forth vnto them Eliachim the sonne of Helchias the stewarde, and Sobna the scribe, & Ioah the sonne of Assaph the Secretary.

And the chiefe butler sayde vnto the: Tell kynge Ezechias: Thus sayeth y greate kynge, eue the kynge of Assyria: What presumption is this y thou trustest vnto? Thinkest thou, y thou hast yet counsell and power to fighte? Where vnto trustest thou then, that thou art fallen of from me? Beholde, puttest thou thy trust in this broken staffe of rebe, in Egypte: which who leaneth vpon, it shall go into his hande, & pearse it thorow. Euen so is Pharaos the kynge of Egypte vnto all them that put their trust in him. But yf ye wolde saye vnto me: We put oure trust in y LORD oure God. Is not that he, whose hye places and altares Ezechias hath take downe, and sayde vnto Iuda and Ierusalem: Before this altare which is at Ierusalem, shall ye worshippe?

And trustest thou vnto Egypte because of the charrettes and horsmen? But thinkest thou that I came vp hither without y^e LORD to destroye these cities? The LORD hath commaunded me: Go vp in to that londe and destroye it.

E Then sayde Eliachim the sonne of Helchia & Sobna and Joah vnto the chiefe butler: Speake to thy seruantes in the Syriac language, for we vnderstande it, and speake not vnto vs in the Jewes speche before the eares of the people that are vpon the wall. Neuertheles y^e chiefe butler sayde vnto the: Hath my lord then sent me vnto thy lord, or to the, to speake these wordes? Yet even vnto the men, which sate vpon the wall, that they maye eatte their owne donge and drynke their owne stale wth you. So the chiefe butler stode and cried with loud voice in the Jewes language, and spake and sayde: Heare the worde of the greates kynge the kynge of Assiria. Thus sayeth the kynge: Let not Ezechias disceane you, for he is not able to deliuer you fro my hande: & let not Ezechias make you to trust in the LORD, sayenge: The LORD shall deliuer vs, and this cite shal not be geuen in to the handes of y^e kynge of Assiria. Followe not ye Ezechias, for thus sayeth the kynge of Assiria:

S Do methis blessinge, and come forth vnto me, so shal everyman eatte of his vyne and of his sygge tre, and drynke of his well, tyll I come my selfe and fetch you in to a londe, which is like youre owne lode, wherein is corne, wyne, hied, vynyardes, oyle trees, oyle and hony, so shal ye lyue, and not dye. Followe not ye Ezechias, for he disceaueth you, when he sayeth: The LORD shall deliuer vs. Have the goddes of the heythen deliuered euery one his londe from the hande of the kynge of Assiria? Where are the goddes of Hemath and Arphad? Where are the goddes of Sepharuaim Hena and Iua? Have they deliuered Samaria fro my hande? Where is there one god amonge the goddes of all londes, which hath deliuered his londe fro my hande? that the LORD shulde deliuer Ierusalem fro my hande.

As for the people, they helde their peace, and gaue him no answer: for the kynge had commaunded and sayde: Answer him nothinge. Then came Eliachim the sonne of Helchia y^e steward, and Sobna the scribe, and Joah the sonne of Assaph the Secreta-tary vnto Ezechias with rente clothes, and tolde him the wordes of the chiefe butler.

The XIX. Chapter.

Whan Ezechias y^e kynge herde this, he rente his clothes, & put on a sack cloth, & wente in to y^e house of the LORD, & sent Eliachim the steward & Sobna the Scribe with the Eldrest prestes, clothed in sack cloth, vnto the prophet Esay y^e sonne of Amos, & they saide vnto him: Thus sayeth Ezechias: This is a daye of trouble, & of desiaunce & blasphemy. The childre are cometo the byrth, & there is no strength to be deliuered of them. If happily the LORD thy God wil heare all the wordes of y^e chiefe butler, whom his lord the kynge of Assiria hath sent, to blasphemie y^e luyng God, & to desye him with soch wordes as the LORD thy God hath herde, therfore lifte thou vp thy prayer for the remnaunt, which are yet lefte behynde.

And whā kynge Ezechias seruantes came to Esay, Esay sayde vnto them: Speake thus vnto youre lord: Thus sayeth the LORD: Feare not thou the wordes y^e thou hast herde, wth erwith the kynge of Assirias seruantes haue blasphemed me. Beholde, I wil put him in another myrde, so y^e he shall heare tydings, & go agayne in to his owne countre, & and in his owne londe wil I cause him to fall thorow the swerde.

And whan y^e chiefe butlar came agayne, he founde the kynge of Assiria fightinge agaynst Libna: for he had herde that he was departed from Lachis. And he herde of Taracha the kynge of the Morians: Beholde, he is gone forth to fighte with the. Then turned he back, & sent messangers to Ezechias, & caused to saye vnto him: Let not thy God disceane the, on whom thou trustest & sayest: Ierusalem shal not be geue in to the hande of the kynge of Assiria. Beholde, thou hast herde what the kynges of Assiria haue dohe vnto all londes, & how they dāned them, & shalte thou be deliuered? Have y^e goddes of y^e heythen deliuered the, whom my father destroyed, as Gosan, Haran, Reseph, & the childre of Eden which were at Thalassar? Where is y^e kynge of Hemath, y^e kynge of Arphad, & y^e kynge of y^e cite Sepharuaim, Hena & Iua?

And whan Ezechias had receaved the letters of the messangers and had red them, he wente vp vnto the house of the LORD, and layed them abide before the LORD, & made his prayer before the LORD, and sayde: O LORD God of Israel, thou that sittest vpon the Cherubins, thou only art God amonge all y kyngdomes of the earth, thou hast made heauen and earth. Encline thine eare O LORDE, and heare: open thine eyes, and beholde, and heare the wordes of Sennacherib, which hath sent hither to blaspheme the lyuynge God. It is true (O LORDE) that the kynges of Assyria haue destroyed the heythen and their londe with the swerde, and haue cast their goddes in the fyre: for they were not Goddes, but y worke of mens hondes, wodd and stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. But now O LORDE helpe thou vs out of his hande, that all the kyngdomes vpon earth maye knowe, that thou LORDE art God alone.

D Then sent Esay the sonne of Amos vnto Ezechias, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me concernynge Sennacherib y kyng of Assyria, I haue herde it. This is it that the LORDE hath spoken agaynst him: He hath despysed y and mocked the O virgin thou daughter Sion: he hath shakē his heade at the O daughter Jerusalem. Whom hast thou despysed z blasphemed? Wherewhom hast thou lifte vp thy voyce? Eue agaynst y holy one in Israel hast thou lifte vp thine eyes: thou hast blasphemed y LORDE by thy messaungers, and sayde: Thow row the multitude of my charettes haue I gone vp to the toppes of the mountaynes, vpon the sydes of Libanus. I haue hewen downe his hye Ceders and his chosen Pyne trees, and am come to the vttemost habitation of the wod of Carmel that belongeth vnto it. I haue dygged and dronke vp the strange waters, and with y soles of my fete haue I dried vp the See.

E But hast thou not herde how that I haue done this longe ago, and haue prepared it from the begynnyng? Now haue I caused it for to come, that contencious stronge cities myghte fall into a waiste heape of stones, z they that dwel therein, shal be faynte, and fearfull and a shamed, and shal be as the grasse vpon the felde, and as y grene herbe and hay vpon the house toppes, that wythereth afore it be growne vp. I knowe thy habitacion, thy out and ingoynge, and that thou ragest agaynst me. For so moch then as thou ragest agaynst me, and seynge thy presumption is come vp to myne eares, therfore wyll I put a ryng in thy nose, and a bydle byt in thy lippes, and wyll brynge the agayne, euen the same waye thou comest.

And the daughter Juda which is escaped z remayneth, shall from hence forth take rote beneath, and teare frute aboute. For the remnant shal go forth from Jerusalem, z they y are escaped, shall go out from mount Sion. The gelesy of the LORDE Zebaoth shall brynge this to passe.

Therfore thus sayeth the LORDE concernynge y kyng of the Assyrians: He shall not come in to this cite, and shall shute no arrowe therein, neither shal there come eny shyld before it, neither shal he dygge eny backe aboute it, but shal go agayne the waye that he came, and shall not come in to this cite, sayeth the LORDE: and I wyll defende this cite, to helpe it for myne awne sake, and for my seruaut Dauids sake.

And in the same night wente the angell G of the LORDE, and smote in the heost of the Assyrians, an hundred and fyue and seure score thousande men. And whan they gat them vp in the mornynge, beholde, all laye full of deed carcases. So Sennacherib the kyng of Assyria brake vp, and departed, and returned, and abode at Nimue. And as he worshipped in y house of Nisrach his god, his awne sonnes Adramalech and Sarazer smote him with the swerde, and fled in to y londe of Ararat. And Asarhadon his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The XX. Chapter.

AT that tyme was Ezechias beddeside. X And the prophet Esay y sonne of Amos, came to him, z sayde vnto him: Thus sayeth y LORDE: Set thine house in orde for thou shalt dye z not lyue. And he turned, his face to the wall, and prayed vnto y LORDE, and sayde: Remembre (O LORDE) that I haue walked faithfully before the, z with a perfecte hert, and haue done y which is good in thy syghte. And Ezechias wept sore. But whan Esay was not gone out of halfe the cite, y worde of y LORDE came to him, z sayde: Turne back, z tell Ezechias y prynce of my people: Thus sayeth y LORDE God of thy father Dauid: I haue herde thy praier, z considered y teares. Beholde, I wil heale y: on the thirde daye shalt thou go in to y house of the LORDE, z fiftene yeares wil I adde vnto y life, z wyll delyner the z this cite from the kyng of Assyria, z this cite wil I defende for myne awne sake, and for my seruaut Dauids sake. And Esay sayde: Bui-

Ezechias sayde vnto Esay: Which is þe token, that the LORDE wyll heale me, and that I shal go vp in to the house of þe LORDE on the thirde daye? Esay sayde: This token shalt thou haue of the LORDE, that the LORDE shal do acordynge as he hath sayde. Shall the shadowe go ten degrees forward, or shal it turne ten degrees backward? Ezechias sayde: It is an easy thinge for the shadowe to go ten degrees downewarde, þe is not my mynde: but that it go ten degrees backward. Then cryed the prophet Esay vnto the LORDE, and the shadowe wente backe ten degrees in Achas Wyall, which he was descended a fore.

At the same tyme Merodach Baladan the sonne of Baladan kynge of Babilon, sent letters and presentes vnto Ezechias, for he had herde that Ezechias had bene sicke. And Ezechias reioysed with them, and shewed them all the house of rotes, the syluer, golde, spyes, and the best oyle, and the house of ordinaunce, and all that was founde in his treasures. There was nothynge in his house and in all his domynion, but Ezechias shewed it them.

Then came Esay the prophet vnto kynge Ezechias, and sayde vnto him: What haue these men sayde? and whence came they vnto the? Ezechias sayde: They came to me out of a farre countre, even from Babilon. He sayde: What haue they sene in thyne house? Ezechias sayde: They haue sene all that is in my house, and there is nothynge in my treasures but I haue shewed it them. Then sayde Esay vnto Ezechias: Heare the worde of the LORDE: Beholde, the tyme cometh, that it shall all be carryed awaye vnto Babilon, and whatsoever thy fathers haue layed vp vnto this daye, and there shall nothynge be lefte, sayeth the LORDE. And the children which come of the, whom thou shalt beget, shal be taken awaye, to be chamberlaynes in the kynge of Babilons palace. Ezechias sayde vnto Esay: It is good that the LORDE hath spoken. Manasses was twelue yeare olde, whan he was made kynge, and reigned fyue and fyfye yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hephziba. And he dyd that which was euell in y sight of the LORDE (even after the abhominacions of the heithen, whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel) and waxed forward, and builded vp the hye places which his father Ezechias had destroyed, and sett vp Baals altares, and made groues (as Achab the kynge of Israel dyd) and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued them. And builded altares in the LORDES house, wherof the LORDE sayde: I wyll set my name at Jerusalem. And in both the courtes of the house of the LORDE builded he altares vnto all the hoost of heane. And caused his sonne to go thorow the fyre, and regarded bydescryenge and tokens, and maynteyned soythsayers, and expounders of tokens, and so moch dyd he of this which was euell in the sight of the LORDE, that he prouoked him vnto wrath.

Then spake the LORDE by his seruantes the prophetes, and saide: Because that Manasse the kynge of Iuda hath gone these abhominacions, which are worse then all y abhominacions that the Amorites haue done which were before them, and hath caused Iuda also to synne agaynst their God, therefore thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll brynge soch a plage vpon Jerusalem and Iuda, that who so euer heareth it, both his eares shal glowe, and ouer Jerusalem wyll I stretch forth the lyne of Samaria, and the weighte of the house of Achab, and wyl wype out Jerusalem, even as one wyperh a platter, and I wyl ouerthrowe it.

Manasses also shed excedinge moch innocēt bloude, so longe tyll Ierusalē was full on every syde, with out the synnes wherewith he caused Iuda for to synne, so þe they dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE.

His mothers name was Mesumelech, y daughter of Harus of Iatba, and he dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, as Manasses his father had done, and walked in all the waye which his father walked, and serued the Idols which his father had serued, and worshipped them, and forsoke the LORDE the God of his father, and walked not in the waye of the LORDE.

e And his seruantes conspyred agaynst Amon, & slewe the kyng in his house. But the people of the londe slewe all them þe had cōspyred agaynst kyng Amon. And the people of the londe made Josias his sonne kyng in his steade. As for other thinges that Amon dyd, beholde, they are wyrtten in the Cronicles of the kynges of Iuda. And he was buried in his grave in Osa's garde. And Josias his sonne was kyng in his steade.

And Helchias þe prest sayde vnto Saphan the scribe: "I haue founde the boke of the lawe in the house of the LORDE. And Helchias gaue the boke vnto Saphan, that he might reade it. And Saphan the scribe bare it vnto the kyng, and brought h. m. wordes agayne, & sayde: Thy seruantes haue gathered together þe money þe was founde in the house, & haue delyuered it vnto the workmen, which are appoynted in þe house of the LORDE. And Saphan the scribe tolde the kyng and sayde: Helchias the prest hath delyuered me a boke, and Saphan red it before the kyng.

But whan the kyng herde the wordes of the boke of lawe, he rente his clothes. And the kyng cōmaunded Helchias the prest, & Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, & Achbor the sonne of Michaia, and Saphan the scribe, & Maia þe kynges seruant, and sayde: Go ye waye and are counsell at the LORDE for me, for the people, and for all Iuda, concernyng the wordes of this boke that is founde: for greate is the wiath of the LORDE that is kyndled ouer vs, because o^r fathers haue not hearkened vnto the wordes of this boke, to do all that is wyrtten vnto vs therin.

Then wente Helchias the prest, and Ahicam, Achbor, Saphan & Asaia vnto Huldā the prophetisse þe wise of Sellū the sonne of Thecua the sonne of Harham the keeper of þe clothes, and she dwelt at Ierusalem in the seconde porte, and they spake vnto her. And she sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth þe LORDE God of Israel: Tell the man that sent you vnto me, Thus sayeth the LORDE: Beholde, I wil brynge euell vpon this place, and the inhabiteurs therof, even all the wordes of þe lawe which the kyng hath caused to be red, because they haue forsaken me, and brent incense vnto othei goddes, to prouoke me vnto wiath with all the workes of their handes. D But tell this vnto the kyng of Iuda, which hath sent you to are counsell at the LORDE: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Because thine hert is not departed fro the wordes which thou hast herde, and hast humbled thyselfe before the LORDE, to heare what I haue spoken agaynst this place and the inhabiteurs therof (how that they shall become a very desolacion and curse) ⁊ hast rente thy clothes, and wepte before me, I haue herde it, sayeth the LORDE: ⁊ therfore wyll I gather the vnto thy fathers, so ⁊ thou shalt be put in to thy graue in peace, and thine eyes shall not se all the euell that I wyll brynge vpon this place. And they brought the kyng worde agayne.

The XXIII. Chapter.

Ald the kyng sent forth, and all the Elders in Iuda and Jerusalem resorted vnto him, and the kyng wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, and all the men of Iuda, and all the inhabiteurs of Jerusalem with him, the prestes and prophetes and all the people both small and greate, ⁊ all the wordes of the booke of the couenaunt that was founde in the house of the LORDE, were red in their eares. And the kyng stode vpon a piler, and made a couenaunt before the LORDE, that they shulde walke after the LORDE, and to kepe his commaundementes, witnessses, and ordinaunces with all their hert and with all their soule, ⁊ they shulde set vp the wordes of this couenaunt, which are wrytten in this booke. And all the people entred in to the couenaunt.

And the kyng comaunded helchias the hye prest, and the prestes of the secōde course, and the keepers of the threshold, ⁊ they shulde put out of the temple all the vessels which were made for Baal, and for the groue, and for all the hoost of heauen, ⁊ he brient them without Jerusalem in the valley of Cedron, and the dust of them was carryed vnto Bethel.

And he put downe the Remurims, who the kynges of Iuda had founded, to burne incense vpon the hye places, in the cities of Iuda, and aboute Jerusalem. He put downe also them that brient incense vnto Baal, to the Sonne, and the Mōne, and the twolue to pens, and to all ⁊ hoost of heauen. And the groue caused he to be carryed from the house of the LORDE out of Jerusalem in to ⁊ valley of Cedron, and brient it in the valley of Cedron, and made it to dust, and cast the dust vpon the graues of ⁊ comen people. And he brake downe the whores houses which were by the house of the LORDE, wherin the women made mansions for the groue.

And he caused all the prestes for to come out of the cities of Iuda, and suspended ⁊ hye places, where the prestes brient incense, from Geba vnto Berseba. And brake downe the hye places in the portes, that were at ⁊ dore of the gate of Josua ⁊ shreue of the cite, at the lefte hande as one goeth to the cite porte. Yet had not the prestes of the hye places offred vpon the altare of the LORDE at Jerusalem, but are vntended bried amonge their brethien.

He suspended ⁊ Tophet also in the valley of the children of Ennon, that noman shulde cause his sonne or his doughter to go thow ⁊ fyre vnto Moloch. And he put downe the houses, which ⁊ kynges of Iuda had set vnto the Sonne, at the utteringe in to the house of the LORDE, belyde the chest of Vitham Melech the chamberlayne which was at Paruam, and the charettes of the Sonne brient he with fyre, and the altares vpon the rofe of Achabs perler, which the kynges of Iuda had made. And the altares ⁊ which Manasses had made in the two courtes of the house of the LORDE, dyd the kyng breake downe. And ranne from thence, and cast the dust of them in to the broke Cedron.

And the hye places that were before Jerusalem on the righte hande of Mount Mithith ⁊ which Salomon the kyng of Israel had buylded vnto Astaroth the abhominacion of Sidon, and to Camos the abhominacion of Moab, and to Malcom the abhominacion of the children of Ammon, those dyd the kyng suspende, and brake the pilers, and rored out the grones, and fylled their places with mens bones.

And the altare at Bethel, and the hye place that Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat made, which caused Israel to synne, the same altare brake he downe, and the hye place, ⁊ brient the hye place, and made it to dust, and brient vpon the groue. And Josias turned him

And he sayde: What titell is this, that I se here? And the men of the cite sayde vnto him: It is the grane of the man of God, which came from Iuda, and cried out this that thou hast done agaynst y altare of Bethel. And he sayde: Let him lye, no man touche his bones. Thus were his bones deliuered with the bones of the prophet that came from Samaria.

He put awaye also all the houses of the hye places in the cities of Samaria (which the kynges of Israel had made to prouoke y LORDE vnto wraeth) and dyd with them accordinge to all as he had done at Bethel. And all y prestes of the hye places that were there, offred he vpon the altares, and so burnt he mens bones thereon, and came agayne to Jerusalem.

And the kyng commaundered the people, and sayde: Kepe Easter vnto the LORDE youre God, * as it is wrytten in the boke of this couenante. For there was no Easter so kepe as this, sence the tyme of the Judges which iudged Israel, and in all the tymes of the kynges of Israel, and of the kynges of Iuda: but in the eighteenth yere of kyng Josias, was this Easter kepte vnto the LORDE at Jerusalem.

And Josias expelled all soothsayers, expounders of tokes, ymages and Idols, and all the abheminacions which were sene in the londe of Iuda and at Jerusalem, that he mighte set vp the wordes of the lawe, which were wrytten in the boke, that helchias y prest foude in the house of y LORDE.

His like was no kyng before him, which so couerted vnto y LORDE w all his hert, w all his soule, z with all his strength, accordinge to all the lawe of Moses. And after him came there not vp soch another. Yet turned not the LORDE from the indignacion of his greate wraeth, wherewith he was displeased ouer Iuda, because of all the prouocation wherewith Manasses had prouoked him. And y LORDE sayde: * I wil put Iuda out of my presence also, euen as I haue put awaye Israel: and this cite which I haue chosen, wyl I cast out, namely, Jerusalem, z the house wherof I sayde: My name shalbe there. And he dyd y which was euell in y sight of y LORDE, euen as his fathers had done. But Pharaos Necho toke him prisoner of Reblatha in the londe of Hamath, y he shulde not reigne at Jerusalem: z raysed a taxe vpon the londe, an hundredth caleres of siluer, z one talent of golde. And Pharaos Necho made Eliachim y sonne of Josias kyng in his father Josias steade, z turned his name Joachim. But Joahas toke he, z brought him in to Egypte where he dyed. And Joachim gaue the siluer z golde vnto Pharaos, yet taxed he the londe, y he mighte geue y syluer accordinge to Pharaos commaundement. Eue ry one amonge the people in y londe taxed he after his abilitie in siluer z golde, to geue it vnto Pharaos. The XXIII. Chapter.

In his tyme came vp Nabuchodonosor y kyng of Babilon, z Joachim was in subieccion vnto him iij. yere. And he turned back, z rebelled agaynst him. And y LORDE sent men of warre vpon him out of Chaldea, out of Syria, out of Moab, z fro amonge the childre of Ammon, z caused the for to come in to Iuda, to destroe it accordinge to the worde of the LORDE, which he spake by his seruantes the prophetes. Yet wente he downe to him with a staffe, and toke the speare out of his hande, and slewe him with his awne speare. This dyd Benaia the sonne of Joiada, and was a famous man amõge thre Worthies, and most awncient amõge thirtie. But vnto the thre came he not. Howbeit Dauid made him of his secreete counsell.

But yf ye come vpo disceate, and to be mine aduersaries (where as there is yet no vnrighthe in me) the God of oure fathers loke vpon it, and rebuke it. And this is the nombie of the heades harnesssed vnto the warre, which came to David vnto Hebron, for to turne the kyngdome of Saul vnto him, accordyng to the worde of the LORDE.

D The childre of Juda, which handled spea res and siverdes, were sixe thousande, z eight hundred ready harnesssed vnto y warre. Of the children of Simeon noble men of armes for the battayll, seven thousande and an hundred. Of the children of Levi foure thousande and sixe hundred. And Joiada the prynce amonge them of Aaron with thre thousande and seven hundred. Sadoc the yonge valeaunt man of armes with his fathers house, two and twentye rulers. 2 Re. 3. 2 All these men of warre, ready harnesssed to the battayll, came with a whole hert vnto Hebron, to make David kyng ouer all Iſrael. And all Iſrael besyde were of one hert, that David shulde be made kyng. And there were they with David thre dayes, eatyng and drynkyng: for their brethien had prepared for them. ¶ And David helde a counsell with the captaines ouer thousandes and ouer hundreds, and with all the prynces, and sayde vnto all the congregacion of Israel: If it lyke you, and yf it be of the LORDE our God, let vs sende forth on euery syde to oure other brethren in all the countrees of Israel, and to the prestes and Leuites in the cities where they haue suburbs, & they maye be gathered together vnto vs, and let vs fetch the Arke of oure God agayne vnto vs: for by Sauls tyme we axed a ster it. The sayde the whole cōgregacion, that the same shulde be done, for it pleased all the people well.

So David gathered all Israel together from Sihor of Egypte, eyll a man come vnto Hemath, to fetch the Arke of God from Kiriat Jearim. And David wente vp w all Israel to Kiriat Jearim, which lieth in Iuda, to brynge from thence the Arke of God the LORDE, that sitteth vpon the Cherubins, where the name is named: and they caused the Arke of God to be caried vpon a new cart from the house of Abinadab.

¶ Ufa and his brechren drewe the cart. As for David and all Israel, they played with all their strength before God, with songes, with harpes, with psalteries, with tabrettes, with Cymbales and trompes.

But whan they came to the barne floore of Chidon, Ufa stretched out his hande to holde the Arke: for the oxen wente out asyde. Then wared the wrath of the LORDE scarce ouer Ufa, & smote him, because he stretched out his hāde to the Arke, so & he dyed there before God. The was David sory, because & LORDE had made soch a rente vpon Ufa, and called the place Perez Ufa, vnto this daye. And David stode in feare of God the same daye, & sayde: How shal I brynge & Arke of God vnto me? Therfore wolde he not let & Arke of God be broughte vnto him in to & cite of David, but caried it into & house of Obed Edom the Gachite. So the Arke of God abode with Obed Edom in his house thre monethes. And & LORDE blessed Obed Edoms house and all chat he had.

And David toke yet mo wyues at Jerusalem, & legat yet mo sonnes & daughters. And the names of them & were borne vnto him at Jerusalem, are these: Sammua, Sobab, Nathan, Salomon, Zebhar, Elisua, Elipale, Hoga, Nepheg, Japhia, Elisamma, Baal Jada, Elphalet.

And whan the Philistynes herde that David was anoynted kynge ouer all Israel, they wente vp all to seke David. Whan David herde that, he wente forth agaynst them. And the Philistynes came, and scatered the selues beneth in & valley of Rephaim. And David axed counsell at God, & sayde: Shal I go vp agaynst the Philistynes? and wilt thou deliuer them in to my hande? The LORDE sayde vnto him: Go vp, and I wil deliuer them in to thy hande. And whan they were gone vp to Baal Prasin, David smote them there. And David sayde: God hath deuyled myne enemies thorow my hande, euen as the water parteth asunder: therfore cailed they the place Baal Prasin. And the relesse they their goddes. Then * commaunded David to burne them with fyre.

But the Philistynes gat them thither agayne, and scatered them selues beneth in & valley. And David axed counsell at God agayne. And God sayde vnto him: Thou shalt not go vp behynde them, but turne the from them, that thou mayest come vpon the ouer agaynst the peertrees. So whan thou hearest aboue vpon the peertrees the noyse of the goynge, go thou forth then to the batayll: for God is gone forth then before the to smyte the hoost of the Philistynes. And David dyd as God commaunded him. And they smote the hoost of the Philistynes from Gibeon forth vnto Gaser. And Davids name was noysed out in all londes. And the LORDE caused & feare of him to come vpon all the heythen.

unto the place which he had prepared for it.

And David brought the children of Aaron & the Levites together. Of the children of Abiathar: Oziel the chiefe wth his brethren, an C. and twentye. Of the children of Merari: Asaia the chiefe wth his brethren, two C. and twentye. Of the childre of Gerson: Joel the chiefe wth his brethren, an C. and thirtie. Of y^e childre of Elizaphan: Semaia the chiefe wth his brethren, two hundred. Of the childre of Ithron: Eliel the chiefe, with his brethren, foure score. Of the children of Usiel: Aminadab the chiefe, with his brethren, an hundred and twelue.

23 And David called Saboe and Abiathar the prestes, and the Levites, namely Oziel, Asaia, Joeli, Semaia, Eliel, Aminadab, and sayde vnto them: Ye are the heades of y^e fathers amonge the Levites: sanctifye yo^r selues therfore & youre brethren, y^e ye maye brynge vp the Arke of the LORDE God of Israel, to the place y^e I haue prepared for it.

1. Par. 4 b * For a fore whan ye were not there, the LORDE oure God made a rent amonge vs, because we soughte him not, as we shulde haue done. So y^e prestes & the Levites halowed the selues, y^e they mighte brynge vp the Arke of the LORDE God of Israel. And the children of Levi bare the Arke of God the LORDE vpon their shulders with the stauers thereon, Exo 25 b * as Moses commaunded accordinge to y^e worde of the LORDE.

And David spake vnto y^e rulers of y^e Levites, that they shulde ordeyne some of their brethren to be syngers with psalteries, harpes and loude instrumentes, and Cymbales, to synge loude with ioye.

C Then the Levites appoynted Heman y^e sonne of Joel and of his brethren Assaph the sonne of Warachias: and of the children of Merari their brethren, Ethan the sonne of Cusaia: and with them their brethren of the seconde course, namely Zacharias, Jaesiel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Unni, Eliab, Benaia, Maaseia, Machichia, Elipheleia, Mithneia, Obed Edom, Jehiel, the doo keepers. For Heman, Assaph and Ethan were syngers, with brasen belles makynge a loude noyse: but Zacharias, Jaesiel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Unni, Eliab, Maaseia & Benaia with psalteries to Alamoth: Machichia, Elipheleia, Mithneia, Obed Edom, Jehiel & Asaia with harpes to synge aboue them on hye. Chenania the ruler of the Levites was the master of Musick to teach them fore to synge, for he was a man of vnderstandinge.

And Warachias and Elcana were the do keepers of the Arke. But Sachania, Josaphat, Nathaniel, Amasai, Zacharias, Benaia, Elieser the prestes, blew the trompettes before y^e Arke of God. And Obed Edom and Jehia were doo keepers of the Arke.

D So David and the Elders of Israel, and the captaines ouer thousandes wente vp to fetch the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE out of the house of Obed Edom wth ioye. And whan God had helped the Levites y^e bare the Arke of the LORDES couenaunt, there were offred seven bullockes & seven rāmes, And David had a lynnē garment vpon him, and so had all the Levites y^e bare the Arke, and y^e syngers, and Chenania the master of Musick wth the syngers. David had an ouerbody cote of linnen vpon him also.

Thus all Israel brought vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE with mynth, with trompettes, tabrettes, & loude Cymbales, with psalteries and harpes. Now whan the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE came in to the cite of David, Michol y^e daughter of Saul looked out at a wyndowe: & whā she sawe kynge David dauncynge & playen ge, she despyed him in hir hert.

And he appoynted before the Arke of y^e LORDE certayne Levites to mynister, that they shulde geue prayse, thankes and laumin ge vnto the LORDE God of Israel: namely Assaph the first, Zacharias the seconde, Jehiel, Semiramoth, Jehiel, Machichia, Eliab, Benaia, Obed Edom and Jehiel, with psalteries and harpes. Now LORDE, let the worde be verified for ever, that thou hast spoken ouer thy seruauit and ouer his house, z do as thou hast spoken: and let thy name endure and be magnified for ever, that it maye sayde: The LORDE Zebaoth, the God of Israel is the God in Israel, and that the house of thy seruauit David maye be stablyshed before the: for thou LORDE hast opened the eare of y seruauit, that thou wilt buylde him an house. Therefore hath thy seruauit founde (consydence) to make his prayer before the. Now LORDE, thou art God, and hast promysed soch good vnto thy seruauit. Begynne now to blesse the house of thy seruauit, that it maye be euermore before the: for loke what thou blessest (O LORDE) the same is blessed for ever.

The XX. Chapter.

If I see this smote David the philistynes, and subdued them, and toke Gath z the villages therof out of the hande of the philistynes. He smote the Moabites likewise, so that the Moabites were subdued vnto David, and gaue him trybute. He smote Hadad Eser also y kyng of Zoba in Chemath, whan he wente to set vp his power by the water Euphrates.

And David toke from him a thousande charrettes, seven thousande horsmen, and twē tye thousande fore men. And David lamed all the charrettes, and kepte an hundred charrettes over. And the Synans came from Damascon, to helpe Hadad Eser the kyng of Zoba. Zonbeit David smote two z twentie thousande of the same Synans, and layed men of warre at Damascon in Syna, so that the Synans were subdued vnto David, and broughte him trybute. For the LORDE helped David, n hither so ever he wente.

And David toke the shyldes of gelbe, y Hadad Eser's seruantes had, z broughte the to Ierusalē. And out of Tibehach z Chun the cities of Hadad Eser, toke David very moch brasse, * wherof Salomon made the brasen laver, and pilers, and brasen vessels.

And whā Thogu the kyng of Chemath herde, y David had smytten all y power of Hadad Eser, he sent his sonne Hadera vnto kyng David, to salute him z to blesse him, because he had foughte w Hadad Eser, z smytte hi (for Thogu had warre w Hadad Eser)

C And Abisai the sonne of Zeru Ja smote eightene thousande of the Edomites in the Salt valley, and layed mē of warre in Edomea, so that all the Edomites were subdued vnto David: for y^e LORDE helped David, whither so euer he wente.

Re. 9. c Thus David reigned ouer all Israel, and executed iudgment and righteousness vnto all the people. Joab the sonne of Zeru Ja was capayne ouer the hoost. Josaphat the sonne of Achitob was Chaunceler. Sadoc the sonne of Achitob, and Ahimelech y^e sonne of Abiathar, were prestes. Saneia was Scribe. The XX. Chapter.

1 Re. 10. a After this dyed Nabas y^e kynge of the childre of Ammon, and his sonne was kynge in his steade. Then sayde David: I wil do mercy vpon Hanun the sonne of Nabas, for his father dyd mercy vpon me: and so he sent messengers to comforte him ouer his father. And whā Davids seruantes came in to the londe of the children of Ammon vnto Hanun to comforte him, the prynces of the children of Ammon sayde vnto Hanun: Thinkest thou that David honoureth thy father in thy sight, that he hath sent comforters vnto the? See his seruantes are come vnto the, to search and to ouerthrowe, and to spye out the londe. Then toke Hanun the seruantes of David, and shoue them, y^e cut the halfe of their garmettes of, euē by the loynes, y^e so let the go. And they wente their waye, y^e sent men to tell David. B Neuertheles he sent to mete them (for y^e men were put to greate shame) and the kynge sayde: Abyde at Jericho, tyll youre beerdēs be growne, and then come agayne.

Whan the childre of Ammon sawe, that they stynted in y^e sight of David, both Hanun and the children of Ammon sent a thousande talētes of syluer, to hyre charettes and horsmen out of Mesopotamia, out of Maacha and out of Zoba: and hyred two and thirtie thousande charettes, y^e y^e kynge of Maacha with his people, which came y^e pitched their tentes before Medba. And the children of Ammon gathered them selues together out of their cities, and came to the battayll.

The xx. Chap. Ho. lxxxvij.

Whan David herde that, he sent Joab thither with all the hoost of the men of armes. And the childre of Ammon were gone forth, and prepared them selues to the battayll before the gate of the cite. But the kynges y^e were come, kepte them asyde in the felde.

Now whā Joab sawe that the battayll was agaynst him both before and behynde, he chose of all the best yonge men in Israel, and prepared him selfe agaynst y^e Syrians. As for y^e residue of the people, he put them vnder the hande of Abisai his brother, that they shulde prepare them selues agaynst the children of Ammon, and he sayde: If y^e Syrians be to mightie for me, helpe thou me: but if the childre of Ammon be to stroge for y^e, I shall helpe the: take a good corage vnto the, and let vs quyte oure selues manly for oure people and for the cities of oure God: neuertheles the LORDE do what pleasech him. And Joab made him forth with y^e people that was with him, to fighte agaynst y^e Syrians: y^e they fled before him. And whan the children of Ammon sawe y^e the Syrians fled, they fled also before Abisai his brother, and wente in to the cite. And Joab came to Jerusalem.

D But whan the Syrians sawe that they were smytte before Israel, they sent messengers, and broughte forth y^e Syrians which were beyonde the water. And Sophach the chiefe capayne of Hadad Eser wente before them. Whā this was tolde David, he gathered all Israel together, and wente ouer Iordane. And whan he came at them, he set y^e battayll in aray agaynst them. And David prepared him selfe to y^e battayll agaynst y^e Syrians, y^e they foughte with him: but y^e Syrians fled before Israel. And David slewe of the Syrians seven thousande charettes, y^e fortye thousande fote men. And Sophach the chiefe capayne slewe he also. And whan Hadad Eseres seruantes sawe that they were smytte before Israel, they made peace wth David y^e his seruantes. And the Syrians wolde helpe the childre of Ammon nomore.

1 Re. 11. a After whan y^e yere came aboute, what tyme as y^e kynges use to go forth, Joab broughte the power of the hoost, y^e destroyed the londe of the children of Ammon, and came and layed sege vnto Rabba. But David abode at Jerusalem. 1. Re. 11. b And Joab smote Rabba, and brake it downe. And David toke their kynges crowne from his heade, and founde the weighte of a talent of golde theron, y^e precious stones. And it was set vpo Dauids heade. And very moch spoy le caried he out of the cite. As for the people that were therin, he broughte the forth, & parted them in sunder w saries, & hokes & herels of yron. Thus dyd David vnto all y cities of the childre of Ammon. And David departed againe, with the people vnto Jerusalem.

B Afterwarde arose there warre at Gath with the Philistynes. Then Sibechai y Hu sathite smote Sibai, which was one of the children of Zephaim, and he subdued him. And there arose warre agayne w the Philistynes. The Elhamah y sonne of Jair smote Lahemi y brother of Goliath y Gathite, whose speares staff was like a weeuers lme. Afterwarde was there a battayll at Gath, where there was a man of a greate stature, y had sixe syngers and sixe toes, which make foure and twentye. And he was borne also of Rapha, and spake despytefully vnto Israel. But Jonathas the sonne of Simea Dauids brother smote him. These were the childre of Rapha at Gath, & fell thorow y hande of David, and of his seruantes.

The XXII. Chapter.

A Nd Sathan stode agaynst Israel, & entysed David to nombre Israel. And David sayde vnto Joab & to y rulers of the people: Go yo' waye, nombre Israel from Berscha vnto Dan, and brynge me the nombre of the, that I maye knowe it. Joab sayde: The LORDE make his people an hundred tymes mo then they are now. But my lorde W kynge, are they not all my lordes seruantes? Why doth my lorde then are thereafter? Wherfore shal there a trespase come vpon Israel?

Nevertheless the kynges worde preuayled agaynst Joab. And Joab wente forth, and walked thorow all Israel, and came to Jerusalem, and deliuered vnto David y nombre of the people that was tolde. And of all Israel there were a thousande tymes a thousande, and an hundred thousande men, that brue out the swerde: and of Juda foure hundred thousande and seuctye thousande men, which brue out the swerde. As for Levi and Ben Jamin, he nombred them not amonge these: for the kynges worde was abhominable vnto Joab.

B But this displeased God righte sore: for he smote Israel. And David sayde vnto God: I haue synned greuously, that I haue done this. But now take awaye the trespase of thy seruant: for I haue done very unwysely. And the LORDE spake vnto Gad

The xxij. Chap.

Dauids Seer, & sayde: Go speake to David, & saye: Thus saith the LORDE: Thie thinges laye I before the, chose y one of them, y I maye do it vnto the. And whā Gad came to David, he spake vnto him: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Chose y ether thie yeare derth, or thie monethes to flye before thine aduersaries, & before the swerde of thine enemies, y it maye ouertake the: or thie dayes y swerde of the LORDE, & pestilence in the londe, y the angell of the LORDE maye destroye in all y coastes of Israel. Loke now what answere I shal geue vnto him y sent me. David sayde vnto Gad: I am in greate trouble: yet wyl I rather fall in to y hande of the LORDE, for his mercy is excedynge greate, & I wil not fall in to the handes of men.

Then dyd the LORDE cause pestilence to come into Israel, so that there fell of Israel thre score & ten thousande mē. And God sent the angell to Jerusalem for to destroye it. And even in the destruccion the LORDE considered, and he repēted of the euell, and sayde vnto the angell y destroyer: It is ynough, holde now thy hande.

The angell of the LORDE stode besyde y barne of Arnan y Jebusite. And David lifte vphis eyes, and sawe the angell of y LORDE stondinge betwene heauē and earth, and a naked swerde in his hande stretched out ouer Jerusalem. Then David and y Elders beyng clothed with sack cloth, fell vpo their faces. And David sayde vnto God: Am not I he that caused the people to be nombred? I am he that hath synned and done euell: as for these shepe, what haue they done: LORDE my God, let thine hande be agaynst me and agaynst my fathers house, and not agaynst thy people to plague them.

And the angell sayde vnto Gad, that he shulde speake vnto David, that David shulde sta'be go vp, & set vp an altare in the barne of Arnan the Jebusite. So David wente vp acordinge to y worde of Gad, which he spake in the name of the LORDE. But whā Arnan turned him, and sawe the angell (and his foure sonnes with him) they hyd the selues: for Arnan throsshed wheate.

Now whan David came to Arnan, Arnan looked, and was aware of David, and wote forth out of the barne, and worshipped David with his face to the grounde. And David sayde vnto Arnan: Geue me rowme in the barne, to buyde an altare vnto the LORDE therin: for y full money shal I thou geue it me, that the plague maye cease from the people.

The i. boke of the Cronicles. The xxiij. Chap. Ho. lxxxviij.

But Arnan sayde vnto David: Take it vnto the, and let my lord the kynge do as pleaseth him. Beholde, that ore geue I for a burnt offering, and these vessels to the ore, and wheate for the meate offering, I geue it all. Neuerthelcs the kynge sayde vnto Arnan: Not so, but for y full money wyl I bye it: for that which is thine wyl not I take for the LORDE, and offre a burnt offering for naughte.

E So David gaue Arnan for y rowme, sixe hundred Sycles of golde in weight. And there buylded David an altare vnto y LORDE, z offred burnt offerings z slayn offerings. And whan he called vpo the LORDE, he herde him thorow the fyre from heaue vpon y altare of the burnt offering. And y LORDE sayde vnto the anuell, that he shulde put his swerde in to his sheeth.

At the same tyme whā David sawe, that the LORDE had herde him vpon the corne floore of Arnan y Jebusite. he dyd sacrifice there. For y habitacion of y LORDE which Moses had made in the wyldernes, and the altare of burnt offerings, was at that tyme in the hye place at Gibeon. But David coulde not go thitherto seke God before it, for he feared the swerde of the LORDES anuell. And David sayde: Here shal be y house of God y LORDE, and this the altare of burnt offerings for Israel.

The XXIII. Chapter.

A And David comaunded to gather together the straungers that were in y londe of Israel, and appoynted masons to hewe stone for the buyldinge of the house of God. And David prepared moch yron for nales in the dores of the portes, and for sodi thinges as were to be naled together, and so moch brasse, that is was not to be weyed: and Cedre trees innumerable: for they of Zidon z Tyre brought David moch Cedre tymbre: for David thoughte, Salomo my sonne is but a childe and tender: But the house that shal be buylded vnto the LORDE, shal be greate, that his name z prayse maye be exalted in all londes, therefore wyl I prouyde for him. So David made greate prouy sion before his death.

B And he called Salomon his sonne, z commaunded him to buylde the house of LORDE God of Israel, and sayde vnto him: My sonne, I was minded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE my God, but the worde of y LORDE came vnto me, and sayde: Thou hast shed moch bloude, and strycken many battayls, therefore shalt thou not buylde an house vnto my name, for as moch as thou hast shed so moch bloude vpon the earth before me. Beholde, the sonne which shal be boine vnto the, shal be a quyet man: and I wyl cause him to be in rest from al his enemies on every syde, for his name shal be Salomon: for I wyl geue peace and rest vpon Israel as longe as he lyueth. He shal buylde an house vnto my name. He shal be my sonne, and I wyl be his father. And I wyl stablyshe y seate of his kyngdome vpo Israel for euer.

Now my sonne, the LORDE shal be wyth the, and thou shalt prospere, that thou mayest buylde an house vnto the LORDE thy God, acordyng as he hath spoken of the. The LORDE also shal geue the wysdome z vnderstandyng, and shal commytte Israel vnto the, that thou mayest kepe the lawe of the LORDE thy God. But then shalt thou prospere, yf thou take hede to do after the ordynaunces and lawes which the LORDE commaunded Moses vnto Israel. Be stronge, and take a good corage vnto the, feare not, and be not faynt harted. Beholde, I haue in my pouerte prouyded for the house of the LORDE, an hundred thousande talentes of golde, and a thousande tymes a thousande talentes of syluer, and brasse and yron without nombre: for there is so moch of it.

And tymbre and stone haue I prepared, thou mayest get more therof. Thou hast many workmen also, mesons and carpenters in stone and tymbre, and all maner of men that haue vnderstandyng in all worke off golde, syluer, brasse, and yron without nombre. Yet get the vp, and be doynge, and the LORDE shal be wyth the.

And David commaunded all the rulers of Israel, to helpe Salomon his sonne, and sayde: Is not the LORDE youre God wyth you, and hath geuen you rest on every syde? for he hath delyuered the inhabytors of the londe in to youre handes, and the londe is subdued before the LORDE and before his people. Geue ouer youre hert now therefore and youre soule, to seke the LORDE youre God, and get you vp, and buylde a Sanctuary vnto the LORDE God, that the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE and the holy vessels of God, maye be brought in to the house, which shal be buylded vnto the name of the LORDE. So David made Salomon his sonne kynge ouer Israel, whan he himselfe was olde, and had lynyed ynough.

And he ordeyned them after this maner: namely, sixtene out of & childre of Eleasar to be rulers thorow out their fathers house: & eight of the children of Jthamar thorow out their fathers house. Take hede now, for the LORDE hath chosen the, to buylde an house to be the Sactuary: be stronge, and make it.

The xxix. Chap.

And David gaue Salomon his sonne a patrone of the porche, and of his house, and of the celles and perlers and ynnnermer chambers, and of the house of the Mercysate, and of all that he had in his mynde, namely of the courtes of the LORDES house, and of all the oratories rounde aboute the treasures in y house of God, and of the treasures of soch thinges as were halowed, of the ordinaunces of the prestes, and Lewites, and of all y busynesse of the offyces in the house of the LORDE.

24 Golde (gaue he him) after y golde weight for all maner of vessels of every offyce, and all siluer ornamentes after the weight for all maner of vessel of every offyce: and weight for the golden candilstickes and golden lampes, for every candilstycke and his lampes his weight: likewise for the silver candilstickes gaue he the weight to the candilstycke and his lampes, accordyng as was requyred for every candilstycke. He gaue golde also for y tables of the shewbryd, for every table his weight: and syluer likewise for the syluer tables. And pure golde for the fleshokes, bassens and censours: and for the golden cuppes, vnto every cuppe his weight: and for the siluer cuppes, vnto every cuppe his weight: and for the altare of incense his weight, of the most pure golde.

And a patrone of the charett of the golden Cherubims, that they mighte spiede out themselves, and couer the Arke of the coneuant of the LORDE. All this is geuen me in wytyng of the hande of the LORDE, to make me vnderstande all the workes of the patrone.

And David sayde vnto Salomon his sonne: Be thou manly and stronge, and make it, feare not, and be not faynhearted, the LORDE God my God shal be with the, and shall not withdrawe his hande, ner fayle the, tyll thou haue fynished every worke for the seruyce in the house of the LORDE. Beholde, the censures of the prestes and Lewites to all the offyces in the house of God are with the in every worke, and are willinge, and haue wisdom to all the offyces: and so haue the prynces and all the people for every thinge that thou hast to do.

The XXX. Chapter.

25 Ald kyng David sayde vnto all the congregacion: God hath chosen Salomon one of my sonnes, which yet is yonge and tender. But the worke is greater: for it is not a mans palace, but the LORDE Gods. Yet haue I after all my abilitie prepa red vnto the house of God, golde for the vessels of golde, syluer for them of syluer, brasce for them of brasce, yron for the of yron, wood for them of wood, Onix stones, set Rubyes, & stones of dyuerse coloures, & all precious stones, & Marble stones in multitude. Besydes this, for the good wyl & I haue to the house of God, I haue of myne awne proper good thre M. talētes of golde of Ophir, & seuen M. talētes of pure syluer, which I geue vnto the holy house of God, besyde all & I haue prepared, to ouerlaye & walles of the house, & the same which ought to be of golde, maye be of golde: & that it which ought to be of syluer, maye be of syluer: and for all maner of worke by the hande of the craftsmen. And who is now fre wyllinge, to fyll his hande this daye vnto the LORDE?

B Then were the prynces of the fathers, & prynces of the trybes of Israel, the captaynes ouer thousandes & ouer hundredes, the rulers ouer the kynge's busynes, fre wyllinge, & gaue to & mynistracion in the house of God fyue M. talētes of golde, and ten M. guldenes, and ten M. talētes of syluer, eightene M. talētes of brasce, and an hundred M. talētes of yron. And by whom so euer were soude stones, they gaue them to the treasure of the house of the LORDE, vnder the hāde of Jehiel the Gersonite.

And & people were glad that they were fre wyllinge: for they gaue it wth a good wyl (euen with all their hert) vnto the LORDE. And Dauid also & kynge reioysed greatly, and praysed God, and sayde before the whole congregacion: praysed be thou O LORDE God of Israel oure father, vnto the belongeth worshippe and power, glory, victory & thankes: for all that is in heauen and earth, is thine: thine is & kynge dome, and thou art exalted aboue all prynces. Thine are riches and honoure before & , thou reignest ouer all, in thy hande consisteth power and might, in thy hāde is it to make enery man greate and stronge.

E Now thāke we the oure God, and prayse & name of thy glory: for who am I? What is my people? that we shulde be able with a fre wyl to offre, as this is done? For of the cometh all, and of thy hande haue we geuen it the: & for we are but pilgrymes & straungers before the, as were all oure fathers. Our life vpon earth is as a shadowe, and here is no abydinge. O LORDE oure God, all this abundaunce that we haue prepared to buylde the an house vnto thy name, came of thy hande, and is thine alltogether. I knowe my God, that thou tryest the hert, and that vnfaynednes is acceptable vnto the: therefore haue I geue all this with an vnfayned hert, eue with a good wyl, and now haue I had ioye to se thy people (which here are present) offre with a fre wyl vnto the. O LORDE God of oure fathers Abraham, Isaac, & Israel, kepethou euermore soch purposes and thoughtes in & hertes of thy people, & preparethou their hertes vnto the. And graunte my sonne Salomon a perfecte hert, that he maye kepe thy cōmaundementes, thy testimonies, & thy statutes, that he maye do all, & buylde this palace, which I haue prepared.

And Dauid sayde vnto the whole cōgregacion: O prayse the LORDE y^e God. And all the cōgregacion praysed & LORDE God of their fathers, & bowed them selves, & worshipped the LORDE & then the kynge, and offred sacrifices vnto the LORDE. And on y^e nexte morow offred they burnt offerynges, a M. bullockes, a M. rāmes, a M. lābes wth their drynt offerynges, & plenteously offred they amonge all Israel. And they ate and dranke the same daie before the LORDE with greate ioye, and made Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge & seconde tyme, and anoynted him to be & prynce for the LORDE, & Sadocto beche priest.

* Thus sat Salomon vpon the seate of y^e LORDE, kynge in his fathers steade, & prospered. And all Israel obeyed him, & all & rulers & mightie men, & all kynge Dauid's children submytted themselves vnto kynge Salomon. And & LORDE made Salomon excellent & greate in & sighte of all Israel, & and gaue him soch a glorious kynge dome, as none had before him ouer Israel.

So had Dauid now bene kynge ouer all Israel. And & tyme that he was kynge ouer Israel, is fortye yeares: At Hebron reigned he seuen yeares, and at Jerusalem thre & thirtie yeares, & dyed in a good age, full of dayes, riches and honoure. And Salomon his sonne was kynge in his steade.

These actes of kynge Dauid (both & first and last) beholde, they are wrytten amonge the actes of Samuel the Seer, and amonge the actes of the prophet Nathan, and amonge the actes of Gad the Seer, with all his kynge dome, power and tymes which passed vnder him, both vpon Israel & vpon all the kynge domes of the earth.

The first Chapter.

And Salomon the sonne of David was stablished in his Kyngdome, and the LORDE his God was with him, & made him exceedinge greate. And Salomon spake vnto all Israel, to the captaynes ouer thousandes and ouer hundredes, to the Judges, and to all þe prynces in Israel, and to the chiefe fathers, so that they wente (Salomon and the whole congregacion with him) vnto the hye place which was at Gibeon: for there was þe Tabernacle of þe witnesse of God, which Moses the seruaunt of the LORDE had made in þe wyldernes. For David had broughte vp the Arke of God from Kirjath Jarm, whan he had prepared for it: for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem. As for þe brasen altare which Bezaleel the sonne of Dauid the sonne of Iur had made, it was there before the habitation of the LORDE: and Salomon and the congregacion soughte God. And Salomon offred a thousande burnt offerynges vpon the brasen altare that stode before the Tabernacle of witnesse.

In the same night appeared God vnto Salomon, and sayde vnto him: Aye, what shal I geue the? And Salomon sayde vnto God: Thou hast done greate mercy vnto my father David, and hast made me Kyng in his steade. Now LORDE God, let þe remember that thou hast promysed vnto my father

So came Salemon from the hye place (which was at Gibeon) vnto Ierusalē from & Tabernacle of witnessse, and reigned ouer Israel. And Salomon gathered him charrettes and horsmen, so that he had a thousande and foure hundred charrettes, & twelue thousande horsmen: and those appoynted he to be in the charecities, and with the kynge at Ierusalem. And the kynge broughthe it so to passe, that there was as moch syluer & golde at Ierusalē as stones: and as many Ceders, as the Mosberyces trees, that are in the valleys. And there were horses broughthe vnto Salemon out of Egipte, & the kynges marchauntes fetched them from Arna for money. And they came vp, and broughthe out of Egipte a charret for sixe hundred syluer pēs, and an horse for an hundred and fifye. And Salomon sent vnto Hiram the kynge of Tyre, sayenge: As * thou dydest with my father, & sendest him Cedar trees, to buylde an house for to dwell in (euen so do thou wth me also.) And the house that I wyll buylde, shal be greate: for oure God is greater then all goddes. But who is able to buylde him an house? For heauen & the heauens of all heauens maye not cōprehende him. Who am I then, that I shulde buylde him an house? But onely for this intent to burne incense before him.

Sēde me now therfore a wyse mā to worke with golde, syluer, brasse, yron, scarlet, purple, yalow sylke and soch one as can graue carued worke with the wyse men that are with me in Jewry and Ierusalem, whom my father David ordeyned. Then sayde Hiram the kynge of Tyre by wytyng, and sent it vnto Salemon: Because the LORDE loueth his people, therfore hath he made & to be kynge ouer them. The III. Chapter.

AND Salomon beganne to buylde the house of the LORD at Jerusalem vpon the mount Moria, * that was shewed vnto David his father, which David had prepared for the rowme, vpon the come floore of Arnan the Jebusite. In the seconde daye of the seconde moneth in the fourth yere of his reigne begane he to buylde. And so layed Salomon the foundation to buylde the house of God: first the length thre score cubytes, the bredth twenty cubytes: and the porche before the wydenes of the house, was twenty cubytes longe, but the height was an hundred and twentye, and he overlaid it on the ynsyde with pure golde.

But the greate house fylde he with pynetre, and overlaid it with the best golde, and made palme trees and thronne worke theron, and overlaid the house with precious stones to beautifye it. As for the golde, it was golde of Paruaim. And the balles and postes aboue, and the walles, and the dores of it overlaid he with golde, and caused Cherubins to be carued on the walles.

He made also the house of the Most holy, whose length was twenty cubytes according to the wydenesse of the house: and the bredth of it was twenty cubytes likewise, and he overlaid it with the best golde by sixe hundred talentes. And for nales he gaue fiftie Sicles of golde in weight, and overlaid the chambers with golde. He made also in the house of the most holy, two Cherubins of carued worke, and overlaid them with golde: and the length on the wynges of the Cherubins, so that one wyng had fyue cubytes, and touched the wall of the house: and the other wyng had fyue cubytes also, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub.

Euen so had one wyng of the other Cherub fyue cubytes likewise, and touched the wall of the house: and his other wyng had fyue cubytes also, and touched the wyng of the other Cherub: so that these wynges of the Cherubins were spread out twenty cubi-tes wyde. And they stode vpon their fete, and their face was turned to the house warde.

He made a vayle also of yalow sylke, scarlet, purple and lynworke, and made Cherubins theron. And before the house he made two pilers fyue and thirtie cubites longe, and the knoppes aboue theron, fyue cubytes. And he made thronne worke for the queene, and put it aboue vpon the pilers: and made an hundred pemgranates, and put them on the wythien worke. And he set vpon the pilers before the temple, the one on the righte honde, and the other on the lefte: and that on the righte honde called he Jachin, and it on the lefte honde called he Boos.

HE made a brasen altare also, twenty cubytes longe, and twenty cubytes brode, and ten cubites hye. * And he made a molten lauer ten cubites wyde from the one syde to the other rounde aboute, and fyue cubytes hye. And a metelyne of thirtie cubites mighte comprehend it aboute. And ymages of Bullockes were vnder it. And aboute the lauer (which was ten cubites wyde) there were two rowes of knoppes, 3 were molten withall.

It stode so vpon the bullockes, that thre were turned towarde the north, thre towarde the west, thre towarde the south, and thre towarde the east, and the lauer aboue vpon them, and all their hynder partes were on the ynsyde. The thiknesse of it was an hand bredth, and the edge of it was like the edge of a cuppe, and as a floured rose. And it conteyned thre thousande Batthes.

And he made ten Kettels, wherof he set fyue on the righte hande and fyue on the lefte, to washe in them such thinges as belonged to the burnt offeringe, that they mighte thrust them therin: but 3 lauer (made he) for the prestes to washe in.

Ten golden candelstickes made he also as they ought to be, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made ten tables, and set them in the temple: fyue on the righte hande, and fyue on the lefte. And made an hundred basens of golde. He made a courte likewise for the prestes, and a greate courte, and dores in the courte, and overlaid 3 dores with brasen. And the lauer set he on the righte syde towarde the south east. And Hiram made cauldrons, shencels and basens.

So Hiram finished the worke which he made for kynge Salomon in the house of God: namely the two pilers with the roundels and knoppes above vpon both the pilers, and both the wythen ropes to couer both the roundels of ʒ knoppes above vpon the pilers, and the foure hundred pomgranates on both the wythe ropes, two rowes of pomgranates on euery rope, to couer the roundels of the knoppes that were above vpon the pilers.

Chemade the stoles also and ʒ kettels vpon the stoles, and a lauer, and twelue bullockes there vnder. And pottes, shouels, fleshhooks, and all their vessels made Hiram Abis of pure metall for kynge Salomon vnto the house of the LORDE. In the coaste of Iordane dyd the kynge cause them to be molten in thicke earth betwene Suchoth and Zaredatha.

And Salomon made all these vessels which were so many, that the weight of ʒ metall was not to be sought out. And Salomon made all the ornaments for the house of God: namely, the golden altare, the tables and the shewbreads thereon, the candelsticks with their lampes of pure golde, to burne before the Quere according to the manner: and the floures and the lampes and the snuffers were of golde, all these were of pure golde.

And the knyues, basens, spones and pottes, were of pure golde. And the intraunce and his doores within vnto the Most holy, and the doores of the house of the temple were of golde. Thus was all ʒ worke synished, which Salomon made in the house of the LORDE.

The V. Chapter.

1. Re. 7. 2 1. Re. 8. 1 AND Salomon broughte in all ʒ his father Dauid had sanctified, namely, syluer and golde, and all maner of ornaments, and layed them in the treasures of the house of God. The gathered Salomon all the Elders in Israel together, all ʒ heades of the trybes, prynces of the fathers amonge the childre of Israel vnto Ierusalem, to bringe vp the Arke of the couenaunt of the LORDE out of the cite of Dauid, that is Sion. And there resorted vnto the kynge all the men in Israel at the feast, that is in the seventh moneth, and all ʒ Elders in Israel came.

And ʒ Levites toke the Arke, ʒ broughte it vp with the Tabernacle of witnessse, and all the holy vessels that were in the Tabernacle: and ʒ prestes and Levites broughte them vp. As for kynge Salomon and all the cōgregacion of Israel that was gather-red vnto him before the Arke, they offered shepe and oxen, so many, that no man coulde nombre ner reken them.

BThus the prestes broughte the Arke of ʒ couenaunt of the LORDE vnto hir place in to the quere of the house, even in to ʒ Most holy vnder the wynges of the Cherubins, so that the Cherubins spied out their wynges ouer the place of the Arke: and the Cherubins covered the Arke and the staves thereof from above. And the staves were so longe, ʒ the knoppes of them were sene from the Arke before the quere, but on the cutesyde were they not sene. And it was there vnto this daye. And there was nothinge in the Arke, save the two tables, which Moses put ther in at Horeb, whan the LORDE made a couenaunt with the childre of Israel, what tyme as they were departed out of Egipte.

CAnd whan the prestes wente out of the Sanctuary (for all ʒ prestes that were founde, sanctified them selues, because the courses were not kepte) the Levites with all those that were vnder Asaph, Heman, Jedithun and their children and brethren, beyng clothed in linnen, songe with Cymbales, psalteries and harpes, and stode towarde the east parte of the altare, and an hundred ʒ twentye prestes with them, which blew w trompettes. And it was, as yf one dyd trompet and synge, as though a voyce had bene herde of praysinge and geuyng chantes vnto the LORDE.

And whan the voyce arose from ʒ trompettes, cymbales and other instrumentes of musick, and from praysinge the LORDE (because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for ever) the house of the LORDE was fylled on the ynsyde with a cloude, so ʒ the prestes coulde not stonde to mynister for the cloude: for the glory of the LORDE fylled the house of God.

1. Par. 7. c se for my name to be there, nether haue I chosen any man to be pryncce ouer my people of Israel. * But Jerusalem haue I chosen, for my name to be there: David haue I elected, to be pryncce ouer my people of Israel.

B And whan my father Dauid was mynded to buylde an house vnto the name of the LORDE God of Israel, the LORDE sayde vnto Dauid my father: Where as thou wast mynded to buylde an house vnto my name, thou hast done well: howbeit thou shalt not buylde the house, but thy sonne which shall come out of thy loynes, shal buylde the house vnto my name.

Thus hath 3 LORDE now performed his worde, that he spake: for I am come vp in my father Dauids steade, and syt vpon the seate of Israel, euen as the LORDE sayde, & haue buylded an house vnto the name of 3 LORDE God of Israel, & in it haue I put 3 Arke, wherein is the couenaunt of 3 LORDE, which he made with the childre of Israel.

C And he stode before the altare of the LORDE in the presence of the whole congregation of Israel, and spred out his handes: for Salomon had made a brasen pulpit, and set it in the myddes of the courte, fyue cubites longe, and fyue cubites brode, and thre cubites hie: vpon the same stode he, and fell downe vpon his knees in the presence of the whole cōgregacion of Israel, and helde out his handes towarde heaue and sayde: * 3 LORDE God of Israel, there is no god like the, nether in heauen ner vpon earth, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for thy seruantes, that walke before the with all their hert. Thou hast kepte promes to my father Dauid thy seruaut: With thy mouth thou saydest it, and with thy hande hast thou fulfilled it, as it is come to passe this daye. Now LORDE God of Israel, make good vnto my father Dauid 3 seruaut, that which thou hast promysed him, & sayde: Thou shalt not want a man before me, to syt vpon the seate of Israel: yf thy children kepe their waye, so 3 they walke in my lawe, like as thou hast walked before me: Now LORDE God of Israel, let 3 worde be verified, which thou hast promysed vnto Dauid thy seruaut.

D For thinkest thou that God in very dede dwelleth amonge men vpon earth? * Beholde, the heauen and 3 heauens of all heuens maye not cōteyne the: how shulde then this house do it, which I haue buylded? But turne the vnto the prayer of thy seruaut, and to his supplicaciō (3 LORDE my God) that thou mayest heare the thankesgeuyng and prayer, which thy seruaut maketh before the, so that thine eyes be open ouer this house daye and night, euen ouer this place (wherin thou saydest thou woldest set thy name) that thou mayest heare the prayer, which thy seruaut shall make in this place. Heare now therfore the intercession of thy seruaut and of thy people of Israel, what so euer they shall desyre in this place: heare thou it from the place of thy habitation, euē from heauen: and whan thou hearest it, be mercifull.

Whan any mā synneth agaynst his neghboure, and an ooth be put vpon him which he ought to sweare, and the ooth cometh before thine altare in this house, then heare thou from heauen, and se 3 thy seruaut haue righte, so that thou rewarde the vngodly, and recōpence him his waye vpon his awne heade, and to iustifye the righteous, and to geue him acordinge to his righteousness. 3. Exo. 22. b

Whan thy people of Israel is synner before their enemies (whyle they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they turne vnto the, and knowlege thy name, and make their prayer and intercession before the in this house, then heare thou them from heauen, and be mercifull vnto the synne of thy people of Israel, & bryng them agayne into the londe, 3 thou hast geuen them and their fathers. 3

* Whan the heauen is shut vp, so that it rayne not (for so moch as they haue synned agaynst the) and yf they make their prayer in this place, and knowlege thy name, and turne from their synnes (whan thou hast brought them lowe) heare thou them then in heauen, and be mercifull vnto the synne of thy seruantes, and of thy people of Israel, that thou mayest teach them the good waye wherein they shulde walke, and let it rayne vpon thy londe which thou hast geuen thy people to possesse. 1. And when any straunger which is not of thy people of Israel, cometh out of a farre countre because of thy greate name, and mightie hande, and out stretched arme, and cometh to make his prayer in this house, heare thou him then from heauen, even from the seate of thy habitation: and do all for y^e which that straunger calleth vpon the, that all the nations vpon earth maye knowe thy name, and feare the, as thy people of Israel do: and that they maye knowe, how y^e this house which I haue buylded, is named after thy name.

Dan. 5. b When thy people go forth to y^e battayll agaynst their enemies, the waye that thou shalt sende them, and shall praye vnto the * towarde the waye of this cite which thou hast chosē, and towarde the house that I haue buylded vnto thy name, heare thou the their prayer and petition from heauen, and helpethem to their righte.

My God, let thine eyes now be open, and let thine eares geue heede vn to prayer in this place. * Arise now O LORDE God vnto thy resting place, thou and the Arke of thy strength. Let thy prestes O LORDE God be clothed with health, and let thy sayentes reioyse ouer this good. LORDE God, turne not awaye the face of thine anoynted: thinke vpon the mercies of thy seruant Dauid.

The VII. Chapter.

The vii. Chap. Fo. xciiij.

Ald whā Salomō had ended his praye, there fell a fyre from heauen, and consumed the burnt offeringe and the other offeringes. And the glory of the LORDE fylled the house, so that y^e prestes coulde not go in to the house of the LORDE, while y^e glory of the LORDE filled y^e LORDES house. And all the children of Israel sawe the fyre fall downe, and the glory of the LORDE ouer the house: and they fell on their knees wth their faces to the grounde vpon the pauement, and worshipped, and gaue thankes vnto the LORDE, because he is gracious, and because his mercy endureth for euer. As for the kynge and all the people, they offered before the LORDE.

For kynge Salomon offered two and twety thousand bullockes, and an hundred thousand and twenty thousand shepe, & so both the kynge and all the people dedicated the house of God.

But the prestes stode in their watches, & the Levites with the muscicall instrumentes of the LORDE, which kynge Dauid had caused to make for to geue thankes vnto the LORDE, (because his mercy endureth for euer) wth psalmes of Dauid thorow their hande. And the prestes blew trumpettes ouer agaynst them, and all Israel stode.

And Salomon halowed the myddelmost court, which was before the house of the LORDE, for there prepared he the burnt offeringes and the fat of the slayne offeringes: for the brasen altare that Salomon made, might not conteyne all the burnt offeringes, meat offeringes, and the fat.

* And at the same tyme helde Salomon a feast seven daies longe, and all Israel with him a very greate congregacion, from Chemath vnto the ryuer of Egypte, and on the eight daye helde he a conuocation. For the dedicacion of the altare helde they seven daies, and the feast seven dayes also. 1. Mac. 4. 2

But on the thre and twentyeth daye of the seventh moneth he let the people go vnto their tentes ioyfull and with mery hertes because of all the good, that the LORDE had done vnto Dauid, vnto Salomō, and to his people of Israel.

* Thus fynished Salomō the house of y^e LORDE, and the kinges house, and all y^e came in his hert to make in the house of the LORDE, and in his awne house, prosperously. And the LORDE appeared vnto Salomon in the night season, and sayde vnto him: I haue herde thy prayer * and chosē this place vnto my selfe for an house of sacrifice. 2. Par. 1. 1

The ij. booke of the Cronicles.

Beholde, when I shut the heauē so & it raine not, or commaunde the gresshopper to consume the londe, or cause a pestilence to come amonge my people, to humble my people, which is named after my name: and yf they praye, and seeke my face, and turne from their euell wayes, the wyl I heare them from heauen, and wyl forgewe their sinne, and heale their londe. So shal myne eyes now be open, and myne eares shal be attente vnto prayer in this place. Thus haue I now chosen this house, and sanctified it, that my name maye be there for ever: and myne eyes and my hert shal allwaye be there.

D And yf thou walke before me, as thy father David walked, so that thou do all that I commaunde the, and kepe myne ordinaunces and lawes, then wyl I stablishe the seate of thy kyngdome, acordinge as I promysed thy father David, and sayde: Thou shalt not wante a man to be lord over Israel. But yf ye turne backe, and forsake myne ordynaunces and commaundmētes which I haue layed before you, and so go youre waye, and serue other goddes, and worshippe them, the wyl I rote you out of my londe that I haue geuen you: and this house which I haue sanctified vnto my name, wil I cast awaye out of my presence, and geue it ouer to be a byworde and fabel amōge all nations. And every one that goeth by, shall be astonnyed at this hye house, and shall hyss at it, and saye: Wherefore hath the LORDE dealte thus with this londe and with this house? Then shall it be sayde: Euen because they haue forsaken the LORDE God of their fathers (which brought them out of the londe of Egypte) & haue cleued vnto other goddes, & worshipped them, and serued the: therefore hath he brought all this euell vpon the.

The VIII. Chapter.

After twentye yeares (wherin Salomon buylded the house of the LORDE and his awne house) he buylded the cyties also which Hiram gaue vnto Salomon, and caused the children of Israel to dwell therein. And Salomon wente vnto Hemath Zoba, and made it stronge, and buylded Thadmor in the wyldernes, and all the cornecities which he buylded in Hemath. He buylded the vpper and lower Bechoran likewise, so that they were stronge cities w walles, portes and barres. And Baelath, and all the cornecities which Salomon had, and all the cities of the charettes and of the horse men, and all that Salomon had lust to buylde, both at Jerusalem and vpon Li-banus, and in all the londe of his domynion.

All the remnant of the people of the Hebrithes, Amorites, Pheresites, Hemitas and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, and their children which they had lefte behynde them in the londe, (whom the children of Israel had not utterly destroyed) those dyd Salomon make trybutaries vnto this daye. As for the children of Israel, Salomon made no bondmen of them vnto his worke, but they were men of warre, and chiefe captaynes, and ouer his charettes & horsemen. And the chiefe of kyng Salomons officers were two hundred and fystie, which ruled the people.

And Salomon caused pharaos daughter to be fetched vp out of the cite of David, into the house that he had buylded for her: for he sayde: My wyfe shall not dwell in the house of David the kyng of Israel, for it is sanctified, in as much as yf Arke of the LORDE is come into it.

Then offered Salomon burnt offerynges vnto the LORDE vpon the LORDES altare, which he had buylded before the porche, every one vpon his daye to offre after the commaundement of Moses, on the Sabbathes, Newmones & at the appoynted seasons of the yere, euen thre tymes, namely in y feast of vnleuended bred, in the feast of weekes, & in the feast of Tabernacles.

And he set the prestes in ordre to their ministracion: acordinge as David his father had appoynted, and the Levites in their offices, to geue thankes and to mynister in the presence of the prestes, every one vpon his daye. And the doorekeepers in their courses, every one at his doore, for so had David the mā of God commaunded.

And they departed not from the kynges commaundement ouer the prestes and Levites in every matter and in the treasures. Thus was all Salomons busynesse made ready, from the daye that the foundation of the LORDES house was layed, tyll it was finished, so that the house of the LORDE was all prepared.

Then wente Salomon vnto Ezcon Geber, and vnto Elath by the See syde in the londe of Edomea. And Hiram sent him shippes by his seruantes which had knowlege of the See, and they wente with Salomons seruantes vnto Ophir, and fetched from thence foure hundred and fystye talentes of golde, and broughte it vnto kyng Salomon.

Matt. 12. 2

AND whan the quene of rich Arabia herde the fame of Salomon, she came with a very greete tryne to Jerusalem (with Camels that bare spyces and golde, and precious stones) to proue Salomon with darke sentences. And whan she came vnto Salomon, she spake vnto him all that she had deuysed in hir mynde. And the kynge tolde her all hir matters, and Salomon had nothyng in secrete, but he tolde it her.

And whan the Quene of riche Arabia sawe the wysdome of Salomon, and þe house that he had buylded, the meates of his table, the dwellinges of his seruauntes, þe offices of his mynisters and their garmentes, and his butlers and their apparell, and his parler where he wente vp in to the house of the LORD, she coude no longer refrayne. And she sayde vnto the kynge: It is true that I haue herde in my londe of thy behaueoure and of thy wysdome: howbeit I wolde not beleue their wordes, tyll I came my selfe, and sawe it with myne eyes: and beholde, the halfe of thy greete wysdome hath not bene tolde me: there is more in þe than the fame that I haue herde. Happye are thy myn, and happye are these thy seruauntes, þe allwaye stonde before the, and heare thy wysdome. Praise be the LORD thy God, which had soch pleasure vnto the, that he hath set the vpon his seate to be kynge vnto the LORD thy God. Because thy God loueth Israel, to set them vp for ever, therefore hath he ordeyned þe to be kynge ouer them, that thou shuldest mayntayne iustice and equitye.

And she gaue þe kynge an hundred and twentye talentes of golde, and very moch spyce and precious stones. There were no mo soch spyces as these that the Quene of riche Arabia gaue vnto kynge Salomon. And Hiram's seruauntes and the seruauntes of Salomon, which broughte golde from Ophir, broughte costly tymber also and precious stones.

E And of the same costly tymber dyd Salomon cause to make staires in the house of the LORD, and the kynge's house, and harpes and psalteries for the Musicians. There was no soch tymber sene before in the londe of Iuda. But kynge Salomon gaue the Quene of riche Arabia all that she desyred and axed, and moch more than she had broughte vnto the kynge. And she returned, and departed in to hir londe with hir seruauntes.

The golde that was broughte vnto Salomon in one yere, was sixe hundred and sixe and thre score talentes, besydes that þe chap men and marchauntes broughte. And all the kynge's of the Arabians, and the lordes in þe londe broughte golde and syluer vnto Salomon. Of the which kynge Salomon made two hundred speares of beaten golde, so þe sixe hundred peces of beaten golde came vpon one speare: and thre hundred shildes of beaten golde, so that thre hundred peces of beaten golde came to one shylde: and the kynge put the in the house of the wod of Libanus.

And the kynge made a greete seate of Query, and overlaid it with pure golde: and the seate had sixe steppes, and a forestole of golde festened vnto the seate, and it had two leanyng postes vpon both the sydes of the seate, and two lyons stode beside the leanyng postes, and there stode twelue Lions vpon the sixe steppes on both the sides. In all realmes hath not soch one bene made.

And all kynge Salomons drynkeynge vessels were of golde, and all the vessels of the house of the wod of Libanus, were of pure golde: for syluer was rekened nothyng in Salomons tyme. For the kynge's shippes wente vpon the See with the seruauntes of Hiram, and came once in thre yere, and broughte golde, syluer, Query, Apes and Pecoctes.

Thus was kynge Salomon greater than all the kynge's vpon earth, in riches and wysdome. And all the kynge's of þe earth desired (to se) Salomons face, and to heare his wysdome, which God had geuen him in his hert. And they brought him yearly every man his present: Jewels of syluer and golde, raimēt, harness, spyces, horses and Mules.

And Salomon had foure thousand charet horses, and twelue thousand horsmen, and put them in the charet cities, and with the kynge at Jerusalem. And he was lord ouer all the kynge's from the water vnto the londe of the Philistynes, and to the coaste of Egypte. And the kynge broughte it so to passe, that there was as moch syluer at Jerusalem as stones: and as many Ceders, as there were Mosbery trees in the valleys. And there were horses broughte vnto him out of Egypte, and out of all countres.

What more there is to saye of Salomon, both of his first and of his last, beholde, it is writte in the Cronicles of the prophet Nathan, and in the prophecies of Ahia of Silo, and in þe actes of Jeddi the Seer against Jeroboam þe sonne of Nebat. And Salomon reigned at Jerusalem ouer all Israel fortie yeres. And Salomon fell on slepe wth his fathers, and was buried in the cyte of Dauid his father. And Roboam his sonne was kige in his steade.

UBoam wente vnto Sichem: for all Israel was come vnto Sichem: to make him king. And whan Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat herde that, which was in Egypte (- whither he was fled for kynge Salomon) he came agayne out of Egypte. And they sent for him and called him. And Jeroboam came with all Israel, and spake to Roboam, and sayde: Thy father made o yocke greuous: make thou lighter now y harde bondage of thy father, and y heny yocke that he layed vpon vs, and we wyll submyt-re oure selues vnto the. He sayde vnto them: Come to me agayne ouer thie dayes. And y people wente thir waye.

W And Roboam the kynge axed coucell at the Elders, which had stonde before Salomon his father whyle he lyued, and he sayde: What is youre counsell, that I maye geue this people an answer? They spake vnto him, and sayde: Xf thou be louynge vnto this people, and deale gently with them, and geue them good wordes, then shal they allwaye be obedient vnto the. Neuerthelesse he forsoke the counsell of the Elders that they had geuen him, and toke counsell at y yonge men which were growne vp w him, and stode before him. And he sayde vnto the: What is youre counsell, that we maye answer this people, which haue spoken vnto me, and saide: Make oure yock lighter, y thy father layed vpon vs? The yongemen y were growne vp with him, spake vnto him, and sayde: Thus shalt thou saye vnto the people, that haue talked with the z spoken: Thy father made oure yock to heny, make thou o yock lighter, Thus shalt thou saye vnto them: My litle finger shalbe thicker then my fathers loynes. Xf my father hath layed an heny yock vpon you, I wyl make youre yock the more. My father chastened you w scourges, but I wyl beate you with scorpions.

Now whan Jeroboam and all the people came to Roboam on the thirde daye (acordynge as y kinge sayde: Come to me agayne on the thirde daie) the kynge gaue the an harde answer. And Roboam the kynge forsoke y counsell of the Elders, z spake vnto the after y yonge mens counsell, z sayde: Xf my father haue made y o yock to heny, I wyl make it yet heuier. My father chastened you w scourges, but I wyl beate you w scorpions. Nebat. But whan all Israel sawe that the kynge wolde not consente vnto them, y people answered the kynge, and sayde: What porcion haue we then in Dauid, or inheritance in the sonne of Isai? Let every man of Israel get him to his tent. Loke thou now to thy house Dauid. And all Israel wente vnto their tentes, so that Roboam reigned but ouer the children of Israel that dwelt in the cities of Iuda. And Roboam sent forth Adoram the rent gatherer, but the children of Israel stoned him to death. And kynge Roboam strenghted himselfe vpon his charret, to flye vnto Jerusalem. Thus fell Israel awaie fro the house of Dauid vnto this daye.

The XI. Chapter.

When Roboam came to Jerusalem, he gathered together the house of Iuda and Ben Jamin (even an hundred and foure score thousande chosen men of armes) to fyghte agaynst Israel, that they mighte bringe the kyngdome agayne vnto Roboam. But y worde of the LORDE came to Semaia the man of God, and sayde: Speake to Roboam the sonne of Salomon kynge of Iuda, and to all Israel y are in Iuda and Ben Jamin, and saye: Thus sayeth the LORDE: Ye shal not go vp, ner fyghte agaynst youre brethern: let every man go home agayne, for this is my dede. They herkened vnto the wordes of y LORDE, and wete not forth agaynst Jeroboam. As for Roboam, he dwelt at Jerusalem, and buylded vp the stronge cities in Iuda, namely Bethleem, Eitan, Tekoa, Bethzur, Socho, Adullam, Gath, Maresa, Siph, Adoraim, Laches, Asoka, Zarega, Aialon, and Hebron (which were the fenced cities in Iuda and Ben Jamin) z he made them stronge, and set prynces therein, z prouyded them of vytayles, oyle and wyne, and in all cities prepared he shildes and speares, and made them very stronge. And Iuda and Ben Jamin were vnder him.

The prestes and Leuites also came vnto him out of Israel and from all the borders therof, And lefte their suburbs z possession, and came to Iuda vnto Jerusalem: for Jeroboam and his sennes expelled them, that they shulde not execute the effyce of y presthode vnto y LORDE. But for himselfe he founde prestes to y hye places, z to felddedens z calues, which he caused to make. And after them came there men out of all the trybes of Israel, which gaue ouer their hertes to seke y LORDE God of Israel, z came to Jerusalem for to offere vnto the LORDE God of their fathers. And so strenghted they y kyngdome of Juda, and matayned Roboam the sonne of Salomon thre yeare longe: for they walked in y waye of David z Salomon thre yeares.

C And Roboam toke Mahelath y doughter of Jeremoth y sonne of David to wife, z Abihail the doughter of Eliab y sonne of Ijai, which bare him these sonnes: Jems, Semaria z Saham. After her toke he Maecha the doughter of Absalem, which bare him Abia, Athai Sisa and Sclomich. But Roboam loued Maecha the doughter of Absalom better then all his wyues z concubynes: for he had eightene wyues and thre score concubynes, and begat eght z twentys sonnes, and thre score doughters. And Roboam set Abia the sonne of Maecha to be heade and prynce amonge his brethren: for he thoughte to make him kynge: for he was wyse, z more myghtie then all his sonnes in all the countrees of Juda z Ben Jamin, and in all the stronge cities. And he gaue them plenteousnes of fode, and desyred many wyues.

The XII. Chapter.

A Ut whā the kyngdome of Roboam was confirmed and stablyshed, he forsoke the lawe of the LORDE z all Israel with him. And in the fyfth yeare of Roboam wēt Sisack the kynge of Egipte vp agaynst Jerusalem (for they had transgressed agaynst the LORDE) with a thousande and two hundred charettres, and with thre score thousande hoysmen, and the people were innumerable that came with him out of Egipte, Libya, Suchim z out of Ethiopia, and he wanne the stronge cities that were in Juda, and came to Jerusalem.

Then came Semaia y prophet vnto Roboam and to y rulers of Juda (which were gathered together at Jerusalem for Sisack) z sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth y LORDE: Ye haue leste me, therefore haue I leste you also in Sisack's hande. The rulers in Israel with the kynge submytted them selues, and sayde: The LORDE is righteous.

B But whā the LORDE sawe y they hūbled them selues, y worde of the LORDE came to Semaia, z sayde: They haue humbled them selues, therefore wyl I not destroye them, but I wyl geue them a litle deliuerance, that my indignacion fall not vpon Jerusalem by Sisack: for they shalbe subdued vnto him, y they maye knowe what it is to serue me, z to serue the kyngdomes of the worlde.

Thus wēt Sisack the kynge of Egipte vp to Jerusalem, z toke the treasures in the house of the LORDE, z the treasures in the kynges house, and caried all awaye, and toke

And as oft as the kynge wente in to the house of the LORDE, y foremen came z bare them, z brought them agayne into y foremens chamber. And for so much as he submytted himselfe, y wrath of y LORDE turned fro him, so that all was not destroyed: for there was yet some good in Juda.

Thus was Roboam the kynge stablyshed in Jerusalem, and reigned. One and forty yeare olde was Roboam whā he was made kynge, and reigned seuentene yeare at Jerusalem in the cite, which the LORDE had chosen out of all the trybes of Israel, to set his name there. His mothers name was Maema an Ammonitisse: and he did euell, and prepared not his hert to seke the LORDE.

These actes of Roboam, both fyfth and last, are wyrtten in the actes of Semaia the prophet, z of Jodo the Seer, and are noted, z so are the warres that Roboam and Jeroboam had together as longe as they lyued. And Roboam fell on slepe with his fathers and was buryed in the cite of David, z Abia his sonne was kynge in his stead.

The XIII. Chapter.

In the eighteenth yeare of kynge Jeroboam, was Abia kynge in Juda, z reigned thre yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Michaiia the doughter of Vael of Sibeia. And there was warre betwene Abia and Jeroboam. And Abia prepared himselfe to the battayll with foure hundred thousande stronge chosen men of warre. But Jeroboam made himselfe ready to fight agaynst him w eight hundred thousande chosen men of strength.

And Abia gatt him vp vpon the hyll Zemaraim, which lyeth vpon mount Ephraim and sayde: Herten vnto me then Jeroboam and all Israel: A nowe ye not that the LORDE God of Israel hath geuen David y kyngdome of Israel for euer, vnto him and his sonnes with a Sale couenante? But Jeroboam the sonne of Nebat, the seruaunt of Salomon Davids sonne, gat him vp z fell awaye from his lord. And there resorted vnto him vagaboundes and children of Belial, and haue strengthened them selues agaynst Roboam the sonne of Salomō: for Roboam was but yonge and of a fearfull hert, and coulde not resiste them.

Now thinke ye to set youre selues agaynst the kyngdome of the LORDE amonge

The XV. Chapter.

And the spere of God came vpo Asarias the sonne of Obed, which wente forth to Asa, and sayde vnto him: heare me Asa and all Juda & Ben Jamin: The LORDE is with you, whyle ye are with him: and yf ye seke him, he wylbe founde of you. But yf ye forsake him, he shal forsake you also. Neuertheles there shal be many dayes in Israel, that there shalbe no true God, no priest to teach, & no lawe. And whan they turne in their trouble vnto the LORDE God of Israel, and seke him, he shalbe founde. At that tyme shall it not be well with him that goeth out and in: for there shal be greete vprours vpon all them that dwell on the earth. For one people shall all to smyte another, & one cite another: for God shal vex them w all maner of trouble. But be ye stronge, and let not youre handes be feble: for youre worke hath his rewarde.

Whan Asa herde these wordes, and the propheciēge of Asarias the sonne of Obed the prophet, he toke a corage vnto him, and put awaye the abhominacions out of all the lande of Juda and Ben Jamin, and out of the cities that he had wonne vpon mount Ephraim: and renued the LORDES altare, which stode before the porche of the LORDE. And all Juda and Ben Jamin gathered them selues together, and the straungers with them out of Ephraim, Manasses and Simcon: for there fell many vnto him out of Israel, when they sawe that the LORDE his God was with him. And they resorted vnto Jerusalem in the thirde moneth of the fyfteenth yeare of the reigne of Asa, and the same daye offred they vnto the LORDE of the spoyle that they had broughte, seven hundred oxen, and seven thousande shepe.

And they entered into a couenaunt, that they wolde seke the LORDE God of their fathers, with all their hert and with all their soule. And who so ener wolde not seke the LORDE God of Israel, shulde dye, both small & greate, both man and woman: and they swaie vnto the LORDE with loude voyce, with shoutinge, with trompettes and with shawmes. And all Juda were glad ouer the coth: for they had sworne with all their hert, and they soughte him with a whole wyll: and he was founde of them, and the LORDE gaue them rest on enery syde.

And Asa the kynge put downe his mother from the mynistracion, that she had founde in the grove vnto Miplezeth. And Asa roted out hir Miplezeth, and beate it in sunder, and brent it by the broke Cedron. But the hye places were not put downe out of Israel. Yet was the hert of Asa perfecte as longe as he lyued. And loke what his father had halowed, and that he him selfe had halowed, he broughte it into the house of God, syluer, golde and enametes. And there was no warre vnto the fyue and thirtieth yeare of the reigne of Asa.

The XVI. Chapter.

In the sixe and thirtieth yeare of the reigne of Asa, wente Baesa the kynge of Israel vpon agaynst Juda, and buylded Rama, to let Asa the kynge of Juda, that he shulde not go out and in: But Asa toke forth the treasure in the house of the LORDE, and the syluer and golde in the kynges house, and sent it vnto Benadab the kynge of Syria, which dwelt at Damascon, and caused to saye vnto him: There is a couenaunt betwene me and the, betwene my father and thy father, therfore haue I sent the syluer and golde, that thou mayest breake a couenaunt with Baesa the kynge of Israel, that he maye departe from me.

Benadab herkened vnto kynge Asa, and sent his hoost agaynst the cities of Israel, which smote Eion, Dan and Abel Maim, and all the come cities of Nephtali. Whan Baesa herde that, he lefte off from buyldinge Rama, and ceased from his worke. But kynge Asa toke all Juda vnto him, and carried awaye stones and tymber (where with Baesa buylded) and he buylded Geba & Mizpa with all.

At the same tyme came Hanani the Seer vnto Asa the kynge of Juda, and sayde vnto him: Because thou hast trusted vnto the kynge of Syria, and not put thy trust in the LORDE thy God, therfore is the power of the kynge of Syria escaped thy hande. We re not the Mooryans and Lybians a greate multitude with exceedinge many charettes and horsmen: Yet gaue the LORDE them in to thy hande, whan thou dyddest put thy trust in him: for the eyes of the LORDE loke rounde aboute all londes, to strength them that are in him with all their hert. Thou hast done vnwysely, therfore shalte thou haue warre from hence forth. But Asa was wroth at the Seer, and put him in prison: for he murmured with him ouer this thinge. And Asa oppressed certayne of the people at the same tyme.

ges of Juda & Israel. And Asa was diseased in his feet in the nyne and thirtieth yere of his reigne, and endured ther over. * Neither soughte he the LORDE in his sicknesse, but trusted vnto physicians. Thus fell Asa on slepe with his fathers, & dyed in the one and fortieth yere of his reigne, & was buried in his awne sepulchre which he had caused to be grauen for him selfe in the cite of David.
And they layed him vpon his bed, which was fylled with swete odoours & all maner of spyes (made after 3 Apotecaries craft) and made a very greate burnynge.

The XVII. Capter.

AND Josaphat his sonne was kynge in his steade, & waxed mightie against Israel. And he put men of warre in all the stronge cities of Juda, and set officers in the londe of Juda, and in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had won-ne. And the LORDE was wth Josaphat: for he walked in the olde wayes of his father Da-uid, & soughte not Baalim, but the God of his father, & walked in his commaundemen-tes, & not after the workes of Israel: therfore dyd the LORDE stablyshe the kyngdome in his hāde. And all Juda gaue presentes vnto Josaphat, & he had greate riches & worshippe. And whan his hert was coraged in the wayes of the LORDE, he put downe styll the hye places and groves out of Juda.

IN the thirde yere of his reigne sent he his prynces, Benhail, Obadia, Zacharias, Nethaneel & Michaia, to teach in the cities of Juda: & wth them the Levites: Semaia, Nethania, Sebadia, Asahel, Semiramoth, Jonathan, Adonia, Tebia & Tob Adonia, & wth them 3 prestes Elisama & Joram. And they taughte in Juda, & had the booke of the lawe of 3 LORDE wth them, & wente aboute in all 3 cities of Juda, & taughte the people.

And the feare of the LORDE came vpon all 3 kyngdomes in the countrees that laye aboute Juda. so 3 they soughte not agaynst Josaphat. And the Philistynes broughte presentes and trybute of syluer vnto Josa-phat. And the Arabians broughte him se-uenthoussande and seven hundred rammes, and seven thousande and seven hundred he goates. Thus increased Josaphat, & grewe euer greater. And he buylded castels and cor-ne cities in Juda. And dyd moche in the cities of Juda, and had valeaunt and mightie men at Jerusalem.

AND this was 3 ordinaunce thorow out the house of their fathers, which were rulers out the thousandes in Juda. Adna a captayne, & wth him were thre hundred thousand mightie men. Nexte vnto him was Jo-hanan 3 chiefe, and wth him weretwo hundred and foure score thousande. Nexte him was Amasia the sonne of Sichu the fre wyl-linge of 3 LORDE, and wth him were two hundred thousande valeaunt men. Of the children of Ben Jamin was Eliada a mightie man, and wth him were two hundred thousande ready wth bowes and shyldes.

Nexte vnto him was Josabad, and wth him were an hundred and foure score thousand harnessed men of warre. All these way-ted vpon the kynge, besydes those that the kynge had layed in the stronge cities thorow out all Juda.

The XVIII. Chapter.

AND Josaphat had greate riches and worshippe, and made friendshippe wth Achab. * And after two yeres wen-te he downe to Achab vnto Samaria. And Achab caused many shepe and oxen to be slay-ne for him and for 3 people that were wth him. And he counceled him to go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And Achab the kynge of Israel sayde vnto Josaphat the kynge of Juda: Go wth me vnto Ramoth in Gilead. He sayde vnto him: I am as thou, and my people as thy people, we wyl go wth the vnto the battayll.

But Josaphat sayde vnto the kynge of Israel: Are counsell (I praye the) this daye at the worde of the LORDE. And the kynge of Israel gathered the prophetes together, euen foure hundred men, & saide vnto them:
Shal we go to the battayll vnto Ramoth in Gilead, or shal I let it alone? They sayde:
Go vp, God shal deliuer it into the kynges hāde. But Josaphat sayde: Is there not yet one prophet of the LORDE here, 3 we maye axe at him? The kynge of Israel sayde vnto Josaphat: There is yet one man, at whom we maye axe of 3 LORDE: but I hate him, for he prophecieth me no good, but allwaye euell, namely Micheas the sonne of Jemla.
Josaphat sayde: Let not the kynge saye so.
And the kynge of Israel called one of his chamberlaynes, & sayde: Brynge hither sone Micheas the sonne of Jemla.

And the kynge of Israel, and Josaphat the kynge of Juda, sat either of them vpon his seate, arayed in their garmentes. Euen in the place at the dore of the porte of Samaria sat they, and all 3 prophetes prophecied before them. And Sedechias the sonne of Enana had made him hornes of yron, and sayde: Thus sayeth the LORDE: With these shalt thou pusiſhe at the Syrians, tyll thou brynge them to naughte. And all the prophetes prophesied likewise, & sayde: Go vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead, and thou shalt prosper, and the LORDE shal deliuer it in to the kynges hande.

And the messaunger that wente to call Micheas, spake vnto him, and sayde: Beholde, the wordes of the prophetes are with one acorde good before the kyng: let thy worde (I praye the) be as one of theirs, and speake thou good also. But Micheas sayde: As truly as the LORDE lyueth, loke what my God sayeth vnto me, I wyl I speake. And whan he came to the kyng, the kyng sayde vnto him: Micheas, shulde we go vnto Ramoth in Gilead to the battayll, or shulde we let it alone? He saide: Go vp, and ye shal prosper. It shal be geue you in youre handes. But the kyng sayde vnto him: I charge the yet agayne, that thou tell me nothinge but the truthe in the name of the LORDE.

C Then saide he: I sawe all Israel scattered abroad vpon the mountaynes, as the shepe that haue no shepherde. And the LORDE sayde: Haue these no lord? Let every one turne home agayne in peace. The kyng sayde the kyng of Israel vnto Josaphat: Dyd not I tell the, that he wolde prophesie me no good, but euell?

And he sayde: Therfore heare ye the worde of the LORDE: I sawe the LORDE sitt vpon his seate, and all the hoost of heauen stondinge at his righte hande & at his lefte. And the LORDE sayde: Wo wyl disceane Achab the kyng of Israel, that he maye go vp & fall at Ramoth in Gilead? And whan one sayde thus, another so, there came forth a spiete, and stode before the LORDE, and sayde: I wyl disceane him. The LORDE sayde vnto him: Wherewith? He sayde: I wyl go forth, and be a false spiete in the mouth of all his prophetes. And he sayde: Thou shalt disceane him, and shalt be able: go thy waye, and do so. Beholde now, the LORDE hath geuen a false spiete in the mouth of all these thy prophetes, and the LORDE hath spokē euell agaynst the.

Ecc. 14. b

D Then stepte forth Sederchias the sonne of Enaena, and smote Micheas vpon the cheeke, and sayde: Which waye is the spiete of the LORDE departed fro me, to speake thorow the? Micheas sayde: Beholde, thou shalt see it, whan thou comest in to the ynnmost chamber to hyde the. But the kyng of Israel sayde: Take Micheas, and let him remayne wth Amon the ruler of the cite, and with Joas the sonne of Melech, and saye: Thus sayeth the kyng: Put this man in prison, and fede him wth bried and water of trouble, tyll I come agayne in peace. Micheas saide: If thou comest agayne in peace, then hath not the LORDE spoken thorow me. And he sayde: Herken to all ye people.

So the kyng of Israel, and Josaphat the kyng of Iuda wente vp vnto Ramoth in Gilead. And the kyng of Israel sayde vnto Josaphat: Chaunge thy clothes, and come to the battayll in thine araye. And the kyng of Israel chaunged his rayment, & came in to the battayll. But the kyng of Syria had commaunded the rulers of his charrettes: Ye shal fighte nether agaynst small ner greates, but onely agaynst the kyng of Israel.

Now whan the rulers of the charrettes sawe Josaphat, they thoughte: It is the kyng of Israel, and they wete aboute to fighte agaynst him. But Josaphat cryed, and the LORDE helped him. And God turned them from him: for whan the rulers of the charrettes sawe that it was not the kyng of Israel, they turned back from him. But a certayne man bended his bowe harbe, & shot the kyng of Israel betwene the mawe and the lon ges. The kyng sayde he vnto his charret man: Turne thine hade, and cary me out of the hoost, for I am wounded. And the battayll was sore the same daye. And the kyng of Israel stode vpon his charret agaynst the Syrians vntyll the evenynge, and dyed whā the Sonne wente downe.

The XIX. Chapter.

When Josaphat the kyng of Iuda came home agayne in peace vnto Jerusalem. And Jehu the sonne of Hani the Seer wete forth to mete him, & sayde vnto the kyng Josaphat: Shuldest thou so helpe the vngodly, and loue them that hate the LORDE? And for this cause is the wrath vpon the from the LORDE: neuertheles there is some good founde in the, that thou hast put the grones out of the londe, and hast prepared thine hert to seeke God. So Josaphat abode at Jerusalem.

And he wente agayne amonge the people, from Bersaba vnto mount Ephraim, and broughte them agayne to the LORDE God of their fathers. And he set Judges thorow out the londe, in all the stronge cities of Iuda, and a certayne in every cite. And sayde vnto the Judges: Take hede what ye do: for ye execute not the indgment of man, but of the LORDE, and he is with you in iudgment: therefore let the feare of the LORDE be with you, and bewarre, and do it: for with the LORD our God there is no vnrighteousnes, ner respecte of personnes, ner acceptinge of giftes.

C And at Jerusalem dyd Josaphat ordeyne certayne of the Leuites and prestes, and of the aunciēt fathers of Israel for judgment of the LORD, and ouer the matter of the lawe, and caused them to dwell at Jerusalem, and commaunded them, and sayde: Se that ye do thus in the feare of the LORD, in faithfulness and in a perfect hert. In all causes that come vnto you from youre brethren (which dwell in their cities) betwene bloude and bloude, betwene lawe and commaundement, betwene statutes and ordinaunces ye shal enforme them, & they synne not against the LORD, and so the wrath to come vpon you and youre brethren. Do thus, and ye shal not offende.

Beholde, Amaria the prest is chiefe ouer you in all causes of the LORD: so is Sabadia the sonne of Ismael prynce in the house of Juda in all the kynges matters: Ye haue officers likewise the Leuites before you. Take a good corage vnto you, and be doynge, and the LORD shalbe with the good.

The XX. Chapter.

After this came the childre of Moab, the children of Ammon, and certayne of Amman with them, to fighte against Josaphat. And they came and tolde Josaphat, and sayde: There cometh a greete multitude arraynt the from beyonde the See of Syna, & beholde, they are at Hazazon Tamar, that is Engabdi.

And Josaphat was afrayed, & set his face to seke the LORD, & caused a fast to be proclaimed in all Juda. And Juda came together to seke the LORD. And out of all the cities of Juda came they to seke the LORD. And Josaphat stode amonge the congregacion of Juda & Jerusalem in the house of the LORD before the new courte, and sayde:

O LORD God of our fathers, art not thou God in heaven, and hast domynion in all the kyngdomes of the heythen? And in thy hande is strength and power, and there is no man that can withstode the. Hast not thou O God expelled the inhabiteurs of this londe before thy people of Israel? and hast geue it vnto the side of Abraham thy louer for ever? so that they haue dwelt in it, & haue buylde the a Sanctuary vnto thy name therein, and sayde: If there come eny plague, swerde, iudgment, pestilence, or derth vpon vs, we wyll stonde before this house even before the

(for thy name is in this house) and wyll crye vnto the in our trouble, and thou shalt heare, and shalt saue vs. Beholde now, the children of Ammon, of Moab, & they of mount Seir, vpon whom thou woldest not suffre the children of Israel to go, whan they wente out of the londe of Egypte, but they were sayne to departe from the, and not to destroye them: and beholde, they deale contrarily with vs, and come to thrust vs out of the inheritance, that thou hast geuen vs in possession. O our God, wylt thou not iudge them? For in vs is no strength to withstonde this greete multitude that cometh agaynst vs. We knowe not what we shulde do, but our eyes loke vnto the. And all Juda stode before the LORD, with their children, wyues and sonnes.

But vpon Jehasiel the sonne of Zacharias, the sonne of Benaia, the sonne of Jehiel, the sonne of Nathania the Leuite of the children of Assaph, came the spire of the LORD in the myddes of the congregacion, and sayde: Seue hede all thou Juda, and ye inhabiteurs of Jerusalem, and thou kyng Josaphat: Thus sayeth the LORD vnto you: Be not ye afrayed, nether feare ye this greete multitude: for it is not ye that fighte, but God. Tomorrow shal ye go downe vnto the. And beholde, they go vp by Sis, and ye shal fynde them at the reed see by the broke before the wyldernes of Ieruel: for ye shall not fighte in this cause. Do ye but steppe forth, and stonde, and se the health of the LORD that is with you. Feare not O Juda and Jerusalem, and be not afrayed, tomorrow go ye forth agaynst them, and the LORD shalbe with you.

The Josaphat bowed him selfe with his face to the earth, & all Juda, & the inhabiteurs of Jerusalem fell before the LORD, & worshipped the LORD. And the Leuites of the childre of the Kahathites & of the children of the Corahites arose to prayse the LORD God of Israel with londe voyce on hye. And they gat them vp early in the mornynge, and wete forth by the wyldernes of Thekoa.

And whan they were goynge out, Josaphat stode, & sayde: Herte vi to me O Juda, & ye indwellers of Jerusalem: put youre trust in the LORD your God, & ye shal be safe: and geue credence vnto his prophetes, & ye shall prospere. And he gaue counsell vnto the people, and appoynted the syngers vnto the LORD, and them that gaue prayse in the bewtye of holynes, to go before the harnessed men, & to saye: O geue thanke vnto the LORD, for his mercy endureth for ever. And whan they beganne to geue thankes and prayse, the LORDE caused the hynder watch that was come agaynst Juda, to come vpon the childre of Ammon, Moab & them of mount Seir, and they smote them. Then stode the children of Ammon & Moab agaynst them of mount Seir, to danne them, and to destroye them. And whan they had destroyed them of mount Seir, one helped another to destroye them selues also. And whan Juda came to Mispa vnto the wyldernes, they turned them towarde the multitude, and beholde, the deed bodies laye vpo the earth, so that none was escaped.

And Josaphat came with his people to deuylde the spoyle of them. And they founde amonge them so much goodes and rayment and precious Jewels (which they toke from them) that they coulde not beare them. And thre dayes were they denydinge the spoyle, for it was so much. On the fourth daye came they together into the valley of blessinge: for there blessed they the LORDE. Therfore is the place called the valley of blessinge vnto this daye.

So euery man of Juda & Jerusalem turned back agayne, & Josaphat before them, to go to Jerusalem with ioye: for the LORDE had geuen them gladnesse on their enemies. And they entred in to Jerusalem with psalteries, harpes & trompettes vnto the house of the LORDE. And there came a feare of God ouer all the kyngdomes in the landes, whan they herde that the LORDE had foughte agaynst the enemies of Israel. Thus was the kyngdome of Josaphat in quyetnes, & God gaue him rest on euery syde.

And Josaphat reigned ouer Juda, & was fyue & thirtie yeare olde whan he was made kyng, & reigned fyue & twentye yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Asuba the daughter of Silhi. And he walked in the waye of his father Asa, & departed not a syde from doynge that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE: sauynge that the hye places were not put downe, for the people had not yet prepared their hert to the God of their fathers. What more there is to saye of Josaphat, both the first & the last, beholde, it is wrytten in the actes of Jehu & sonne of Hanani, which he noted vp in the booke of the kynges of Israel.

1. Re. 22. g

Afterwarde dyd Josaphat the kyng of Juda agree wth Ahasia the kyng of Israel, which was ragodly in his doynge. And he agreed with him to make shippes, for to go vpon the see. And they made the shippes at Ezion Gaber. But Elieser the sonne of Dodana of Marsa prophesied agaynst Josaphat, and sayde: Because thou hast agreed with Ahasia, therfore hath the LORDE broken thy woorkes. And so the shippes were broken, & mighte not go vpon the see.

The XXI. Chapter.

And Josaphat fell en slepe wth his fathers, & was buried wth his fathers in the cite of David, & Joram his sonne was kyng in his steade. And he had brethre the sonnes of Josaphat: Asaria, Jehiel, Zacharias, Asaria, Michael & Sephatia. All these were the children of Josaphat kyng of Juda. And their father gaue them many gistes of syluer, golde & Jewels, & stronge cities in Juda. But the kyngdome gaue he vnto Joram: for he was the first borne.

But whan Joram came vpon his fathers kyngdome, & had gotten the power of it, he slew all his brethre with the swerde, & certayne rulers also in Israel. Two & thirtie yeare olde was Joram whan he was made kyng, & reigned eight yeare at Jerusalem, & walked in the waye of the kynges of Israel, euen as the house of Achab dyd (for Achabs daughter was his wife) & he dyd that which was euill in the sighte of the LORDE.

Nevertheless the LORDE wolde not destroye the house of David, for the coneuantes sake, which he made wth David, and accordynge as he had sayde, that he wolde geue him and his children a lanterne for evermore.

At the same tyme fell the Edomites awaye from Juda, and made a kyng ouer them selues: for Joram had gone ouer with his capaynes and all the charettes with him, & had gotten him vp in the night season, and slayne the Edomites on euery syde, and the rulers of the charettes: therfore fell the Edomites awaye from Juda vnto this daye. At the same tyme fell Lybna awaye from him also: because he forsoke the LORDE God of his fathers. He made hye places also on the mountaynes in Juda, & caused them of Jerusalem to go awoherynge, and disceaued Juda.

But there came a wrytinge vnto him fro the prophet Elias, sayenge: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of thy father David: Because thou hast not walked in the wayes of thy father Josaphat, nether in the wayes of Asa the kyng of Juda, but walkest in the waye of the kynges of Israel, and makest Juda and them of Jerusalem to go awoherynge after the whordome of the house of Achab, and hast slayne thy brethren also of thy fathers house, which were better the thos. Be holde, the LORDE shal smyte the w a grea te plage on thy people, on thy children 7 thy wyues, and on all thy substaunce. But thou thy selfe shalt haue moch sickness in thy bowels, tyll thy bowels go forth from daye to daye for very disease.

D So 3 LORDE raysed vp agaynst Joram, the spere of the Philistynes, 7 Arabians, which lye besyde the Morians, and they wente up in to Juda, and waysted it, and caried awaye all the substaunce that was founde in the kynges house, 7 his sonnes, and his wyues, so 3 there was not one sonne lefte him, save Joahas his yōgest sonne. And after all this dyd 3 LORDE smyte him in his bowels, with such a sickness as coulde not be healed. And whyle that endured from daye to daye, whan the tyme of two yeares was expyred, his bowels wente from him w his sickness, and he dyed in euill diseases.

And they made not a burninge over him, as they dyd vnto his fathers. Two and thirtie yeare olde was he whā he was made kynge, and reigned eight yeare at Jerusalem, and walked not well. And they buried him in the cite of David, but not amonge the sepulchres of the kynges.

The XXII. Chapter.

A And they of Jerusalem made Ochias his yōgest sonne kynge in his stead: for the men of warre that came w the host of the Arabians, had slayne all 3 first, therfore reigned Ochias the sonne of Joram kynge of Juda. Two and fortye yeare olde was Ochias whan he was made kynge, and reigned one yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Athalia the daughter of Amri. And he walked also in 3 wayes of the house of Achab: for his mother enty sed him so 3 he was ungodly. Therfore dyd he euill in 3 sighte of the LORDE, even as 3 house of Achab: for they were his counsell geners after his fathers death, to destroye him, and he walked after their counsell.

B And he wente with Joram the sonne of Achab kynge of Israel, to the battayll vnto Ramoth in Gilead, agaynst Hasael the kynge of Syria. But the Syrians smote Joram, so 3 he turned back to be healed at Jesreel: for he had woundes that were geuen him at Rama, whan he foughte with Hasael the kynge of Syria. And 3 Asarias the sonne of Joram kynge of Juda wete downe to vyset Joram 3 sonne of Achab at Jesreel, which laye sicke: for it was ordeyned of God vnto Ochias, that he shulde come to Joram, 7

so to go forth with Joram agaynst Jehu 3 sonne of Nimsi, 7 whom the LORDE had anoynted to rote out the house of Achab. 4 Re. 3. 2

C Now whan Jehu wolde be auēged of 3 house of Achab, he founde certayne rulers of Juda, and 3 childre of Ochias brethren which serued Ochias, and he slewe them. 7 And he soughte Ochias, and they ouertoke him, whā he had hyd him at Samaria: 7 he was broughed vnto Jehu, which slewe him, and they buried him, for they sayde: he is the sonne of Josaphat, which soughte 3 LORDE with all his hert. And there was no man more of the house of Ochias that mighte be kynge. 4 Re. 3. 5

D Whan Athalia the mother of Ochias sawe 3 hir sonne was deed, she gat hir vp, 7 destroyed all the kynges sede in the house of Juda. But Josabeath 3 kynges sister toke Joas 3 sonne of Ochias, and stale him awaye fro amonge the kynges childre 3 were slayne, 7 put him with his nurse in a chamber. Thus Josabeath kynge Jorams daughter, the wyfe of Joiada the priest, hyd him from Athalia, so 3 he was not slayne: for she was Ochias sister. And he was hyd with them in the house of God six yeares, for so moch as Athalia was quene in the londe. 4 Re. 11. 2

The XXIII. Chapter.

B Ut in the seventh yeare was Joiada A belde, and toke the rulers ouer hundred: namely Asaria 3 sonne of Jeraham, Jisrael 3 sonne of Johanan, Asaria 3 sonne of Obed, Maaseia 3 sonne of Adaia, and Elisaphat 3 sonne of Sichai with him, into the covenaut: and they wente aboute in Juda, and broughed 3 Leuites together out of all the cities of Juda, and the chiefe fathers of Israel, to come vnto Jerusalem. And all the cōgregacion made a covenaut with the kynge in the house of God, and he sayde vnto them: Beholde, the kynges sonne shal be kynge, 7 euē as the LORDE spake cōcernynge the children of David. 4 Re. 1. 4

B This is it therfore 3 ye shal do: The thirde parte of you that entre on the Sabbath, shalbe amonge the prestes 7 Leuites, which are doctepers at the thresholds: 7 one thirde parte in the kynges house, and one thirde parte at the grounde porte. But all the people shalbe in the courtes of the house of the LORDE, and that no man goin to the house of the LORDE, excepte the prestes and Leuites that mynister there, they shal go in: for they are hallowed. And let all 3 people rayte vpon the LORDE. And the Leuites shal get them reuēde aboure 3 kynge, every one with his weapon in his hande. And who so els goeth into y house, let him dye. And they shall be w the kynge whā he goeth out & in.

C And the Levites & all Juda dyd as Joia da y prest had commanded, and every one toke his men that entred on the Sabbath, w those y wente of on the Sabbath: for Joia da y prest suffred not those two companies to parte asunder. And Joia da y prest gaue the captaynes over hundreds sprares & shyldes, and kynge Davids weapons, which were in the house of God, and set all the people every one w his weapon in his hande, from the righte corner of the house, vnto the lefte corner of the altare, and to the house warde aboute the kynge. And they broughte forth the kynges sonne, & set the crowne vpon his heade, and gaue them the wytnesse, & made him kynge. And Joia da w his sonnes annoynted him, & sayde: God saue the kynge.

Deut. 17. d

But whan Athalia herde the noyse of y people y ranne together and praysed y kynge, she wente forth to the people into y house of the LORDE, and looked: and beholde, y kynge stode in his place at y inraunce, and the rulers and trompettes aboute y kynge: and all the people of the londe were glad, & blew the trompes, and there were syngers y coulde playe w all maner of musycall instrumentes. But she rete hir clothes, & sayde: Sedicion, sedicion. Neuertheles Joia da y prest gat him forth with the captaynes over hundreds and rulers of the hoost, and sayde vnto them: Brynge her forth betwene y walles, & who so ener foloweth her, shal be slayne with y swerde: for the prest had comannded, that she shulde not be slayne in y house of the LORDE. And they layed handes on her. And whan she came at the inraunce of the hoisgate of the kynges house, they put her to death there.

And Joia da made a coneuant betwene him and all the people, and the kynge, y they shulde be the people of the LORDE. The wte all the people into the house of Baal and destroyed it, & brake downe his altares & ymagines, & slewe Nathan the prest of Baal before the altare. And Joia da appoynted y officers in the house of the LORDE amogge the prestes & Levites, whom David had ordey ned for y house of the LORDE, to offre burnt sacrifices vnto y LORDE, as it is wrytten in the lawe of Moses: w ioye & songes made by David. And y porters set he at y gates of y house of y LORDE, y none shulde entre, which were defiled w eny maner of chinge.

And he toke the captaynes over hundreds and the mightie men and loibes of y people, and all the people of the londe, and brought the kynge downe from the house of the LORDE, and broughte him thorow the hye poite of the kynges house, and caused the kynge sit vpon the seate royall. And all the people of the lode were glad, and the cite was at rest. But Athalia was slayne with the swerde.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

Joas was seven yeare olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned fortie years at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Zibea of Bersaba. And Joas dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE, as long as Joia da the prest lyued. And Joia da gaue him two wiues, & he begat sonnes & daughters. Afterwarde denysed Joas to renue the house of the LORDE, & gathered together the prestes and Levites, & sayde vnto the: Go forth vnto all the cities of Juda, & gather the money of all Israel, to repayre y house of God yearly, and do it righte soone: but the Levites made no haist.

2. Re. 15. 8

Then the kynge called Joia da the pryncipall, and sayde vnto him: Why ledest thou not vnto the Levites, y they bringe in from Juda and Jerusalem, the colleccion which Moses the seruante of the LORDE appoynted to be gathered amogge Israel for the Tabernacle of witnes: for y vngodly Athalia & hir sonnes hane waisted the house of God: and all that was halowed for the house of the LORDE, haue they bestowed on Baalim.

2. Re. 15. 8

Then commanded the kynge to make a chest, and to set it without at the inraunce of the house of the LORDE: & caused it to be proclaimed in Juda and Jerusalem, that they shulde bringe in to the LORDE, the colleccio, which Moses the seruante of God appointed vnto Israel in y wilderness. The were all y rulers glad, & so were all y people, & broughte it, and cast it in to the chest, tyll it was full.

2. Re. 15. 8

And whan the tyme was y the Levites shulde bringe the Arke at y kynges comanndement (whan they sawe y there was moch money therin) then came the kynges scribe, & he y was appoynted of the chiefe prest, and emptyed the chest, and caried it againe in to his place. Thus dyd they every daye, so that they gathered moch money together. And y kynge & Joia da gaue it vnto y workmasters of y house of the LORDE, and they hired masons & carpenters to repayre the house of y LORDE, and men that coulde worke in yron and brasse, to repayre the house of y LORDE.

And the labourers wrought, so that y repainge in y worke wente forwarde thorow their hande, and they set the house of God in his bewtye, and made it stronge. And whan they had perfourmed this, they brought the resydue of the money before the kynge and Joiada, wherof there were made vessels for the house of the LORDE, vessels for the ministration and burnt offeringe, spones and ornaments of golde and silver. And they offred burnt offeringes allwaye in the house of the LORDE, as longe as Joiada lyued.

And Joiada waxed olde, and had lyued longe ynough, and dyed, ⁊ was an hundred and thirtie yeare olde whan he dyed: and they buried him in the cite of David, amonge the kynge, because he had done good vnto Israel, and towarde God ⁊ his house. And after the death of Joiada, came the rulers in Iuda, and worshipped the kynge.

D Then consented the kynge vnto the. And they forsoke the house of the LORDE God of their fathers, and serued ⁊ groues and ymagas. Then came ⁊ wrath of the LORDE vpo Iuda and Jerusalem because of this trespass of theirs. Yet sent he prophetes vnto the, ⁊ they shulde tunc vnto the LORDE, ⁊ they testified vnto the: but they wolde not heare.

Mar. 13 c

And the spere of God came vpon Zachary the sonne of Joiada the prest, which stode ouer ⁊ people. ⁊ sayde vnto the: Thus sayeth God: Wherfore do ye transgresse the commaundementes of the LORDE, which shall not be to yo prosperite: for ye haue forsaken ⁊ LORDE, therfore shal he forsake yeu. Neuer theles they conspyred agaynst him, ⁊ stoned him at ⁊ kynge's commaundement in ⁊ courte of the house of the LORDE. And Joas ⁊ kinge thought not on the mercy ⁊ Joiada his father had done for him, but slewe his sonne. For withstandinge whā he dyed, he sayde: The LORDE shal lōke vpon it, and requyre it.

22 And whan the ycare was gere abente, ⁊ of the Syrians wente up, ⁊ came to Iuda: ⁊ Jerusalem, and destroyed the rulers in the peple, and sent all the spere of them vnto Damascon. For the power of the Syrians came but with a fewemen, yet gaue ⁊ LORDE a very greate power in to their hande, because they had forsaken ⁊ LORDE God of their fathers. They executed iudgment also vpon Joas. And whan they departed fro him, they lefte him in greate sickness.

Neuer theles his seruantes conspyred agaynst him (because of the bloude of the childre of Joiada the prest) ⁊ slewe him vpo his bed, ⁊ he dyed, and they buryed him in the cite of David, but not amonge the sepulchres of the kynge. They that conspyred agaynst him, were these: Sabad ⁊ sonne of Simeath the Ammonitisse, and Josabad the sonne of Simri the Moabitisse. As for his sonnes, and the summe that was gathered vnder him, and the buyldinge of the house of God beholde, they are wyrtten in the stoye in the boke of the kynge. And Amasias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The XXV. Chapter.

A Que and twentye yeare olde was Amasias whan he was made kynge, and reigned nyne and twentye yeare at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Joandan of Jerusalem. And he dyd ⁊ which was right in the sighte of the LORDE, but not w a whole her. Now whan his kingdome was in strength, he slewe his seruantes which had slayne the kinge his father. But their childre slewe he not, for so is it wyrtten in the boke of the lawe of Moyses, where the LORDE commaundeth, and sayeth: The fathers shal not dye for the children, nether shal the children dye for the fathers: but euery one shal die for his awne synne.

Deut. 24 c

Eze. 18. c

And Amasias broughte Iuda together, and set them after the fathers houses, after the rulers ouer thousandes ⁊ ouer hundreds amonge all Iuda and Ben Jamin, and nombred them from twentye yeare olde ⁊ aboue, and founde of the thre hundred thousande chosen men, which were able to go forth to the warre, and caryed speares and shyldes. And out of Israel appoynted he an hundred thousande stronge men of warre for an hundred talentes of silver.

B But there came a man of God vnto him, and sayde: O kynge, Let not the hoost of Israel come to the: for the LORDE is not with Israel, nether with all the childre of Ephraim. For yf thou comest to shewe ⁊ boldnes in the battaill, God shal make the fall before thine enemies. For God hath power to helpe, and to cause for to fall. Amasias sayde vnto the man of God: What shal be done then with ⁊ hundred talentes ⁊ I haue geue ⁊ souldyers of Israel? The mā of God sayde: The LORDE hath yet more the this to geue the. So Amasias separated out the men of warre which were come to him out of Ephraim, ⁊ they shulde departed vnto their place. Then waxed their wrath very whote agaynst Iuda, and they wente agayne vnto their place in wrothfull displeasure. And Amasias strenghted himselfe, and caried out his peple, and wente forth in to the Salt valley, and smote ten thousande of the childre of Seir.

The ii. boke of the Cronicles.

And the childre of Juda toke ten thousand of the alyne, whom they broughte vp to the toppe of a mountayne, and cast the downe headlinges from the toppe of the mount, so that they all to barst in sunder. But 3 childre of the men of warre whom Amasias had sent awaye agayne (that they shoulde not go to the battayll with his people) fell in to the cities of Juda, from Samaria vnto Beth Horon, and smyte thre thousande of me, and toke moch spoyle.

E And whan Amasias came agayne from the slaughter of the Edomites, he broughte the goddes of the children of Seir, and made them his goddes, and worshipped before them, 7 brent incense vnto them. Then was the LORDE very wroth at Amasias, 7 sent vnto him a prophet, which sayde vnto him: Why settest thou the goddes of the people, which coulde not deliuer their folke from 3 hande? And whan he talked with him, the kynge sayde vnto him: Haue they made 3 of the kynges counsell? Ceasse, why wilt thou be smytten? Then the prophet ceased, 7 sayde: I perceaue, that the LORDE is mynded to destroye 3, because thou hast done this, and hearkenest not vnto my counsell.

4. Re. 14 b

And Amasias 3 kynge of Juda toke counsell, 7 sent vnto Joas the sonne of Joahas 3 sonne of Jehu, kynge of Israel, sayenge: Come, let vs se one another. But Joas the kynge of Israel sent vnto Amasias 3 kynge of Juda, sayenge: The hartorne in Libanus sent vnto 3 Cedre tre in Libanus, sayenge: Beue thy daughter vnto my sonne to wife. But a wyld beest in Libanus ranne ouer 3 hartorne, 7 trode it downe. Thou thinkest: Beholde, I haue smytten the Edomites, therfore is thine hert proude to boaste. Now byde at home: why stryuest thou after myffortune, that thou mayest fall 7 Juda with thee?

Nevertheless Amasias consented not: for so was it broughte to passe of God, 3 they mighte be geuen in to the handes of the enemies, because they soughte the goddes of 3 Edomites. Then wente Joas the kynge of Israel vp, 7 they saue one another, he and Amasias the kynge of Juda, at Beth Semes which lyeth in Juda. But Juda was smytte before Israel, and they fled euery one vnto his tent.

D And Joas the kynge of Israel toke Amasias 3 kynge of Juda, the sonne of Joas 3 sonne of Joahas, at Beth Semes, 7 broughte him to Jerusalem, 7 brake downe the wall of Ierusalē, from 3 porte of Ephraim vnto the corner porte, eue foure hundred cubites longe: and toke with him all the golde, and silver, and all the ornamentes that were founde in 3 house of God with Obededom, and in the treasures in the kynges house, and the childre to pledge vnto Samaria. And Amasias the sonne of Joas kynge of Juda, liued after the death of Joas the sonne of Joahas kynge of Israel fiftene yeare.

What more there is to saye of Amasias (bothe the first and last) beholde, it is witten in 3 boke of the kynges of Juda 7 Israel. And fro the tyme forth that Amasias departed from the LORDE, they conspyred against him at Jerusalem. But he fled vnto Lachis. Thē sent they after him vnto Lachis, 7 slewe him there. And they broughte him vpo horses 7 buried him beside his fathers in the cite of Juda.

The XXVI. Chapter.

Then all the people of Juda toke Osias, which was sytene yeare olde, and made him kynge in steade of his father Amasias. He builded the chorch, 7 broughte it agayne vnto Juda, after that the kynge was fallen on slepe with his fathers. Sixtene yeare olde was Osias whan he was made kynge, and reigned two and fiftie yeare at Ierusalē. His mothers name was Jehalias of Jerusalem. And he did right in the syghe of the LORDE, as his father Amasias had done, and soughte God as longe as Zacharias liued, which taughte in the visions of God: and as longe as he soughte the LORDE, God made him to prospere.

4. Re. 15. a

For he wente forth, and foughte agaynst the Philistynes, and brake downe 3 walles of Gath, and the walles of Jabne, and the walles of Asdod, and buylded cities aboute Asdod, 7 amonge the Philistynes. For God helped him agaynst the Philistines, agaynst the Arabians, agaynst them of Gurbaal, 7 agaynst the Meunites. And 3 Ammonites gaue Osias presentes, 7 his name came in to Egipce: for he was exceedinge stronge. And Osias buylded towres at Jerusalem vpon the corner porte, and on the valley gate, and on other corners, and made them stronge. He buylded castels also in the wyldernes, and dygged many welles: for he had many cattell, both in the medewes and in the playnes, husbandmen also and wyne gardeners on the mountaynes and on Carmel: for he delited in husbandrye.

And Osias had an hoost of men of warre goynge forth to the battail, which were numbered vnder the hande of Jeiel the scribe 7 of Maesa the offycer, vnder the hāde of Zanaia of the kynges rulers. And the nombres of the chiefe fathers amonge the stronge me of warre, was two thousande and fyve hundred. And vnder the hande of the hoost thre hundred thousande, and seven thousande and fyve hundred mete for the battayll, in the strength of an armye to helpe the kynge agaynst the enemies. And Osias prepared for all the hoost, shylde, speares, helmettes, brestplates, bowes and slyngstones. And at Jerusale he made ordinance conyngly, to be vpon the towres and in the pynacles, to shute arrowes and greace stones. And the same of him came farre abroad, because he was specially helped, tyll he became mightie.

E And whan his power was greace, his hert arose to his awne destruccion: for he trespassed agaynst the LORDE his God, and wente in to the temple of the LORDE, to burne incense vpon the altare of incense. But Asarias the prest wente after him, and foure score prestes with him, valeaunt men, and withstode kynge Osias, and saide vnto him: Nu. 18. 7 "It belongeth not vnto thy effyce (Osias) to burne incense vnto the LORDE, but vnto the prestes belongeth it, even vnto the children of Aaron, which are halowed to burne incense. Go forth out of the Sanctuary: for thou offendest, and it shall be no worshippe vnto the before God the LORDE.

Nu. 12. 6 And Osias was wroth, and had a censoure in his hande. And whyle he murmured with the prestes, the leprosy spronge out of his foreheade in the presence of the prestes in the house of the LORDE before the altare of incense. And Asarias the chiefe prest turned his heade toward him, and so dyd all the prestes, and beholde, he was leper in his foreheade. And they put him out from thence. And he made haist hymselfe to go forth, for his plage came of the LORDE. Thus became Osias kynge a leper vnto his death, and dwelt full of leprosy in a fre house: for he was put out of the house of the LORDE. But Joram his sonne had the oversight of the kynges house, and iudged the people in the lende.

What more there is to saie of Osias (both first and last) Esay the sonne of Amos hath wrytten it. And Osias fell on slepe w his fathers, and they buryed him with his fathers in the pece of grounde beside kynges sepulchres: for they sayde: He is leporous. And Jotham his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The XXVII. Chapter.

4. Re. 15. f Jotham was fyve and twentye yeare olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Jerusalem.

The xxij. Chap.

His mothers name was Jersa the daughter of Sadoc: and he dyd righte in the sighte of the LORDE as did Osias his father: sauinge he wente not in to the temple of the LORDE, and the people yet married them selues. He buylded the hye porte of the house of the LORDE, and on the wall of Ophel buylded he moch, and buylded the cities vpon the mountaynes of Juda, and in the woddes buylded he castels and towres.

And he fought with the kynge of the children of Ammon, and overcame them, so that the children of Ammon gaue him in the same yeare an hundred talents of siluer, ten thousande quarters of wheate, and ten thousande of barley. So moch dyd the children of Ammon geue him also in the seconde and thirde yeare. Thus became Jotham mightie, for he gyded his wayes before the LORDE his God.

What more there is to saie of Jotham, and all his warres, vnd his waies, beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda. Fyve and twentye yeare olde was he whan he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Jerusalem. And Jotham fell on slepe w his fathers, and they buryed him in the cite of David, and Achaz his sonne was kynge in his steade. The XXVIII. Chapter.

Achaz was twentye yeare olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned sixtene yeare at Jerusalem, and dyd not that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, as did David his father, but walked in the wayes of the kynges of Israel, and made molten ymages vnto Baalim, and brent incense in the valley of the children of Hennon, and brent his awne sonnes in the fire, after the abhominacions of the heithen, whome the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel. And he dyd sacrifice and brent incense vpon the hye places and vpon the hilles, and amonge all grene trees.

Therefore dyd the LORDE his God deliuer him in to the hande of the kynge of Syria, so that they smote him, and caryed awaye a greace multitude of his men prisoners, and broughte them to Damascon. He was geuen also vnder the hande of the kynge of Israel, so he dyd a greace slaughter vpon him. For Pecah the sonne of Romelia smote in Juda an hundred and twentye thousande in one daye (which all were valeaunt men) eue because they had forsaken the LORDE God of their fathers. And Sichri a mightie man of Ephraim slewe Maaseia the kynge's sonne, and Asitani the pryncce of the house, and Elkana the nexte vnto the kynge. And the chil dien of Israel caried of their brethien prisoners two hundred thousande, women, sonnes and daughters, and toke a greate spoyle from them, and broughte the spoyle vnto Samaria.

B But enē there was there a prophet of J LORDE , whose name was Obed, which wēte out to mete J hoost that came to Samaria, and sayde vnto them: Beholde, because the LORDE God of youre fathers is wroth at Iuda, therfore hath he geuen them ouer in to youre handes: but ye haue slayne them so abhominably, that it is come vnto heaue. Now thinke ye to subdue the children of Iuda and Jerusalem, to be bondmen and bond maydens vnto you. Is not this a trespasse then to you agaynst the LORDE yo^r God? Herken now vnto me, and sende J prisoners hence agayne, whom ye haue caried awaye from youre brethien: for the wraoth of J LORDE is scarce ouer you.

Then gat vp certayne of the chiefe of the children of Ephraim, Asarias the sonne of Iohanan, Barachias the sonne of Mesillemoth, Ezechias the sonne of Salum, and Amasa J sonne of Hadlai, agaynst them J came from J battayll, and sayde vnto them: We shal not brynge the prisoners in hither, for youre mynde is but to make vs trespasse before the LORDE , to make oure synnes and offences the greater: for the trespasse is to moch allready, and the wraoth is scarce ouer Israel. So the hoost lefte the prisoners and the spoyle before J rulers and before the whole cōgregacion.

C Then stode vp the men (which now were rehearsed by name) and toke the prisoners, and as many as were naked amonge them, clothed they with J spoyle, and deckt them, and put shues vpon their fete, and gaue them to eate and drynke, and anoynted them, and caried them vpon asses (as many as were feble) and broughte them to Jericho to J palme cite vnto their brethien, and some agayne to Samaria. At the same tyme sent kynge Ahas vnto the kynges of Assur, J they shulde helpe him. And the Edomites came agayne, and smote Iuda, and caried some awaye captyue. The Philistynes also fell in to the cities in the playne, and towarde J south parte of Iuda, and wanne Beth Semeo, Aialon, Gederoth, and Socho with the villages therof, Timna with the villages therof, and Gimso with the villages therof, and dwelt therein. For J LORDE subdued Iuda for Ahas sake J kynge of Iuda, because he made Iuda naked, and rebelled agaynst the LORDE . And Teglatpilsesser the kynge of Assur came agaynst him, and beseged him, and he was not mightie ynough for him.

For Ahas spoyled the house of the LORDE , and the kynges house, and of the rulers, to geue vnto J kynge of Assur, but it helped him not. Moreover kynge Ahas trespassed yet more agaynst the LORDE even in his trouble, and dyd sacrifice vnto the goddes of them of Damascon, which had smitten him, and sayde: The goddes of the kynges of Syria helpe them, therfore wil J offre vnto them, that they maye helpe me also, where as the same yet were a fall vnto him and to all Israel.

And Ahas gathered the vessels of J house of God together, and brake the vessels in J house of God, and shut the doores of the house of J LORDE , and made him altars in all corners at Jerusalem, and euery where in the cyties of Iuda made he hye places to burne incense vnto other goddes, and prouoked J LORDE God of his fathers vnto wraoth.

What more there is to saye of him and of all his wayes (both first and last) beholde, it is wrytten in the booke of the kynges of Iuda and Israel. And Ahas fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him in J cite of Jerusalem: for they brought him not amonge the sepulchres of the kynges of Israel. And Ezechias his sonne was kynge in his steade.

The XXIX. Chapter.

Ezechias was fyue and twentye yeare of age when he was made kynge, and reigned nyne and twentye yeares at Jerusalem. His mothers name was Abia J daughter of Zachary. And he dyd that which was right in the sight of the LORDE , as did his father Dauid. He opened the doores of J house of the LORDE in the first moneth of J first yeare of his raigne, and made them stronge, and brought in the prestes and Levites, and gathered them together vnto the East streete, and sayde vnto them: Herken vnto me ye Levites, sanctifye youre selues now, J ye maye halowe the house of the LORDE God of yo^r fathers, and put fylthines out of the Sanctuary: for oure fathers haue trespassed, and done J which was euell in the sight of the LORDE oure God, and haue forsaken him. For they turned their faces from the habitacion of J LORDE oure God, and turned their backs on it, and shut the doores of the Porche, and put out the lampes, and brent no incense, and offered no burnt sacrifices in the Sanctuary vnto the God of Israel.

Therefore is the wraoth of the LORDE come ouer Iuda and Jerusalem, and he hath geuen them ouer to be scatted abrode, desolate and to be hyssed at, as ye se with yeres. For beholde, even for the same cause fell oure fathers thorow the swerde, oure sonnes daughters and wyues were caryed awaye captiue. Now am I mynded to make a covenannt with the LORDE God of Israel, & he maye turne awaie from vs his wrath & indignacion. Now my sonnes, be not ye negligent: for the LORDE hath chesen yee to stonde before him, and to be his mynisters and to burne incense vnto him.

Then rose the Levites: Mahath the sonne of Amasai, and Joel the sonne of Asaria of the children of the Rahabites. Of the children of Merari: Cis the sonne of Abi, & Asaria the sonne of Jehaleleel. Of the children of the Gersonites: Joab the sonne of Simma, and Eden the sonne of Joab. And of the childre of Elizaphan: Simri & Jaiel. And of the childre of Asaph: Sachary and Machania. And of the children of Beniamin: Jehiel and Simeel. And of the children of Gedon: Semai and Osiel.

And they gathered their brethren together, and were sanctified, and wente in according to the Kynges commaundement at the worde of the LORDE, to cleanse the house of the LORDE. And the prestes entred within in the house of the LORDE to purifye, and put out all the uncleannes that was founde in the temple of the LORDE, in the courre of the LORDES house: and the prestes toke it vp, and caryed it out in to the broke Cedron. The fyfth daye of the fyfth moneth beganne they to sanctifye them selues, and on the eight daye of the moneth wente they in to the porche of the LORDE, and halowed the house of the LORDE eight dayes, and fynished it on the sixtenth daye of the fyfth moneth.

And they wete in to the Kyng Ezechias, and sayde: We have clensed all the house of the LORDE, the altare of burnt offerynges, and all his vessels, the table of the shewbread and all the apparell therof: and all the ornaments that Kyng Achas cast awaye whan he was Kyng, what tyme as he transgressed, those have we prepared and halowed. Beholde, they are before the altare of the LORDE.

Then the Kyng Ezechias gat him vp early, and gathered together the Elders of the cite, and wete vp vnto the house of the LORDE, and they broughte seven bullockes, seven rammes, seven lambes, and seven he goates to be the synofferynge, for the Sanctuary, & for Juda. And he spake vnto the prestes the children of Aaron, that they shulde offre vpon the altare of the LORDE.

So they slew the bullocke, and the prestes toke the bloude, and sprentled it vpon the altare: and slew the rammes, and sprentled the bloude vpon the altare: and slew the lambes, and sprentled the bloude vpon the altare. And y goates to synofferynge broughte they before the Kyng and the congregacion, and layed their handes vpon them: and the prestes slew them, and sprentled their bloude vpon the altare to make attonement for all Israel: for the Kyng commaunded to offre burnt sacrificyes and synofferynges for all Israel.

And he set the Levites in the house of the LORDE with Cymbales, psalteries and harpes, as David had commaunded, and Gad the Kynges Seer, and the prophet Isa. for it was the commaundement of the LORDE by his prophetes. And the Levites with the muscallyn instrumentes of David, & the prestes with the trompettes. And Ezechias commaunded them to offre burnt sacrificyes vpon the altare. And aboute the tyme that the burnt sacrificye beganne to be offred the songe of the LORDE beganne also, and the trompettes, and dyuerse instrumentes of David the Kyng: of Israel and all the congregacion gaue praise & thankes: and the songe of the Musicians, and the blowyng of the trompettes, endured all tyll the burnt offerynge was fynished.

Now whan the burnt offerynge was performed, the Kyng and all they that were with him, bowed them selues, and gaue praise and thankes. And Ezechias the Kyng to the rulers commaunded the Levites to prayse the LORDE with the songes of David and Asaph the Seer. And they gaue prayse tyll they were ioyfull, and they bowed them selues, and worshipped.

And Ezechias answered and saide: Now have ye fylled youre handes vnto the LORDE steppe forth, and bringe hither the sacrificyes and thankofferynges vnto the house of the LORDE. And the congregacion broughte sacrificyes and thankofferynges, and euery man of a fre wyllinge hert broughte burnt offerynges. And the nombre of the burnt offerynges that the congregacion broughte, was thre score bullockes and ten, an hundred rammes, and two hundred lambes, and all these for the burnt offerynge vnto the LORDE, and they sanctified six hundred bullockes, and thre thousand shepe.

But the prestes were to fewe, and coulde not pluck of the flynnes of all the burnt offerynges, therfore toke they their brethren the Levites, tyll the worke was fynished, and tyll the prestes were halowed (for the Levites are easier to be halowed then the prestes) and many of the burnt offerynges were with the fat of the thant offerynges and drynt offerynges to the burnt sacrifices. Thus was the ministracion of the house of the LORD prepared. And Ezechias reioysed with all the people, that they were prepared with God: for it was done righte haistely.

The XXX. Chapter.

Num. 9. b Und Ezechias sent into all Israel and Juda, and wrote letters vnto Ephraim and Manasses, that they shulde come to the house of the LORD at Jerusalem, to kepe easter vnto the LORD God of Israel. And the kynge helde a counsell with his rulers, and all the cōgregacion at Jerusalem, to kepe Passouer in the seconde moneth: for at that tyme they coude not kepe it, because the prestes were not sanctified ynough, and the people were not yet come together vnto Jerusalem. And it pleased the kynge well and all the cōgregacion. And they appointed it to be proclaimed thorow out all Israel from Berseba vnto Dan, that they shulde come to kepe Passouer vnto the LORD God of Israel: for they were not many to kepe it as it is wrytten.

Exod. 34. c And the postes wente with the letters from the hande of the kynge and of his rulers thorow out all Israel and Juda, at y^e kynges commaundement, and sayde: Ye children of Israel, turne you vnto the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and he shal turne to y^e escaped, which are lefte over amonge you from the hande of the kynge of Assir: and be not ye as youre fathers and brethren, which rebelled agaynst the LORD God of their fathers, and he gaue the over in to desolacion as ye se youre selues. Be not ye hardnecked now as were youre fathers, but offre youre hāde vnto the LORD, and come to his sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for euer, and serue the LORD youre God, so shal the indignacion of his wrath turne awaye from you. For yf ye turne vnto the LORD, then shal youre brethren and children haue mercy in the sighte of them which holde them in captiuite, that they maye come agayne in to this londe: for the LORD youre God is gracious and mercifull, and shal not turne awaye his face from you, yf ye conuerte vnto him.

And the postes wente from one cite to another in the londe of Ephraim and Manasses, and vnto Zabulon. But they mocked them and laughed them to scorne. Yet were there some of Asser and Manasses, and of Zabulon, that submytted them selues, and came to Jerusalem. And the hande of God came in to Juda, so that he gaue the one here to do after the commaundement of the kynge and the rulers at the worde of the LORD. And there came together vnto Jerusalem a greate people, to kepe the feast of vnleuened bried in the seconde moneth, a very greete congregacion.

And they gat them vp, and put downe y^e altares that were at Jerusalem, and all the incense put they awaye, and cast it in to the broke Cedron, and slewe the Passouer on the fourtenth daye of the secōde moneth. And y^e prestes and Levites were ashamed, and halowed them selues, and broughte the burnt offerynges to the house of the LORD, and stode in their ordinaunce, as it was acordint, after the lawe off Moses the man of God. And the prestes sprentled the bloude from the hande of the Levites: for there were many in the cōgregacion which were not sanctified, therfore dyd the Levites tyll Passouer for them which were not clensed, that they mighte be sanctified vnto the LORD.

D There were many people also of Ephraim, Manasses, Issachar and Zabulon, which were not cleane, but ate the Easter lambe not as it is wrytten: for Ezechias prayed for them, and sayde: The LORD, which is gracious, shalbe mercifull vnto all them that prepare their hertes vnto God, to seke the LORD God of their fathers, though they be not clensed after the holy purification. And the LORD herde Ezechias, and healed the people. Thus the children of Israel that were founde at Jerusalem, helde y^e feast of vnleuened bried seven dayes with greate ioye. And the Levites and prestes praysed the LORD every daye with the loude instrumentes of the LORD. And Ezechias spake hertely vnto all y^e Levites, which had good vnderstandinge in the LORD, and they ate the feast seven dayes, and offered thant offerynges, and gaue thankes vnto y^e LORD God of their fathers.

And all the congregacion deuysed to kepe the feast yet other seue dayes, and so they helde it those seuen dayes also with ioye: for Ezechias the kynge of Juda gaue an heue-offerynge for the cōgregacion, euen a thousande bullockes, and seven thousande shepe. But the rulers gaue an heueofferinge for y congregacion, euen a thousande bullockes, and ten thousande shepe. And many of the prestes sanctified them selues.

And the whole congregacion of Juda reioysed, the prestes and Levites, and all the congregacion that came out of Israel, and the strangers that were come out of the lande of Israel, and they that dwelt in Juda, and greate ioye was there at Jerusalem: for sence the tyme of Salomon the sonne of Dauid the kynge of Israel, was there no soch (ioye) at Jerusalem. And the prestes and Levites stode vp and blessed the people, and their voyce was herde, and their prayer came in to his holy habitation in heauen.

The XXXI. Chapter.

AND whan all this was fynished, all the Israelites that were founde in y cities of Juda, wente out, and brake the pilers, and hewed downe the groues, and brake downe the hye places and altars out of all Juda, Ben Jamin, Ephraim and Manasses, tyll they had destroyed the. And all the children of Israel wente agayne euery one to his possession vnto their cities.

But Ezechias set the prestes and Levites in their ordinaunces, euery one after his office, both the prestes and Levites, for the burnt sacrifices and thankofferynges, to mynister, to geue thanks and prayse in the gates of the hoost of the LORDE. And the kynge gaue his porcion of his substance for the burnt offerynges in the mornynge and euynynge, and for the burnt offerynges of the Sabbath, and of the newmone and of the feastes, as it is wrytten in the lawe of the LORDE.

AND he spake vnto y people which dwelt at Jerusalem, that they shulde geue porcions vnto the prestes and Levites, y they mighte the more stedfastly endure in the lawe of the LORDE. And whā y worde came forth, the childre of Israel gaue many fyrst frutes of come, wyne, oyle, hony, and all maner increase of the felde, and broughte in moch of all maner tithes. And the children of Israel and Juda which dwelt in the cities of Juda, broughte the tithes also of oxen and shepe, and the tithes of soch thinges as were sanctified, which they had halowed vnto the LORDE their God, and made here an heape, and there an heape. In the thirde moneth begane they to laye vpon heapes, and in the senenth moneth dyd they fynishe it.

And whā Ezechias with the rulers wente in, and sawe the heapes, they praysed the LORDE, and his people of Israel. And Ezechias axed the prestes and Levites concerninge the heapes. And Asaria the prest the chiefe in the house of Sadoc, sayde vnto him: Sence the tyme that they beganne to brynge the heueofferynges in to y house of the LORDE, we haue eaten, and are satisfied, and yet is there lesse ouer: for the LORDE hath blessed his people, therefore is this heape lesse ouer. Then commaunded the kynge, that they shulde prepare chestes in the house of the LORDE. And they prepared them, and put in the heueofferynges, and tithes and that which was halowed, faithfully.

And the oversight of the same had Chanania the Levite, and Simei his brother the seconde, and Jehiel, Asasia, Maglath, Asahel, Jerimoth, Josabad, Eliel, Jesmachia, Mahath and Benaia, ordeyned of the hande off Chanania and Simei his brother, accordinge to the commaundement of kynge Ezechias. But Asaria was prynce in the house of God. And Core y sonne of Jemna the Levite the porter of the Eastgate was ouer the frewyllinge gistes of God (which were geuen for heueofferynges vnto the LORDE) and ouer the Most holy. And vnder his hande were, Eden, Miniamin, Jesua, Semaia, Amaria, and Sachania in the cities of the prestes vpon credence, that they shulde geue vnto their biethre accordinge to their courses, to the lest as to the greatest.

And vnto them that were counted for y men childre from thre yeare olde and aboue, amonge all the that wete in to the house of the LORDE, euery one vpo his daye to their office in their attendaunces after their courses. And they that were rekened for prestes in the house of their fathers, and the Levites from twentye yeare and aboue, in their attendaunces after their courses. And they that were rekened amonge their children, wyues, sonnes and daughters amōge the whole congregacion: for that which was halowed, sanctified they vpon credence. There were men also named by name amonge Arons children the prestes vpon the feldes of the suburbs in all y cities, that they shulde geue porcions vnto all the men children amōge the prestes, and to all them that were nombred amonge the Levites.

Thus dyd Ezechias in all Juda, and dyd that which was good, righte and true in the sighte of the LORDE his God. And in all the busynes that he tolde in hāde concerninge the seruyce of the house of God, accordinge to the lawe and comendement, to seeke his God, that dyd he wiche all his hert, and therefore prospered he well.

The XXXII. Chapter.

After these actes and faithfulness came Sennacherib the kynge of Assur, and wente in to Juda, and pitched before the stronge cities, and thoughte to plucke them vnto him. And whan Ezechias sawe that Sennacherib came, and that his face stode to fighte agaynst Jerusalem, he deuysed with his rulers and mightie men, to couer the waters of the welles that were without the cite, and they helped him: and there gathered together a greate people, and couered all y welles and water brokes in the myddes of the londe, and sayde: Lest the kynge of Assur fynde moche water whā they come. And he toke a corage vnto him, and buylded all the walles where they were in decaye, and made towres thereon, and buylded yet another wall without, and strengthened Millo in the cite of Dauid. And made moche ordinance and shylbes, and set capaynes of warre ouer the people.

B And gathered them vnto him vpon the brode strete by the gate of the cite, and spake hertely vnto them, and sayde: Be stronge and bolde, feare not, and be not afrayed for the kynge of Assur, ner all y multitude that is with him: for there is one greater with vs then with him. With him is a fleschly arme, but with vs is the LORDE oure God, to helpe vs and to fighte for vs. And y people trusted vnto the wordes of Ezechias kynge of Juda.

Afterwarde sent Sennacherib the kynge of Assur his seruantes vnto Jerusalem (for he laye before Lachis, & all his hoost w him) to Ezechias y kynge of Juda, & to all Juda that was at Jerusalem, sayenge: Thus sayeth Sennacherib y kynge of Assur: Wherin put ye youre trust ye that dwell in the beseged Jerusalem? Ezechias disceaueth you, that he maye deliuer you vnto death, hōger and thyrst, and sayeth: The LORDE oure God shal deliuer vs from the hande of the kynge of Assur. Is it not Ezechias, that hath put awaye his hye places and altars, and sayde vnto Juda and Jerusalem: Before one altare shal ye worshippe, and burne incense thereon?

C Knowe ye not what I and my fathers

haue doneto all y people in the londes: haue the goddes of the heythen in the londes bene able to deliuer their countrees from my hande? What is he amonge all the goddes of these heythen (whom my father damned) that was able to deliuer his people from my hande? y youre God shulde be able to deliuer from my hande. Therefore let not Ezechias now disceauye you, and let him not perswade you eny soch thinge, and beleue him not. For yf no god of all the heythe and kyngdomes might deliuer his people from my hande and from the hande of my progenitors, then shal not youre goddes be able to deliuer you from my hande.

His seruantes also spake yet more agaynst the LORDE God, and agaynst his seruante Ezechias. And he wrote a letter to blasphemethe LORDE God of Israel, and spake of him, and sayde: Like as the goddes of the heythen in their londes haue not bene able to deliuer their people from my hande, even so shal not the God of Ezechias deliuer his people from my hande.

And he cryed with loude voyce in the Jewish langage vnto the people of Jerusalem that were vpon the wall, to make them fearfull and to be sayntharted, that they might wyme the cite. And they spake agaynst the God off Jerusalem, even as agaynst the goddes off the nations vpon earth, which were but the workes of mens handes.

But contrary wyse the kynge Ezechias and the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos prayed, and cryed vnto heauē. And the LORDE sent an angell, which destroyed all the mightie men of the hoost, and the prynces and rulers in y tentes of the kynge of Assur, so that he departed agayne with shame in to his owne londe. And whan he wente in to his gods house, they y came of his owne body, slew him there with the swerde. Thus the LORDE, helped Ezechias and them at Jerusalem, out of the hāde of Sennacherib y kynge of Assur, and of all other, and mayntayned the fro all on every syde, so y many broughte presentes vnto the LORDE to Jerusalem, and Jewels vnto Ezechias the kynge of Juda. And afterwarde was he exalted in the sighte of all heythen.

At y same tyme was Ezechias deed sicke, and he prayed vnto the LORDE, which made him promes, and gaue him a wonder tooken. But Ezechias recōpensed not accordinge as was geuen vnto him, for his hert was lifted vp: therefore came the wrath vpon him, and vpon Juda and Ierusalem. Nevertheless Ezechias humbled him selfe because his hert had bene exalted, with them at Ierusalem: therfore came not the wiath of the LORDE vpon them, whyle Ezechias lyued.

And Ezechias had very greater riches and worshippe, and made him treasures of syluer, golde, precious stones, spyes, shyldes, and all maner costly vessell, and corne houses for the increace of corne, wyne and oyle, and stalles for all maner catell, and foldes for the shepe, and buylded him cities, and had many catell of shepe and oxen: for God gaue him very moch good.

S It is the same Ezechias that couered the hye water condyte in Sihon, and conveyed it vnder on the west syde of y^e cite of Dauid: for Ezechias prospered in all his workes. But whan the interpreters the chiefe of Babilon were sent vnto him, to aske question at him (concernynge the wonder toke that had happened in the londe) God lefte him * to be tempted, that it mighte be knowne what soener was in his hert.

What more there is to saye of Ezechias, and of his mercifulnes, beholde, it is wyrtte in the vision of the prophet Esay the sonne of Amos, and in the boke of the Kynges of Juda and Israel. And Ezechias fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him ouer the sepulchres of the children of Dauid, and all Juda and they of Ierusalem dyd him worshippe in his death: and Manasses his sonne was kyng in his steade.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

Anasses was twelue yeare olde whā he was made kyng, and reigned syue and fiftye yeare at Ierusalem, and dyd that which was euell in the sighte of the LORDE (euen after the abominacions of the heythen, whom the LORDE expelled before the children of Israel) and turned backe, and buylded the hye places, (* which his father Ezechias had broken downe) and set vp altares vnto Baalim, and made groues, and worshipped all the hoost of heauen, and serued them. He buylded altares also in y^e LORDES house, wherof the LORDE had sayde: * At Ierusalem shal my name be for ever. And vnto all the hoost of heauen buylded he altares in both the courtes of y^e house of the LORDE. And in the valley of the sonne of Hennon caused he his awne sonnes to go thow the fyre, and chosed dayes, & regarded bydescrynges, and witches, and founded soythsayers and expounders of tokens, and dyd moch that was euell in the sighte of the LORDE to prouoke him vnto wiath.

Carued ymages also and Idols (which he caused to make) set he vp in Gods house, wherof the LORDE saide vnto Dauid and to Salomon his sonne: In this house at Ierusalem which I haue chosen out of all the trybes of Israel, wyl I set my name for ever and wyl nomore let the fore of Israel remoue fro the londe that I appoynted for their fathers, so farre as they obserue to do all y^e I haue commaunded them, in all the lawe, statutes and ordinaunces by Moses. But Manasses disceaue Juda and them of Ierusalem, so that they dyd worse then the heythen, whom the LORDE destroyed before the children of Israel. And the LORDE spake vnto Manasses and his people, and they regarded it not.

Therfore dyd the LORDE cause the rulers of the hoost of the kyng of Assur to come vpo the, which toke Manasses prisoner with bodes, and bounde him with cheynes, & broughte him vnto Babilon. * And whan he was in trouble, he made intercession before the LORDE his God, and humbled him selfe greatly before the God of his fathers, and prayed and besoughte him. Then herde he his prayer, and broughte him agayne to Ierusalem to his kyngdome. And Manasses knewe that the LORDE is God.

Afterwarde buylded he y^e vttemost wall of the cite of Dauid, on the west syde of Sihon by the broke, and at the entraunce of the Sythgate, and rounde aboute * Ophel, and made it very hye. And layed capteynes in y^e strōge cities of Juda, & put away y^e straunge goddes & Idols out of y^e house of y^e LORDE, and all the altares which he had buylded vpo the mount of the house of the LORDE, and in Ierusalem, and cast them out of the cite, and buylded the altare of the LORDE, and offred slayn offerynges and thank-offerynges thereon, and commaunded Juda, that they shulde serue the LORDE God of Israel. Nevertheless though the people offred vnto the LORDE their God, yet offred they vpon the hye places.

What more there is to saye of Manasses and of his prayer to his God, and the wordes of the Seers that spake vnto him in the name of the LORDE God of Israel, beholde, they are amonge the actes of the kynges of Israel. And his prayer and intercession, and all his synne and offence, & the rowmes wherin he buylded the hye places & groues and founded ydols, a fore he humbled himselfe, beholde, they are wrytten amonge the actes of the Seers. And Manasses fell on slepe with his fathers, and they buried him in his house, and Amon his sonne was kynge in his steade.

Two and twētye yeare olde was Amon whā he was made kynge, and reigned two yeare at Jerusale, and dyd euell in the sighte of the LORDE, as Manasses his father had done. And Amon offred vnto all the Idols that his father Manasses had made and serued thē. Yet dyd not he humble himselfe before the LORDE, as Manasse his father had submitted himselfe: but Amon trespassed euer more and more. And his seruantes cōspyred agaynst him, and slewe him in his house. Then smote the people in the londe all them that had conspyred agaynst kynge Amon. And the people in the londe made Josias his sonne kynge in his steade.

The XXXIII. Chapter.

A Josias was eight yeare olde whan he was made kynge, and reigned one and thirtie yeare at Jerusale, and dyd that which was righte in the sighte of the LORDE, and walked in the wayes of David his father, and turned not asyde, ne ther to the righte hande ner to the lefte. For in the eight yeare of his reigne whā he was yet but a childe, he beganne to seeke the God of his father David: and in the twoueth yeare begāne he to cense Juda and Jerusale from the hye places and groues, and carued Idols, and molten ymages: and caused the altares of Baalim to be broken downe before him, and the ymages that were thereon, hewed he downe. And yf groues and carued Idols and molten ymages brake he in peces, and made them to dust, and scatred it vpon the graues of them that had offred vnto them. And the bones of the prestes brent he vps the altares, and so closed he Juda z Jerusale, z in 3 cities of Manasses, Ephraim, Simeon, and vnto Neftali in their wyldernesess on euerysyde. And whā he had broken downe the altares and groues, and syncten the Idols in peces, and hewed downe all the ymages in all the londe of Israel, he came agayne to Jerusale.

In the eightēth yeare of his reigne whā he had censed the londe and the house, he sent Saphan the sonne of Asalia and Maaseia the Shreue of the cite, and Joath the sonne of Joahas the Chaunceler, to repayre the house of the LORDE his God. And they came to Helchias yf hye prest, and there was deliuered vnto them the money that was broughte vnto the house of God, which the Levites (that kepte the threshouldes) had gathered, of Manasses, Ephraim, and of all the residue in Israel, and of all Juda z Ben Jamin, and of them that dwelt at Jerusale, and they deliuered it vnto the hādes of the worke men in the house of the LORDE, and gaue it vnto those that wrought in the house of the LORDE, where it was in decaye, yf they shulde repayre it. And the same gaue it forth vnto the carpenters and buylders, to bye fre stone and hewen tymbre for the baltes in the houses, which the kynges had destroyed. And the men laboured faithfully in the worke.

And ouer them were ordeyned, Jahath and Obadia the Levites of the children of Merari: Zachary and Mesullam of the children of the Kahathites, to further the worke, and they were all Levites that coulde playe vpon instrumentes. But ouer them that bare burthens and furthured all manner of worke in all the offices, there were scribes, officers and doie keepers of the Levites. And whā they toke out the money that was broughte vnto yf house of the LORDE, Helchias the prest founde the boke of the lawe of the LORDE genen by Moses. And Helchias answered, and saide vnto Saphan the Scribe: I haue founde the boke of the lawe in yf house of yf LORDE. And Helchias deliuered the boke vnto Saphan. And Saphan bare it vnto the kynge, and broughte yf kynge worde agayne, and sayde: All that was geuen vnder the handes of thy seruantes, that make they: and yf money that was founde in yf house of the LORDE, haue they gathered together, and deliuered it vnto yf officers, and to the workmen. And Saphan the Scribe tolde the kynge, and sayde: Helchias the prest hath deliuered me a boke.

And Saphan red therein before the kynge. And whan the kynge herde the wordes of the lawe, he rente his clothes. And the kynge commaunded Helchias and Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, and Abdon the sonne of Micha, and Saphan the Scribe, and Asaia the kynges seruante, and sayde: Go youre waye, are counsell at the LORDE for me and for the remmaunt in Israel, and for Juda, concernynge these wordes of the boke that is founde. For greate is the indignacion of the LORDE that is gone forth ouer vs, because oure fathers haue not kepte the worde of the LORDE, to do a cordinge as it is wrytten in this boke. Then wete Helchias (with the other that were sent from the kynge) vnto the prophetisse Hulda the wife of Sallum the Sonne of Thecoath the sonne of Hasra the keeper of the clothes, which dwelt at Jerusalem in the secōde parte, and they spake this vnto her.

E And she sayde vnto them: Thus sayeth the LORDE God of Israel: Tell the man y sent you vnto me: Thus sayeth y LORDE: Beholde, I wil brynge plagues vpo this place and the inhabiteres therof, euē all the curses which are wrytten in the boke, that was red before the kynge of Iuda: because they haue forsake me, and buēt incēse vnto other goddes, to prouoke me with all the workes of their handes. And my indignacion shal go forth vpon this cite, and shal not be quenched.

And after this maner shal ye saye vnto the kynge of Iuda, that sent you to afe counsell at the LORDE: Thus sayeth y LORDE God of Israel concernynge the wordes that thou hast herde: Because thine hert is moued, and because thou hast humbled thy selfe in the sighte of God, when thou herdest his wordes agaynst this place and the inhabiteres therof, and hast submytted thy selfe before me, and rent thy clothes, and wepte before me, therfore haue I herde the, sayeth y LORDE. Beholde, I wil gather the vnto thy fathers, and thou shalt be layed in thy grave with peace, so y thine eyes shal not se all the euell that I wyl brynge ouer this place, and the indwellers therof. And they broughte the kynge worde agayne.

4. Re. 11. 2 G Then sent y kynge, and caused all the Elders in Iuda and Jerusalem to come together. And the kynge wente vp in to the house of the LORDE, and all the men of Iuda and inhabiteres of Ierusalē, the prestes, the Leuites, and all the people both small and greate: and all the wordes in the boke of the couenaut that was founde in the house of the LORDE, were red in their eares. And y kynge stode in his place, and made a couenaut before the LORDE, that they shulde walke after the LORDE, to kepe his comāndementes, his testimonies, and his statutes with all their hert and with all their soule, to do acordinge vnto all the wordes of the couenaut that are wrytten in this boke.

And there stode all they that were founde at Jerusalem and in Ben Jamin. And y inhabiteres of Jerusalem dyd acordinge to the couenaut of God the God of their fathers. And Josias put awaye all abhominacions out of all the lombes that were the children of Israels, and caused all them that were founde in Israel, to serue the LORDE their God. * As longe as Josias lyued, departed they not from the LORDE the God of their fathers. Iosue. 24. 1

The XXXV. Chapter.

Ald Josias kepte Passecouer vnto the LORDE at Jerusalem, and slewe the Passecouer on the fourtenth daye off the first moneth, and set the prestes in their offices, and strenghted them to their ministracion in the house of the LORDE, and sayde vnto the Leuites that taughte in all Israel, and were sanctified vnto y LORDE: Put the holy Aete in the house that Salomon y sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel dyd buyld. Ye shal leaue it nomore vpon your shawtes. For that ye serue now the LORDE your God, and his people of Israel, and prepare the house of your fathers in your courses, as it was appoynted by Dauid the kynge of Israel, and by Salomon his sonne: and stonde in the Sanctuary after y course of the fathers houses amonge your brethren the children of the people. And after the course of the fathers houses amonge the Leuites, and kyll Passecouer, sanctifye and prepare your brethren, that they maye do acordinge to the worde of the LORDE by Moyses. 1. Esd. 1. 1

And Josias gaue lambes and yonge kyddes which were males, to the heueofferynge for the comontye (all to the Passecouer for every one that was founde) in the nombre thirtye thousande, and thre thousande oxen, all of the kynges good. And his prynces of their awne good wyl gaue to the heueofferynge for the people, 7 for the prestes and Leuites (namely, Helchias, Zachary and Jehiel the prynces in y house of God amonge the prestes) for the Passecouer, two thousande and sixe hundred, And thre hundred oxen. But Chanania, Semaia, Nathaneel and his brethren, Gasabia, Jeiel and Josabad the chiefe of the Leuites gaue the Leuites to the heue offerynge for the Passecouer, fyue thousande shepe, 7 fyue hundred oxen. 2.

Thus was the Gods seruyce prepared, and the prestes stode in their place, and the Leuites in their courses acordinge to the kynges commaundement. And they kylld the Passecouer, and the prestes toke it off their handes, and sprenkled it: and the Leuites toke the synnes off them, and removed the burnt offerynge there from, to geue it amonge the porcions of the fathers houses in the multitudes of their congregacion to offere vnto the LORDE, as it is wrytten in y^e boke of Moyses, Enen so dyd they with the oxen also. And they dighte the Passeouer at the fyre accordinge to the lawe. And that which was halowed, dighte they in pottes, kettels, and pannes, and made haist for the comon people. Afterwarde prepared they for them selues also and for y^e prestes: for the prestes the children of Aaron were occupied in the burnt offerynges and fat vntill the nighte. Therefore must the Levites prepare for them selues and for the prestes the children of Aaron.

1. Pa. 16.27
And the syngers the children of Asaph stode in their place (accordinge to Dauides commaundement) and Asaph and Heman, and Jedithim the kynges Seer, and the porters at all the gates. And they departed not from their office. For the Levites their brethren prepared for them. Thus was all the Gods seruyce prepared the same daye, that the Passeouer mighte be kepte, and the burnt sacrifices offred vpon the altare off the LORDE accordinge to the commaundement of kyng Jofias.

So the children of Israel that were at hande, helde Passeouer at that tyme, and the feast of unleuened bred, seven dayes. Sence y^e tyme of Samuel the prophet, was no Passeouer kepte in Israel like this: and no kyng of Israel had holden soch a Passeouer as Jofias dyd, and the prestes, Levites, all Juda, and sech as were founde of Israel, and the inhabiteurs of Jerusalem. In the eighteenth yere of the reigne of Jofias was this Passeouer kepte.

D After this, whan Jofias had prepared the house, Necho the kyng of Egypte wente vp to fighte agaynst Carcamis besyde Euphrates. And Jofias wente forth agaynst him. But he sent messaungers vnto him, sayenge: What haue I to do with the O kyng of Juda? I am not come now agaynst the, but I fighte agaynst another house: and God hath sayde, that I shal make haist. Ceasse from God which is with me, that he destroye the not. Nevertheless Jofias turned not his face from him, but prepared himselfe to fighte with him, and herkened not vnto the wordes of Necho out of the mouth of God, and came to fighte wth him vpon the playne besyde Mageddo. But the Archers shot at kyng Jofias. And the kyng sayde vnto his seruantes: Cary me awaye, for I am sore wounded. And his ser-uantes toke him from the charet, and caried him vpon his seconde charet, and brought him to Jerusalem. And he dyed, and was buried amonge the sepulchres off his fathers.

And All Juda and Jerusalem mourned for Jofias, and Jeremy bewayled Jofias, and all the synginge men and women, spake their lamentacions ouer Jofias vnto this daye. Beholde, it is wrytten also amonge the Lamentacions. What more there is to saye of Jofias, and his mercy accordinge to the scripture in the lawe of the LORDE, and of his actes (both first and last) beholde, it is wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel and Juda.

And the people of the londe toke Joahas the sonne of Jofias, and made him kyng in his fathers steade at Jerusalem. For the kyng of Egypte deposed him at Jerusalem, and condemned the londe in an hundredth talentes of syluer, and one talent off golde. And all the vessels in the house of God, greace and small, the treasures in the house of the LORDE, and the treasures of the kynge and of his prynces, all this caused he to be caried vnto Babilon. 1. Es. 1. a

Then the folke of the londe hyndered the people of Juda, and made them afrayed to buylde, and hyred councelers aganst them and hyndered their deuycce, as longe as Cyrus the kynge of Persia lyued, vntyll the reigne off Darius kynge off Persia. But whan Ahasuerus was kynge, in the begynnyng off his reigne wrote they unto him a complayne agaynst them of Juda and Jerusalem.

And in the tyme of Artaxerxes, wrote Bithellam, Mithradath, Tabeel and the other of their counsell unto Artaxerxes the kynge of Persia. But the scripture of γ letter was wrytten in the Syrians speach, and was interpreted in the langage of the Syrians. Rehum γ chaunceler, and Simsai the scribe, wrote this letter agaynst Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the kynge.

B

We Rehum the chaunceler, and Simsai the scribe, and other of the counsell of Dina, off Arphasath, off Tarplac, off Persia, off Arach, of Babilon, of Susan, of Deha, and of Elam, and other of the people: whom the greates and noble Asinaphar broughte ouer, and set in the cities of Samaria, and other on this syde the water, and in Canaan. And this is γ summe of the letter that they sent unto kynge Artaxerxes:

we all are therby which deſtroyed the tem-noure. Therfore ſent we out, and cauſed the Kynges to be certiſied therof: That it maye be and ſo ſhalt thou ſynde in the ſame Croni-cles, and perceauē, that this cite is ſedicious and noyſome vnto Kynges and londes, and that they cauſe other alſo to rebell of oltroyed. Therfore do we certiſie the Kynges, that yf this cite be buylded, and the walles therof made vp, thou ſhalt kepe nothinge on this ſyde the water by the reaſon of it.

D Then sent y^e Kyng an answer vnto Reh-hum the chawnceler, and Simsa the Scry-be, and to the other of their counsell that dwelt in Samaria, and vnto the other beyonde y^e water. Peace and saluacion. The letter which ye sent vnto vs, hath bene opēly red before me, and I haue commaunded to make search: and it is founde, that this ci-tie of olde hath made insurreccion agaynst, Kynge, & how y^e vpro^d and rebellion hath bene commytted therin. There haue bene mightie Kynge also at Ierusalē, which haue reigned ouer all that is beyonde the water, and toll tribute and yearly custome was geuen vnto them. Do ye now after this commaundemēt, forbyd the same men, that the cite be not builded, tyll I haue geue cōmaun-demēt. Take hede now that ye be not negligent here in, lest the Kyng haue harme there thorow.

Now whā Kyngē Artaxerxes letter was red before Rehum the chaunceler and Simsai the Scribe and their counsell, they wen-te vp in all the haist to Jerusalem vnto the Jewes, and foibad them with the arme and auctorite. Then ceased the worke of the house of God at Jerusalem, and continued so vnto the seconde yeare of Darins Kyngē of Persia.

hath commaunded you to buylde this hou-tolde we them the names of the men, that made this buyldinge. But the eye of their God came vpon the Elders of the Jewes, that they were not inhibyte, tyll the matter was brought before Darius, and tyll there came a wrytinge therof agayne.

This is the summe of the letter þæt Thathnaithe Debyte on this syde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, and their counsellors of the wordes that they sent vnto him: Vnto B to the house of y^e greate God, which is buyl-ded with all maner of stone, and balckes are layed in the walles, and y^e worke goeth fast forth, and prospereth in their handes. Cle-uertheles we axed the Elbers and sayde vnto them: Who hath comaunded you to buyl-de this house, and to make vp the walles therof? We axed their names also, that we might certifye the, and haue wrytten the names of the men that were their rulers.

But they answered vs w these wordes, and sayde: We are the seruantes of the God

* Teneertheles in the first yeare of Cyrus the Kyng of Babilon, ⁊ same kyng Cyrus commaunded to buylde this house of God: for the vessels of golde and siluer in the house of God, which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Ierusalē, and broughte the in to ⁊ temple at Babilon, those dyd Cyrus the kyng take out of ⁊ temple at Babilon, ⁊ and deliuered them vnto Seßbazer by name, whom he made Debyte, and sayde vnto him: Take these vessels, go thy waye and brynge them vnto the temple at Ierusalem, and let the house of God be buylded in his place. Then came the same Seßbazar, and layed yf foundation of the house of God at Ierusalem. Sence that tyme hath it bene in buyldinge, and yet is it not fynished. in þe kynges treasure house which is at Babilon, whether it haue bene kyng Cyrus commaundement, that the house of God at Jerusalem shulde be buylded: & sende vs þe kynges mynde concernynge the same.

The VI. Chapter.

A Then commaunded kyng Darius, that search shulde be made in þe library of þe kynges treasure house, which laye at Babilon. So at Egbathanis in a castell that lyeth in the londe of the Medes, there was founde a boke, & in it was there an acte wyrtten after this maner: In the first yere of kyng Cyrus, commaunded the same kyng Cyrus to buylde þe house of God at Jerusalem, in the place where the sacrifice is made, & to laye the foundation to beare thre score cubites heygth, & thre score cubites bredth, & thre walles of all maner of stones, and one wall of tymber, & the expences shalbe gyven of the kynges house. And the golde and syluer vessel of þe house of God (which Nabuchodonosor toke out of the temple at Jerusalem, and broughre vnto Babilon) shalbe restored agayne, & they maye be broughre vnto the temple at Jerusalem to their place into the house of God.

B See you farre from them therfore, thou Thathnai Debyce beyonde the water, and Sethar of Bosen, & youre counselors which are beyonde the water. Let them worke in þe house of God, that the Debyce of þe Jewes and their Elders maye buylde the house of God in his place. I haue commaunded also, what shalbe done to þe Elders of Iuda for the buyldinge of the house of God, that they shal diligently be take of the kynges goodes, even of the rentes beyonde the water, & gyven vnto the men, and that they be not hyndered.

And yf they haue nede of calves, lambes, or goates for the burnt offryng vnto þe God of heauen, wheate, salt, wyne and oyle, after the custome of the prestes at Jerusalem, they shalbe gyven them daylie as is acordinge: and se that this be not done negligently, that they maye offre swete savoures vnto þe God of heauen, and praye for the kynges lyfe, and for his children. This commaundement haue I genē. And what man so ever he be that altereth these wordes, there shal a balke be taken from his house, and set vp, and he shal be hanged thereon, and his house shalbe pryed for the dede.

C But the God that dwelleth in heauen, destroye all kynges and people, that put to their hāde to alter and to breake downe the house of God at Jerusalem. I Darius haue commaunded, that this be diligently done.

Then Thathnai & Debyce beyonde þe water, and Sethar of Bosen with their counselors (to whom kyng Darius had sent) dyd their diligence. And þe Elders of the Jewes buylded, and they prospered thorow the prophecieng of Aggeus the prophet and Zachary the sonne of Iddo: and they buylded, and set vp the worke, acordinge to the commaundement of the God of Israel, and after the commaundement of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerxes kynges of Persia. And they perfourmed the house vnto the thirde daye of the moneth Adar, that was the sixte yere of the reigne of kyng Darius.

And the children of Israel, the prestes, the Levites, and the other children of þe captiuite helde the dedication of the house of God with ioye, and offred at the dedication of the house of God, an hundred calves, two hundred lambes, foure hundred goates: and for the synoffryng for all Israel, twolve he goates, acordinge to the nombre of the trybes of Israel, and set the prestes in their courses, and þe Levites in their offices, to mynister vnto God which is at Jerusalem, as it is wyrtten in the boke of Moses.

And the children of the captiuite helde Passouer vpon the fourtenth daye of the first moneth: for þe prestes and Levites had purified them selues, so þe they were all cleane as one man, and kyled Passouer for all the children of the captiuite, and for their brethren the prestes, and for them selues. And the childre of Israel which were come agayne out of captiuite, and all soch as had separated them selues vnto them from the fylchynesse of the heythen in the londe, to seke the LORDE God of Israel, are & helde the feast of vnleued bred seven dayes with ioye: for the LORDE had made them glad, and turned the herte of the kyng of Assur vnto the, so that their handes were strengthened in the worke of the house of God, which is þe God of Israel.

The VII. Chapter.

After these actes in the reigne of Artaxerxes kyng of Persia, there wente vp from Babilon, Esdras the sonne of Seraia, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne of Helchias, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amaria, the sonne of Asaria, the sonne Meraioth, the sonne of Serahia, y sonne of Uri, the sonne of Buti, the sonne of Abisua, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleasar, the

And there wente vp certayne of the children of Israel, and of the prestes, and of the Leuites, of the syngers, of the porters, and of the Nethinims vnto Jerusalem, in the seventh yere of kynge Artaxerxes. And they came to Jerusalem in the fift moneth, that is the seventh yere of the kynge. For vpon the first daye of the first moneth, deuysed he to go vp from Babilon: and on the first daye of the fift moneth came he to Jerusalem, accordyng to the good hande of God vpon him: for Esdras prepared his hert to seeke the lawe of the LORDE, and to do it, and to teach the precepte & iudgment in Israel.

B And this is the summe of the letter, that kynge Artaxerxes gaue vnto Esdras the prest, the scribe, which was a teacher in the wordes of the LORDE and of his statutes ouer Israel. Vnto Esdras the prest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauen, peace and salutation. I haue commaunded, that all they of the people of Israel, and of the prestes and Leuites in my realme, which are mynded of their awne good wyll to go vp to Jerusalem, that they go with the beyng sent of the kynge and of the seven lordes of the counsell, to vyset Juda and Jerusalem, accordyng to the lawe of God, which is in thy harte: And that thou shuldest take with the, syluer and golde, which the kynge and the lordes of his counsell geue of their awne good wyll vnto the God of Israel (whose habitation is at Jerusalem) and all the syluer and golde that thou canst fynde in all the countre of Babilon: with it that the people and prestes geue of their awne good wil vnto the house of God at Jerusalem.

E Take thou the same, and bye diligently with the same money, calves, lambes, goates, and meat offerynges and drynke offerynges, to be offred vpon the altare of the house of youre God at Jerusalem. The kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded all the treasurers beyond the water, & loke what so euer Esdras the prest and scribe in the lawe of the God of heauē, requyeth of you, that ye fulfill the same diligently, vntyll an hundred talētes of syluer, and tyll an hundred quarters of wheate, and tyll an hundred Batthes of wyne, and tyll an hundred Batthes of oyle, and salt without measure. Whatsoeuer belongeth to the lawe of the God of heauen, let the same be done with diligence for the house of the God of heauē, that there come no wrath vpon the kynges realme & his children.

And knowne be it vnto you, that ye shall D haue no auctorite to requyre taryng & custome, and yearly rentes vpon eny of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims and mynisters in the house of this God. But thou Esdras (after the wysdome of the God that is in thy hande) set thou iudges and arbiters, to iudge all the people that is beyond Jordan, euen all soch as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyl not diligently fulfill the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shall haue his iudgment for the dede, whether it be vnto death, or to be banyshe, or to be condemned in good, or to be put in prison.

Praised be the LORDE God of oure fathers, which so hath inspyred the kynges hert to garnyshe the house of God at Jerusalem: and hath enclyned his mercy vnto me in the presence of the kynge, and his counselors, and before all the kynges hye estates. And I was comforted (accordyng to the harte of the LORDE my God ouer me) and so gathered I the heades of Israel together, & they mighte go vp with me.

The Vill. Chapter.

These are the heades of their fathers A that were named, which wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kynge Artaxerxes reigned. Of the last children of Adoniam, and these were their names: Eli phelet, Jeiel and Semaia, and with them thre score males. Of the children of Bige uai, Uthai and Sabud, and with them senē males. And I gathered them together by the water that renneth towarde Ahena, and there abode we thre dayes.

And whan I loked amonge the people and the prestes, I founde no Levites there. Therfore sent I Eliezer, Ariel, Semaia, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Natha, Zachary and Mesul lam the rulers, and Joiarib and Elnathan the teachers, and those sent I vnto Iddo the chiefe at Casiphia, that they shulde seche us mynsters for the house of oure God, and I tolde them what they shulde saye vnto Iddo and to his brethren the Techinims at Casiphia.

C And (acordinge to the good hande of oure God vpon us) they broughte us a wyse man from amonge the children of Maheli the sonne of Levi the sonne of Israel, even Serebia with his sonnes and brethren, eightene. And Hasabia, and with him Jesaia of the children of Merari, with his brethren and their sonnes, twentye. And of the Techinims, whom David and the princes gaue to mynister vnto the Levites, two hundred and twentye, all named by name.

9. Ed. 6. d.

And euen there at the water besyde Ahena, caused I a fastinge to be proclaimed, and we mighte humble oure selues before oure God, to seeke of him a righte waye for us, and oure children and all oure substance. For I was ashamed to require of the kynge, souldyers and horsmen, to helpe us agaynst the enemye in the waye. For we had sayde vnto the kynge: The hande of oure God is for the best vpon all them that seeke him, and his violence and wrath vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and soughte this at oure God, and he herde us.

D And I toke out twelue of the chiefe pres-tes, Serebia and Hasabia, and ten of their brethren with them, and weyed them there the syluer and golde and vessels for the hene offeringe vnto the house of oure God, which the kynge, and the lordes of his counsell and prynces, and all Israel that were at hande, had genen to the hene offeringe: and there weyed I them vnder their hande sixe hundred and fiftye talentes of syluer, and in syluer vessell an hundred talentes, and in golde an hundred talentes, twentye cuppes of golde of a thousande guldens, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayde vnto them: Ye are holy vnto the LORD, therfore are the vessels holy also, and so is the syluer and golde that is genen of a good wyll vnto the LORD God of youre fathers: Watch ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye weye it downe before the chiefe prestes and Levites, and awncient fathers of Israel at Jerusalem in the chestes of the house of the LORD. Then toke the prestes and Levites that weyed syluer and golde and vessell, to brynge it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God.

So we brake vp, from the water of Ahena on the twelveth daye of the first moneth, to go vnto Jerusalem: and the hande of oure God was vpon us, and delyuered us fro the hande of the enemies and preny waytinges by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Urias the prest, and with him Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and with them Josabad the sonne of Jesua, and Moadia the sonne of Benui the Levites, acordinge to the nombre and weight of every one. And the weight was all wrytten vp at the same tyme.

And the children of the captiuyte, which were come out of prison, offred burnt offeringes vnto the God of Israel: twelue bullockes for all Israel, sixe and nyntye rammes, seven and seuentye lambes, and twelue goates for a synofferinge, all to the burnt offeringe of the LORD. And they delyuered the kynges commissiō vnto the kynges officers, and to the Debytes on this syde the water. And they promoted the people and the house of God.

The IX. Chapter.

Whan all this was perfourmed, the rulers came to me, and sayde: The people of Israel, and the prestes, and Levites are not separated from the nations in the londes as touching their abhominations, namely of the Cananites, Hethites, Pherezites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egipcians, and Amorites. For they haue taken the daughters of the same, & their sonnes, and haue myrte the holy seide with y nacions in the londes: and the hande of the rulers and lordes of conncell hath bene principall in this trespase.

23 When I herde this, I rente my clothes and my rayment, and plucte out the heer of my heade and of my beard, and sat mournynge. And there resorted vnto me all soch as feared the worde of the LORDE God of Israel because of the greate transgression. And I sat mournynge vntyll the euenynge sacrifice. And aboute the euenynge sacrifice I rose vp fro my heuyenes, and rente my clothes and my rayment, and fell vpon my knees, and spied out my handes vnto the LORDE my God, and sayde:

Deu 12 d My God, I am ashamed, and darie not lifte vp mine eyes vnto the my God: for oure wickednesses are growne ouer oure heade, & oure trespases are wahren greate vnto y heaue. Sence the tyme of oure fathers haue we bene in greate trespase vnto this daie, and because of oure wickednesses haue we and o kynges bene delyuered in to the hande of y kynges of the nacions, in to the swerde, in to captiuyte, in to spoyle, and in to confusion of face, as it is come to passe this daie.

C But now is there a litle and sodane graciousnes come from the LORDE oure God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maie geue vs a nayle in his holy place, that oure God maye lighte oure eyes, and geue vs a litle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and o God hath not forsake vs though we be bondmen, and hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in the sighte of the kynges of Persia, that they shulde geue vs lyfe, and promote the house of oure God, and to sette vp the desolacion therof, and to geue vs an hed ge in Juda and Jerusalem.

D O oure God, what shall we saye now after this? that we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, which thou hast commaunded by thy seruauntes the prophetes, and saide: The londe wherin ye shal come to possesse it, is an vnclane londe thorow the fylthines of the people of the londes, in their abhominacions wherwith they haue made it full of vnclennes on every syde. Therefore shal ye not geue youre daughters vnto their sonnes, and their daughters shal ye not take vnto youre sonnes, and sette not their peace and welth for euer, that ye maye be stronge, and enioye the good in the londe, and y ye and youre children maye haue the inheritaunce of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs (because of oure euell dedes and greate trespase) thou oure God hast spared oure wickednesses, and hast geuen vs a delyueraunce as it is come to passe.

As for vs, we haue turned backe, & haue let go thy commaundementes, to make contracte with the people of these abhominacions. Wilt thou then be wroth at vs, tyll we be utterly consumed, so that nothyng remaine, and tyll there be no delyueraunce? O LORDE God of Israel, thou art righteous, for we remaine yet escaped, as it is this daie. Beholde, in thy presence are we in oure trespase, for because of it is there no standinge before the.

The X. Chapter.

28 And whan Esdras prayed after this maner and knewleged, wepte, and laie before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel a very greate congregation of men and women, and children: for the people wepte very sore. And Sachania the sonne of Jehiel one of the children of Elam, answered, and sayde vnto Esdras: We haue trespaced agaynst the LORDE oure God, in that we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the londe. Now there is hope yet in Israel concerninge this, therfore let vs make a conenaunt now with oure God, that we shal put awaye all the wyues (and soch as are borne of them) a cordynge to the counsell of y LORDE, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, y we maye do a cordynge to the lawe. Get the vp therfore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be with the, be of good comforte, and do it.

29 Then rose Esdras, and toke an ooth of the rulers, prestes and Leuites, and of all Israel, that they shulde do a cordynge to this worde: and they swore. And Esdras stode vp before the house of God, and wente in to the chamber of Johanan the sonne of Eliafab. And whan he came thither, he ate no bred, and dranke no water: for he mourned because of the transgression of them that had bene in captiuyte.

And they caused a proclamacion be made thorow out Juda and Jerusalem, vnto all the children which had bene in captiuyte, y they shulde gather them selues together vnto Jerusalem: And that who soeuer came ne-

These are the actes of Nehemias the sonne of Hachalia. It fortuned in y^e moneth Chislen in y^e twētieth yea-re, that I was in the castell at Susa: and Hanani one of my brethren came with certayne mē of Iuda, and I axed them how the Jewes dyd that were delynered and escaped from the captiuyte, & how it wente at Jerusalem. And they sayde vnto me: The remnant of the captiuyte are there in the londe in greate myffortune & rebuke. The walles of Jerusalem are broken downe, and the portes therof are brent with fyre.

Whā I herde these wordes, I sat me downe & wepte, & mourned two dayes, & fasted & prayed before the God of heauen, & sayde: O LORDE God of heauen, thou greate & terrible God, & thou y^e kepist covenannt & mercy for them y^e loue the & obserue thy cōmaundementes: let y^e eares marke, & let thine eyes be open, y^e thou mayest heare the prayer of y^e seruaunt, which I praye now before y^e daye and nighte for the children of Israel thy seruantes, & knowlege the synnes of the children of Israel, which we haue commytted agaynst the.

2 And I & my fathers house haue synned also. We haue bene corrupte vnto the, in y^e we haue not kepte the cōmaundementes, statutes & lawes, which thou cōmaundedst y^e seruaunt Moses. Yet call to remembraunce y^e worde that thou cōmaundedst thy seruaunt Moses, and saydest: If ye trasgresse, then wil I scatter you abroad amonge the naciōs. But yf ye turne vnto me, and kepe my cōmaundementes & do them: though ye were cast out vnto the vttemost parte of heauen yet wil I gather you from thence, and wyll brynge you from thence, euē vnto the place, that I haue chosen for my name to dwell there. O LORDE, let thine eares marke the prayer of thy seruaunt, & the prayer of thy seruantes, whose desyre is to feare thy name, & let thy seruaunt prospere this daye, & graunte him mercy in the sight of this man: for I was the kynges butlar.

The II. Chapter.

26 In the moneth Nisan of the twētieth yea-re of kyng Artaxerxes, whā the wyne stode before him, I toke vp the wyne, and gaue it vnto y^e kyng, and I was heny in his presence. Then sayde y^e kyng vnto me: Why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sicke, that is not y^e matter, but thou art heny harted. Nevertheless I was sore afrayed, & sayde vnto the kyng: God saue the kynges life for ever, shulde I not lōke sadly? the cite of my fathers buryall lyeth wayest, & the portes therof are consumed wth the fyre. Then sayde the kyng vnto me: What is the thy request? Then made I my prayer to the God of heanē, and sayde vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, and yf thy seruaunt be fauoured in thy sighte, I beseeke the sende me in to Iuda vnto y^e cite of my fathers buryall, that I maye buylde it.

27 And y^e kyng sayde vnto me, & so dyd the queene y^e sat by him: How lōge shal thy iourney cōynue, and whā wilt thou come agayne? And it pleased y^e kyng to sende me, and I set him a tyme, & sayde vnto the kyng: If it please the kyng, let him geue me letters to the Debites beyonde y^e water, y^e they maye conueye me ouer, tyll I come in to Iuda: & letters vnto Asaph the lorde of the kynges wode, y^e he maye geue me wodd for halles to the gates of the palace, which are harde on the house & harde on the walles of the cite, & for the house that I shal entre in to. And y^e kyng gaue me acordyng to the good hande of God vpo me. And whan I came to y^e Debites beyonde the water, I gaue them y^e kynges letters. And the kyng sent captaynes and hoisemen with me.

And whan I came to Jerusalem, & had bene there thre daies, I gat me vp in y^e night season, & a fewe men with me for I tolde no man what God had geue me in my hert to do at Jerusalem: & there was not one beest wth me, save it y^e I rode vpon. fe men and rulers, & to the other people: Be not ye a frayd of them, thynke vpon y greate LORDE which ought to be feared, & fighte for yb brethien, sonnes, daughters, wyues, & houses. Neuertheles whan o enemies herde J we had gotten worde of it, God broughte their counsell to naughte, and we turned all again to the wall, every one vnto his labo^r.
And from that time forth it came to passe, J
the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the laboure, & the other halfe parte helde the spea-res, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates, and the rulers stode behynde all the house of Juda, which buylded on the wall, & bare barthes, from those that laded the. With one hande dyd they J worke, and with the other helde they the weapon. And every one J buylded, had his swerde girde by his side, & so buylded they. And the trompetters stode beside me.

And J sayde vnto the pryncipall men, & rulers, and to J other people: The worke is greate & large, & we are separated vpon the wall one farre from another. Loke in what place now ye heare the noise of J trompe, re-sorte ye thither vnto vs. Our God shal fight for vs, & we wil be labourige in J worke. And the halfe parte of the helde J speares fro J moringe sprynge, till J starres came forth.
And at J same tyme sayde J vnto J people:
Every one abyde with his seruaunt at Jerusalem, J in the night season we maye geue attendaunce to J watch, and to labour on the daye tyme. As for me and my brethien, & my seruantes, and J men of the watch behynde me, we put neuer of oure clothes, so so moch as to washe oure selues.

The V. Chapter.

A Vt there arose a greate complaynte of y people, & of their wyues agaynst were some J sayde: oure sonnes and dought-ters are to many, let vs take come for the, & set o^r londes, vynyardes & houses to pledge, & take vp come in the bent. But some saide:

ry for oure londes and vynyardes. Now ate oure brethrens bodies as oure awne bodies, and their children as oure children: els shulde we subdue oure sonnes and doughters wth to bondage, and some of oure doughters are subdued already, and no strengch is there in oure handes, and other men shal haue oure londes and vynyardes.

But whan I herde their complaynte and soch wordes; it displeased me sore, and I ad-uysed so in my mynde, & I rebuked the councelers, and the rulers, and sayde vnto them:
• Wyl ye requyre vsury one of another? And I broughte a greate congregacion agaynst them, and sayde vnto them: We (after oure abilyte) haue boughte oure brethien the Jewes, which were solde vnto the heythen.
And wyl ye sell youre brethien, whom we haue boughte vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, & coulde fynde nothinge to answer.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye do.
Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke, of the heythen our enemies? I and my brethre, and my seruauntes haue lent them money and come; but as for vsury, let vs leave it. Therfore this same daye se that ye restore the their lombes agayne, their vynyardes, oyle gardens and houses, and the hundreth parte of the money of the corne, wyne and oyle that ye haue won-ne of them. Then sayde they: We wyl restore them agayne, and wyl requyre nothinge of them, and wyl do as thou hast spoken. And I called the prestes, and toke an ooth of the,
that they shulde do so. And I shote my lapppe, and sayde: God shake out every man after the same maner fro his house and laboure, that maynteyneth not this worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all the congregacion sayde: Amen, and praysed the LORDE. And the people byd so.

• And from the tyme forth that it was comynytted vnto me to be a Debyce in the londe of Iuda, namely from the twentieth yeare vnto the two and thirtieth yeare off Kyng Artaxerxes (that is twolue yeare) I and my brethiē lyued not of soch sustenanne as was geuen to a Debyce: For the olde Debytes that were before me, had bene chargeable vnto the people, and had takē of the bred and wyne, and fortye Sycles of syluer: Yee and their seruauntes had oppressed the people. But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpon the wall, and boughte no lōbe. And all my seruañtes came thither together vnto y^e worke. Moreover there were amonge the Heythen, that are aboute vs.

And there was prepared me daylie an oxe,

Ald whan Saneballat, Tobias and Goscm the Arabian, and the other of oure enemyes herde, that I had buyl-ded the wall, and that there were no mo gap-pes ther in (howbeit at the same tyme had I not hanged the dores vpon the gates) Sa-neballat and Goscm sene vnto me, sayenges Come and let vs mete together in the vyllages vpon the playne of the cite Ono. Neuer theles they thoughte to do me euill. Norwithstandyng I sent messengers vnto them, sayenge: I have a greate busynes to do, I can not come downe. The worke shul-de stonde still, yf I were negligent, and came downe to you. Howbeit they sent vnto me as good as foure tymes after the same maner.
And I gaue the same answer.

Then sent Saneballat his sernaunt vnto me the fifth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherein was wrytten: It is tolde the heythen, & Gosen hath sayde it, that thou and the Jewes thynke to rebell: for y^e which cause thou buyldest the wall, and wylt be their kynge in these matters, and hast ordeyned the prophetes to preach of the at Jerusalem, and to saye: He is kynge of Iuda.

Now shal this come to the Kynges eares: come now therfore, and let vs take oure counsell together. Neuertheles I sent vnto him, sayenge: There is no soch thinge done as thou sayest: thou hast fayned it out of thine owne hert. For they were all mynded to make us a frayed, and thoughte: They shal withdraue their handes from the worke, & they shal not labour. Howbeit I strenghten my hande the more.

And I came vnto þe house of Semaiā þe sonne of Delaiā the sonne of Mehetabeel, & he had shut him selfe within, & sayde: Let us come together in to þe house of God, enē vnto þe myddes of þe tēple, & sparre þe doores of þe tēple: for they wyl come to slaye þe, yee enē in the night wyl they come to put the to death. But I sayde: Shulde soch a mā flye? Shulde soch a mā as I am, go in to þe tēple, to saue his life? I wyl not go in.

The ii. booke of Esdras.

For I perceaued, that God had not sent him: Yet spake he prophecie vpon me, neuer thelesse Tobias and Sanballat had hired him for money. Therfore toke he the money, that I shulde be afrayed, and so to do and synne, that they might haue an euell reporte of me, to blaspheme me. My God thynke thou vpon Tobias and Sanballat, a condynge vnto these their workes, and of y prophēt Moabias, and of the other prophetes, y wolde haue put me in feare.

And the wall was fynished on the fyue & twentyeth daye of the moneth Elul, in two and fiftye dayes. And whan all o enemies herde therof, all the heithen y were aboute vs, were afrayed, and their corage failed the: for they perceaued, that this worke came of God. And at y same tyme were there many of y chese of Iuda, whose letters wete vnto Tobias, & from Tobias vnto them (for there were many in Iuda that were sworne vnto him: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sachania the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Johanan had the doughter of Mesullam the sonne of Barachia, and they spake good of him before me, and tolde him my wordes) And Tobias sent letters, to put me in feare.

The VII. Chapter.

Now whan we had buylded the wall I hanged on the dores, and the porters, syngers and Levites were appoynted. And I comāded my brother Hanani, and Hanania the ruler of the palace at Jerusalem: for he was a faithfull man, and feared God more then dyd many other) and I sayde vnto them: Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened vntyll the Sonne be whote. And whyle they are yet stondinge in the watch, the dores shall be shut and barred. And there were certayne citesyns of Jerusalem appoynted to be watchmen, every one in his watch, and aboute his house. As for y cite, it was large of rowme, and greate, but y people were fewe therin, and the houses nere not buylded.

And my God gaue me in my hert, that I gatherd together the pryncipalli men and y people, to nombre them, and I founde a register of their nombre, which came vp afore out of the captaynte (whom Nabuchodonosor y kynge of Babilō had caryed awaie) and dwelt at Jerusalem and in Iuda, every one vnto his cite, and were come with Zorobabel, Jesua, Nehemias, Asaria, Raamia, Naheman, Mardachai, Bilan, Mispereth, Bigeui, Nehum and Baena.

The VIII. Chapter.

Now when the seuenth moneth came nye, and & children of Israel were in their cities, all the people gathered them selues together as one man vpon the strete before the Watergate, and sayde vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shulde fetch the boke of the lawe of Moses, which the LORDE commaunded Israel. And Esdras the prest broughte & lawe before the congregaciō boch of men and women, and of all that coulde vnderstonde it, vpon the first daye of the seuenth moneth, and red therein in the strete that is before the Watergate, from & light mornynge vntyll the noone daye before men and women and soch, as coulde vnderstonde it: and the eares of all the people were inclyned vnto the boke of the lawe. And Esdras the scribe stode vpon an hye pulpit of wod, which they had made for the preachynge, & beside him stode Machichia, Senia, Anania, Oria, Ezechias, and Maesia on his right hand: And on his lefte honde stode pedaia, Misael, Malchia, Hasum, Hasbadana, Sachary and Mesullam.

And Esdras opened & boke before all & people, for he stode aboue all & people. And when he opened it, all the people stode vp. And Esdras praysed the LORDE the greates God. And all the people answered Amen, Amen, with their handes vp, and bowed the selues, and worshipped & LORDE with their faces to the ground. And Jesua, Bani, Seribia, Jamin, Acub, Sabthai, Hodaia, Maesia, Celica, Asaria, Josabad, Hanam, Plaia, and the Leuites, caused & people to gene hede vnto the lawe, & the people stode in their place. dras the priest and scribe, and the Levites & caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: This daye is holy vnto the LORDE your God: be not ye sorry therfore, & wepe not. For all & people wepte, whā they herde the wordes of the lawe.

E Therfore sayde he vnto them: Go your waye, and eate the fat, and drynke the swete, and sende parte vnto them also that haue not prepared themselves: for this daye is holy vnto our LORDE, be not ye sorry therfore: for the ioye of the LORDE is your strength. And the Levites stylled all the people, and sayde: Holde your peace, for the daye is holy, wepe not ye your selues. And all the people wente their waye to eate and drynke, and to sende parte vnto other, and to make greete mynth, for they had vnderstonde the wordes that were declared vnto them.

Leui. 22. f

And on the nexte daye were gathered together the chiefe fathers amonge all the people, and the prestes and Levites, vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shulde teach them y wordes of the lawe. And they founde written in the lawe, & how that the LORDE had commaunded by Moses, that the childre of Israel shulde dwell in boches in the feast of the seuench moneth. And so they caused it be declared and proclaimed in all their cities, & at Jerusalem, sayenge: Go vp vnto & moite and fetch Olyue braunches, Pyncbraunches, Myrtbraunches, Palmebraunches, & braunches of thicketrees, to make boches as it is wyrtten.

And & people wente vp, and fetched the, and made them boches; every one vpon the rose of his house, and in their courtes, and in the courtes of the house of God, and in the strete by the Watergate, and in the strete by Ephraims porte. And all the congregacion of them that were come agayne out of the captiuite, made boches, and dwelt therein: for sence the tyme of Josua the sonne of Nū vnto this daye, had not the children of Israel done so, and there was very greate gladnesse. And every daye from the first daie vnto the last, red he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seven dayes helde they the feast, & on the eight daye the gatherynge together, accordynge vnto the maner.

The IX. Chapter.

At the foure and twentieth daye of this moneth came the children of Israel together with fastinge and sack clothes, and eate vpon them, and separated the fede of Israel from all the straunge children, and stode and knowleged their synnes, and the wyckednesses of their fathers, and stode vp in their place, and red in the boke of the lawe of the LORDE their God foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, and worshipped the LORDE their God foure tymes on the daye. And the Levites stode on hye, namely Jesua, Bani, Cadmiel, Sebania, Buni, Serebia, Bani, and Chenani, and cryed loude vnto the LORDE their God. And the Levites, Jesua, Cadmiel, Bani, Hasabernia, Serebia, Zodia, Sebania, Pethahia, sayde: Stonde vp, praysse the LORDE our God for ever: and let chantes be genē vnto the name of thy glorye, which excellith all chantes genynge and praysse. LORDE, thou art alone, thou hast made heauen, and the heauen of all heuens, with all their hoost, the earth and all that therein is, the See and all that is therein: thou geuist life vnto all, and & hoost of heauen bowe themselves vnto the. Thou art the LORDE God, that hast chosen Abra, and broughte him out of Ur in Chaldea, & called him Abraham, and founde his hert faithfull before the, and madest a couenaute with him, to geue vnto his sede the londe of the Cananites, Zethites, Amontes, Pheresites, Jebusites, and Girgesites, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou art righteous. And hast considered the mysery of our fathers in Egipte, and herde their complainte by the reed See, and shewed tokes and wonders vpon Pharaο, and on all his seruautes, and on all his people of his londe: for thou knowest & they were presumptuous & cruell against them, & so madest thou & the a name as it is this daie. And the reed See partedst thou in sander before them, so that they wete thorow the myddes of the See drye shod: & their persecuters threwest thou in to the depe as a stone, in the mightie waters, and leddest them on the daye tyme in a cloudy pyler, and on the night season in a piler of fyre, to shewe them lighte in the waye & they wente.

Thou camest downe also vpon mount Sinai, and spakest vnto them from heauen, and gauest them righte iudgements, true lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, and declared vnto them thy holy Sabbath, and commaunded them preceptes, ordinaunces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruaunt: and & gauest them bried from heauen whan they were hongrye, and & broughte forth water for them out of the rock whan they were thyrstye: and premysed them, that they shulde go in, and take possession of the londe, where ouer thou haddest lyst vpon thine hande for to geue them.

Nevertheless oure fathers were proude and hardnecked, so that they folowed not y^e cōmaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not mynde full of the wonders y^e thou dyddest for them: but became obstynate and heady, in so moch that they turned back to their bondage in their dishobedience. But thou my God forganest, and wast gracious, mercifull, pacient, and of greate goodnesse, and forsokest them not. * And though they made a molten calfe (and sayde: This is thy God, that broughte the out of the londe of Egypte) and dyd greate blasphemies, yet forsokest thou them not in the wyldernes, accordinge to thy greate mercy. * And y^e cloudy piler departed not from them on y^e daye: y^e me to lede them the waye, nether the piler of fyre in the night season, to shewe them lighte in the waye that they wente.

And thou gauest them thy good sperte to enfourme them, * and withheldest not thy Manna from their mouth, * and gauest them water whā they were thirstie. Fortye yeares longe madest thou prouysion for them in the wyldernes, so that they wanted nothinge: * their clothes waxed not olde, and their fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngdomes & nacions, & partedst them accordinge to their porcions, so that they possessed * the londe of Sihon kyng of Hesbon, & the londe of Og y^e kyng of Basan. * And their childre multipliedst thou as the starres of heauen, and broughtest them in to the londe wherof thou haddest spoken vnto their fathers, that they shulde go in to it, and haue it in possession.

And y^e children wente in, and possessed the londe, * and thou subdudest before them the inhabiteres of the londe, even the Cananites, & gauest them in to their hande, and their kynges and y^e people of the londe, y^e they might do with them what they wolde. And they wanne their stronge cities, & a fat londe, and toke possession of houses y^e were full of all maner goodes, welles dygged out, vynyardes, oylgardens, & many frute full trees: and they ate & were fylled, & became fat, & lyued in welch thorow thy greate goodnes. Nevertheless they were disobedient, and rebelled agaynst the, and cast thy lawe behynde their backes, * and slewe thy prophetes (which exhorted them so earnestly, that they shulde cōuerte vnto the) and dyd greate blasphemies. Therefore gauest thou them ouer in to the hāde of their enemies that vexed them.

And in y^e tyme of their trouble they cried vnto the, and thou herdest them from heauen: and thorow thy greate mercy thou gauest them saviours, which helped them out of the hande of their enemies. But whan they came to rest, they turned back agayne to do euell before the: therefore leftest thou them in the hande of their enemies, so y^e they had y^e deminion ouer them. So they cōuerted, and cryed vnto the, and thou herdest them from heauen, and many a tyme hast thou delyuered them accordinge to y^e greate mercy, and testified vnto them, that they shulde turne agayne vnto thy lawe.

Notwithstōdinge they were proude, and hertened not vnto thy cōmaundementes, but synned in thy lawes (which a man shulde do, & lyue in them) & turned their shulder awaye, & were styffnecked, & wolde not heare. And many yeares dyddest thou forbear them, & testified vnto them thorow y^e sperte, even by the office of y^e prophetes, & yet wolde they not heare. Therefore gauest thou them in to y^e hāde of y^e nacions in the londes. But for thy greate mercies sake thou hast not vterly cōsumed them, nether forsaken them: for thou art a gracious and mercifull God.

Now oure God, thou greate God, mighty and terrible, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy, regarde not a litle all the trauayle y^e hath happened vnto vs, & oure kynges, prynces, prestes, prophetes, fathers & all thy people, sence the tyme of the kynges of Assur vnto this daie. Thou art righteous in all y^e thou hast broughte vpo vs: for thou hast done righte. As for vs, we haue bene vngodly, and o^r kynges, prynces, prestes & fathers haue not done after y^e lawe, ner regarded y^e cōmaundementes, & thy earnest exhortaciōs wherwith thou hast exhorted them, & haue not serued y^e in their kyngdome, and in thy greate goodes y^e thou gauest them, and in the large and plenteous lōde which thou gauest them to good, and haue not conuerted from their wicked workes. Beholde, therefore are we in bondage this daie: Yee even in the lōde that thou gauest vnto oure fathers, to enioye the frutes and goodes therof, beholde, there are we bondmen. And greate is the increase of it vnto the kynges, whom thou hast set ouer vs because of oure synnes, and they haue dominion ouer oure bodies and castell, and we are in greate trouble.

And in all this made we a sure couenaunt, & wrote it, & let o^r prynces, Levites & prestes seale it.

The XII. Chapter.

These are & prestes and Levites that wente up with Zorobabel & sonne of Saalthiel and with Jesua: Seraia, Jeremy, Esdras, Amaria, Malluch, Hattue, Sechania, Rehum, Meremoth, Jodo, Ginchoi, Abia, Meiamin, Maadia, Bilga, Semaia, Joiarib, Jedaia, Sallu, Amos, Helchias & Jedaia. These were the heades amonge the prestes and their brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Levites were these: Jesua, Benui, Cadmiel, Serobia, Juda and Mathania, ouer the office of thankesgeuyng, they & their brethre: Bacbuchia & Vnni and their brethre, were aboute them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joachim. Joachim begat Eliasib. Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jaddua. And in the tyme of Joachim were these the chefe fathers amonge the prestes: namely of Seraia was Meraiia, of Jeremy was Hanania, of Esdras was Mesullam, of Amaria was Johanan, of Malluch was Jonathan, of Sebania was Joseph, of Harim was Adna, of Meraioth was Helcai, of Jodo was Zachary, of Ginchon was Mesulla, of Abia was Sichri, of Miniamin Moadia was Pilcai, of Bilga was Sammua, of Semaia was Jonathan, of Joiarib was Mathnai, of Jedaia was Vsi, of Sallai was Callai, of Amos was Eber, of Helchias was Hasabiah, of Gedaiia, was Methaneel.

children of Levi the principall fathers were wrytten in the Cronicles, vntyll the tyme of Iohanan the sonne of Eliashib. And these were the chiefe amonge the Levites, Hasabiah, Serobia and Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and their brechren over agaynst them, to geue prayse and thankes, accordinge as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watch over agaynst another. Nathania, Babbuchia, Obadiah, Mesullam, Talmon and Acub were porters in the watch at the thresholds of the gates. These were in the tyme of Joachim the sonne of Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and in the tyme of Nehemias the Debyre, and of the prest Esdras the scribe.

E And in the dedicacion of the wall at Jerusalem, were the Levites soughte out of all their places, that they mighte be broughte to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedicacion in gladnesse, with thankesgeynges, with synginge, with Tymbales, Psalteries and harpes. And the children of the syngers gathered themselves together from the playne countrie aboute Jerusalem, and from the villages of Bethphathi, and from the house of Gilgal, and out of the felde of Gibeon and Asmeth: for the syngers had buylded them villages aboute Jerusalem. And the prestes and Levites purified themselves, and clenched the people, the gates and the wall.

And I caused the prynces to go up vpon the wall, and appoynted two greates queres of thankesgeynges, which were on the right hande of the wall toward the Donggate, and after them were Hosai, and halfe of the prynces of Juda, and Asaria, Esdras, Mesullam, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semaia and Jeremiy: and certayne of the prestes children were trompettes, namely Zachary the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semaia, the sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Michaia, the sonne of Sachur, the sonne of Assaph, and his brechren, Semaia, Asareel, Bilalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nathaneel and Juda and Hanani, with the muscicall instrumentes of Dauid the man of God.

D And Esdras the scribe before them toward the Wellgate, and they wente up over agaynst them vpon the steppes of the cite of Dauid at the goynge up of the wall to the house of Dauid, vnto the Watergate Eastwarde.

The other quere of thankesgeynges wente over agaynst them, and I after them, and the halfe parte of the people vpon the wall, toward the Fornacegate upward, vntyll the broad wall, and to the porte of Ephraim, and to the Oldgate, and to the Sythgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, and to the tower of Meah, vntyll the Shepegate. And in the piersongate stode they still, and so stode the two queres of thankesgeynges of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the prestes, namely Eliachim, Maeseia, Miniamin, Michaia, Elioenai, Zachary, Hanania, with trompettes, and Maeseia, Semaia, Eleasar, Vsi, Iohanan, Malchia, Elam and Aser. And the syngers songe loud, and Jesrahia was the overseer.

And the same daye were there greates sacrifices offred, and they reioysed: for God had geuen them greates gladnesse, so that both the wyues and children were ioyfull, and the mynth of Jerusalem was herde farre off.

At the same tyme were there men appoynted over the treasurechestes (wherin were the heueofferynges, the firstlinges and the tithes) that they shulde gather them out of the felde aboute the cities, to distribute them vnto the prestes and Levites accordinge to the lawe: for Juda was glad of the prestes, and Levites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of their God, and the office of the purification. And the syngers and porters stode after the commaundement of Dauid and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of Dauid and Assaph, were the chiefe syngers founded, and the songes of prayse and thankesgeynges vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemias, dyd all Israel geue porcions vnto the syngers and porters, every daye his porcion, and they gaue thinges halowed vnto the Levites, and the Levites gaue thinges that were sanctified, vnto the children of Aaron.

The XIII. Chapter.

And what tyme as the boke of Moses was red in the eares of the people, there was founde wrytten therein, that the Ammonites and Moabites shulde neuer come in to the congregacion of God, because they mett not the children of Israel with bread and water, and hyred Balaam against them, that he shulde curse them: neuertheles cure God turned the curse in to a blessinge. Now when they herde the lawe, they separated from Israel every one that had myxted himselfe therein. And before this had the prest Eliashib deliuered the chest of the house of our God vnto his kynsman Tobia: for he had made him a greates chest, and there had they aforetyme layed the meateofferynges, frankincense, vessell, and the tithes of come, wyne and oyle (accordinge to the commaundement geuen to the Levites, syngers and porters) and the heueofferynges of the prestes.

But in all this was not I at Jerusalem: for in y two and thirtieth yere of Artaxerxes kynge of Babilon, came I vnto the kynge, and after certayne dayes obtayned I licence of the kynge to come to Jerusalem. And I gat knowlege of y euell that Eliafib dyd vnto Tobia, in that he had made him a chest in the courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I cast forth all the vessels of Tobias house out of the chest, and commaunded them to clense the chest. And thither broughte I agayne the vessels of the house of God, the meatofferynge and the incense.

And I perceaued, that the porcions of y Levites were not geuen them, for the which cause the Levites and syngers were fled, euery one to his londe for to worke. Then reprovied I the rulers, and sayde: Why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered them together, and set them in their place. Then brought all Juda the riches of corne, wyne and oyle vnto the treasure. And I made treasurers over y treasure, euen Selenna y prest, and Sadoc the scribe, z of the Levites Pedaiia, and vnder their hande Hanan the sonne of Sachur the sonne of Mathania: for they were counted faithfull, and their office was, to distribute vnto their brethren.

Ethynke vpon me O my God here in, z wyte ye not my mercy, that I haue shewed on y house of my God, z on the offices therof.

At the same tyme sawe I some tredinge wyne presses on the Sabbath, and brynginge in clusters, and asses laden wych wyne, grapes, fygges, and brynginge all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Sabbath daye. And I rebuked them earnestly y same daye that they solde y vytayles. There dwelt me of Tyre also therin, which broughte fysh and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabbath vnto the childre of Juda and Jerusalem. Then reprovied I the rulers in Juda, and saide vnto them: What euell thinge is this that ye do, and breake the Sabbath daye? Dyd not oure fathers euen thus, and oure God broughte all this plague vpon vs z vpon this cite? And ye make the wrath more yet vpon Israel, in that ye breake the Sabbath.

DAnd whan the portes of Jerusalem were drawen vp before the Sabbath, I commaunded to shutt the gates, and charged that they shulde not be opened tyll after the Sabbath: and some of my seruantes set I at the gates, y there shulde no burthe be broughte
